NO FLUKE ABOUT C. G. E. VICTORY

St. Catharines Standard Says Better Balanced Team Won.

There was no fluke about the C.G.E. victory in Welland, says the St Catharines Standard.

"The Wellanders can offer no alibi. They were defeated by a better balanced team; one that played ball the whole nine innings and did not allow petty feeling to enter into their play. Commencing in the third inning the visitors went tearing out on a hitting spree. They accomplished their objective alright, but only by the assistance of the local players, who, by conceding four errors, allowed five runs.

With a crowd of from 1,500 to 2,000 looking on, the largest crowd in the history of baseball in this district, the visitors set out early to cinch the series—the world series as far as they or Welland were concerned. In the third they registered their first run through an error by Brasford, followed by three in the fifth, two in the sixth and three in the ninth.

Welland rallied in the fifth by scoring three and in the sixth with two, but they were unable to break down the "stonewall defence" of the visitors despite Upper's magnificent home run in the eighth—the finest hit of the day."

THREE GUARDIANS

They went on fighting for months, got nothing out of it but complete demoralisation, complete disaster. They put themselves in a position where it was impossible for them to negotiate, and that I consider to be bad for both parties.

Lacked Moral Courage.

"When the time came when Germany ought to have realised that the game was up, that defeat was staring her in the face, she certainly ought to have made peace, but why didn't she do it? I will tell you. It requires more courage to make peace than to make war.

"Germany's disaster was not due to the lack of valour or skill in her troops—as valiant men, as intelligent men as ever went into action. But the failure was in the lack of vision, courage, leadership of the rulers, and this is not without its meaning now when democracy has been thrown over in one country after another in Europe as if it were a thing of no use.

"Democracy in that great world struggle defeated autocracy every time. Now and again it throws up big men. It is a gamble. You can't depend upon it. There was no one to rally the courage, the reserves the resources of the German heart when the hour of disaster came. No democracy would have ever failed like that. It is a lesson."

A Sign of Hope.

Speaking of the signs of prosperity and happiness in Chicago and the Middle West, Mr. Lloyd-George said:

"It is worth while for a poor citizen of torn, distracted Europe to come here to see a vision of the future, even of Europe, for if you can make races here live in amity which in Europe dwell in the places of wrath and anger, so ultimately Europe will find her way along the paths of peace and eternal brotherhood."

DAVE BELAND IS WITH CANADIENS

Will Start Hockey Practices on Grimsby Ice.

On account of the lack of artificial ice locally, the Canadiens Hockey Club members will again do their training for the coming professionl season at Grimsby, Ont. The team will leave Montreal about November 25 and remain in Grimsby until just before their first game, which will be played against the St. Patricks sextet at Toronto.

Manager Leo Dandurand will take along with him Trainer Dave Beland, and his regulars of last year, with the addition of "Howie" Morenz, the former Stratford amateur, who caused the local team considerable alarm recently, when it looked as though he might try and remain in amateur ranks; Quenneville, of Chicoutimi, veteran Vezina's home town, and two or three other new players, which have not been named as yet.

Grimsby is making great preparations for the Canucks, according to report from that point. A banquet will be given them on their arrival. Those interested in the Grimsby amateur team are anxious for either Leo Dandurand or Dave Beland to train the members of the home squad during the Montrealers' stay here.

Zev Beaten But Once In Nine Starts, Is Worthy Opponent For Papyrus

NEW YORK, October 17. — When Zev was picked over My Own to start against Papyrus, the British three-year-old, in the international race here on 20th October, the honour was not misplaced. This is the opinion of expert judges of racing flesh. Zev has built up an impressive record this year.

Starting in nine races of varying distances and under different weights the good-looking brown colt finished in front eight times.

Zev's only defeat was in the Preakness, his first start of the season, and in this race he was jammed at the start, badly kicked, and got away last.

JUNIOR WORLD'S SERIES HELD UP

Fourth Game in Kansas City Postponed Again Tuesday.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 16.— Lowering clouds and a forecast of rain made it seem extremely unlikely tonight that the fourth game of the Junior World's Series between the Kansas City team of the American Association and the Baltimore International League champions, would be played to-morrow Officials of the club asserted to-night, however, that the game would be played if no more rain should fall before to-morrow afternoon.

The fourth game was postponed for the second time to-day on account of the sloppy condition of the diamond.

Ehmke's Record a Strange One

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—Baseball is a mighty uncertain pastime. If you have the least doubt about it, glance over the recent performances of Howard Ehmke of the Boston Red Sox.

In a game against the Philadelphia Athletics recenty, Ehmke pitched a no-hit game. His next start was against the hard-hitting New York Yankees. Whitey Witt, the first man to face him, bounded to Howard Shanks at third. Witt should have been an easy out but Shanks played the ball badly and the generous scorers recorded it as a hit. During the rest of the game not a Yank player made anything that looked like a base hit.

Umpires Connolly and Dinneen, who worked the game, said if ever a pitcher deserved a no-hit game, Ehmke did in the New York contest. However, the game went into the records as a one-hit affair.

How different the next time Ehmke faced the Yankees. Instead of getting one scratch hit in nine innings, the Yankees made 14 in six innings, 11 of the 14 hits coming in the sixth inning, when New York made 11 runs.

Particularly enough, Ehmke seemed to have plenty of stuff, as shown by his six strikeouts in six innings. When he wasn't whiffing them, the Yanks were denting the fences.

WON TECHNICAL KNOCKOUT.

New York, October 17. — Irish Johnnie Curtin of Jersey City, won a technical knock out over Peter Zivic of Pittsburg, in the fourth round of their 12-round bout here last night.

Off Your Game? Kinaesthesia Is What You Want

Off your game?

Topping, pulling, slicing?

Ain't hitting the pesky ball atall?

Don't. What you probably need is a hot application of kinaesthesia. Of course, you know what kinaesthesia is and how to take it? You shake the bottle well—

No, you do nothing of the sort. Kinaesthesia, translated, means a sense of motion, or, more correctly, of muscle movements. In this instance it concerns a new golf theory. Instead of keeping the shot in your mind you are supposed to keep it in your muscles. Don't think how the shot should be played. Get the "feel" and then shoot.

Yes And No In Weapons Of the Links

The plain faced and the tiny ribbed iron clubs are o.k. in golf.

The slotted and punched faces iron clubs are not o.k.

The American golfing fathers, taking their cue from the British, as is their custom, have legislated the so-called trick clubs out of championship tournaments.

As all golfers know, the slotted and punched clubs enable the player to impart a back spin to the ball without unusual effort.

It is possible to put back spin on a ball with any kind of club, plain or otherwise, but the proposition entails a certain amount of science, a deft movement of the wrists which players of limited ability find hard to master.

COMMENT ON THE WORLD'S SERIES

Casey Stengel has been the cockey performer. When Casey hits a home run he circles the bases thumbing his nose. He seemed to have a particular dislike for Sad Sam Jones.

* * * * *

Casey never hesitates about speaking his pieces. After he joined the club he noticed that McGraw was playing Bancroft at second base. McGraw did this because Bancroft had been ill and his arm was not in good condition. He thought second would be easier for Bancroft. Stengel did not think so and he took McGraw to task for his plan. McGraw, we understand, suspended Stengel for three days to give him a chance to think the matter over.

* * * * *

The Giants are in nothing like as favorable a position in regard to next year. This series has served to show, even more forcibly perhaps than the pennant race, the lamentable weakness of the champions in the box. In this series McGraw has had only one effective pitcher and the showing of the others gives some insight into the obstacles McGraw surmounted in winning his third straight National League pennant. This is just another proof of his managerial ability and if he falls short of his goal of three successive world's championships it will be through no fault of his own.

* * * * *

Art Nehf is the only one of McGraw's pitchers who has delivered high-class ball in the series. Before the first game Huggins said that Nehf was the only pitcher McGraw had who could give his club any trouble.

Of course, that opinion being prevalent among the Yankees, Nehf pitched with a big advantage in his favor, because if a team is convinced that a pitcher can beat them it is difficult for that pitcher to lose if he has control, and Nehf had that.

Among the others that McGraw had rushed in Virgil Barnes looked good. He pitched a spectacular ninth on Saturday and he went three and two-thirds innings on Sunday without being scored on. In two of these innings the Yanks made two hits but they could not put over a run. Still, this does not mean that Barnes would be successful if he started a game against the Yankees. It is easy enough to pitch with nothing at stake but to start, to go in when the score is tied or close, that becomes a different matter. A pitcher is then tested and until Barnes is given such a test, his rating as a money pitcher is open to debate.

* * * * *

Miller Huggins, says Salsinger in the Detroit News, intended to start neither Shawkey, who pitched and won Saturday's game, nor Bush in the series, holding this pair for relief work only. He was to pitch Hoyt, Pennock and Jones in order. It was Hoyt's turn on Sunday, but Huggins held him out, following his poor showing in the first game, when the Giants made four runs off him in the third inning. Huggins apparently concluded then that Hoyt was not the right man to start. Incidentally, Hoyt has given Huggins a great deal of trouble and the conceit he carries is one of the handicaps that surround the manager of the Yankees. It is one of the strange turns of base ball that Shawkey and Bush, the two men that were not considered good enough to start, should both win. Shawkey pitched splendidly on Saturday, regardless of the fact that Pennock came to his aid in the eighth, he did not get into trouble because of poor pitching.

Sentiment in Baseball.

There are some who scoff at the thought of sentiment in professional baseball where the purse is supposed to have as much appeal as it has among boxers.

There is sentiment in baseball. No one could have doubted it had they been able to see Art Nehf walk to the dugout with tears streaming down his cheeks, had they been able to look at him on the Giants' bench with his head in his hands and his frame shaken with sobs.

Sorrow over the loss of the money, representing the difference between the winner's and loser's end of the series dos not bring out emotions like that.

The Yanks Rejoiced.

The most touching scene was enacted in the Yankee clubhouse. It will be remembered that Miller Huggins once was the joke manager of the club, who occupied the manager's office and nothing else.

When the Yanks were coming out of the showers, Babe Ruth jumped to the rubbing board and shouted for silence.

"Fellows," he said, "we've just won the world's championship, and we owe everything to 'Hug' for pulling us through and sticking behind us in everything for three years. He has done a fine thing this year, and we all know it. Mr. Huggins, we want to present this to you as a little token of our respect and admiration."

He handed Huggins a beautiful diamond ring and the team gave three cheers for "Hug."

* * * * *

Babe Ruth did not seem to care whether he hit any more home runs or not. Unlike the days before his reformation, Babe is more intent on the Yankees' winning the championship than he is on any personal glory he might gain. The new Babe is a worker for the team, always the first to praise a teammate for work well done, always lending a helping hand when needed.

"I'm not worrying about makin... home runs," Ruth said. "If ... need one I hope I make it and ... be in there swinging all the ti... but if a single will win for us jus... as well I'll be satisfied. What we want now is to get this series over with and we'll do all we can to end it tomorrow.

Pipp, the injured first baseman, is still nursing his lame ankle. That it is painful is evident, for it is swollen and inflamed. However, Pipp is trying to give the mpression that the injured point is nothing to worry about, hiding the pain as much as possible and saying that it doesn't bother him.

It is just this sort of spirit which pervaded the whole atmosphere of the Yankees' dressing-rooms.

Huggins, the midget manager, was perhaps the only one who did not share in the jubilation for at least a minute. After a "nice work, Joe," to Bush, the little fellow, his shoulders bent under the responsibility which he carries went to his room and dressed, intent only on mapping out his campaign for tomorrow. As is always the case with Huggins, he had forgotten the game that was past the minute that the last man was put out and had turned his thoughts toward the contest tomorrow. Perhaps after the Yankees have captured the title, if they do, the pilot of their destinies will smile—and celebrate.

Peterborough Male Voice Choir Negotiating For Singer.

Teh executive of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir are gratified indeed by the large attendance at their first rehearsal of the season held last night in the Greene Music Studio.

The exact number present was 48, and looking over the company, most of the old faces of the last three seasons were on the job, intermingled with new members, quite a few of whom have recently arrived from the ld Country.

Mr. Martin Chenhall the new leader was introduced to the members before rehearsal by President Fred Skitch and was enthusiastically received.

The conductor put the choristers through a severe test for the initial practice, and found the members in real good shape thus early in the season.

Several new numbers were tried, and the members are satisfied with the work of their musical committee. This important committee, comprising men of experience such as W. H. Moore, Ed. Jones, R. Barton, and W. Northrop, along with the professional advice and knowledge of Mr. Chenhall, the executive, and the choir as a whole, feel that the splendid library of music will be graced by the addition of many beautiful and harmonious numbers ere the present season closes.

Jim Holcombe

Jim Holcombe has a sweet and gentle wife, four children nearly grown and a little farm on the edge of town where he raises collie dogs. Jim moved here from a distance town about fourteen years ago. Nobody knows about his past, but nobody cares very much about it for he has been a sober and upright citizen and has attended to his own business. He never talks about his private affairs but he has endured great misfortune. His oldest child, a girl ran away with a traveling man, who was married; the next child, a son, forged a number of checks on his father and ran away from home; the third was caught stealing neckties at one of the local stores; and the fourth, who gave promise of amounting to something, is such a consistent and habitual liar that everybody despises him. People consider it very remarkable that an entire family should turn out badly, and feel great sympathy for Jim and his saintly wife.

He attends to his dog business, however, and makes no complaint. He knows collies thoroughly and it is a pleasure to hear him talk about them. "It is the breeding that counts," he will say. "You can't expect fine dogs from mongrel stock. The reason I breed prize winners and have high-class pups to offer is because my stud dog is the finest that money can buy."

Famous Guys

JOSH BILLINGS: Henry Wheeler Shaw was an American humorist of the phonetic-spelling variety who used "Josh Billings" as pen name and died in 1885 after having made our fathers laugh and tear their beards in glee. His name means little to the present generation, and in that fact lies on explanation of war.

Other men who flourished while Josh was harvesting laughs will occupy many pages in history; yet others will be and have been honored by statutes done in marble and in bronze. Josh will live but for while as a ten-line biography in a reference book.

The world will not forsake the organized butchering of men while history devotes the greater part of its attention to successful killers. The school boy will yearn for martial glory while bronze warriors continue to pose so magnificently in public squares. The world can't learn to love the ways of peace while it continues to worship at the shrine of those who won victories at arms.

Billings made men laugh and forget their cares. What greater service can man render his fellows An emperor drives his subjects out to slaughter and be slaughtered and does the world grevious hurt. The one is forgotten and the other is fixed forrever in the hall of fame. It must be very dififcult to explain that kind of thing to the unconverted savages.

Willis Willis

Little Willie Willis fell from a tree Monday and scratched his face rather severely. He told the doctor he hoped it would leave a scar, because scars look so villainous.

The Girl And The Butcher Boy

HIRAM FEELS THE YOKE.

"He bears the parcel proudly, as one brings trophies home from the war."

The girl and the butcher boy, at home with the girl's parents across the street, are nicely embarked upon their adventure in matrimony and the air is filled with rejoicings. From early morning until nightfall snatches of song drift across the street, and Hiram is no less happy for when he comes home at noon with the steak that is his share of the household's expenses, he bears the parcel proudly, as on brings trophies home from the war. He whistles, also, as he comes; but when the front gate shuts him in the whistle is silenced

This seemed at first a strange phenomenon, and coupled with another incident of equal significance, led to anxious thought on the part of the neighbors. The other incident has to do with Hiram's departure each morning. He does not whistle on his way to work, and it is remarked by those who call at his butcher shop during the morning hours that he is inclined to be morose, and responds to good-humored raillery with obvious difficulty.

The girl came over Wednesday afternoon while her mother was taking a nap, and in the course of her aimless comment on connubial bliss let fall the bits of information necessary to satisfy our curiosity.

"We are just too happy for anything," she boasted, "and I know it's going to be perfectly wonderful to live on here with pape and mamma after Hiram gets used to our ways. It's a little hard on him at first, of course, but he's awfully sweet about it. There's coffee for instance. He says he has always been used to a cup of coffee for breakfast, and doesn't really care for anything if he can't have that; but the smell of coffee makes mamma sick, and so he's learning to drink tea for breakfast. And he likes to whistle around the house, like he does everywhere, but it gives papa a headache, and so Hiram always stops when he reaches the gate. I think it's perfectly darling of him to be so considerate."

Well, well; so it is, no doubt. But we can't help wondering whether the youngster will remain so perfectly darling as the family continues by various annoying means to remind him that he is thoroughly married.

Aunt Het

"Last winter I threw out a can of peaches that had spoiled, and the chickens ate 'em and got drunk and now Pa remembers that and throws it up to me every time I chide him about bein' wasteful.

A SOCCER TROPHY ARRIVES IN CITY

White's Cycle and Sports Limited Presented Cup To Grand A.F.A.

"The Trophy" is the most comprehensive word that can be applied to the magnificent solid silver soccer cup donated to the Peterboro and District Football Association by White's Cycle and Sports, Limited, Company. After many weeks' waiting, the trophy arrived in the city this morning, and every person who has viewed the silverware remark that it is the finest piece of workmanship in silverware that they ever viewed.

The cup stands twenty-seven inches high in solid silver, with two-inch black ebony base containing small plates where the names of the season's champions can be attached each year. A round bottom with elaborate floral carvings runs up the stem, which contains two pointed pieces of fancy engraving pieces. The centre is of a bowl shape, all fancy carving giving it an excellent effect and outside this are two elongated handles of a drop character. Attached to the top, inside the handle, are two figures depicting football characters. Additional engraving is carried out to the top piece, which is a football player in the act of kicking the football, and is four inches high.

The following is engraved in block letters upon the centre of the trophy, "White's Challenge Cup, donated by White's Cycle and Sports, Limited, to the Peterboro and District Football Association, 1923."

The cup will be in the window this evening and any person calling may view it at any time.

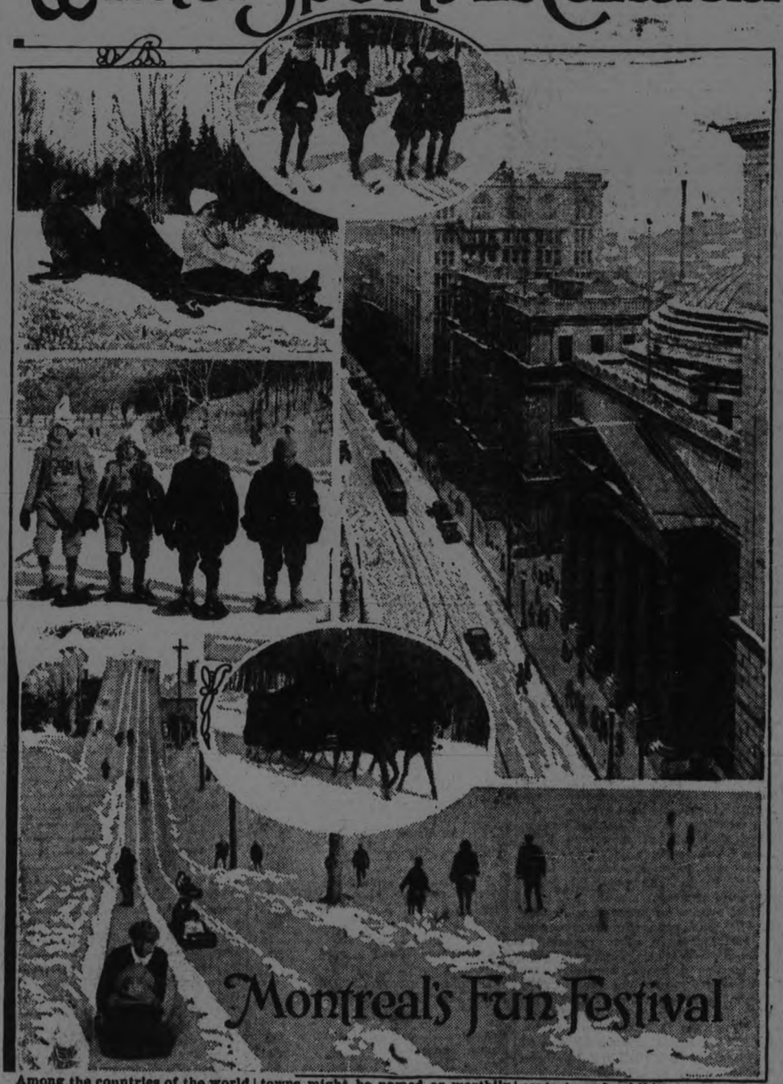
Negotiating For Sale Of Cleveland Team

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 16.—George B. Christian, Jr., former Secretary to the late President Warren G. Harding is negotiating for the purchase of the Cleveland Indians Baseball Club according to news despatches received here to-day from New York. The despatches state that Christian was in conference with B. B. Johnson, President of the American League, in New York, to-day.

When asked regarding the reports E. S. Barnard, president of the Indians, said he "knew nothing about it, but did not believe that it was true."

The rapidity with which the chameleon strikes with its tongue at a flying insect is such that the tongue cannot be detected with the naked eye.

Winter Sports in Canada



Among the countries of the world Canada has long been without a peer as a summer resort. To-day it challenges the hitherto undisputed supremacy of Switzerland in the realm of winter sports. Who has not heard or read of St. Moritz, pride of the Swiss people and for long years the winter time Mecca of Europe? Canada has a score or more of places where all that St. Moritz can offer in the way of winter sports is not only duplicated but surpassed. The fame of these is spreading beyond the confines of this continent to lands across the seas. No longer is the Dominion pictured as a land which hibernates through a long and trying winter period. The truth regarding the invigorating and exhilarating winter climate of this country, with its joy giving and health imparting sports, is as great an advertisement for Canada as the enthusiastic laudations of the glories of its summer and early fall.

Quebec, the ancient and picturesque, Ottawa, a capital to be proud of, and a host of other cities and towns might be named as worthily claiming the attention of those who delight in the season's sports. But the Canadian winter of 1923 belongs, for many reasons, to the old, substantial, and progressive city of Montreal. If that municipality, in which the past and the present, the old and the new so harmoniously blend and combine, had nothing else to point to but Mount Royal it would still have much to boast of. But in addition to the famed toboggan slide of that same beautiful height, there are many attractions to charm and delight every visitor.

It would indeed be almost impossible to detail in a single article the variety of the winter sports and recreations that Montreal will afford throughout the balance of this month and all of February. The Winter Sports Committee, selected by the citizens, is responsible for the arrangements which hold particular appeal to all interested in skating, skiing, curling, snowshoeing, hockey, ice-yachting, tobogganing and the like. Every Saturday in the period named, special ski contests and exhibitions are held at the Montreal Ski Club, while every other winter sport has its special place on the program. It is doubtful if there has ever been anywhere such a remarkable program for winter sports, varied as it is by masquerades, balls and other social functions, and torch light parades amid the most striking natural surroundings. There is the glamor of romance over all, but there is also behind it the spirit of real Canadianism that knows how to blend its play and recreation with its work and its belief in the land that it loves.

Montreal has spared no effort to show that Canada as a winter resort need take second place to none. Even now the success of its undertaking is assured. One of the greatest auxiliaries to that success is the Canadian National Railways, which sees in such plans and programs an opportunity not only of developing business, but of spreading knowledge of Canada beyond its own boundaries as well as among Canadians themselves.

TENNIS NEWS

Dr. MacPherson And Phyllis Young Won Mixed Doubles Tennis Championship

Drs McPherson and Phyllis Young won the mixed doubles tennis championship yesterday afternoon by defeating Langley and Mrs. Langley in a hard match, 6-3, 11-9.

As the score indicates, play was very even, and only the superb steadiness of Miss Young pulled the champions through and confirmed the dope that they were due to repeat their former triumphs. Both Mr. and Mrs. Langley played very steadily, while Dr. McPherson, though not up to his usual form, was brilliant in spots.

This makes three championships for Dr. Young, the ladies' singles, the ladies' doubles paired with Miss Giroux, and the mixed doubles as noted above.

He is said to be disappointed over the showing of the team in the season just finished.

CHINESE.

The Chinese will control the world when they finish adopting the white man's civilization and stop quarreling among themselves, predicts Judge Paul M. Linebarger, American attorney, of Shanghai.

Control the world? Not unless they have a re-birth of their ancient inventive powers, long since vanished. It's one thing, to create. It's another thing, to copy other people's creations. The white man's trump card is his inventiveness. Looks as if he'll continue to invent faster than the orient can copy, for some centuries.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

PATRONS APPRECIATE SPECIAL CARS.

The thoughtful arrangement of Manager Jack Kennedy of the Capitol Theatre, in having special cars waiting Capitol patrons following the showing of the William Fox super-special "If Winter Comes," was greatly appreciated last night. This arrangement was affected through the co-operation of the street car officials. Due to the unusual length of the feature, patrons are requested to arrive as early as possible and so secure good seats. With an excellent Mack Sennett Comedy, Capital News Review and the feature, a full three-hour entertainment is offered. Special cars will again await patrons to-night.

To-night will see the last presentation of the William Fox super-special, "If Winter Comes," which has been attracting capacity audiences at the Capitol Theatre. This powerful picturization of the celebrated novel by A. S. M. Hutchinson, has been setting new records wherever shown and is declared by Peterboro theatre-goers to be one of the best pictures ever shown here. The remarkable work of Percy Marmont as the whimsical Mark Sabre of the book and Anne Forrest's characterization of Nona, make a deep impression. It is safe to say that through the 12 reels that make up "If Winter Comes," the audience is held spellbound. The court-room scene is one of the most gripping ever filmed. The last three days of this week at the Capitol will see Jack Holt in "A Gentleman of Leisure"; Larry Semon in his latest comedy hit, "The Gown Shop," and the official pictures of the Dempsey-Firpo fight in fast and slow motion, thus allowing an excellent view of the greatest fight in heavyweight history. The famous wallop that knocked Dempsey through the ropes is shown with marvellous detail. This picture is just as good as seeing the real fight from a ringside seat.

One of the coming attractions announced by the Capital is Harold Lloyd in his newest feature comedy, "Why Worry," which will be presented at an early date.

AT THE ROYAL.

SQUIBS WINS THE CALCUTTA SWEEP.

The habitues of the Paris boulevards were treated to some real fun when the English director, Mr. Pearson, brought those delightful characters, Sam 'Opkins, Squibs and P. C. Charlie Lee, over there to take many of the scenes of the latest and biggest English comedy hit, "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep." The fastidious Parisian was shocked and delighted at the sight of Sam 'Opkins, the English bloke, all arrayed in a French walking suit, with silk hat and spats, and almost perfect as to dress, but nevertheless being marked all over with the characteristic of a bloke, and going through his screamingly funny gesticulations in a manner that almost made the Arch de Triomphe scream with laughter.

Much of the action of "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" takes place on the streets of Paris, and as in the picture, "Me and My Gal," where remarkable views of Piccadilly Circus and other famous sections of London were shown as the story was unfolded, in this picture the boulevards of Paris figure prominently. The director took the whole company across the Channel, and the views of Paris are a treat to the eye, and the fun that is experienced there by the spectator as he follows the antics of those wonderful English characters, Squibs, 'Opkins and Charlie Lee, is such as will not be forgotten for a long time to come.

The leading actors in this wonderful English comedy are Betty Balfour, the darling of the Old Country, who again takes the part of Squibs, the flower girl, and Hugh E. Wright, the funniest bloke in England. Hugh E. Wright is the same actor who took the part of Sam 'Opkins in the other English comedy, "Me and My Gal," and who also took one of the leading parts in that never-to-be-forgotten film, "The Better 'Ole." Hugh E. Wright is rated in England as just about the funniest comedian in the world, and is considered over there to be funnier than Harold Lloyd, Charlie Chaplin, or any of the American funmakers.

"Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" went over in England to bigger success than that other famous film, "Me and My Gal," and when it plays it is expected to take the whole country by storm.

CIVILIZE MEN OLD AT FORTY.

The highest authority in America, Prof. McCollum, says: "Old age disease deaths have doubled within thirty years, every year younger persons being attacked, due mostly to faulty foods." In these thirty years patent white flour and refined cereals were invented and diseases of the heart, arteries, kidneys, brain, nerves, and digestive organs have kept even pace with their ever-increasing use, until now 165,000 young people die each year in the States alone under 40, from diseases which belong to 70 or beyond.

A return to a natural, unrefined, non-acid dietry of whole grains, milk, eggs, leafy vegetables, and fruits will go far to protect civilized man from the ravages of these diseases, unknown to simple races who do not use refined products.

Roman Meal is the only non-acid grain or cereal food, 400 parts "Excess Alkali" in each 1,000 parts, alkaline enough to correct the "Excess Acids" of white flour, other cereals, meats, fats and sweets, all known to modern food science as "Excess Acid" foods, because they turn the blood from its natural alkalinity to acid. Acid blood lowers vitality, irritates vital organs, prevents body repair, prematurely bringing on old age and disease. Roman Meal keeps the blood alkaline or non-acid, relieves the organs of irritation and strain and rebuilds them, restoring youthfulness and vigor of body and mind. Being non-acid it cools the blood and keeps you upstanding and fit.

Use Roman Meal every day. It makes delicious porridge, muffins, pancakes, johnnycake, etc. Add it to your white flour baking to improve its flavor and to restore valuable properties lost in making flour white. All grocers sell Roman Meal.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR HALLOWEEN

Hallowe'en, with its frolic of witches and wizards, will soon be here, and it is not too soon for those who contemplate holding parties or attending fancy dress balls, to be preparing for the event.

All Hallow's Eve, Halloweve, or, as it is more commonly known, Hallowe'en, is a relic of pagan times. There is nothing in the church observance of the ensuing day. All Saints' Day, to have originated such extraordinary notions as are linked up with this celebrated festival, or such remarkable practices as those by which it is distinguished.

This is the night on which spirits walk abroad, and up to a few years ago they were not solely of the other world. The night is one of hilarity; parties, dances and charades entice all classes of the community into frolic.

Many Hints Given.

To those who seek new ideas for games or decorations the Public Library is a gold mine. Many books are available there on all subjects connected with the holiady, from a treatise on the day itself to instructions for the making of fancy paper costimes. With Thanksgiving day so close to Hallowe'en the magazines which are there to be found will prove invaluable to the hostess with their lists of menus and suggestions for entertainment.

Dennison's Party Books may be obtained, and Dennison's Book of Costumes and Decorations will provide just the out-of-the-way fancy dress that is wanted for the Hallowe'en party.

For those who wish to learn of the origin of the day there is "A Book of Days," and the organizer of card parties has at his disposal several excellent books on the subject.

The Women's Missionary Society of Trinity Methodist Church had, at the suggestion of Mrs. A. J. Langford, adopted a method by which the whole society is divided into groups of twelve or thirteen ladies each. Each group, in turn, with its leader in charge, supervises the programme of meetings throughout the winter season. The October meeting of the society was held yesterday afternoon in the Reid Street Hall, with a good attendance of about sixty of the members of the organisation. Group B, led by Mrs. R. Bugg, was in charge, and an interesting programme was presented, which included a report of the recent Bethany convention, given by Mrs. S. D. Carver, and a vocal solo by Miss Annie Rigby.

Mrs. Howard Fallis has returned to Lennox County, where she is speaking in the interests of the Conservative candidate in the coming by-election.

CROP REPORT

Th following is a summary of returns made by the agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall wheat is looking most promising, but varies in length from a comparatively heavy top to the showing from seed sown a week ago. The bulk of the crop was put in during the first three weeks in September.

Fall ploughing is fairly well advanced, but has been halted in some quarters by the land getting rather dry and hard. With favourable weather a big acreage will be turned under this season.

There is a keen demand for farm labour practically all ove the Province, but the rate of wages offered for the winter months do not appear to be attractive. Many calls are being made on the Soldiers' Settlement Board for men, many of whom went West on harvesting excursions.

Kent—Beets this year are a good crop, and according to the tests made to date the percentage of the sugar content is high. Tests run from 12 per cent. to 25 per cent., with an average of 16 to 16.5 per cent. Reports from good farmers show 10 to 12 tons per acre.

It is now possible to form an approximate idea of the loss caused by the destructive frost on the 15th of September. This was the first killing frost of this character that has come to this couny at this time in 23 years, and it found the tobacco growers particularly unprepared for it. There was a loss in the selling value of the five and one-half million pounds of bright tobacco grown here of at least 45 per cent. The loss in connection with the Burley and other coarse grades of tobacco was at least 75 per cent. of the total crop of some three million pounds. The loss among tobacco growers alone will not be less than $1,250,000. The early planted corn was not badly damaged. The ears are matured and filled out well. The later planted corn was not badly damaged planted corn will not be suitable for seed purposes, but can be utilised for feed. The total supply of seed corn will be considerably lowered this year over previous years, but from present indications it would seem there will be an ample quantity of first-class seed corn to supply the requirements of Ontario and Eastern Canada.

Kenora—All grains have turned out an excellent yield. Red clover is the only disappointment from the seed standpoint: this crop, however, has made excellent hay. One farmer has 77 bushels of alsike seed to sell. This was taken from an 11-acre field, which took second prize in the standing field crop competition this year.

Algoma—The potato crop this year is excellent and harvested under ideal conditions, quite a few fields are running 200 bags to the acre. Potatoes are selling at $1.00 per bag in the field.

Hastings—Many of the larger potato growers find the crop better than was expected. Dooley or Rural New Yorker are apparently giving better yields than other varieties.

Middlesex — Wheat is selling around 95c per bushel, which is less than the price of shorts. Farmers are holding, preferring to feed at that price.

Dundas — The apple market is fairly brisk this fall, prices are good, one grower having delivered several barrels of St. Lawrence to Montreal, receiving $10.00 net.

Elgin — Milk supply is keeping up very well. Condensory paying $2.00 per cwt. now, with prospects of a raise. Good demand for dairy products at prices that are considered very satisfactory.

Northumberland—Some local sales of pure-bred Holsteins have realised very low prices, although pure-bred cows and heifers of good size and reasonable good type, have brought fair prices.

Good dairy cows in milk are selling at auction sales in Prescott and Russell at from $40.00 to $60.00. In Dundas dairy cows are said to be bringing from $60.00 to $100.00.

The Manitoulin representative deplores the fact that owing to the shortage of feed upon the Island a number of young cattle are being shipped out at a very low price.

North Simcoe — Lambs of high quality were sold early this week at 13 1-2c, nearly 2c higher than the previous week. Sheep are becoming increasingly popular.

Algoma — The milk and cream supply are keeping up well. From eight cows one man realised $150.00 from the sale of cream for September.

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

New York, October 17. United Press. — The industrial average as compared by Dow, Jones & Company exactly duplicated the low for the year at the previous close, and speculative attention was turned at the oepning of the stock market today to whether sufficient support would develop to keep this level intact. The consideration dwarfed the outside news although some uneasiness was aroused by the civic disturbances in Berlin.

Leading industrial stocks continued to display a heavy tone in the dealings while a number of new lows on the movement were reached in the rail lists. Stocks continued under pressure throughout the first hour. Northern Pacific reached a further new low for the year while Kelly-Springfield and United States Industrial Alcohol were the heaviest features of the industrials.

Improvement in steel orders since the first of the month has not been reflected in the stock market while October steel unfilled orders may show a decline the shrinkage is likely to be smaller than in September. There has been a better demand from the railways and the automobile companies. Japan and the oil companies are beginning to show more activity on the buying side.

General Motors has purchased sufficient steel to keep its plants in full operation for the remainder of the year. The steel companies are not going to have a bad last quarter by any means; earnings may be smaller than in the preceding quarter but all well-established companies will show a substantial gain over dividends.

Finding little stock for sale at around the year's low, traders attempted to bring about a rally in the late morning. J. J. Manning was the principal buyer of American Can, while Steel, Baldwin and Studebaker were also taken in blocks large enough to indicate powerful interests were at work.

Steel rebounded more than a point to 87¼ and proportionate recoveries took place in other speculative issues, Bell-Wethers, Endicott Johnson continued heavy, breaking into new low ground for the year at 59¼ ...Opening prices included United States Steel 86¼ up 1-8, Pan American 56 off ¼; B 53¼ off 1-8; Baldwin 115 1-2 up 5-8, American Can 91 up ½; Studebaker 94 3-4; Northern Pacific 51¼ up 5-8; American Woollen 71 up 1-2; Reading 74 1-8, up ¼; New York Central 99 7-8 off 1-8; Dupont 123¼ off 1-4; Baltimore and Ohio 55 5-8 up 3-8; Canadian Pacific 42 5-8 off 3-8. CHICAGO SETTING NEW RECORD FOR DIVORCES

CHICAGO, Oct. 17 (United Press).—Chicago sets the divorce court speed record for the United States by granting a decree to separate married couple a every 12¾ minutes.

To "unwed" couples in this record time requires the work of several judges. At times the rate of granting divorces has been speeded up until each 8¾ minutes a couple stepped before the judge together and left in different directions.

Two yea s ago a London judge set a record by granting thirty divorces in little less than an hour. For speed, the London court made a new record, but for sustained rapid handling of cases Chicago judges, granting 903 decrees in a month, are thought to have established the record.

The number of divorces per 100,000 population has been rapidly increasing here. From 128 in 1906 the number has jumped to 201 in 1922 and is still increasing, according to the statistics available for this year.

In Cook County there has been a divorce for every six marriages during the past year. The proportion of divorces to marriages is increasing rapidly and will be one divorce to every five marriages in a short time, it is thought.

TIPSTER USES BELMONT'S NAME; BETTOR ASKS $27,000 FOR WIN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Because he is alleged to have told how his mother had reared all of August Belmont's children and for that reason he was often "the confidant of the banker," when the latter had a "good thing" in a race, John D. Gratter, 40, a negro waiter, of 414 St. Nicholas Avenue, found himself facing Magistrate George W. Simpson in Essex Market Court on a charge of grand larceny.

Louis Deneroff, a druggist, of 544 West Fourteenth Street, alleged Gratter had got $5,000 from him to play on Little Army, a horse running at Havre de Grace, and although the horse won he had not been able to collect either his money or his winnings. Gratter pleaded not guilty and was held in $5.000 for examination.

Deneroff told the Magistrate he gave Gratter $5,000 to finance the tip on Little Amy. The druggist testified Little Amy was first at $4.20 to $1. These odds, Deneroff said, showed his $5.000 had grown to $27,000. Gratter then told him, Deneroff alleged, he could not find the bookmaker, whose name was said to be Williams, of Jersey City. Deneroff notified the police and Detective William Crowley and the druggist went to Harlem on Sunday where they located Gratter, who was arrested. Deneroff said he would not press the charge if he could collect his winnings.

AFTERMATH OF FIRE RESULTS MURDER CHARGE

Six Persons Lost Their Lives in New York Fire Said to Have Been Set.

TWO MEN ARRESTFD

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—A sensational aftermath of the fire which early last Monday destroyed a Brooklyn home and caused the death of six persons, came to-day with the arrest of William A. Ford, a real estate broker and son-in-law of one of the fire victims, and Raymond Anderson, on charges of murder and arson.

A third man, James R. Lynch, was held as a witness, and a fourth is being sought.

Ford is a son-in-law of George Keim, playwright, whose death in the fire came on the eve of the production of his first play. The arrest followed an all-night grilling of the prisoners by Fire Marshal Brophy, who declared he had obtained a confession from Anderson. Ill-feeling between Keim and his son-in-law was said to have existed for several years.

Anderson, according to Brophy, accused Ford and an unidentified man, also a stranger to him, of having driven to Keim's home early Monday morning after they had spent Sunday evening with two girls, and with having fired the house. Keim, three women and two other men perished in the flames.

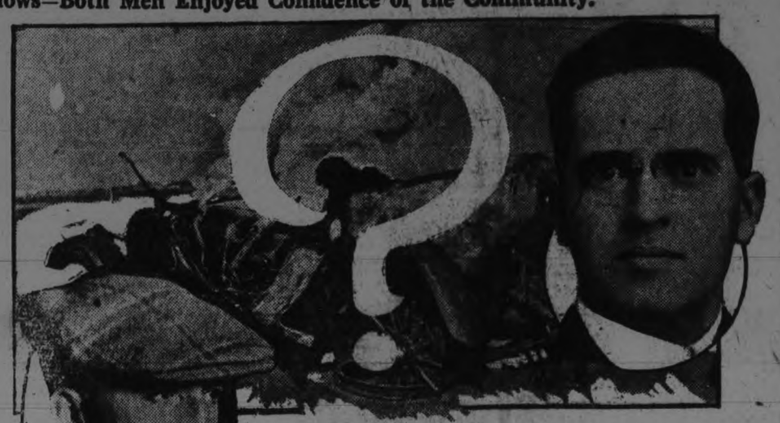
BRUTAL MURDERS REVEAL HONORED CITIZENS AS PRESENT DAY JEKYLL AND HYDE SLAYERS

Slayers Motivated by a Paralyzing Greed for More Gold—One a Suicide and the Other Will Go to The Gallows—Both Men Enjoyed Confidence of the Community.



ALEXANDER KELS (LOWER LEFT), AND DR. R. M. BRUMFIELD (ABOVE), BOTH PROMINENT CITIZENS OF THEIR COMMUNITIES, AND BOTH IMPLICATED IN IDENTICAL WEIRD MURDER CASES.

LODI, Calif., Oct. 18.— Yesterday a pillar of the community, looked up to with respect—

To-day a confessed slayer, sentenced to die upon the scaffold for perpetration of one of the most revolting crimes ever charted in the history of California crime.

Execution awaits the once wealthy cattleman and prosperous chain meat store proprietor because he listened to the sanguinary promptings of a strange troglodyte unleashed in his brain, urging him to kill.

* * * *

Responding to the weird incantations, he lured a "ragged stranger" to his home, shot the victim, and then, placing the body in his automobile, drove away into the country, where he fired the remains in a gasoline-soaked haystack, under circumstances to indicate that Kels himself had been murdered.

The case throughout bears amazing analogy to the Jekyll-Hyde existence of Dr. R. M. Brumfield of Roseburg, Ore., who in 1921 endeavored to substitute the slain body of a rancher for his own in a wrecked auto which had been run over a cliff and dynamited.

In both instances the slayers were motivated by a paralyzing greed for more gold, which they hoped to obtain from increased insurance policies, taken out just before the ghoulish madness in their brains sent them forth on their missions of gruesome cunning.

* * * *

Both men were married and enjoyed positions of influence in their communities.

Nothing that money could buy was apparently denied them.

Dr. Brumfield did a thriving business in his dental practice.

His manner, at all times, was calm and assured, as is that of Kels, now within the shadow of the gallows.

All was calm and serene until the weird phobia overtook them, and they gave ear to the surging cries of the golden genii reeling through their tortured minds in fiendish chorus.

Then they struck!

But as surely as murder will out, and the plans of men go often amiss, Kels and Brumfield erred in their seemingly well-laid plots, and from the scant trails left behind, their ruses were uncovered, and the law clamped on its hand.

The first suspicion against the Lodi butcher was brought about because of his lack of foresight to resist eating a can of sardines, just before the murder of the man, whom he had picked up at an employment agency "to do some work on his ranch."

But when an autopsy was performed on the body, mourned as that of Kels, no traces of fish were found in the stomach.

Likewise, it was discovered, the slain man had been undernourished. From bits of cloth clinging to the half-charred flesh under one of the armpits, he was found to have been attired in heavy underwear and overalls, whereas Kels had been well fed and always wore light undergarments.

* * * *

Immediately the wheels of justice were started turning by Sheriff W. H. Riecks, who of all the 3,000 mourners which wound their way to the funeral of the town's most eminent citizen, had been the sole doubting Thomas of the authenticity of Kels' death.

He had noticed discrepancies between the stature and teeth of the victim and those of the missing butcher, but had held his peace and worked quietly alone for solution of the crime.

Trapped in a box-car he tried to kill himself by placing the muzzle of a rifle in his mouth and pulling the trigger with his foot. A defective shell, however, frustrated this attempt at self-destruction.

When brought to trial he stoically pleaded guilty and refused all offers of legal aid to obtain a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment on the grounds of insanity.

His wife, who believes him dead, lies near death's door in a local hospital suffering from a complication of strain, brought on by grief and her near approach to motherhood.

Public sentiment has been raised to high pitch by the brutal crime and the deception which Kels practiced on the community.

But with the madness gone from his brain, the convicted man waits unmoved for his doom, as much a psychological riddle as was Dr. Brumfield, who hanged himself in his death cell just a few days before the hangman was to receive him.

Inmates of Protestant Home Help To Keep Down the High Cost of Living.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Protestant Home was held yesterday afternoon in the board room at the Home, with a good attendance of members. Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, pastor of Knox Presbyterian church, opened the meeting, referring in complimentary terms to the homelike atmosphere of the institution and the impression made on a stranger accustomed to the barrack-like feeling encountered in the majority of such homes. Representatives of various churches in the city attended the meeting and many eulogistic references were made to the quantity of beautiful flowers which decorated the home from the gardens on the grounds, still untouched by frost. Mrs. Robt. Neill occupied the chair.

Reports for the year were presented by the superintendent, Miss A. Lancaster, the secretary Miss Amy Halliday, the treasurer, Miss Sara Robinson; the overseer, J. C. Hamilton; and the building committee, given by E. F. Mason. The reports were seconded by Mayor Taylor, who spoke briefly in praise of the conduct of the institution, remarking that the City Council was always ready to help in any way, but was not called upon to do so because of the efficient management by the ladies.

Officers for Year

Officers for the current year were elected as follows: 1st honorary president, Mrs. W. Roger; 2nd honorary president; Mrs. M. A. Hazlitt; 1st honorary vice president, Mrs. R. E. Birdsall, Birdsalls; 2nd honorary vice president, Miss A. M. Nicholls; President, Mrs. Robt. Neill; 1st vice president, Mds. Duncan Walker; 2nd vice president, Mrs. Robert Hall; treasurer, Miss S. G. Robinson; assistant treasurer, Mrs. D. Walker; secretary, Miss Amy Halliday; assistant secretary, Mrs. E. Harvey.

It was moved by Mrs. N. D. Seaton and seconded by Miss Denne, that the following be elected directors for three years, 1923-1926; Mrs. E. Harvey Miss Dickson, E. F. Mason, J. A. Aylmer.

Reports for year

The superintendent, Miss Lancaster, reported that the Home had sheltered among its personnel during the year four person over ninety years of age, one in her ninetieth year, eight persons over eighty years thirteen over seventy years, and the rest, with the exception of two were between sixty and seventy years of age. Miss Lancaster spoke of "alert and far-reaching sympathies and interests" of the majority of the old old people in the Home of their eager contributions in small ways to worthy causes, their enjoyment of treats provided for them, and the evidences of a growth of community spirit particularly in the women's section. Reference was gratefully made to the efforts of the clergy of the city in providing the much-enjoyed Sunday services at the home.

Secretary's Report

The report of the secretary, Miss Amy Halliday, was a resume of the year's work. Miss Halliday alluded to the feeling of regret amongst the Board members because of the removal from the city of their president, Mrs. W. Roger, whose "lifelong devotion to cause was a noble example to all who had the privilege of working under her leadership," and also spoke of the faithful work of Mrs. Ellis "who has been called to higher service."

The work of Mrs. Hurry, engaged as a practical nurse, was commended The general health of the old people had been good throughout the year, with the exception of an influenza outbreak during March and April, and the building was in splendid condition a good deal of painting having been done during the past session.

Miss Halliday referred to the pressing need of a diet kitchen on the second floor, to be used in time of sickness. Plans and estimates have been prepared for future installation of such a convenience. The overseer's cottage, "a most attractive comfortable, suitable home built under Mr. Mason's supervision," will be completed about the first of November, when Mr. Hamilton will be conveniently near at hand.

Trades And Labor Debate Plans For Fall And Winter

The regular meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held in the Trades and Labour Hall, George Street, last evening, and was favoured with a large attendance.

Plans were discussed for making the sessions of that body attractive for the fall and winter campaign, some of which were considered worthy of further thought, and were left to be dealt with at a later meeting.

The usual routine business was transacted and the members adjourned till the next regular meeting on Wednesday, 7th November.

HONOR BALL VICTORS WHILE MEMORY GREEN

City Council Cheerfully Acquiesces in Co-operation for Suitably Recognizing Notable Achievements on The Diamond.

Waited upon by a deputation from the P.A.A.A. last evening, the City Council cheerfully and unhesitatingly acquiesced in active and financial co-operation to suitably recognize the prowess this season of Peterboro boys in the baseball arena. Just exactly what shape this recognition is to take will be determined at a meeting of the P.A.A.A. committee and the Council's Reception Committee at the earliest possible moment.

Put Peterboro on Map.

The teams who have in winning Provincial Championships this year, distinguished themselves, and also brought fame to Peterboro City, are the Bantams, Midgets, Juniors, and Intermediates. Then the Juveniles went through into the finals.

Dr. McPherson stressed the fact that it is duty for the City Council, the P.A.A.A. and other public bodies to see that the remarkable achievements of these teams is fittingly recognized. He understood that the Council is earnestly interested in and determined that some function shall be staged in keeping with the distinction which these teams have brought upon their home town, and that function consummated at an early date while their deeds are fresh in the minds of the public.

J. E. Sullivan, while endorsing Dr. McPherson's sentiments, stressed the advertising feature of this wonderful sports record, probably excelling that of any other town in the Province to-day. Four teams winning championships and a fifth going into the finals, has, he emphasized, put Peterboro on the map, so to speak, for a community is rated to no inconsiderable extent by its sporting quality.

World Wide Publicity.

Another strong advertising feature accruing to Peterboro from these victorious ball teams lies in their photos and write-ups in Spalding's Guide; for, Mr. Sullivan pointed out, since the war baseball has developed into a national game pretty nearly the world over—even as far east as Japan—and consequently Spalding's Guide now enjoys a universal circulation. This publicity costs nothing but for the photographs, said Mr. Sullivan, who also hinted that a picture of the team on which they played would be highly appreciated by the individual members themselves as a souvenir of their 1923 honors earned on the diamond.

Dr. McPherson here stated incidentally that a big American paper is going to devote one whole page to the achievements of Peterboro's ball teams, together with photo reproductions.

General Cooperation.

Ald. Maher understod that the Chamber of Commerce is willing to cooperate in this matter, "which is," he said, "one that cannot be passed over lightly."

The Mayor thought that the function in honor of the boys should take the shape of a banquet to which he had already committed himself, the event to be held not later than next week.

On motion of Ald. Crowe and McIntyre, the project is left in the hansd of the Reception Committee, to act in conjunction with the P.A.A.A.'s Committee, and possibly other bodies.

ARRANGING TO CONNECT WITH CITY'S SEWERS

COUNCILS CONFER

A brief conference between the Council of North Monaghan and the City Council last evening resulted in the City Engineer and the City Solicitor being instructed to report some sort of an agreement under which residents in North Monaghan may connect up with such city trunk sewers as are conveniently adjacent. Such was the motion of Ald. Stocker and Meyers.

This meeting was the outcome of a petition from a large number of North Monaghan ratepayers that their Council endeavor to effect arrangements with the city for sewerage privileges wherever practicable, and in discussing the petition the township was represented by Reeve H. B. Rye, Deputy Reeve R. T. Lillico, Councillors Robert A. Dobbin, W. C. Fallis and Gerald A. Wood, also Township Clerk Bruce Johnston.

Had No Proposition.

Asked had North Monaghan any proposition to offer, Reeve Rye simply drew attention to the petition and said, "You have the sewers, it is up to you to arrange terms for connecting."

And here Ald. Stocker poignantly countered with, "What action should we take regarding those North Monaghan residents who have enjoyed Peterboro's sewer privileges the last ten years without paying a cent for same into the city's treasury? They connected up without permission, and their cases should be taken into consideration if any agreement is now entered into between the two municipalities."

Not denying that some such connection had been made on Lock Street without the formality of the city's consent, Reeve Rye did not think Peterboro municipality "had many stones to throw at North Monaghan but which could be consistently returned by the township. For, he pointed out, the city had enjoyed the use of Lock Street trunk sewer for 25 years over the expiration of its lease to Peterboro. In explanation of this, Reeve Rye states that when Lock Street trunk sewer was first laid, following a protest from North Monaghan, an injunction was awarded, prohibiting its sewage from being discharged into the river. Subsequently, however, that injunction was lifted and the city allowed five years in which to provide some other means of sewage disposal, which judicial ruling had not yet been complied with. Consequently, Reeve Rye contends that Peterboro municipality is equally culpable with the township residents in question regarding self-assumption of privileges.

Methods of Charging

Varied methods of charging for sewer privileges to North Monaghan were suggested, some aldermen holding that such suburban residents should contribute toward the original cost of a trunk sewer tapped in addition to payment for service. As to collecting payment, were a satisfactory agreement consummated, it is understood that the city would look to the township for discharge of the liabilities thereby entailed which township in turn would tax its ratepayers affected.

City Engineer Parsons' scheme for payment was that North Monaghan ratepayers should be charged on the basis of local improvement rates for sewers obtaining in the city for the year preceding that in which township residents make sewer connections, plus another fixed charge to cover main sewers and sewage disposal plant.

Capacity For 50,000.

Discussing the increased load on the city's trunk sewers entailed by North Monaghan residents connecting up, Mr. Parsons said there is capacity in the city's main sewers for serving 50,000 people, providing the sewers are kept for sanitary sewerage only.

In the event of an agreement being entered into between the two municipalities, sewer connections in the suburbs would be made from plans approved of by the City Engineer.

Of the City Council there were present: Mayor W. H. Taylor, presiding, and Aldermen Mel. Turner, Nagel Phelan, Walter Stocker, J. W. Meyers, J. O. Fife, M. J. Maher, Robert Lawson, Malcoln McIntyre, Joseph Crowe, City Engineer Parsons and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing.

SAXON MINISTER OPENLY DEFIED FEDERAL ORDER

READY FOR STRUGGLE

BERLIN, Oct 18—(United Press) —The radical minister, President of Saxony, Dr. Zeigner, to-day openly defied the demands of the Federal dictator of the Dresden District, General Mueller.

He opposed answering the General's letter demanding that the Saxon Cabinet disavow the fiery speeches of the Saxon Finance Minister Boettcher. Zeigner declared in the diet to-day he was ready to fight for a dictatorship of the proletariat.

Zeigner read the letter from General Mueller demanding disavowal to the diet, asserting he objected to such attempts at interference with his government.

Constitution Violated

Although he swore allegiance to the constitution he said the rights guaranteed by the constitution had been broken and that he was prepared for a struggle if it became necessary.

Mueller's letter, while making no definite threat firmly demanded a reply by 11 o'clock to-day, stating unequivocally "whether the Saxon ministry as a whole identifies itself and is in agreement with the letter and spirit of Finance Minister Boettcher, or whether the Saxon Government is willed to act against the utterances of Finance Minister Boettcher and in accordance with my instructions."

This letter was interpreted here and in Dresden as stripping the last vestige of covering from military dictatorship throughout the country. The General's demand was understood to be basked by the presence of fifteen battalions of troops under orders to march at his command.

No indication was seen of Saxony's willingness to yield.

AGNES DECLARES MEMBERS ARE IN CLUTCHES MACHINE

Likes E. J. McMurray, Solicitor-General in Dominion House—Miss McPhail Campaigning For Labor Candidate in Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Describing Hon. E. J. McMurray, Solicitor-General, as a "nice man," and that there was nothing wrong with men like him, Miss Agnes McPhail, M.P. for East Grey, Ontario, speaking here last night in support of Ald. A. A. Heaps, Independent Labor party candidate in the North Winnipeg by-election, said the trouble was they were in the clutches of a machine. It did not matter what they might personally want to do, as they could not do it. Miss McPhail appealed to Labor to rally round Ald. Heaps and send him to support other Labor members in Parliament.

SYDNEY MURRELL DID NOT TESTIFY

Leg Irons Were Removed But Prisoner Backed Out.

LONDON, Ont., October 18 Canadian Press). — At the last moment, just as the guards were removing his leg irons, Sid Murrell, on trial for the murder at the Fall Assizes here this morning, called to his counsel, J. M. Donohue.

A moment's consultation followed, and Mr. Donohue, who had apparently been waiting for Murrell to take the stand, announced that he had no further evidence to offer.

Slim Williams was the only witness called for the defence. He was called to testify, not for himself, but for Murrell.

Williams' case, it was announced this morning, was closed. Williams declared only three guns were used in the holdup. The gun produced and identified as Sid Murrell's, he said, belonged to Pat Norton, and that Murrell had picked it up from the floor of the bank after Norton had fled.

The gun was smoking at the time, Williams declared. Fear of the fourth man, the missing Pat Norton, had prevented him from backing out after the robbery of the bank was planned, Williams said; he was afraid even to return the revolver given him by Pat because he feared Pat would "get" him. Pat had told him when he gave him the gun at Byron that he would need it.

Williams declared he did not know a man had been killed until he saw the stretcher with the sheet covering it, being carried across the Longwood Road; that was after he had been tied to a post.

MORE EVIDENCE IN MURDER CASE

Suspicious Character Around Murder Scene a Week Past.

HAMILTON, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—It was learned to-day that Homer Lindsay had called on J. J. Bertram, farmer, at Vinemount, and after leaving him, spoke to a friend, J. E. Simpson, at Vinemount Station. Lindsay left Mr. Simpson at 4.55, saying that he was going to Hamilton, but did not say what road he would take. This morning Provincial Inspector Miller, Chief Clark of Wentworth and Detective Goodman, of the Hamilton force, located the spot where the shooting occurred, and found Mr. Lindsay's hat. The grass was much trampled, giving evidence of a hard struggle between the murderer and Lindsay. People in that vicinity stated that for a week past a suspicious character has been about there. He wore two overcoats and wanted to sleep in barns. He gave the impression that he was not right in his mind.

Municipalities Adjoining Peterboro to be Notified They Must Pay for Fire Protection.

BUSINESS ATTITUDE

When interviewing the City Council in Committee of the Whole, last night re-sewer connection for the township, Reeve Rye of North Monaghan had but little to say regarding Mayor Taylor refusing to send the local fire brigade to the fire in North Monaghan early Monday morning, when Lloyd Redmond's house was totally destroyed. And what few utterances on the question emanated from him were free from pronounced censure or acrimony. While not optimistic that the dwelling could have been saved had the brigade been despatched when he asked for their services, he did not think the Mayor's attitude very neighbourly as between sister municipalities. Then he was curious to know just how one could reconcile Peterborough's position regarding the two recent fires in his town. On the first occasion the city's fire men responded to a call from irresponsible parties and the township was billed for that service; but on Monday morning when he, the Reeve and consequently a responsible authority sent in a request for and Mayor Taylor refused assistance.

Ald. Morrison regretted exceedingly the Mayor's action and contended that fire-fighting assistance should have been sent at once.

Mayor Taylor replied that when phoned by Reeve Rye for help, the brigade could not have rendered much service the fire having then gained too great headway; besides, he said, there was no water available.

Ald. Morrison here pointed out the need of a pumping apparatus for the city's fire fighting plant, which pumper could be used in any well

IN MEMORIAM.

ROBERTS—In loving memory of Mrs. Samuel Roberts who died at Port Hope, October 18, 1922.

Yes, dear mother, how we miss you,
But you're gone to happy rest
Where the angels throng around you
And they'll crown you with the blest.

You have gone to be with loved ones
Who have gone on long before;
They are waiting, watching for you,
Over on that golden shore.

Though your place on earth is vacant
And you'll come to us no more;
Yet again we hope, dear mother, to meet you.
When our time on earth is o'er.

And in that land of song and beauty
Parting hands are clasped no more
When we meet again dear mother,
'Twill be when parting all is o'er.

All your days of pain and sorrow,
All your weary nights are past,
All earth's trials for you are ended—
You are safe in heaven at last.

—Inserted by her sons and daughters.

(Port Hope Guide please copy).

IN MEMORIAM.

EGGLETON.—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Jas. Eggleton, who passed away October 18, 1919.

The rolling stream of life goes on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of her who once sat there.
When for a while we part,
The thought will soothe our pain,
That we shall still be joined in heart
And one day meet again.

—Sadly missed by Husband and Daughters, Mrs. Collett and Mrs. Meyes.

or creek; and the Mayor added that the possession of a pumper would have altered the situation entirely on Monday morning.

Pay For Utilities

Ald. Crowe here reiterated his complaint that people moved out to sister townships to enjoy low taxation and then they expected to get free use of city utilities, which in his opinion they should pay for.

Mayor Taylor urged for a pronouncement as to just what action he should take if again asked for fire protection by neighboring municipalities.

Ald. McIntyre and Fife would not send the brigade unless arrangements for remuneration are made with the municipality affected, or at the time with some one in authority.

Ald. Stocker was of this opinion, but still, were a city hydrant near a fire he would not like to see anyone's building destroyed for lack of fire protection aid from Peterborough.

Ald. Morrison—"How are we to know that a hydrant is handy? Invariably whoever 'phones in the alarm cannot give that information."

Ald. Turner though the brigade should respond when reeve or some responsible person asks for assistance.

Ald. Crowe asserted that residents in Monaghan, get insure as cheaply without paying for fire protection as city ratepayers who do pay for protection. The former do not get their schooling privileges free," he added.

Bring Them to Time

Ald. McIntyre —I think the only plan to adopt is far the Mayor to refuse fire-fighting assistance three or four times; and then North Monaghan will get busy and seek an arrangement and terms with the city."

Ald. Meyers proposed that Peterborough offer North Monaghan an agreement for fire protection at so much an hour, and should they not agree to that 'then we have done our part," he said.

Ald. Maher ridiculed the idea, as proposed in Council; charging North Monaghan, on the city's border, $100 for fire service a couple of weeks ago, the same price as paid by Omemee some considerable distance away.

Discussion ended in the passing of a resolution by Ald. Meyers and Stocker that the townships of North Monaghan, Otonabee and Smith be written that when the city is called upon by them for fire protection, they make official arrangements with the city for such protection as can be given them.

CHINESE WOMAN THREW ACID IN DOCTOR'S FACE

Be Blind For Life ...m Burns — Mother ...amed Doctor For ...by's Death.

...S A "BLUE BABY."

...TROIT, Oct. 18.—Dr. Frank ...German, Pontiac physician, was ...wered with acid late yesterday ...ernoon by Daisy Lee, 23-year-old ...merican wife of the proprietor of ...e Chinese laundry at 2611 Virginia ...k, and will probably lose the ...ht of both his eyes. This was ...orted today by Dr. D. A. Camp...ll, who is attending Dr. German ... Harper Hospital, and who says ... patient is in such pain he can be ...ited by no one.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Lee, from her ...ll in the Pontiac Jail, keeps repeating she is "glad she did it" and that ...e hopes the doctor will die. Her ...ory that her child, born a year ago ...terday, died because of Dr. Ger...n's negligence is constantly on ... lips, and efforts of Oakland ...unty matrons to quiet her or make ... understand she has been charged ...h a serious offense have been un...ding.

...ews of her arrest reached the ...s of her husband, C. L. Lee, to... and caused him, with Oriental ...nness, to tell his version of the ...ry.

Brooded Over Death.

"I did not know where Mrs. Lee ...s going yesterday," he explained. I did not know she was taking that ...ld with her. But I did know she ...lt bad about our baby.

"She's been strange ever since it ...ed. She talked about the doctor ...ll the time. She said it was all his ...ult. But she did not tell me what ...e meant to do. We moved here ...om Pontiac five months ago and ...e's been unhappy all the time, but ... did not know she was going back ...o Pontiac yesterday. I did not ...ess at all."

Then he went back to his work of ...roning collars

Mrs. Lee, it is charged, appeared ...uddenly in Dr. German's office in ...ntiac. He came out to the ante...om to speak to her, and she ...ulled the bottle of acid from her ...oat, it is charged, and hurled it ...ull in his face. Subsequently, ...hen she was arrested, it was ...ound she had a meat cleaver con...ealed in her clothing.

Charge Doubted.

Her accusation that her child died ...ause of negligence on the part ... Dr. German is scouted by physi...ans both at Harper Hospital and ...n Pontiac.

The Lee baby, it is explained, was ... "blue baby". It was born with a ...hysiological ailment of the heart ...hich prevented it receiving suffi...ient oxygen and caused its body to ...ecome blue in color. Harper Hos...pital doctors say it is rarely pos...sible to save the life of infants so ...fflicted and the fact that the Lee ...aby survived 11 days is evidence ...t had the best of care.

Dr. German is married and has one child.

Shot By Men He Gave Ride

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 17.— (Canadian Press.)— As Homer Lindsay, automobile salesman, was driving east of Hamilton about two miles from Stoney Creek, this evening, two men stopped him and asked for a ride. He invited them to get in, when one produced a revolver saying: "It's not a ride, it's your money we want." The other grabbed Lindsay's watch. Lindsay put up a struggle, but was fatally shot.

WORLD'S WHEAT SHOWS SURPLUS

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—(Canadian Press).—According to a cablegram received to-day from the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, the first official estimate of the production of wheat in Argentina is 248,755,000 bushels against 189,047 000 last year and 180,642,000 in 1921 The production of flax-seed in Argentina is 75,981,000 bushels against 44,280,000 last year and 32,272,000 in 1921.

"These figures for wheat," states T. K. Doherty, Canadian Institute Commissioner coupled with the recent Canadian report and the latest revisions of the European crop raise the world's total production to 3,422,072,000 bushels, compared with 3,108,000,000 last year and 3,087,000,000 in 1921. Excepting for a few unimportant countries the official total production of Europe is now known and indicates an increase of 219,000,000 bushels over last year's crop and 33,000,000 over that of 1921.

"The communication to-day of the branch to the next 'Agricultural Gazette' gives details not only of the wheat crop but of all the five cereals and potatoes. There is a decrease of 331,000,000 bushels or 17.6 per cent. In the European potato crop and including North America and Algeria a decrease of 386,000,000 or 16 per cent. Hence, Germany's order yesterday prohibiting the export of potatoes and the probability that our previously published figures with reference to the wheat demand have to be revised upward by at least thirty million bushels to 570,000,000. The protracted drought in South eastern Europe severely cutting down the areas seeded to the new crop emphasize this view and the general need of maintaining greater surpluses also the probability that exports for the present year will closely approximate the official total gross exports of 727,000,000 bushels for the past grain year. Of this amount it will be recalled that only 562 millions are recorded as having been imported by Europe and that the balance of 165 million remains unrecorded or was shipped ex-Europe, where the needs this year are deemed greater."

MARMORA PLANS LECTURE COURSE

Committee Appointed to Consider the University Extension Series.

MARMORA ,Oct. 18.—A meeting was held in the Public Hall on Monday the 15th, Mr. F S. Pearce in the chair, to consider the advisability of arranging for a series of University Extension Lectures for this winter.

The meeting was well attended by many prominent citizens and the unanimous opinion was that the proposal should be adopted.

A committee consisting of Rev. Mr. Watson, the Rev. Mr. Clare, Rev. Father Traynor, Mr. H. J. Payette, Mr. E. C. Prentice, Miss Brennan, Mr. F. S. Pearce and Mr. J. H. Scott was appointed to make the preliminary arrangements and choose the lectures.

These lectures cover a wide range of subjects and ade of an interesting and educational nature and it is hoped the local citizens will fall behind the movement and give it every support possible.

Rumor Reached Marmora.

The Dominion Bank staff here were kept busy for the last few days owing to the unusual number of withdrawals caused by a false rumor about the bank's standing being circulated. Much of the money is now being deposited again, however, now that the scare is over.

Mrs. Wm. Hughes went to Baptiste Lake on Tuesday.

Mr. R. Bacon, Peterboro, visited relatives in town for the last few days.

ROBBED MONTANA BANK AND KILLED TWO MEN

CALGARY, Alta., Oct. 17.—Provincial Police have been asked by United States authorities to watch out for a car containing some bandits who, according to reports, robbed a bank at Fort Benton, Montana late to-day, and after killing two men made their escape over the international boudary.

SINN FEINERS SAY BISHOP'S AGAINST THEM

VIGILS AT PRISONS.

DUBLIN, Oct. 17.—The proceedings of this the second day of the convention of the Ard Fheis, or Sinn Fein organization, covered the whole of the Republican programme in detail, and throughout the session the votes were unanimous, no divisions having been called for.

Uppermost in the minds of the delegates proved to be the hunger strike of 485 prisoners in Mount Joy Prison. It was urged that the strike was all the graver because it was undertaken by men, many of whom have been in prison for twelve months and whose vitality is alleged to have been lowered through punishment inflicted. These punishments, it was declared, including throwing water on the men with hose and subsequently exposing them to the night air. Apprehension was expressed that shortly there would be numerous deaths among the prisoners

All Night Vigils.

A strike of workmen and a cessation of public entertainments were approved as a means for securing the release of the prisoners. Hundreds of the Sinn Feiners were told off to-day to assemble this evening for an all-night vigil outside the various prisons, where the Rosary will be recited and hymns sung.

The Government is maintaining its previous atttiude on the question of prisoners. It denies the charges of ill-treatment of them. The Government has issued documents for the release of thirteen of the persons in Mount Joy prison, but their release cannot be made effective because all the prisoners are refusing to answer to the roll call of their names.

Among the important resolutions passed to-day was one protesting against the alleged injustice of the Irish Catholic bishops to-ward Republicans, and especially their alleged refusal of the sacraments. This resolution, which was passed unanimously and will be telegraphed to Pope Pius to-night, also requested the Pontiff to exclude politics from the pulpit.

Another resolution passed condemned the alleged murder of officials and others by the Free State Government. It referred especially to the shooting of Rory O'Connor and of Erskine Childers.

Want De Valera Freed.

The immediate release of Eamon De Valera and all the political prisoners was demanded in still another resolution.

Friday week was fixed upon by the convention as universal fast day among the Republicans as a protest against the further holding of the prisoners. It was decided that pickets should be immediately placed outside moving picture shows and all other places of amusement in order to indicate the seriousness of the situation.

Appeal to Labor.

The suggestion was then adopted to appeal to the Labor Party to lay down tools in order to secure the release of the prisoners. A deputation of eight, including Mr. McLaughlin, and Dan Breen, both of whom recently were released from prison, was immediately despatched to interview the leaders of all sections of the Labor Party.

The convention ended this afternoon in order to leave Mansion House free for a concert in aid of the prisoners and their dependents to-night.

Three Classes of Russian Youths Called Up for Military Training

MOSCOW, Oct. 17.—Soviet Russia to-day called up the three military classes of 1898, 1899 and 1900, to territorial army training. Simultaneously there appeared in the official newspaper Isvestia a startling cartoon depicting a stern-visaged Red soldier watching the Polish border ,with the caption: "They Are Risking It to Pass the Frontier of My Patience."

The calling up of the territorials is in line with the long-contemplated militia training plan and probably has no partticular significance, but it is obvious from declarations made on all sides, that the Moscow Government, while seeking to avoid participation in the German struggle, nevertheless is taking no chances that it will be unprepared for eventualities.

The so-called "White Terror," in Poland, where Communists are apparently suspected of causing the disastrous explosion in one of the Warsaw forts, occupies a prominent space in the newspapers and the efforts of "the German reactionaries to crush the budding workers' governments in Saxony and Tauringia," are occupying the close attention of the Communists here.

SAXON RADICALS ARE BECOMING BOLDER IN DEFIANCE TO BERLIN

Central Government Confronted With Increasing Proletarian Aggressions --Industrialists Threaten to Close Plants.

Socialists in Sympathy.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Events in Saxony are fast drifting to a point where the Berlin Government will be forced to call for a showdown with Dr. Zeigner's Communistic-Socialistic Ministry, which is daily becoming bolder in its defiance of the Central Government's authority, as decreed in the present state of emergency and asserted by General von Mueller, the military commander in the Fourth Army Precinct.

The position of President Ebert and Chancellor Stresemann in the present situation has been measurably complicated through today's action by the United Socialist Party's governing board which demands immediate abrogation of the existing state of siege, in order that "the legal relations between individual federal states and the central government shall be restored."

PRESAGE OF DISUNION.

This action presages an early rift in Mr. Stresemann's laboriously reassembled coalition government, in that it is believed the Socialists will withdraw from the government under fire from the party' radical left wing, which is openly espousing Zeigner's regime and rapidly emancipating itself from the influence of the party's moderate wing.

For the present Dresden is the storm centre of a battle going on between Premier Zeigner and General von Mueller, the latter demanding pre-emptory asurance from the Saxon government that his edicts will not be interfered with or sabotaged. Realizing that it cannot yield to Saxony without prejudicing its prestige with Bavaria, the German government is reportedly determined to maintain order throughout the Saxon industrial districts where rioting and terrorism are being freely indulged in by Radical elements who are blackmailing the industrialists into money levies and grossly usurping autorities in the big plants.

CONDITIONS INTOLERABLE.

Delegations of leading industrialists have been arriving in Berlin for the past few days to protest against a continuation of the intolerable conditions; they threaten to shut down or dispose of their plants unless they are assured of protection by the central government.

Armed intervention by Bavaria is also viewed as an eventuality, as much of the rioting now going on in the Saxon industrial sector is occurring close to the Bavarian frontier. The Berlin government is prepared to despatch additional troops to Saxony if the situation demands reinforcements for General von Mueller, who is determined to prevent the formation of proletariat centres.

COMMUNISTS IN OFFICE.

With two notorious Communists, like Heinrich Brandler and Herr Boettcher, occupying the posts of Directors of the Chancellery, and Minister of Finance respectively, Saxon industrialist and financial leaders declare that the State's economics are wholly exposed to the arbitrary dictates of outspoken Bolshevists whose presence in Zeigner's Cabinet suffices to nullify the less radical attitude of the Socialists toward industry and finance.

Farmer On C.N.R. Board

WINNIPEG, Oct. 17. — (Canadian Press.) — The government is being urged to appoint a farmer representative to fill the vacancy in the Board of Directors of the Canadian National Railways caused by the resignation of R. P. Gough, according to John Ward, secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture. Representations were made last April asking the government to place a farmer on the board and this has again been brought to the attention of the government.

3,000 WESTERN FARMERS APPLIED FOR HELPERS

Mr. Gelly stated also that 1,200 British harvesters had been placed on the farms for winter work. Wages offered for winter work from $10 per month to $20 and $25 the higher rate having men with some experience.

MEETING WITH POINCARE NOT VERY FRUITFUL

German Representative Told of Financial Difficulties — French Interested in Reparations.

LEFT DOCUMENTS.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The second visit of Herr von Hoesch, the German Charge D'Affaires to Premier Poincare, to-day, could hardly be said to be fruitful, but it served to place in the hands of the French Government Germany's latest contentions with respect to the payment of reparations. No official statement regarding the visit was issued, but some details have filtered through the veil of secrecy which the French officials are observing.

The memorandum received from Berlin, which the German Charge read to M. Poincare described the existing difficulties of Germany's economic situation, but when Herr von Hoesch wished to speak of deliveries in kind and means for paying the manufacturers who made them, Premier Poincare pointed out that he was unable to discuss this subject.

Chancellor Stresemann had publicly stated that the German Government was unable to pay the manufacturers for goods delivered. It

NO WHISPER OF DEATH HERE.

The reception accorded the $40,000,000 loan announced by the Ontario Government is another silencer for the "whisper of death" campaign.

Coming as this issue does immediately after the successful floating of the Dominion Refunding Loan there might have been some doubt as to the success of the experiment of offering the provincial bonds on a Dominion wide scale.

Within twenty-four hours, however, after the bond dealers throughout the country had been notified, orders were received from every province in the Dominion for far more than the total loan and rationing of the bonds had to be adopted.

There is no sign of Canada going to the dogs in the fact that a provincial loan offered a fortnight after a large Dominion issue had been disposed of is eagerly snapped up in all parts of the country.

This is the first time in which a Canadian province has embarked upon a national campaign for the disposed of its securities and the result has amply justified the result of the experiment as well as imparting another kick at the Montreal Star's attempt to picture this country as tottering on the brink of ruin.

THE COAL SITUATION.

According to the Ontario Minister of Mines, there is little danger of a coal shortage in Ontario during the coming winter, for this Province had received up to the end of September 50,000 tons of anthracite in excess of the best pevious normal year up to the same date.

That statement is reassuring, and yet to those who realize that before long Canada may have to depend upon her own fuel resources and should be working to that end now, it may seem that it would be for the ultimate good if there were shortage enough to keep the people of this section of the Dominion worrying about their fuel supply.

So long as they are assured of ample shipments of anthracite it is difficult to keep the majority of people interested in the general situation, or to make them realize that sooner or later the supplies from across the border may cease.

The development of the Alberta coal trade and the establishment of cheaper freight rates for the Western product are apparently the two big steps that must be taken to meet that crisis.

Were Ontario to feel that there might be considerable difficulty in getting enough fuel this winter the agitation for the establishment of a Canadian coal trade would likely assume proportions lage enough to ensure some attention.

THE BANKS AND ADVERTISING.

Newspapers, the warmest advocates of advertising for others, are usually the last concern on earth to do much advertising on their own account.

The lesson read the Dominion Bank officials and through them the heads of other Canadian banks by the Globe the other day as to the value of publicity therefore gathers additional force because of this general reluctance on the part of newspapers to boom their own wares.

"The Globe hopes and believes," the article said in part, "that yesterday's experiences will bring the officials of the banks generally to a realization of the value of publicity as a means of preventing such follies as yesterday's run on the Dominion Bank."

The Canadian banks have undoubtedly failed in the past to realize that the newspapers of this country offered them a medium through which they could assure the people effectively and convincingly of the soundness of their position.

Beyond the publication of their annual reports, which are not in themselves of a nature to attract general attention, and a few colourless advertisements each year, and banks have done little or nothing to sell their service to the public.

There would be few runs on the banks and much more confidence in the country's financial system if judicious advertising had been used by these institutions.

The lesson of the past few days, in the opinion of the Examiner, is that a little publicity will quickly kill the effect of idle rumour.

STOP THE LEAK.

Two articles in the newspapers yesterday should engage the attention of the Canadian Immigration Department—if they are not already devoting some thought to these matters.

The first was the publication of the resume of a report made by United States Consul Chester W. Martin, stationed in Toronto, in which he officially informed his government that the increase in immigration to Canada was due to a desire on the part of these immigrants to use this country merely as a stepping-stone to the United States.

The other was the statement that a number of British immigrants who could not enter the United States because the October quota was exhausted are being deported so that they may return in time for the November quota.

Were it not for the first item the second would suggest that a Canadian immigration official stationed in New York would be able to divert many Britishers in a similar predicament to this country.

But, if as the United States Consul says, immigrants are only coming into Canada in the hope of an opportunity of stepping across the line into the republic there does not seem any reason why the money of the people of Canada should be poured out merely to secure more citizens for our neighbors—who are so little in need of them that they are restricting the number of those legally permitted to enter?

Our immigration policy has been, up to the present, a miserable failure. It has not attracted enough people to Canada nor has it seen to it that those who did come remained in this country.

Stopping the leak to the United States seems to be the first logical step.

Otherwise our efforts are very much like trying to fill up a barrel with a hole in the bottom by means of a teaspoon.

TIME FOR ACTION.

This amendment would be a move in the right direction, not only in Quebec, but in every province of Canada, and it might well be the beginning of amendments seeking to make travelling on the highways of the country more safe after dark than it is at present, says the Kingston Whig in discussing the proposal in Quebec that farmers driving cattle on the roads after dark should carry a red light. At the present time, in Ontario, only motor vehicles are compelled to carry lights on the highways after dark. Yet, every year, there are countless accidents caused by automobiles running into horse-drawn vehicles, which are not obliged to carry lights. Every motorist knows the dangers which lies in meeting or passing a horse-drawn wagon or buggy at night. When the night is particularly dark, the horse-drawn vehicle can hardly be observed until the automobile is right on top of it, and only great skill and care on the part of auto drivers can prevent serious accidents. If the legislature of Quebec think that the danger to cows is so great that safety lights are necessary, surely they are still more necessary when human life is endangered by the lack of lights on all types of vehicles outside of the motor vehicle.

A little over a year ago, a special committee of the Ontario legislature toured Ontario seeking for information as a basis for amendment to the existing highway laws of the province. At nearly every point visited, the committee was urged to make lights compulsory on all vehicles, not only for the safety of the motorists, but also for the protection of farmers and others who do much driving in buggies and wagons drawn by horses. In spite of this, no action was taken by the Ontario legislature to make the desired amendment to the highways act. Whether or not this was due to the farmer government being in power, and the amendment being opposed by the farmers generally, is hard to say, but that would be the logical reason for the failure to act upon the suggestions which were made. In Great Britain, all vehicles, even bicycles, must be equipped with lights for use after dark, and this is a regulation which might very well be imposed in this country without any hardship to anyone, and with very material benefits in the way of preventing accidents.

SPORTSMANSHIP.

When will sport fans grow up? asks the Hamilton Spectator (and its remarks can be applied to Peterborough with equal force).

At the final game of the lacrosse season at the H.A.A.A. grounds on Saturday afternoon, several thousand spectators surged on the field, during an altercation between local and visiting players. They waved clenched fists and screamed epithets at the referee. They fought with each other for the privilege of bodily assaulting that official. In an instant the playing field was a shambles and extra police were called on to quell the riot. This howling mob, a pack in full cry, was not composed of thugs, as one understands the meaning of the term. It was recruited from representative walks of life. Big business and the professions were there, jostling and pushing with the horny-handed sons of toil. It was quite an exhibition.

Lacrosse is a good game, one of the best, but, at the beginning of the season, the box-office receipts for one game were less than sixteen dollars. As the team continued mowing down the opposition the attendance kept climbing. There were nearly four thousand paid admissions on Saturday. This town loves a winner, but it's poison for a loser. In the baseball season of 1922, Hamilton won the championship and attendance records were broken. In the season just closed, Hamilton was last, and the promoters lost $20,000. At a recent lacrosse game, when Hamilton was administering a merciless drubbing to a visiting team and the stands rocked with full-throated Os-ki-wah-wahs, the announcer megaphoned that the score of the Tiger-Argonaut football game at Toronto was 7 to 0 at half-time, in favor of the Argonauts.

"The big bums, they'll be lucky if it isn't ninety-nine nothing," disdainfully snarled a fan who sat immediately in front of the writer. A moment later, the announcer came back with a correction. The score was then 7 to 6 in favor of Argonauts. And what did our friend, the fan, do? He stood up and waved his hat and shouted: "Hot dog, we'll beat 'em yet!"

That was a typical sport fan. He had his counterpart in thousands of his fellows, in grandstand and bleachers. There is a suspicion that this kind of sportsmanship had a lot to do with the shambles at the lacrosse match on Saturday, because the score was 9 to 0 in favor of the visitors.

Sportsmanship means playing the game, hard, but fair. It embraces respect for one's opponents.

Miss Hamilton, and other cities as well, should keep her bad boys in after school hours and make them memorize that definition.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Lloyd George has had to curtail some of his United States engagements thus proving that the little Welshman is only human after all.

With the baseball season over the next step is to pay much merited honours to the teams who have won so many honors this year. The citizens are looking to the city hall for leadership in this connection.

Mr. Fielding does not believe that a Royal Commission will be necessary to investigate the Home Bank's affairs. People do not care what form the inquiry takes but they do want the facts brought out.

Fire Prevention evidently did not carry any message for that Rawdon Township man who tried to speed up his kitchen fire with coal oil—with an explosion resulting.

The United States consul says that immigrants coming into Canada are merely using this country as a stop over on their way to the United States. What has Ottawa to say about that statement?

New Zealand's finances for the past half year show a surplus of nearly a million pounds. It is to be hoped that our delegates find out from the New Zealand Premier just how the feat was accomplished.

A run on a bank is one kind of exercise that doesn't do anybody any good.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Wrestling is a sport. So is fishing. Both are catch-as-catch-can. So is catching a cold.

Papyrus races soon. They spend money on that horse, and make money. They use horse cents.

Saving for Christmas is a winter sport. Start doing it now or making enemies of friends.

Boxers lead a hard life. Have to sock one another on the jaw to keep socks on their feet.

You have heard of men sleeping on pool tables. They have cushions. You can bank on them.

Everybody sees pictures of diving girls. They go into their work head over heels.

Bowling is a great game, if you don't mind hanging around alleys. Keep the ball rolling.

They win in golf by hook or crook, but not by hooking. Please slice that into the rough.

Basketball comes after football. Best players plays forward and can't be a bit backward.

Fishing is a nice lazy sport. Fisherman loafs on the bank but gets nothing in the bank.

High aims in life are fine except in hunting. In hunting always aim to pelase yourself.

Dogs are used in hunting. A dog follows the scent. He is the real scenter of attraction.

Most of the big colleges have sculling crews. One place where pulls get your oar in.

FINLAND AFTER U S

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. — (Uited Press).—"Finland is the only other country in the world where there is as much drunkenness as there is in the United States," said Dr. Frederick A. Weis, Copenhagen, speaking here.

Less drunkenness prevails in countries under State monopoly than in countries where prohibition is the law, he said.

"There are no fishing smacks that engage in fishing in this country now—they all 'run booze,' as you call it. If secret drinking keeps on in this country, all respect for law and order will be lost.

"There is more whiskey smuggling into Norway, where heavy alcoholic drinks are barred, than any other of her sister nations. In Denmark we have the cafe system, where you drink with your meals rather than drink 'healths'. Personally, I believe in the Danish plan of running up liquor prices with heavy taxation."

Dr. Weis is in this country studying economic conditions.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 18. — Yesterday at the Union Stock Yards was about a repetition of Tuesday. There are plenty of cattle, but too many of the wrong kind, and buyers of these can take their time and dictate prices within a certain range.

Tuesday's sales amounted to almost 1,800, and the receipts for the two days and last week's left-overs was almost 8,200. Sales for two days were about 6000 head, and, with yesterday's receipts, the cattle still on sale would be around 3,000 head.

First receipts yesterday morning were 413 cattle, 367 calves, 824 hogs and 1,465 sheep and lambs. Western shipments have dwindled down materially, and only three car loads were expected yesterday.

The reaction in the price of calves has not gone far. Alex. Furlong bought a mixed bunch yesterday morning of good and medium and an odd heavy grasser at 9 1-2 cents a pound for the lot. Choice calves are easily 11 cents, but the heavies are weak in price and occasionally as low as 5 cents.

The lamb trade is not as snappy as it was, and the market eased more than 25 cents a cwt. Some heavy lambs sold at 11 1-2 cents, and a few choice ewes at $11.60 a cwt. The market settled at 11 1-4 to 11 1-2 cents and was not strong at the decline. Heavy sheep are selling at 4 cents, and the choice handy weights at 7 cents.

Packers' buyers refused to advance the bid on hogs yesterday above $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b., but admit they are not getting many at the price. Some outside packers are paying 25 to 30 cents above this.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, October 18 (Canadian Press). — Receipts, 2,300 cattle and calves, 1,080 hogs, and 360 sheep.

The demand on the cattle market yesterday morning was less active, but prices generally maintained a firm tone.

The hog market was unsettled and weaker, packers bidding $8.25 for thick smooths, an overnight decline of 25 cents.

The sheep and lamb market was active. Fair to good lambs ranged from $8.50 to $10.25, and sheep from $6.00 to $7.00.

CHICAGO MARKET.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. — Decided set-backs in the price of wheat resulted to-day from enlarged selling based more or less on opinions that prevailing wet weather was giving the new wheat crop a good start. Closing quotations were unsettled, 1 3-8c. to 1 3-4c. net lower, December $1.06 1-2 to $1.06 5-8 and May $1.11 1-4 to $1.11 3-8. Corn finished 1-4c. to 5-8c. down; oats 3-8c. to 1-2c. off, and provisions at unchanged figures to 12c. decline.

At first the wheat market was more or less dominated by apparent strength of corn values, but later the case was reversed and the weakness of wheat had a bearish effect on corn. Lowest prices of the day in the wheat pit were reported shortly before the close, with offerings free on the part of holders and with the market poorly supported. Talk was current that an advance in vessels rates on the Great Lakes might soon divert larger shipments of wheat into the United States from Canada, and that any reduction in rail rates would be insufficient to put domestic wheat on an export basis. Temporarily, such factors were offset by attention to rains in the corn belt and to assertions that much Nebraska corn was rotting in the fields.

New corn from Iowa began arriving at Chicago to-day, and some new corn also came in from other sources. Cash prices remained firm, though, and future deliveries showed better rallying power than was the case with wheat. Oats followed corn.

Provisions were easier in line with the hog market.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 18.—Rev. C. E. Clarke, formerly rector of Christ Church here, but now of Belleville, was in town Monday to attend the funeral of the late Robt. Linton.

Mrs. Jno. Junior of Meyersburg, was in town in Monday. She is 92 years of age, and has lived all her life on a farm about 6 miles south of Campbellford. She does all her own work and up to 7 years ago milked six cows night and mornings, and for years drove about three miles with horse and buggy to do so In conversation with a friend she said milking cows was always a rest to her. She does not think the rising generation would do much to clear up a farm, like the pioneers had to do. She said work hurts no one and if young people of to-day did more work they would have better health and live longer. Work is a good tonic.

INSURANCE COMPANIES AIM FOR UNIFORM ACT

WINNIPEG, Oct 18.—With the purpose of removing inconsistencies in the laws, a uniform life insurance act will be presented to all the legislative assemblies of the Canadian provinces at the next session. The model act was endorsed by the superintendents of insurance, now in convention here.

A uniform act in Canada has been the aim of the life insurance companies for several years. Different laws are in effect in the various provinces and in the past there have been very troublesome differences in court decisions and legislation affecting the rights of the insured.

BISHOP OF HAILEYBURY REMEMBERED BY STUDENTS

OTTAWA, Oct. 18. — (Canadian Press).—On the eve of his consecration to the Episcopacy, His Lordship Bishop Louis Rheaume, of Haileybury, received yesterday a striking tribute of affection from the student body of the University of Ottawa, of which he was rector from 1915 to 1921, and where he spent 18 years of his career. The tribute took the form of a presentation of beautiful urns that serve as recipients of holy oils used for sacramental purposes, and the reading of English and French addresses.

The English address read by Mr. C. Mulvey embodied an eulogistic enumeration of the salient events in Bishop Rheaume's career at the University.

SASKATCHEWAN POOL UNREADY FOR BUSINESS

SASKATOON, Oct. 18. — (Canadian Press).—So grain will be sold through the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool this season, in the opinion of R. H. Milliken, who was director of the "Sign Up Campaign" for the northern part of the province. He declared he did not think waivers and contracts covering half of the province's acreage could be signed up in time to make the pool an effective agent in the marketing of this year's wheat, but it would be ready in time to handle the 1924 crop. The directors will meet in Regina Saturday, when it is expected an official statement will be issued.

DYING FROM WOUND DROVE TO HOSPITAL

An Automobile Salesman Shot by a Bandit on Mountain at Hamilton

HAMILTON, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Knowing he was dying from the bullet wound in his abdomen, inflicted, he said, by a lone bandit on the Mountain, three miles east of the city limits, Romer C. Lindsay, a salesman for an automobile company, crawled back into his car and safely piloted it along a black road to within half a mile of the Mount Hamilton Hospital, between 7 and 8 o'clock last night.

Frank Shuttler, who lives near Ottawa Street, was eating his supper, when he heard moans coming from Mountain Park. Going out to investigate, he says, he heard a voice cry, "Come and help me, for God's sake. I have been shot."

Shuttler got into the car and drove Lindsay to the Mount Hamilton Hospital, where Dr. A. J. Newell was summoned, and he pronounced his condition as fatal. A bullet of heavy calibre had pierced his abdomen just above the navel.

Lindsay later rallied and made a statement to detectives. He said that while travelling Stoney Creek Road, he was hailed by a foreigner, who asked him for a ride. Almost immediately after reaching the top of the Mountain the bandit drew a heavy gun and demanded the former's money. Mr. Lindsay said he had no money, whereat the foreigner dragged him out of the car and threw him down on the road and shot him through the stomach. The bandit then made off.

Died This Morning.

Homer C. Lindsay, the forty-year-old automobile salesman who was shot on a highway east of Hamilton last evening, died at the Mountain Hospital at three o'clock this morning.

SINGAPORE BASE AGAIN DISCUSSED

It Was Decided to Put the Lid On The Publicity End.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(Associated Press).—The Imperial Conference yesterday again discussed naval matters and the question of the Singapore naval base. Lieutenant-Colonel L. M. S. Amery, First Lord of the Admiralty, spoke for the Government, but it was decided not to publish either the Minister's statement or the discussion which followed.

Stanley M. Bruce, the Australian Premier, in an interview last night dealing with the effect of the Washington treaties on the British naval policy, expressed the hope that the Imperial Conference would endorse the principle of a one-empire navy, and emphasized that, now the Empire was no longer engaged in a building competition with any Powers, the important question was the re-equipment of naval bases to maintain the mobility of the main fleet.

"Without a base in the Pacific capable of docking modern capital ships, the Pacific and Indian Oceans would be virtually closed to the British fleet," he said "Without such a base the ratio of strength agreed to at Washington is the case of the British Empire absolutely ineffectual in the Pacific. That is the position the conference has to face, and until it is altered the ability of the navy to defend the Empire interests in the Pacific is largely a delusion.

"It is a matter vital to Australia and it seems to me the conference can't overlook how the Empire's authority through the prestige of the navy can be maintained if Great Britain should deliberately abandon her naval programme in the Pacific."

SASKATOON'S POPULATION.

SASKATOON, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The city directory for 1923, issued yesterday, gives Saskatoon a population of 35,021, nearly ten thousand greater than the last Dominion census.

LAKE TRAFFIC IS STILL VERY HEAVY

Nearly Three Million Bushels Started Yesterday.

FORT WILLIAM, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press.) — Another big day's loading resulted in 2,834,000 bushels of grain going down the lakes yesterday, the biggest cargo being that of the United States ship, the E. J. Earling, which cleared with 356,000 bushels of wheat.

There is apparently tonnage available to fill all demands, but some grain firms stated they had been asked seven cents for a charter to Buffalo. No space, however, seems to have been sold at this price, there being no charters as yet filed at that figure.

The United States vessels, Pontiac and Munising, which brought coal to Fort William, cleared light for Marquette and Superior to take on ore. It is not regarded as likely that many additional United States boats will come here for grain till the ore traffic closes for the season, as the ore rates are very attractive.

girls art studying poultry farming and truck gardening with the object of coming out to Canada as as agriculturalists.

Mrs. Smith predicts a very heavy influx of British immigrants, mostly of agricultural class, early next Spring. Many of these will have sufficient capital to settle down unassisted. Many others, however, although they have been equipping themselves to take up farming here, hope to come out under the Canadian government nominated passage scheme or under the Imperial emigration scheme. It is generally hoped in Great Britain that the Imperial Conference, now in progress, will produce a larger scheme for Imperial emigration that will enable more extensive immigration to Canada.

In the farming countries of Northern Europe keen interest in the possibilities of Canada is shown by the number of letters she received, Mrs. Smith states. These countries are sending out advance agents to locate suitable tracts of land in Canada where they can form communities.

Mrs. Smith reported that taxation in Great Britain was very heavy and the unemployment dole was gradually increasing the taxes. The people were bearing this post-war burden without a murmur but the unemployment situation was causing much anxiety. At present there was over a million and a half unemployed, including women owing to all industries running short-handed as there was little market for their produce.

Mrs. Smith is submitting her report to Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Immigration and expects to leave for the west to-morrow.

was the French Government's opinion that the discussion with Berlin would be impossible of resumption until the occupied regions returned to the conditions existing before January 11, by resuming work as well as payments in kind. As soon as these terms were fufilled, negotiations might be opened between Germany and the Allies. Nothing however, said the Premier, prevented Germany from addressing a communication to the Reparation Commission. Such communication would be examined.

Herr von Hoesch left in the hands of M. Poincare documents dealing with Germany's alleged inability to pay the coal tax and including the instructions given to the Ruhr functionaries. These will be studied by the French Foreign Office.

CONTEST RIGHT OF RACING CHARTERS

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press). — Following Departmental investigation into the status of the Belleville Driving Club's charter, and the powers conferred therein, Attorney General Nickle has decided to contest the right of the new Niagara race track principals to operate a race meet with attendant betting under its authority.

The prosecution which will shortly be launched in the courts will be in the nature of a test case in which, according to Hon. Mr. Nickle, the province will receive necessary light as to just where it stands in relation to the race track charters which are hanging around loose, awaiting speculative purchasers. While the judicial intelligence that the province desires is general, the individual right of the Niagara people to operate will be vigorously attacked.

LINDSAY ARSENAL MAY OPEN AGAIN

To Manufacture Rifles for The Canadian Army.

(Special to the Examiner.)

LINDSAY, Oct. 18. — The citizens of this town are in high glee as a result of the possibility of the Dominion Arsenal being converted into an industry for the manufacture of Lee Enfield rifles, for the Canadian forces. Every since the close of the late war the plant has been standing as a monument to the great struggle as well as to the blasted hopes of Lindsayites, who looked upon it as a permanent concern.

Their hopes have been revived, however, as the result of a cable despatch from London, England, which conveys the information that Canada may soon manufacture its own Lee Enfields. It is understood that among the matters under consideration in connection with the defence section of the Imperial Conference, the substitution of home manufacture for importation. Australia makes its own Lee Enfields, and the despatch adds that Canada already has at Lindsay sufficient equipment, with some adaptation, to follow suit.

This is a somewhat slender thread on which to hang their hopes, but the citizens are hopeful, nevertheless.

GRAIN SHIPMENT ON LOCAL LINES

Movement on Both Lines Increasing in Volume.

(Special to the Examiner.)

LINDSAY, October 18. — The grain shipments through Lindsay and Peterboro, over the C. N. R. and the C. P. R., from Midland and Port McNicol respectively, are increasing in volume. All the rolling stock available is being used by both lines and trains are running night and day from the northern termnials.

The C.N.R. is hauling 375 grain laden cars per day, and on Sunday last 524 cars of grain passed through Lindsay. This establishes another record.

The C.P.R. is hauling about two hundred cars of 2,000 bushel capacity daily, or from 200,000 to 400,000 bushels daily. On Sunday 300 cars passed through Lindsay and Peterboro on the C. P. R., The C. P. R. trains are big ones.

According to reports from Port McNicoll there is no congestion at this port.

Three boats arrived at the elevator on Monday and were uloaded in 24 hours.

ARE SPECULATING AS TO NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERY

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey Provincial Minister of Health and Labor recently made public allusion to the new treatment upon which Dr. F. G. Banting, discoverer of insulin, is working. He did not say much, but the little that he did say, was sufficient to attract the attention of leading doctors in the United States and Canada.

Doctors at the University of Toronto and Academy of Medicine, since statement of Hon. Dr. Godfrey have shown the greatest interest in the new treatment, and are awaiting further pronouncement from the Minister of Health, or from Dr. Banting himself. Meanwhile many doctors in this city have made up their minds that the new treatment upon which which Dr. Banting is working is for anaemia in its initial stages, and also far advanced or pernicious anaemia.

PECULIAR CLAIMS.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 18. — (Canadian Press.)—Lincoln County Council took no notice of a claim made by William Betler of Clinton township for unstated damages to his bean crop because of dust due to a detour of traffic between Hamilton and St. Catharines on an unimproved road. Clinton township also claims $1,000 for damages to the roads for the same reason.

BRITISH TRADE IS PROTECTED

In the Commercial Treaty Between Canada and France.

OTTAWA, October 17. Canadian Press. — The United Kingdom is safeguarded in every way by the provisions of the commercial treaty between Canada and France, according to the Government officials here. A despatch from London, Eng. quoting a letter from Lieut. Commander F. W. Astbury, Conservative member for West Salford, in which complaint was made regarding certain concessions made by Canada to the French treaty, was shown to officials of the Finance Department here to-day. In reply Section five of the act which ratified the French treaty was quoted. It reads as follows:

"The advantages so granted to France, the French colonies, possessions and protectorates by the said convention shall extend to the United Kingdom with respect to its commerce with Canada so long as France, the French colonies, possessions and protectorates continue to be entitled to such advantages.

"The said advantages, so long as France, the French colonies, possessions and protectorates continue to be entitled thereto, shall extend to such of the British colonies and possessions with respect to their commerce with Canada as shall grant to Canada the benefit of the most favorable customs tariff treatment which they may extend to any foreign country."

Attention was also drawn to Section Five of the Act amending the Customs tariff act, passed at the last session of Parliament. This provides that the importer of goods entitled to the British preferential tariff shall be entitled to a discount of ten per cent. as the amount of duty computed under this tariff, when such goods are conveyed without transshipment from a port of a country enjoying the benefits of the British preferential tariff into a sea or river port of Canada.

MILLION DOLLAR ESTATE IN COURT

Widow of Montreal Fur Dresser Claims Half.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—Division of a $1,000,000 estate is asked in Superior Court in an action of which notice has been given by L. F. Crepeau K. C. The petitioner is Dame Cottieb Enz ,widow of late Frederick Enz, fur dresser, of this city. She states in her declaration that she married deceased July 12, 1883 under community of property. On May 11, 1914 her husband made a will leaving his share of the estate to one daughter six sons and a daughter-in-law, wife of another son, Albert Schnaufer of Toronto, who with Henry J. Elliott, K. C. is executor.

Complications in the succession include the fact that one of the heirs is interdicted and that Mrs. Albert Schnaufer has died intestate, leaving two minor children who become heir to her share of the property.

By law the widow states, that she is entitled to her half of the estate, and asks the courts to order division immediately.

CHAUTAUQUA GOING TO CAMPBELLFORD BUT NO AUDITORIUM ENGAGED

HARVEST SERVICES.

CHATAUQUA COMING .. ..
(By Staff Reporter.)

CAMPBELLFORD, October 18.—Campbellford is going to have a Chautauqua course this year. On 1st, 2nd ,and 3rd November the Redpath Winter Chautauqua will be present in the busy town on the Trent. Twenty-one of the business men of the town, enthused by the silver-tongued lady who acts as advance agent for the Chautauqua courses, have agreed to guarantee the undertaking.

As the Opera House has been turned into a movie palace, it is not available for performances. A message to this effect to the Chautauqua managers brought a polite and sympathetic response, the managers, however, holding out for their guarantee.

So it is up to the group of business men to get busy and procure other quarters. They have not yet held a meeting to decide on arrangements, but expect to do so on next Monday evening. It is anticipated that the Curling Rink will be available for the purpose, and it is also probable that the excess funds anticipated from the holding of the course will be used for the Campbellford War Memorial Fund, sponsored by the local chapter of the I.O.D.E.

The conversion of the former Opera House to its present use has some disadvantages, evidently. The Beemerside Chapter, the junior chapter of the I.O.D.E., are puzzling about the locale of their dancing programme for this season.

Officers Elected.

At the convention of the Campbellford District Sunday School and Young People's League, held in the Methodist Church on Tuesday of this week, the following officers were elected:

President, H E. Hulin, Stirling.
2nd Vice-president (Missionary), Miss Lucy Williams, Stirling.
3rd Vice-president (Citizenship), Miss Gace Payne, Campbellford.
4th Vice-president (Literature), W. F. Wendt, Norwood.
5th Vice-president (Intermediate Work), Mrs. A. McLauchlin, Keene.
6th Vice-president (Junior Work), Miss Josie McConnell, Hastings.
Secretary-treasurer, Rev. J. E. Glover, Campbellford.
Summer and Winter School Representative, Rev. J. E. Glover.
Representative to Conference, Young People's League Executive, Rev. A. McLauchlin, Keene.

Coming Events

The Methodist Church at Campbellford is holding a congregational tea meeting at Stanwood on 23rd October, and another at the English Line on 30th October.

The Presbyterian Church ladies are holding a bazaar on 3rd November, the Willing Workers of Christ Church (Anglican) are holding their bazaar on 30th November, and the Campbellford Chapter of the I.O.D.E., whose Regent is Mrs. W. H. Ashton, will have a bazaar on 7th December.

Christ Church Ladies' Aid Society, whose president is Mrs. J. P. Archer, are also holding a tea on 27th October in Mr Burke's old book store.

Harvest Service.

Harvest thanksgiving services were held in Christ Church last Sunday. Services, both morning and evening, were taken by Rev. Major Belford, of Codrington, M.L.A. for East Northumberland. The church was beautifully decorated with autumn vines and flowers, and a specially good musical programme included a vocal solo by Mrs. (Dr.) Free, with Miss G. Maynard presiding at the organ.

Christ Church is still without a rector. The place of Rev. Mr. Clark, who departed for other fields in August, is still unfilled.

The congregation is considering calls to Rev. Mr. Clark of St. Augustine's Church, Toronto, and Rev. Mr. Smart, of Tweed.

Girl Guides.

A new and interesting departure in Girl Guide work is being made in Campbellford just now. The girls, led by Miss Grace Payne, are being trained in ideals of citizenship, and the older group, those from sixteen years up, are now termed as Rangers. The eight to eleven year old girls are Brownies, and Guides are the girls from eleven to sixteen years of age.

New High School.

The new High School is progressing with satisfactory speed. Campbellford's new school is typical of the bright, wideawake town it is designed to serve. There is a cheerful atmosphere already about the appearance of the big building, whose architecture gives an impression of gracefulness rather than of pomposity, as so many halls of learning are apt to convey.

The cheerful note is contrived, possibly, by the manner in which the materials used in construction have been handled. Just at the proper intervals, white cut stone panels have been inserted in masses of dark red Milton pressed brick that compose the structure, elongated horizontal panels that give a light touch to the exterior surfaces. This cut stone also has been used for the deep facing of the front entrance off Ranney Street.

The brickwork is nearly completed. Another week will see it finished, and another ten days will see the built-up roof topping the big square building. Window frames are in place with their promise of plenty of light for pupils, the boilers in the heating system have been installed, and Ranney Street for several blocks is torn up for the laying of the sewer service to the school, already within a hundred feet of the building. It is expected that the school will be ready for occupation at the first of the year.

When the shade tree that obscures part of the facade has been removed, when the house to the left of the school has been torn down, and the three-foot accumulation of debris cleared from the premises, the school, set fifty feet back from the street line, with a hundred feet or more to the line at its rear, will stand out in its three and one-half acres of ground as an imposing and ornamental structure

With eighteen class-rooms, its separate assembly room and its ground-floor gymnasium, with its basketball grounds for girls, whose entrance has been placed at the left of the building, and its ball grounds for boys, with entrance separately at the right, it will be a complete and satisfying centre of education and recreation both.

In the Public School.

In the Public School yesterday the small lads and lasses were finishing off a perfect day with memory test exercise; "work while you work, and play while you play; that is the way to be happy and gay." They are diligent and efficient little people in this class. They wave upstretched hands with a rotary motion that is fascinating to watch, and they do everything with military precision. A command brings them all to attention, before commencing to pack books in the small brown suitcases that so many of them snapped shut with gusto. Little boy and girl monitors fly to the closing-time work of cleaning the blackboard and picking up things from the floor.

"Please, teacher ,Willie's sitting on his reader," a small, precise girl informs the instructor, and a mischievous little towhead ties a string to the dark curls of the plump, dignified little lady sitting in front of him. On the blackboard, with its border of yellow pumpkins and green corn cobs the legend appears, "Remember not to stand without permission." And they can't snap their fingers, either. When they stand to go home at four o'clock, they recite with closed eyes and bowed heads, a nice little prayer that asks the Lord to guard them from peril this night.

Sundry Happenings.

All of Campbellford's juniors are not occupied mainly with lessons, however. A little lad supposed to be about seven years of age, drives a delivery waggon with skill, and another youngster under thirteen years guides alone the destinies of a sedan car, standing up to the wheel.

Old Dobbin, superseded by the motor car, turns it to his own service at times. Over Campbellford's long bridge yesterday moved in stately repose a dignified horse, hoisted on a slowly-moving motor delivery truck that bore its equine passenger in safety across the structure.

Campbellford has extended its weekly half-holiday to include the month of November, making a total of seven months in the year, from May to November inclusive, that sees the town taking a Friday half-holiday.

Mr. Percy Denyes is contemplating, according to rumour, the establishment of a hardware and electrical goods store in a vacant building on Front Street. Mr. Denyes, it is said, while an employee of the Hydro Electric Commission, refused a transfer which would take him away from Campbellford, and decided instead to go into business for himself.

PROVINCE GETS BIG REVENUE FROM TRACK

The Solicitor to Treasury States That Raney-Drury Act Sends The Big Bettors to Hand-Books.

TORONTO, Ont. 18—During the spring and fall race meets in Ontario patrons of the various tracks wagered $35,890,134 through the pari mutuels according to the report of J. T. White, K.C., solicitor the Ontario Treasury, made public yesterday by Hon. W. H. Price.

The Provincial Government received a total revenue of $2,459,506.70, ($1,794506,70 fdom five per cent. tax and $665,000 from impost), against $2,982,216 the preceding season, a decrease of $522,713.40. Commenting on this, Mr. White states:

"The reason for this is because the Windsor Jockey Club did not hold any race meeting this season because of the heavy taxation. Last year we received from the Windsor Jockey Club $406,923.40, leaving a decrease in betting receipts of $115,790 from other tracks.

Hand Books Benefit

"Generally speaking, the betting was lighter at all tracks than last year, owing no doubt to general business conditions and money for wagering purposes not being so plentiful, and possibly to a certain extent due to the five per cent. tax. This tax appears to have had some effect in discouraging the heavy bettors or causing them to make their bets away from the track. In other words, it has encouraged 'hand books'."

May Go to Courts

Dufferin and Kenilworth tracks paid the 5 per cent. tax under protest and have filed a petition with the Provincial Secretary for a fiat to take the matter to the courts.

Included in the Government's revenue is the per diem tax of $7,500 on mile tracks and $2,500 on half-mile tracks. The amusement tax of 25 cents on each admission collected through another branch of the provincial treasury, does not appear in the revenue statement above. It is estimated that this will yield another $150,000.

Where Money Goes to

"Of the total receipts of the racing clubs from all sources approximately 25 per cent is expended for purses; 47 per cent for Ontario Government tax; 8 per cent. for municipal and federal taxes, leaving a balance of 20 per cent, out of which to pay wages, salaries, advertising, repairs, work on track, insurance etc., and dividends to shareholders.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.— The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the week ending October 14, 1923 were $5,921,014, being an increase of $127,435, or two per cent. as compared with the corresponding week of 1922.

The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways from Jan. 1 to Oct. 14th have been $193,045,970.49 being an increase of $17,383,750.62 as compared with the corresponding period of 1922.

CANADIANS ARE RETURNING HOME

Hon. Mr. Robb Diffuses Optimism in Address at Granby, Que.

GRANBY, Que., Oct. 17.— Addressing the delegates at the Fall meeting of the Eastern Townships Associated Boards of Trade here today, Hon. James A. Robb, Minister of Immigration, spoke with such optimism of the financial and commercial situation of Canada to-day. He complimented the fifty-one boards of trade of the Eastern Townships on their tireless work to attract immigration in their districts. In proof of the soundness of trade the Minister stated that the exports of Canada in 1890 totalled $185,000,000, of which only about six per cent. were manufactured articles. In 1923 the exports exceeded the billion mark and forty-two per cent. of them were made up of finished products.

Financially there was nothing to worry over. On March 31, 1923 there were $489,000,000 deposited for current accounts in the chartered banks and $1,708,000,000 for savings. As regards the debt bonds Mr. Robb stated that $211,000,000 are in the United States, $336,000,000 in the United Kingdom and the overwhelming majority of $1,933,000,000 in Canada. He said that if he spoke so much about trade and finance it was to show that when we invite people to come to this country they are coming to a land which is not bankrupt or without possibilities.

There was no quota measures against Canadians migrating to the United States and this accounted in large measure for the numbers of Canadians going south this year. Conditions were, however, changing, and many of them were coming back.

He explained the slowness of immigration to Canada in the years up to 1923 and after the war by the fact that we had to demobilize our soldiers first, and conditions were such in 1922 that considerable amounts had to be voted to aid unemployment. There was no longer any unemployment problem to-day, trade was increasing and the purchasing power of the Old World was improving. "We are therefore justified in inviting immigrants. So far over 100,000 have arrived and more are coming."

LLOYD GEORGE GAVE ADDRESS

Great Britain's War-time Premier Discusses The World Problems.

CHICAGO, October 18 (Canadian Press). — David Lloyd-George, Great Britain's war Premier, regaining the vigour with which he tackled Great Britain's problems, in the Allies' stuggle with Germany after a day of rest in his room, last night addressed an immense crowd gathered in the International Amphitheatre here to listen to the British statesman's "most comprehensive" address in the United States.

He termed his address, "a calm, unemotional, unrhetorical, and, I trust, strictly fair and unbiased view of the Position in Europe."

He began by remarking that the condition in Europe is of importance to every business community, and while the United States can afford to put up with European disturbances better than Great Britain can, yet he had found evidence since his arrival that these disturbances are prejudicially affecting some important sections of producers in the United States, and in the end will reach all

Representatives of the farmers, he said, had informed him that they are suffering because of the serious impairment of the purchasing capacity of Europe.

"Europe is like a ragged man standing in front of the plate-glass window of a well-stocked store," he said. "His need of clothes is infinitely greater than that of the well-dressed man who is making extensive purchases inside. His need of food is more urgent than that of the wellfed gentleman who is coming out after a good meal; for he can buy neither food to satisfy his hunger nor clothes to cover his naked ness.

"Until Euopean prospetity is restored, that continent can not be relied upon as a customer for world products.

"What is the matter with Europe? Exhaustion. Europe is exhausted after the most terrible struggle any continent ever passed through. Between ten and fifteen millions of her picked young men wehe slaughtered on the battlefield. Many more died of the pestilences which are the gruesome partners of war. Twenty millions at least of their best men have been mutilated and have become a burden upon the resources of others. One hundred and eighty thousand millions of dollars were spent or lost by the belligerent countries in waging war and scattering desolation. The machinery of trade and commerce is almost completely shattered Hunger and plagues still stalk through Europe, destroying young and old with their cruel fangs. Each day I read of bread riots where men are shot down in searching for bread to feed their hungrychildren.

"How many children have died as the result of this war? No one can tell; but the Recording Angel is keeping an accurate account of every little head that droops.

Mr. Lloyd-George expressed confidence in the ultimate recovery of Europe from the ravages of the war . One or two disturbing elements, he said, are retarding recovery. He termed these "subsidiary and local irritations."

First among them, he mentioned the Russian revolution, but said he would not dwell upon it because "things are improving rapidly in that quarter." The bringing of Russia into conference with the rest of Europe at Genoa had had a salutory effect. It had produced a better feeling and the compact entered into by the Soviet Government representatives that Soviet Russia would not engage in any acts of aggression against its neighbours had been substantially honoured.

MINERS' DELEGATE THREW HIMSELF UNDER WHEELS

CALGARY, Oct. 17.— Dan McNeill, a delegate to the miners' convention here from the Cadomin Mine near Edmonton, committed suicide this morning by throwing himself in front of a street car on Eighth avenue east, here. He was walking down the street with two other delegates ,when suddenly he rushed into the street, plunged beneath the fence and was crushed by the front truck of the street car.

McNeill was about 30 years of age and is survived by a wife and family.

PORT OF QUEBEC CHERISHES HOPES

But Montreal's Shipping Totals Well Maintained.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—"This is in keeping with the usual shout put up by Quebec whenever they get a little bit of cargo to load." Such was the laughing comment of Maj. P. A. Curry, general manager of the White Star Dominion Line when his attention was drawn this morning to a despatch from Quebec City, claiming that very soon many of the big liners would have to load their cargo at Quebec instead of in Montreal, owing to the shallowness of the river.

The Quebec despatch bolstered its argument by the fact that the White Star Liner Doric recently took part of its cargo from Montreal and the balance from Quebec. Maj. Curry pointed out that the Doric took some 3,000 tons from Montreal and loaded 500 tons in Quebec. This was a regular occurrence around this time of the year.

BUDGET OF NEWS FROM WARSAW AND DISTRICT

An Interesting Meeting of Women's Institute--Paper on Citizenship By Mrs. Ellen Brown — News in General.

WARSAW, Oct. 18.—Warsaw Woman's Institute's regular meeting was held last Thursday. The members (and any others who choose to assist) are asked to prepare their quilt blocks 18 inches by 18 inches and hand them to Mrs. James MasIlvena for assembling. There will be a quilting in the Institute rooms the forenoon of next Institute day (November 8). The quilts are for the Armenian home.

Miss Cressa Crowe, secretary-treasurer was appointed delegate to the convention in Toronto.

Paper On Citizenship.

Mrs. Ellen Brown read the following paper on "Citizenship":

In this "attempt to find some Christian principles of citizenship" we want to exhibit an intense moral earnestness, a keen ability for analysis, a broad sympathy for the rights and privileges of the individual in their widest ranges, an unshakable loyalty first to God next to our fellow man.

First we might mention the command that was given to the Israelites in Lev. 19-24, "The stranger that sojourneth with you shall be unto you as the homeborn among you, and thou shall love him as thyself." And again in Deut. 31-12-13: "Assemble the people, the men and the women and the little ones, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the Lord your God, and observe to do all the words of this law; not known, may hear and learn to fear the Lord your God, as long as ye live in the land." We cannot do better than obey this command. Every man and woman whether naturalized or permanent resident of city, town, country, is a citizen and entitled to citizenship. Now perhaps the largest and most important problem, that we have before us today for solution is to show how the incoming tides of emigrants of various nationalities and different degrees of civilization may be assimilated and made worthy citizens of our great Canada. At the present time we look upon them, "and as I believe most Canadians do," simply as white men and foreigners as the men who do our sewer digging in the city's, work on the railroad tracks and do all kinds of rough hard labor cheaper than Canadians will do it. Most of them speak in their native tongue. Now what do these foreigners bring to Canada? Their wives and children but not much worldy goods it is true it may all be contained in the shapless bags or bundles, but they bring something else of a great deal more importance, that cannot be contained in either bag or bundle. Their religious beliefs, their customs and habits, their maner of life, in the home; it is here the great danger lies, and it is a much greater danger than we realize. I fear that even the Canadian churches have not yet been seized of the magnitude of this ever-growing problem. Now what are Canadian citizens to do? We must by education and environment elevate the incoming multitutde or they will drag us and our Canadian children down to a lower level. We must see to it that the civilization and ideals of these people are not transplanted to and perpetuated on Canada's virgin soil.

Now every Canadian citizen should have an ideal, one which never looses sight of the betterment of human life. No man is better than his best thoughts. God made two kinds of men and he made two worlds for them to live in. For example, see those two men praying in the temple. There stands the pharisee praying with himself, flattering himself, comparing himself with the men around, and thoroughly satisfied with himself. He stands the comparison pretty well; there is no doubt about that. But he is so good, so well satisfied with himself, that he will uplift, or help make better citizens of those, with whom he comes in contact. Off in a corner stands a poor publican in a very different frame of mind. He forgets all about the attainments and failures of other men, and thinks only of God and of God's requirements. As man estimates things, his life will not compare very favorably with that of the pharisee. But his one great aspiration is to keep step with the infinite God. What wonder that, out of a great, deep sense of shortcomings, he should cry: "God be merciful to me a sinner?" "I tell you," said Jesus Christ, and he knew, "this man went down to his house justified rather than the other." Better be the least in the kingdom of heaven with an outlook as wide as eternity, than to be a king among men, with a horizon bounded by the cradle and the grave. Lowell was right when he said, "not failure but low aim is crime." Now what was the publicans great need? Was it a clearer vision of God, of sympathy and companionship of men. Man's needs are as wide as his nature, he must have sympathy he need true personal friends and companions. And he must have vision "where there is no vision the people perish." The ideals of a nation are more important than its laws and legislatures.

Think of this great world, as designed by God for man. For man He made the clouds to gather and the rain fall. For man the earth is clothed with beauty and the storehouses are filled with grain. At the foot of man the world of nature lays its crown and says I am thine. Man is at once the crown of creation and the final cause of creation for companionship and finally citizenship with God. And as I said before He made him fo two worlds. The life here and the life there, make up the sum of our eternal citizenship. It is in these few years of our earthly citizenship, that we are determining our fitness, or unfitness to be placed over larger responsibilities in the Great City beyond.

Here we are stewards, serving and handling the resources of another. Man is but a trader now, but he may be a ruler by and by. And to fill that exalted position he must have that timeless thing called character. It is the one thing God values in the life of a citizen. The one thing that has meaning in the place of trade, in the pulpit and in the home. The world is always looking for men of character, men whose opinions are not for sale; men who are sound from centre to circumference; men whose conscience is as steady as the needle to the pole; men who can suffer but will not lie; men who will not cheat and deceive to get gain for themselves, men each one of us as citizens to keep before us two mottos, one "I serve" not lie; men who themself, men whose word can be trusted without bond. This is the citizen whose influence counts for time and eternity. And as his daily life determines his character it is by this he serves and this he grows. It may be a help to each one of us as citizens, to keep before us two motto's, one "I serve" and "Canada for Christ." And as each day of our life we are building a structure to outlast the stars, we cannot be too careful in the material we use, nor can we follow to faith full the great pattern shown. We must build well what ever we do; build it straight and strong and true; build it clean and high and broad; build it for the eye of God. If we build there shall we known as we are known; and whether black, yellow, white or brown, we may be citizens, and be entitled to citizenship in the Eternal City.

Burning of Rink House.

The burning of the rink house on Sunday morning is, at least, a trial to the Warsaw young people, for the open air rink needs a shelter of some kind. About a year ago the rink house was burn: and the young people worked hard, gave several entertainments and built another shelter, only again to be destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown. The tramp idea is out of the question and children could hardly have done it. The general public seems to think Sunday's blaze must have been of incendary origin.

News Nuggets.

Warsaw school had a holiday on Wednesday, Norwood Fair day, as well as Thursday and Friday, Teachers' convention days.

The high school pupils from this district came home Thursday afternoon. Their teachers had Friday for the convention.

There will be a meeting of the Dummer township Sunday School Association on Friday evening in the Methodist basement.

In the Church Circles.

Mission services began in St. Mark's Anglican church on Sunday afternoon and were well attended.

The Presbyterian church was well filled at both morning and evening services Sunday. Rev. P. L. Jull of Lakefield conducted both services. The choir had prepared special music and the hymns were well known ones in which every one could join. The evening text was "I preach unto you, young men, because you are strong", and the sermon was principally for men. Rev. F. G. Weir assisted by leading in prayer.

There was no afternoon service at Cottesloe, Sunday nor at the Warsaw Methodist church in the evening.

Next Sunday, Rev. Atkinson will conduct the anniversary service at Zion. Rev. F. G. Weir will conduct the morning service in the Presbyterian church and in the evening Mr. Atkinson will give an address on missionary work.

"My Heart Would Palpitate, I Had Weak Spells"

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:—

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes. It has done wonders for me and I want to recommend it to everyone."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

WHAT IS A PIG?

Why do they call you a pig?" he asked suddenly.

Georgie Guinea Pig met Grubby Ground Hog one day in Squealy-Moo Land, right near the corn-shock where Mister Dodger lived. The Twins and the fairyman heard every word they said.

Georgie said, "Say, Grubby, why do they call you a hog? You don't look like one at all. You have long hair and a nice nose that isn't anything like a snout, and fine whiskers, and a nice brush of a tail that has neither a twist nor a curl."

"I don't know," answered Grubby soberly. "I never did know. Why do they call you a pig?" he asked suddenly.

"That's a mystery, too," said Georgie Guinea Pig, shaking his head. "I never knew either. It's most peculiar!"

"It certainly is!" agreed Grubby. "Your tail doesn't curl, because you haven't any. And you have soft fur like a rabbit's. And your eyes are entirely different and everything."

"Let's ask the pigs if they know?" suggested Georgie.

"That's a good idea," said Grubby. "Come along."

So the two friends started off.

Mister Dodger and Nancy and Nick tippy toed after them, not so much to spy as to find out for themselves what the answer really was. They had always wanted to know, too.

"What's that?" exclaimed Piggy Wig Pig hen Georgie and Grubby had put their questions. "Why is one of you called a pig and one a hog? Why, I don't know, to tell the truth. But perhaps my friends know."

So he called Saucy Snout Pig and Twisty Tail Pig and they talked it over.

"Each one of us will ask you a question," said Piggy Wig Pig after a bit, "and see if you can answer. My question is, 'Do you like to wallow in a mud puddle like other pigs do?'"

"No!" shouted Georgie and Grubb together so quickly that Piggy Wig Pig almost fell over.

"Now it's my turn," said Saucy Snout Pig, looking very learned. "Do either of you squeal when you get stuck under a gate?"

"No," answered both of them together again. "We never squeal at a!'"

"Now it's my turn," declared Twisty Tail Pig with a good-natured grin, and pushing the others aside. "Are you both hungry all the time, and could you EAT and EAT and EAT and EAT?"

"Yes!" shouted Georgie Guinea Pig and Grubby Ground Hog loudly. "We eat all the time when we can find anything."

"Then that's the reason," said Twisty Tail grandly. "I knew I'd find out."

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mister Dodger.

"Neither did we!" laughed the Twins. "That's one more thing we've learned in Squealy-Moo Land."

Mrs. Dyer Fell Off to 72 Lbs; Gain 33 on Tanlac

"For nearly seven years," recently said Mrs. Katie Dyer, of 27 Railway St., Hamilton, Ont., "I had suffered from a complication of troubles peculiar to women, and finally my strength all left me and I broke down completely.

"When I began taking Tanlac I only weighed seventy-two pounds, and had been so weak and nervous for nearly two months that I had to be assisted from my bed to my chair. Many times I could not even retain broth and toast on my stomach and restful sleep would not come to me.

"Neither myself nor my friends thought I would ever get well, but I am now feeling as fine as I ever did in my life and am weighing one hundred and five pounds, which makes me heavier than I ever was before. I can never praise Tanlac enough."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

SCOTS CHILDREN HALLOWE'EN PARTY

A large crowd of Scots turned out last evening to the children's Hallowe'en party provided by the Caledonian Club. The early part of the programme was a character sketch given by the Executive in full up-to-date dress, which depicted many humorous worthies and latest "skule days." This was followed by Hallowe'en festivities that was enjoyed by the children, who also provided their own entertainment in many ways. Excellent refreshments were served during the evening. This is the beginning of the winter activities of the club.

1,200 YOUTHFUL FARMERS ASSEMBLE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (Associated Press)—The second National Boys' and Girls' Club Congress to be held here in connection with the International Live-stock Exposition, December 1-8, will bring more than 1,200 winners of club work projects held in the various states during the last year.

The champion boys and girls who will be entitled to the trip are being chosen by state agricultural colleges and will come largely from the rural districts where they were graded on excellence in work done in the activities of the Dairy Calf Clubs, Pig Clubs, Home-Making, Garden, Poultry, Sewing and other clubs. The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad offered a contribution equal to the cost of one-round trip from the champion's home town to Chicago for those chosen in the states through which the road passes.

More than 600,000 boys and girls participated in the contests held last year, who, according to announcement by stock show officials, produced stock and farm crops valued at $8,650,000. Enrollment in the clubs this year will exceed 700,000, according to compilations made by extension department heads at the state institutions. The work is being encouraged by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and is considered one of the important phases of agricultural development now under way.

The visiting youth will be given a series of entertainments and will visit points of interest in the city. Among the features will be a luncheon given by the Chicago Board of Trade. Secretary Wallace and the president of the American Bankers Association will make addresses.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Clifford C. Robinson

In a previous article on proteins, the idea may have been given, that meat was a necessary part of the daily diet. This is not the fact, however. The article stated that too much protein was better than too little. This is true, if the food containing it is varied and bulky.

Regulating foods are those that help the body secure the proper amount of the different nutrious elements that are found in the three great groups. One of the most important of these is mineral salts. These obtain in cereals, fruits, many whole grains, green vegetables, the yolks of eggs and milk. When eating these foods be careful to get the real nourishment out of them they are intended to supply.

The best way to eat an apple is to eat it skin and all. The real meat of the apple is next to the skin. In peeling, you simply throw away a large part of its chief nutriment.

In the cereals, whole wheat and graham flour, also corn meal and oat meal contain valuable mineral salts. Don't use too much sugar with your cereals.

Eggs are much better and more nourishing, if eaten soft boiled. Fruit, celery, fibrous vegetables and nuts contain these valuable mineral salts and should be, to some extent, a part of your daily diet. They also give the teeth good exercise and help keep the gums in a healthy condition.

Water should be taken freely every day, six or eight glasses at least. It is valuable as a lubricant and contains such minerals as iron, sulphur, magnesium and lime. These minerals are bone builders.

The bulky foods are used for their regulating of bowel action. Spinach, lettuce, cabbage, onions and asparagus should be freely used all the year. The fruit juice of oranges, lemons, apples and tomatoes are also fine in hteir regulating action on the intestional tract.

Died in Toronto.

The death took place at Toronto of Walter A. Bryce, son of Mr. Archibald Bryce of Keene. The late Mr. Bryce was born and raised here and was highly respected by all who knew him. In Toronto educational circles, as well as among a large number of friends, a general sense of loss was felt in the death of Mr. Bryce at his home, 3 Bowden avenue, Toronto. He was for several years an inspector of Public schools, and his death came with startling suddenness. After serving for many years on the teaching staff of Toronto, as assistant principal of several Public Schools, Mr. Bryce was seven years ago appointed inspector. His district was in the Danforth vicinity and extended so as to include a few schools west of the Don. The recent arrangement of inspectors sanctioned by the Board of Education did not greatly effect Mr. Bryce's district.

The deceased was born at Keene 53 years ago. He was educated at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Queen's University. He was a Presbyterian and attendant at old St. Andrew's Church; also a prominent Mason, being a past master of Zeta Lodge. He was a member of Maple Leaf L.O.L.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two sons, Archibald, a teacher in North Toronto High School, and George, a fourth year student at the University of Toronto; three daughters, Misses Leila, Margaret and Marion; his father, Mr. Archibald Bryce of Keene; two brothers, Joseph of Sherbrooke, Que., and James of Peterborough, and two sisters, Mrs. Wilbert Howson of Peterborough and Miss Margaret Bryce of Keene.

In addition to high professional qualifications, deceased possessed the culture of scholarship in an unusual degree, and his devotion to his duties throughout years of failing health was heroism itself.

Keene will greatly miss Mr. Bryce as he and his family spent the summer holiday seasons at their cottage on Main street, where their home was a social centre and added a great deal to the social life of the village.

though she had never been allowed to own one. "Dear thing!" she exclaimed involuntarily.

The large yellow dog wagged his tail again, and smiled. Yes, there was no doubt of that. It really smiled. Doubtless it had been taught to smile by someone who valued it. Terry was so charmed that she forgot for an instant the trouble in her mind.

She paused on the threshold, and saw that the dog's master was on his feet, bowing to her and Miles with French punctiliousness. She bowed in response, and smiled brightly. Captain Guilbert could hardly be expected to understand that the smile was entirely for his dog, not at all for him.

Harky was in her master's room while Terry packed Sheridan's bag, showing the amateur what to put in, lest something of importance should be forgotten, but Miles found time to take the girl in his arms and kiss her as though for the last time on earth.

"I feel as if I couldn't let you go!" the words came as if they were forced from him.

"You don't—don't think that anything can possibly happen to keep you from coming back?" she implored, her arms round his neck.

"You couldn't change your mind and take me with you?" Terry's longing got beyond control.

"I wish I could. But I'm sure it wouldn't be best," Miles said. "I'll telegraph, if it isn't too late when I get to Algiers. Then you ought to hear first thing in the morning. If not, before noon at least. And—wire me this evening, will you?—but not to the yacht: address me at—the Hotel Cecil: I'll stay there if I have to stay. Anyhow, I'll call."

He hadn't thought of this before. But he decided quickly.

"Oh, why not at the lovely St. George, with the terrace and garden, if you don't want to go out to the yacht?" asked Terry. "I'd like to think of you there."

"No," said Miles, "the St. George is too far from town for me this time." (He would not go to the place where he had seen Salvano). "Be as happy as you can, and the time will soon pass. Don't take any long walks alone without Harky—but short ones if you like, of course. I'm not a tyrant yet! And—oh, darling, I talked to you about the Ouled Nails girls here at Bousaada. I thought—then—you'd be interested in their dancing. But that was before last night. Now you're mine. If there's a dance, and any touting guide wants you to go, promise me you won't. After all, I don't care for you to see the show—anyhow without me."

Terry promised. "I shan't feel like seeing anything without you," she said.

Sheridan kissed her again. Oh, the sweetness of her! If only she had had no lurid past, he should be perfectly happy—in spite of Betty or anything Betty could do. But if there had been a different past, he might not have met her. He wasn't going to spoil Juliet's life or his own by brooding on what couldn't be changed. He had sworn to the girl last night not to do that, and he would stick to his word for both their sakes.

Terry came down to the entrance of the hotel to see him off, and his last sight of her as he turned back, was the waving of a tiny handkerchief. It fluttered in the sun like a little white moth, and the sun turned her hair to gleaming copper. A tame gazelle that was the pet of the house had come to her in the hope of a date, or a lump of sugar to lick. The delicate form of the little animal leaned against the slight figure of the girl; and the big yellow dog that Miles had seen in the dining room beside her too.

She looked like a young nymph, surrounded by her votaries, Miles thought, as the car swept the vision out of his sight, and he felt a thrill of peculiar ecstasy such as he had never known before in thinking of a woman. But he would have experienced a less pleasant emotion had he seen the four young men who peeped out between the half-closed green shutters of the salle a manger laughing and bantering each other, or if he could have heard what they said.

Captain Guilbert hurried out before the girl could escape by going upstairs. He made his dog an excuse.

CENTRAL MEETING EXCHANGE IS OF BENEFIT TO PETERBORO

Bureau Established in 1920 Not Used in Preventing Overlapping of Entertainments — Success Depends on Co-operation of Organizations in the City.

Although on April 18, 1920, a Meeting of Exchange Bureau was established by the Chamber of Commerce, which has been in operation ever since, considerable difficulty is still encountered by various organizations in arranging for meetings so as not to overlap with meetings of other organizations.

This Bureau can be made of considerable value to all organizations if used, in arranging meetings.

Nothing is more discouraging to an organization which has secured a prominent speaker for a certain evening and find that only a small representation of members are present owing to other meetings or attractions.

All secretaries are invited to communicate with The Chamber of Commerce either to give notice of a meeting that will be held or to arrange one on a night that is not taken up by other organizations which may affect attendance.

The Exchange Bureau is established and operating and its value is only limited to the extent of its use by the various organizations of the city.

BANK CLEARINGS ABOVE AVERAGE

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Payment for delivery of Dominion of Canada Refunding Loan Bonds was the principal cause of a startling quadrupling of normal average figures of the weekly bank clearings as issued to-day for Toronto, according to financial authorities here.

Clearings locally for Toronto during the week ending to-day were $386,467,093, while those for the corresponding week of last year were $93,354,534. As the syndicate which handled bonds for the Dominion Government had its highest record in Toronto, an unusual proportion of the big transaction found its way through the Toronto clearing house.

It is understood that heavy withdrawals and re-deposits in the Dominion Bank and its branches in the somewhat panicky run of the week-end, with a consequent re-adjustment between banks, had comparatively slight influence on the Toronto Bank clearings for the week.

Miss Halliday reported on various social affairs much enjoyed by the old people, including the annual Christmas Treat, when Dr. Blagrave gave an address a musical programme was rendered by R. J. Devey and his boy choir and the old people were presentd with gifts. Mrs. R. Nill and Mrs. R. R. Many donations received at Christmas time were evidences of increasing public interest in the work of the Home by citizens generally. The secretary spoke of the appreciation felt by the Board for the good work done by Miss Lancaster throughout the year. "Many difficulties arise every day, but the superintendent and those about her have carried on well and cheerfully during the year."

At present there are 36 inmates in the Home, 18 men and 18 women. During the year the Home has sheltered 48 people with 2 deaths and 10 discharges.

Report of Overseer

Mr. J. C. Hamilton, the overseer reported on outside conditions generally, with particular reference to garden produce and crops. Mr. Hamilton buys very little seed for garden purposes at the Home, depending on the supply available from year to year. The amount of seed purchased during the year cost only $2.95.

The hay crop was good, providing fodder for horse and cow both, with a remainder of two tons on hand. The Home cow came in for a little appreciation of her work, the overseer recording the amount of 3720 quarts of milk provided by her, with an average per day from November 7th to September 1st of 12 2-5 quarts.

The hens had produced 290 dozen eggs from October, 1922, to September 1923 with 25 hens used for Home purposes during the year five sold, and a hen family on hand at present of 23 hens and 33 chickens.

The Home kitchen garden produced during the year 1 1-2 bushels beans, 1 1-2 bushels onions; 7 bushels beets, 11 bushels carrots 20 bags of potatoes, 60 bus. mangel-wurzels, 31 bushels turnips, besides a quantity of citrons, cabbage and parsnips.

A state of siege was declared by the police last night and the streets were closed at nine o'clock.

LLOYD GEORGE IS ALL RIGHT AGAIN

Resumes Speaking Tour And Visits Tomb Of Abraham Lincoln.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.— (Canadian Press.)— Recovered from the slight cold and fatigue which kept him idle yesterday, Rgiht Hon. David Lloyd George, War Premier of Great Britain, resumed his itinerary to-day, going to Springfield for a visit to the tomb of Abraham Lincoln and an address there. After his speech last night to an audience of ten thousand in the International Amphitheatre at the stock yards, the British statesman immediately returned to his hotel suite and retired. The all day rest that caused an abandonment of the programme which had been arranged for him, left apparent but little indication of the illness when the Little Welshman delivered his address with characteristic force and energy.

Three men and two women, charged with creating a disturbance by passing out hand bills relating to the "freedom of Ireland" were arrested prior to the meeting.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

Miles Sheridan is facilitating his wife's obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. He is taking a yacht trip, supposedly with

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl, known as the Million Dollar Doll. In reality, however, he is not with the Doll, but

Teresa Desmond (Terry), Juliet's unbelievably innocent half-sister, whom the Doll sent to masquerade as herself. Ever since a kindness, Miles did her in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and they are now madly in love with each other, although he does not recognize in her whom he knows as Juliet Divine, the little girl he befriended so long ago.

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian fortune-hunter, who has deserted Betty for

Miss Caroline Sheridan, Miles' aunt, also writes to Betty about Terry's beauty and charm.

Betty has just learned of Paul's desertion, and she is opening a letter from Nazlo.

Betty goes to Europe, to find Paul and possibly retrieve her husband.

Miles receives a telegram that his wife has come aboard the yacht at Algiers and wants to see him.

CHAPTER LXIX

"I'm afraid, darling girl, that I'd better—that I'll have to go and attend to this business," Miles said, leaning across the small table. Terry half expected him to show the telegram to her, but he did not. He sat frowning for a minute, and as if absent-mindedly, tore the blue paper into tiny fragments. These he dropped into the ash-receiver that bore the advertisement of some long forbidden liquer and then—still as if thinking of something else—he set fire to the little heap with the end of his cigarette.

"Well!" he exclaimed suddenly, looking up just when Terry had been adoring his thick, jet eyelashes. "The sooner I start, the sooner I shall get back. The chauffeur knows we may have to go off at a few minutes' notice, so he'll be ready. I ought to be in Algiers by nine tonight, with luck. Maybe an hour or two there, will be enough." (A vague idea of some heavy bribe beyond the dreams of alimony, flitted through his mind). "If so, I'll be under way for Bousaada, and you again, before midnight."

"You'll be tired, dreadfully tired, if you motor all the rest of today, and all night too," she said. In the girl's heart, he was "My Prince," but aloud she still called him "You," being too shy for the "darlings" and "dearests" which he showered upon her.

Some day, when Juliet had given permission to tell the whole story (as of course she would give it when she knew!) then this adored hero of hers should know that he was the "Prince," and why.

"Tired?" mocked Sheridan. "As if I could be tired, coming back to you! You don't understand me yet. I'll make you, though, when I come—home. This is home while you're here. But we'll have a wonderful home of our own some day, even better than this, and further away from the tiresome world, even if it's only on a yacht."

As they rose from the table and Miles pulled her chair back, a large yellow dog got up from his place on the floor at Captain Guilbert's feet. Terry looked at him, and he looked at her wagging his tail. Terry loved dogs

MILLIONS ARE NEAR THE BRINK OF RUIN AND DON'T KNOW IT, SHE SAYS

Peterboro Has a Vast Multitude on Physical and Mental Brink of Ruin—What Is Being Done to Bring Relief to Sufferers—Many Men and Women Give Their Testimony.

SAY THEY ARE AMAZED AT WONDERFUL RESULTS

Mrs. Sallie King Wants the World to Know How She Was Quickly Relieved of Stomach Trouble—John Bassinger Says: "Your Grand Medicine Has Made Me Well and Strong Again."

"IT WORKED WONDERS—NEIGHBORHOOD SURPRISED."

"Physically and mentally on the brink of ruin, there are few sufferers who would not give anything they possess to live their lives over again in health and strength," declares a well known authority on health and hygiene in a recent interview.

This place is full of half-sick people. Those who have good health should appreciate it—the others did not, and there is not one of them but in common sense would warn you against the danger of neglect.

It is mostly stomach trouble that is making this a place full of sick people—stromach trouble its complications, and the many forms of kidney, liver, blood and bowel disorders that come mostly from stomach trouble.

Neglect of the first symptoms of stomach trouble brings on more ill health and vicious diseases; the uneasy feeling after eating, gas belching, undigested food in the stomach, constipation, dizziness, spots before the eyes, shortness of breath, and many other little disorders may all be warning signals that something is wrong and will get worse unless attended to in time.

But there is good cheer and hope in the news that there has been introduced here a new root and herb medicine that is being pronounced a boon to all sufferers from stomach neglect. This wonderful natural medicine is called Dreco and is now being distributed at Bond's Drug Store, Peterboro.

No matter how slight or long-standing the case may be, no matter what kidney, liver, rheumatic, or catarrhal complications may have set in Dreco is promised to pave the way for quick recovery and return to health, strength and happiness.

Life Was a Constant Misery.

"I had no use of my left arm for two years. I couldnt' raise it high enough to put my suspenders over my shoulders, or tie my tie," said Mr. Martin Helfman, the well known contractor, of 309 E. Fox Street, South Bend, Ind. "My joints creaked and popped every time I went to move, my back felt like it would break and if any one touched my arm I would yell out with pain. I couldn't clutch anything with my hand for my fingers were stiff and sore. This interfered with my work so that I couldn't handle my tools.

"I took many treatments without success, but Dreco had cleared every pain and trace of rheumatism from my system. I consider it the greatest medicine in the market today."

Confined to Bed.

Mrs. Dora Peterson, of 210 W. Frank Street, Kalamazoo, Mich., said: "I had severe pains in my stomach and everything I ate laid there like so much lead. I was filled with gas and too uncomfortable to keep my clothes on. My bowels wouldn't move unless urged by strong laxatives and it seemed they left me more constipated than ever. Dreco was quick to overcome constipation and rouse my lazy liver, working out the excess bile which was poisoning me. My stomach began digesting my food and stopped the gas forming and eased the cramps. I never have a dizzy spell now and I haven't been laid up in bed since Dreco cleaned out my system."

Dreco Within the Reach of All.

These are just a few cases selected at random from the mass of signed testimonials received from stores of men and women in all walks of life. Who is there can doubt the plain, straightforward statements of these people?

Dreco is not an expensive medicine. It is easy to get, easy to take and remarkably quick in its action.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. Go there and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E H. Northey, Campbellford by J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretions or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia, at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antiacid than Bisurated Magnesia and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestent. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of pepsin or artificial digestents.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate and in the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."

FRUITS FOR VIENNA

VIENNA, Oct. 18.—(Associated Press)—Farmers' carts again are to be seen in the market squares of Vienna, a circumstance which means that the farmer today is perceiving the necessity of bestirring himself if he wants to dispose of his products. With this will come competition, and a plentiful supply of fruits and vegetables for the city dwellers at lower prices.

Gone are the days when Vienna housewives, rain or shine, had to troop out to the farms laden with city finery for the farmers' wives which they turned over for the privilege of digging a few pounds of potatoes, while the farmer stood aloof, smoked city cigars and made sarcastic remarks.

EX-KAISER AWAITS WIFE.

Another Family Council to Be Held With Ex-Crown Prince Present.

DOORN October 18. — The ex-Kaiser's wife is expected to return to-day from her estate in Silesia, where she has been on a visit.

Ex-Princess Hermione returns from the fatherland presumably carrying confidential messages and with all the latest news on the political situation in Germany.

The ex-Crown Prince's visit to Doorn is expected to be the occasion for another family conference, when the chances of the Hohenzollerns will be discussed.

Secretary-General Kahn, who is directly responsible to the Dutch Government for the exiled Hohenzollerns, is spending two days in conference with the ex-Crown Prince with whom he is great friends, on the island of Wieringen.

Since his trip two weeks ago which occasioned anxiety as to whether he would return the ex-Crown Prince has not quitted the island.

It is understood that while nominally free to leave Holland whenever he wishes, he has pledged his word to the Dutch Government to inform the Minister of the Interior if he intends to quit the country. It is not known how much warning he must give the Government.

CISSIE LOFTUS, CURED OF DRUGS, RETURNS

English Mimic To Invade Stage Again After 10 Years.

NEW YORK, Oct 18.—Returning to the American stage after an absence of nearly 10 years, Cissie Loftus, English mimic, arrived on the steamship Leviathan, announcing herself cured of the drug habit.

Last November cable dispatches, telling of the arrest of the actress in London for the alleged illegal possession of narcotics, brought to the United States the first news in years of the former start of the legitimate and vaudeville stages. Since then she was paroled for a year by the English courts.

"It was a terrible fight," she said of her former habit, "but I have won. The drugs came from sickness and suffering. Now I am starting life anew. One thing that was brought home to me was the number of wonderful friends I had. Such friendships are a resurrection for any soul."

Miss Loftus was accompanied by Nora Bayes, American actress, who adopted a third child on her last trip to Europe.

HOWARD YOUNG P.C.I. CHAMPION IN SENIOR GROUP

Winston Merrell and Harry Doughty Won the Senior and Junior Road Races.

FINISHED CLOSE.

"Wins" ran a nice heady race during the whole 3½ mile grind, and pacing out the whole distance in 21 minutes flat, he finished in good condition. Robert Sturgeon trailed the winner closely the whole way and was nearly on his heels at the finish being only 4 seconds later in crossing the tape. Howard Young and Boyd Craw came in about a minute behind the second man.

The Senior championship of the school depended on the outcome of this race, Howard Young and Boyd Craw being nearly neck and neck for leadership on points earned in the previous events. If Craw could have crossed the tape more than 27 seconds in front of Young he would have received enough points to have cinched the championship. Young was satisfied to cling close to Craw during the distance and finish within those 27 important seconds and he was successful in his purpose finishing only 3 seconds behind him. Craw's time was 22 minutes and 25 seconds.

The students fully expected to see Young or Craw carry off the event, but were more than enthusiastic for Merrell when they saw the tall youth streak around the corner at McDonnel Street well in the lead of the point—leading two. The course was not new to Merrell. Last year he finished fourth.

Doughty Won Junior.

Harry Doughty headed the field of Juniors coming in well in advance, his time being 15 minutes, 30 seconds. Hope was second, his time being 15 minutes and 55 seconds. A second after Hope, Gimblett finished, going strong. Frost came in next with a long striding gallop doing the distance in 16 minutes and 40 seconds.

The races were record breakers in the fact that all those who started crossed the tape at the finish.

The Central and Queen Alexandra Play Again Friday Evening.

Extra time did not alter the decision of the soccer game between Queen Alexander and Central School last evening, at the Oval, before a large crowd of spectators. No scoring at full time ended with one goal each, after five minutes each way.

Lewis (Capt.) Central School won the toss and were the first to become dangerous but Johnston frustrated the Alexander boys attack. Dyer returned again on the win, centred into goal, Tedford saving and Johnston clearing. Dorrington broke away to keep Kiff busy until H. Coleman stopped the attack. He passed forward to Lewis who forced a corner and then struck the upright. Pinn at centre distributed the play out to the wings which gave Peryer good chances, Lewis blocking at opportune moment. Johnston (Alex) full-back checked, punted and tackled cleverly and was well backed up by Baker, his school-mate. Half-time—no scoring.

On resuming, raid after raid brought forth anxious moments to the Principals, and on one occasion Lewis outwitted Alexander full-backs, run into goal but finally lifted the ball over the bar with only the goal-keeper to beat. Nice combination was introduced throughout the game by each team. Rest of the game was full of excitement as the play run from end to end. Full time—no scoring.

Extra time was played, Dorrington and Doughty worked combination past Central defence, outside right landed the ball to Pinn who converted through a sea of legs after 3 minutes play. With 2 minutes to go, Johnston gave away a penalty which was taken by G. Coleman. He lifted the ball in below the bar for the equalizer. Final—Central 1, Queen Alexander 1.

Goal scorers—Queen's— Pinn. Central—G. Coleman.

Queen Alexander—Tedford, goal; Walker and Johnston, full backs; Rose, Wood and Baker, half backs; Dorrington, Dallin, Pinn, Doughty and Peryer, forwards.

Referee—J. Stewart.

The replay will take place on Friday evening at the Oval. Kick-off at 4.15 prompt.

EVERETT SCOTT MAY QUIT GAME

Huggins Has Several Weak Spots to Repair Before Spring.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press)—Not only will the New York Giants, fallen world's champions, go through a rebuilding process before they are ready to scale title heights again, but the Yankees, their successors to baseball's crown, also may bolster up a few weak links in their victorious machine before the 1924 season gets under way.

It developed yesterday that Everett Scott, veteran shortstop of the Yankees, who holds the all-time record for consecutive games played, is considering voluntarily retirement, although Miller Huggins, manager of the new champions, has no desire himself to part with the game's greatest "iron man."

Scott ,however, has an attractive business enterprise in view, which, if accepted, would mean his passing after having piled up the remarkable record of participating in 1,138 consecutive games ,a record he started in 1916 with the Boston Red Sox, and which nearly doubles the best previous major league mark.

Boley May Succeed Him.

Scott may find the call of the game too strong to resist when Spring comes around, but in the event he drops out, his shoes may be filled by Joe Boley, "$100,000 beauty," of the Baltimore Orioles, who has been eagerly sought by a number of major league clubs for several seasons. The purchase of Boley has never been officially announced by the Yankees or Jack Dunn, manager of the Baltimore International League champions, but it is understood the world's champions have first claim on him.

Need Right-Hand Hitter

Huggins is also understood to be anxious to obtain a right-handed hitting outfielder, either to alternate with or replace Whitey Witt in center field. This need was shown in the last game of the series when Joe Bush, hard-hitting pitcher, was substituted for Witt in the eighth inning rally. Huggins has Elmer Smith available, but he is a left-hander at the plate. Smith might be used in a trade to his own and the club's advantage, for Elmer is considered too valuable to remain on the bench.

Carl Mays, veteran pitcher, who has passed the crest of his effectiveness, also may be involved in a deal.

Series retrospect yesterday brought to light another record, made by Bob Meusel, whose $50,000 hit broke up the deciding game. Meusel drove in eight runs during the series ,shattering the mark of seven established by Tommy Leach with Pittsburgh in the series of 1903.

Third Base Weak Spot Hurt Bush

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—One weak spot on an infield plays havoc with a teams' chances. For two years the Washington club has been badly handicapped by a weakness at third base.

"If I had a reliable man at third base throughout the season I would have finished in fourth place," remarked Manager Donnie Bush of the Washington club. "We lost a dozen games because of poor work around third. That many games on the right side of the ledger would have given us a pretty good rating for the year.

"Had Bluege been able to play the position all season the club would have been well fortified. However, Bluege was out of the game nearly half the year because of injuries and illness. During his absence from the game, the club suffered badly.

"I regard Bluege as one of the most promising young infielders in the game. He is rather brittle, but with him in the game regularly, I regard the Washington infield as second to none in the American League. In Peckinpaugh and Harris I have the best double play combination in the American League.

"I am more than satisfied with the showing my club made. A little more pitching strength and a bit more of a punch at the bat and the Nationals will prove mighty troublesome next year."

United States received more than $8,500,000 worth of hair nets from China in 1921.

GLEASON QUITS THE WHITE SOX

Discouraged By Shadow of 1919 World's Series Scandal.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press)—William (Kid) Gleason, the fiery manager of the Chicago White Sox since 1919, resigned yesterday, making the fourth managerial position to be filled in the American League before the opening of the 1924 season.

The 58-year-old pilot, with a record of 37 years in baseball, resigned, he said, because he was discouraged with his attempts to reconstruct the club, wrecked with the exposure of the world's series scandal with Cincinnati in 1919. He set about to rebuild the club when the players who participated in the alleged frame-up, were dropped, but in the three seasons that have passed, Gleason's fighting spirit alone carried him through as he had little success in the development of a new team.

"I've given the best that's in me, and the boys did the best they knew how," Gleason said last night, "but we didn't seem to be able to get anywhere. A change often works wonders so I decided to step out and give somebody else a chance."

There has been no hint from President Comiskey of the White Sox as to the successor of the veteran.

Gleason has been with the Sox for eleven years in the capacity of coach and manager.

The resignation of Gleason leaves Chicago, Boston, Washington and possibly St. Louis without managers for next season. In baseball circles it is believed that Gleason will be back in the American League next year as leader of one of these clubs.

THANKSGIVING DAY RACE MAY BE HELD

Senior and Junior Events If Sufficient Runners Sign Up By October 23.

There will be a road race this Thanksgiving Day if local long distance runners show sufficient interest to merit one.

At a meeting of the Physical Committee of the local Y.M.C.A. held last evening it was decided to carry on and hold the annual ten mile and five mile road races on Thanksgiving Day, with one condition, that should make all local runners come up on their toes. This condition is that there must be at least ten entries in for each event, senior and junior, and these entries must be received at the office of the local Y.M.C.A. on or before next Tuesday, October 23. If there are ten entries in for one event and not the required number for the other race the one receiving the required number of entries will be run and the other race will be abandoned.

The "Y" Physical Committee believe that if long distance running is nursed along a little longer than Peterboro will soon have a group of fairly good runners. Anyway they are willing and ready to give the boys another chance to show their mettle by once more staging the Examiner Road Race, which has brought out and trained so many great runners in past years.

Peter Jackson Was King Heavy, Corbett Holds

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 18.—James J. Corbett, reformed heavyweight, currently engaged in uplifting the drama tells the world the greatest heavyweight of them all was Peter Jackson, the black man. Corbett doesn't even except Bob Fitzsimons or Jack Dempsey.

"I saw Jackson box an exhibition with Fitz at the old California A. C.," Corbett relates, "and it was like a teacher giving a pupil a lesson. Honestly, he made Fitz look like a sucker. No wonder Fitz wanted to battle the world at large—BAR JACKSON."

Corbett, baited Jackson himself. They fought over four hours without reaching a decision. The bout was finally stopped and called no contest.

"I started to box with Jackson early in the fight," Corbett tells, "and he went right along, landing just as often as I did. I figured he would tire. At about the fifteenth round he was puffing. I thought I had him. I stepped in and started to slug with him. Bill Delaney was in my corner. 'Don't slug with him, Jim. He'll kill you,' shrieked Delaney.

"I took his advice. It probably saved me from being flattened. I went back to boxing and held my own. I never met another fighter like Jackson. He was just as good a boxer as a slugger, and great at both. That's why I hold him up as the ideal fighting type."

From Trick Mule to Papyrus Measures Donoghue's Career

By JOE WILLIAMS.

What about Donoghue?

You might ask yourself that in considering the outcome of the impending hoof duel between Zev and Papyrus, respective three-year-old erica and England.

WILLIAMS.

Donoghue will be astride Papyrus when the two grand racers prance nervously to the barrier at Belmont Park on Oct. 20. He is England's greatest jockey, greatest since the days of Sloan, Archer and Maher. For eight straight years he has led all the English jockeys in number of races won. For three straight years he has finished first in the Epson Downs Derby, the Empire's most historic racing event.

"Our Steve," the Britons call him. To them he is as big a sporting idol as Ruth and Dempsey are to Americans. Many of the bettors play him blindly throughout the year. The identity of the horse matters not. If "Our Steve" is up that is sufficient.

Donoghue is no tender stripling. He is nearly 40 years old, and has been riding since he was 14. Naturally dwarfish as to build, a skinny type with spindly legs, Donoghue has never had to worry about making weight or keeping light. That's one reason he has lasted so long as a star. He never gets above 103 pounds.

To a trick donkey in a circus that came to Warrington, Lancashire, home of the Donoghues, England's premier rider owes his start. The ring master offered a purse of silver to man or boy who could stay on the kicking mule's back for 30 seconds. The wiry little Donoghue lad, weighing hardly more than a gadfly, had to be pried off. The hitherto undefeated mule was shamelessly outclassed.

That started Donoghue as a professional rider. Walking to Chester, a nearby village, Donoghue hired out as stable boy in the racing establishment of John Porter, a rather famous trainer. Eventually he advanced to the riding class. He won his first Derby on Pommerin and his second on Gay Crusader. This was in 1915 and 1916, war years. Not much attention was paid to races then.

Three years ago Donoghue won his first Derby at the world famous Epsom course. Mounted on J. B. Joel's Humorist, Donoghue was first across the wire, beating Craig on Eran by a breathless fraction in a driving finish that will remain green forever in the memory of British turf fans. Next year he repeated on Captain Cuttle and this year he made it three in a row, an amazing record, by piloting Papyrus home in front.

Donoghue is a remarkable jockey because of his steel nerves, superb horsemanship and great daring. No other English jockey fights for the rail as Donoghue does and few get it as often. Donoghue is a rough rider, or appears to be. He is eternally urging his mount forward.

Shortly after Donoghue won the

Up On Papyrus

STEVE DONOGHUE.

"I never ask more from a horse than he will give," Donoghue said to his critics.

Naturally Donoghue is a man of affairs on the other side. His likeness in oils hangs in the Royal Academy along with noted heroes of history. The King calls him by his first name. He lives in palatial quarters, employs a retinue of servants and steps with the blue bloods.

It is difficult to estimate his annual earnings. Every racing day Donoghue is in action. His services are in great demand. Some days he rides in every race. It is probably not missing the mark far to say he averages $75,000 a year.

Harry Sinclair, Oil Magnate Is Owner of Zev

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(United Press).—Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire oilman and the owner of Zev, America's hope in the $100,000 international championship race against Papyrus, is not only one of the business leaders of the nation, but one of its most outstanding sportsmen.

At various times since he became immensely wealthy, Sinclair has taken a fling at different sports and he became almost a national figure when he assumed the role of one of the big "angels" of the Federal League, which waged war on organized baseball several years ago.

Since the Federal League failed, Sinclair has confined his amusement to racing, although at times he has been reported as willing to buy into the National or American Leagues.

He was born in Wheeling, W. Va., on July 6, 1876, and was educated in the public schools in Lawrence, Kan. He took a course in pharmacy at the University of Kansas in 1897 and 1898 and entered into the drug business with his father after leaving college. He drifted into the oil business in 1901 and became sensationally successful.

He is president of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and a director in various other banking and business institutions.

Sinclair has one of the biggest stables on the American track, which he operates under the name of the Rancocas Stable, with Sam Hildreth as the trainer. His stable led in earnings last season with a total of $229,285.

He is a great racing enthusiast, but he allows Hildreth absolute authority over his stables and his horses. During the controversy preceding the selection of Zev as the American color bearer, when a match race was being urged between Zev and My Own, the Grayson colt, Sinclair refused to take a part and said that the decision was entirely up to his trainer.

The average life of a standard tube is about 1000 hours. A 45-volt R battery may last anywhere from three months to a year.

ZEV PULLED UP IN SPEED TRIAL

Did Mile and Quarter in 2.09 — Donoghue Works Out Papyrus.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(Canadian Press)—While Zev, the United States entry in the $100,000 international race next Saturday, went through his final hard workout yesterday in form that aroused a marked contrast of opinion, Papyrus, Great Britain's thoroughbred hope, cantered through his first workout with Steve Donoghue, premier British rider, who will handle the reins of the Derby winner in the classic at Belmont Park.

Zev's workout, a mile and a quarter in 2.09, fell short of the expectations of some spectators, to whom the horse's slow finish was disappointing, but general belief prevailed that the Rancocas star purposely was eased up after showing a brilliant burst of speed in the first few furlongs.

Zev covered the first half in remarkably good time of 47 second flat, and was clocked at 1:12 2-5 for the six furlongs. Thereafter Jockey L. Fator, who had the leg up, restrained the colt, turning the mile in 1:39 4-5, nine furlongs in 1:54, and finishing the mile and a quarter in 2:09.

Final Test Today.

Papyrus, with Donoghue up, had an easy gallop of six furlongs but is slated for a final stiff preparatory test this morning, probably at a mile and a half, the distance of the international race.

Donoghue, sitting erect and holding a long rein, in contrast to the customary American style of riding, got his first survey of Belmont track, on which he will match his riding wits with Earl Sande, leading jockey of the United States in the big race. The English jockey seemed pleased with the condition of Papyrus ,which he piloted to his fifth Derby triumph at Epsom Downs.

Declines to Meet "My Own."

Basil Jarvis, trainer of Papyrus, removed tonight the last hope that the Derby winner, if victorious over Zev, might accept the $50,000 offer of the Maryland State Fair Association for a race at a mile and a half with My Own, Zev's rival for three-year-old honors, at Laurel track, on Thursday of next week.

"All being well, Papyrus will return on October 23, on board the Aquitania," said Jarvis. "This is definite and final."

WINS BET ON YANKEES, DROPS DEAD.

NEW YORK, October 18. — Just after he had heard that the Yankees were world champions and that he had won a bet, the amount of which was not learned, John Atrakis dropped dead yesterday afternoon behind a counter in Centre Market, Newark, where he had worked for twenty years for Kaufer-Kneller, commission merchants, without missing a day.

WON'T REPLACE STRANDED SHIPS

Services of "Aberdeen" Assumed By Others of Department.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—(Canadian Press).—It is not expected that a new vessel will be purchased to replace the Canadian Government steamship Aberdeen which went aground on Seal Island, at the south west corner of Nova Scotia last week it is stated at the Department of Marine that the services that have been performed by the Aberdeen will be cared for by a re-arrangement of the duties of the other government vessels. There are now twenty-seven ships in the light house and buoy service of which six are employed in the waters about Nova Scotia. The route of the Aberdeen was from St. John, N.B., around the Bay of Fundy and down to Sable Island. It is expected that this route will be provided for among the six ships now engaged in the service about Nova Scotia.

AMERICAN GRAIN IS IN MONTREAL PORT

Interferes With Movement of Canadian Crop—Held For Speculation.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.— Referring to a statement made here recently that a blockade of the grain facilities of the port of Montreal was to be expected, J. W. Norcoss, vice-president of the Canada Steamship Lines Limited said here to-day that due to the fact that a considerable portion of the grain handling facilities of the port were occupied by American grain, the movement of the Canadain crop would in his opinion be severely handicapped. He declared that something over fifty per cent. of the facilities of the port were taken up with American grain which was being held here for speculative or storage purposes, and this would inflict a very serious injury on the movement of the Canadian crop.

He pointed out that the Lake Transportation Companies were under the serious handicap of having to quote a freight rate for grain during the latter part of October and November when they will be forced to operate under conditions of which they can have no accurate knowledge and with the possibility of the port of Montreal being blockaded on the movement of grain. They are therefore entitled to reimbursement for the expenditures incurred by such delays which are beyond their control.

Mr. Norcross concludes that a review of the conditions surrounding the movement of the Canadain crop from the time it reaches the country elevators until it is placed aboard the ocean steamers en route to an English or European market indicates very clearly the lack of any comprehensive scheme to market a commodity which is the most important that the Dominion of Canada produces.

ALL STARS DEFEAT THE SECOND TEAM

Remarkable Pitching Duel Staged in Exhibition Game, Warkworth

WARKWORTH, Oct. 18. — The Northumberland League All Stars played an exhibition game against a second team at Warkworth on Wednesday, when after a fast, well-played argument, was won by the smallest possible margin of 1-0.

The feature of the game was the pitching battle staged by Archie Zufelt of Warkworth, and Clifford Leach of Roseneath. Both were in hand firm and their work was certainly a fine example of Northumberland League pitching.

Zufelt struck out ten of the second team and allowed only two hits. Leach had eight strike outs, and yielded five hits. His one pass was issued in the sixth innings to Doc McKee, the Brighton shortstop. Doc promply stole second and scored on Zufelt's single.

The only dispute of the game occurre at this stage, the second team claiming that three strikes had been called on McKee when there was still a count of two and three.

Fielding features were a catch in deep centre by Hawkins and Kory Zufelt's great play on a ball hit by McKee in the second innings. Long George Kelly could not have handled it better. Weston was the only player to get two hits.

Six of the League's nine clubs were represented in the line-up of the two teams. There were 6 Warkworth players, three Roseneath, three Brighton, two Campbellford, two Colborne and two Orland players.

McGILL TRACK TEAM COMING WEST TODAY

MONTREAL, October 17. — Tomorrow will see the departure of the McGill track team for Toronto where it will journey to defend its title to the intercollegiate track championship which it has, since the war, successfully retained despite the efforts of Varsity and Queens to wrest from the local University.

Coach Van Wagner has in his charge a well balanced team, which promises to give a worthy account of itself against its Ontario rivals. Its weak point is probably in the weight events where no sensational distances were made at the inter-faculty meet which took place last Friday.

McGill is sending two entries for almost every event, and Manager Fullerton stated last evening that there would be a relay race run off between the periods in the Queen's-Varsity game.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

Waterloo Sttaion, London, one of the largest terminals in the world, is the scene of the opening episodes of the Paramount picture, "Gentleman of Leisure" starring Jack Holt, which comes to the Capitol theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

This introductory scene, quite unusual in motion pictures, presents to the audience the principal players of the production right at the start. This is described by all who have had previews of the pictures as a decided novelty. Never before has any production so employed this idea.

In the station, Jack Holt, playing Robert Willoughby Pitt, a young gentleman of wealth and leisure, is seen bidding his friends good-by. Sir Spencer Deever, nephew of Lord and Lady Blount, whose wish it is to secure for "Spennie" a wealthy wife and thus save them from financial disaster, also are present. But Sir Spencer has ideas of his own, and among the chorus girls who have come to see Pitt off to the States, Spennie has selected as his choice for a wife.

"Gentlema nof Leisure" is a comedy-drama, adapted from the stage play by John Stapleton and P. G. Woodhouse. Joseph Henabery directed. The supporting cast headed by Sigrid Holmquist is exceptionally strong.

AT THE REGENT.

"SALOMY JANE" FILLED WITH NIGHT SCENES OF BEAUTY AND CHARM

Night scenes among the great redwoods of Boulder Creek canyon, Northern California, are one of the attractive spectacles of "Salomy Jane," a Paramount picture, which is scoring heavily at the Regent Theatre this week. These inspiring scenes were made possible by a huge battery of electric arc lights and the achievement is one more step in the advancement of the technique of making motion pictures.

Gatherings of the Vigilantes by night, a stage robbery during a midnight storm, rides along roads bordered by black forests—all these are made possible by the use of electric lights.

The George Melford production, "Salomy Jane," is a tale of the romantic days of '49 when the law was crudely meted out by the Vigilantes, an organization of settlers formed to keep the peace.

"The Man," a stranger in Red Dog, falls victim to this primitive justice. He is accused of robbing a stage coach and when about to be led away to be hanged is kissed good-bye by Salomy Jane, an impulsive daughter of a pioneer. The stranger escapes but Red Pete, also charged with the hold-up, is hanged. Returning to thank Salomy for her kiss, the man meets an old enemy, Baldwin, and in the struggle Baldwin is shot by another man in ambush.

Fearing that he may be blamed for Baldwin's death, he attempts to escape by wearing the clothes of Madison Clay, Salomy's father. Larabee, a rough pioneer and an enemy of Clay's, shoots at the man by mistake. In the ensuing fight Larabee is wounded. Dying, he confesses that Baldwin was the stage coach robber. The love romance of the stranger and Salomy ends happily.

Jacqueline Logan plays the role of "Salomy Jane," while George Fawcett takes the part of "Yuba Bill," a stage-coach driver, and Maurice Flynn portrays "The Man." They are supported by a strong cast of some of the most talented players of the screen.

AT THE ROYAL.

"SQUIBS WINS THE CALCUTTA SWEEP."

The Famous English Comedy hit, Squibs wins the Calcutta Sweep" Opens at the Royal Theatre To-night.

Never in the history of motion pictures have so many screams of laughter been assembled in six reels. From the opening scene of Squibs, the flower girl on Piccadilly Circus, and Sam 'Opkins, the rummiest blighter in all England, "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" is one continuous roar of laughter. And the story tells how Sam 'Opkins, a poor London bloke, buys a ticket for the famous Calcutta Sweepstake for the sum of five bob, and the ticket turns out to be worth 60,000 pounds. Oh what a head the pub-keeper has when he finds out that he has sold the lucky ticket to Sam 'Opkins for the measly price of $1.25. Sam 'Opkins makes the same mistake, and gives the ticket as a present to his daughter, Squibs, the little flower girl on Piccadilly Circus, and through extremely ludicrous and remarkable breaks of luck Squibs resists all efforts on the part of the pub-keeper and other clever Johnnies to buy the ticket back for a few pounds.

At this point in the picture the actual fun is only beginning, and by a strange turn of fortune we find Squibs, Sam 'Opkins and P. C. Charlie Lee on the boulevards of Paris, where their adventures with coppers and mysterious Frechmen with rummy whiskers and affectionate French demoiselles, are such as to bring tears of joy to the most blase theatre goer. The Paris scenes were all photographed right on the spot in the French city, the director having taken his entire company across the channel in order to film this funniest part of the pictures, and some remarkable scenes of the boule vards, the streets of Paris, and other interesting sights in this famous French city, are woven into the story. We also find the familiar and beloved spots of Piccadilly Circus, Trafalgar Square and other London haunts. Of course these sights, seen as a background for ludicrous and uproarious comedy are invested with the humorous light and interest which make them a delight to watch.

"Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" has met with remarkable success in England, and created no less of a sensation when it opened in Toronto and other Canadian centres.

IN MEFORIAM

CHILDS—In loving memory of my dear sister, Clara Maggie Childs who died Oct. 18, 1918.
Sleep on dear sister, thy work is o'e
Thy willing hands will toil no more
It was God's will, I will not complain,
But hope some day to meet again,
Five years have passed since the sad day,
God called the one I loved away
Forget her! No, I never will
As years roll on, I love her still.

WEDDING BELLS

HARRINGTON—DAVIS.

A quiet wedding was solemnised in St. Peter's Cathedral on 2nd October, when Sadie Mary Davis, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Charles Joseph Harrington, of Ennismore. Rev. P. Costello performed the ceremony. The wedding march was played by the church organist, Miss L. Hurley, who also sang during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by a cousin of the bridegroom, Miss Violet Harrington, was attired in a stylish suit of navy tricotine, grey hat with blue ostrich plume, and grey shoes and stockings. The bridesmaid was Miss Marion Flood of Ennismore, who wore a handsome grey canton crepe gown, with grey hat. Mr. Edward Harrington acted as best man for his brother.

After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served to the bridal party at Hooper's Palm Room, after which the bride and bridegroom left for a motor trip, returning to Peterborough in the evening, where supper was served to about twenty guests. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Harrington left for Ennismore, the bride travelling in a dress of peach-coloured canton crepe, heavily beaded, the bridesmaid wearing black and midnight blue satin costume.

Sisters of the bridegroom, Misses Roselea and Mary Harrington, prepared a midnight fowl supper for forty guests, when speeches were given by Messrs. Edward and Stephen Harrington and Patrick O'Reilley. The evening was spent in the enjoyment of music and dancing.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts, including a cheque for $200.00 from the bridegroom's father, and a sunburst of pearls from the bridegroom, who presented the bridesmaid with a signet ring and the best man with a set of gold cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrington will reside at Maple Grove Farm, near Curve Lake, after a fortnight's visit with friends in the township.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — = New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 18. — (United Press.)—Speculative sentiment was encouraged to-day by the impressive buying which came into the stock market at precisely the same levels where support was encountered in July, August and September and stocks continued the improvement, noticeably in Wednesday's late dealings.

Unsettled conditions affecting gasoline prices were offset by a decline in domestic crude production for the week ended October 13th which amounted to 32,000 barrels daily.

Baldwin, American Can and other industrail leaders reached new highs on the recovery, while special strength was displayed by Davison-Chemical which gained nearly a point to 46 5-8.

Stocks moved ahead with some spirit around 11 o'clock when further short covering was induced by the markets indifference to professional pressure.

Steel went into new high ground on the present rally at 87 1-2, Dupont at 127 1-4, Studebaker at 96 3-4 and Baldwin at 117 1-2.

Based on its nine months' report, Sloss, Sheffield Iron and Steel heads the list of steel companies for per cent. surplus earned on its common with over $10 a share, equal to 45 per cent. of the present market price. Republic earned $13.73 a share on the common not taking into consideration the bank dividends on the preferred paid off. United States' Steel earned $6.83 for its common in first six months and for the nine months will probably show between 10.50 and 11.00 a share.

Gulf States' Steel may show over $10 a share for the nine months. Crucible for the 12 months ended Setpember 30th, reported $6.46 a share. Opening prices included:

Studebaker 96 1-8, off 1-8; Baldwin 117 1-8, up 1-4; Northern Pacific 51 5-8, up 3-8; Bethlehem Steel 47 1-2; American Can 92 3-4, up 1-8; United States' Steel 87 1-4, off 1-8; Southern Railway 32 5-8, up 3-8; Dupont 126 3-8, up 1-4; Anaconda 35 7-8, off 1-8; General Motors 13 7-8, up 1-4; Texas Company 40 5-8, off 3-8; American Telephone 123 1-4, off 1-4; Standard Oil of California, 51 1-8, up 1-8; Pan American B 35, up 1-8; Davison Chemical 46 5-8, up 7-8.

HUNGARIAN STATESMAN ARRIVES IN TORONTO

Count Albert Apponyi Addresses Empire Club

TORONTO, October 18. Canadian Press. — Count Albert Apponyi, for 50 years one of Hungary's greatest statesman, and who was head of the Hungarian peace delegation at Paris arrived in Toronto this morning. He was met by Col. J. B. MacLean, of Toronto, and Professor Mavor of the University of Toronto, who is an old friend of the Hungarian statesman.

Count Apponyi was informed that the inter allied reparations commission had unofficially adopted a resolution requesting the League of Nations to reorganize Hungarian finances along similar lines to those of Austria, commencing with a $24,000,000 loan to the stricken country on the international markets.

"That is great news," Count Apponyi said, "it is a matter of the greatest need and urgency, and this move marks the turning of the tide for Hungary."

The distinguished visitor addressed the Empire Club at luncheon, and this evening will deliver an address at the University of Toronto.

CONFERENCE STILL OPERATING IN DARK

Public May Know Something About the Deliberations Later.

LONDON, Oct. 18. — (Canadian Press Special Cable.)—Members of the Imperial Conference met at the Admiralty this afternoon to discuss the problem of Empire defence, a rumour is current in political circles, but without official confirmation that the Admiralty has submitted or intends to submit a scheme of naval defense involving the assistance of the Dominions and based on the principal of developments of the Dominion's naval forces. For the time being, however, the curtain of strictest secrecy has been drawn about the deliberations of the conference, although some official announcement may be available later. Meeting daily, both conferences are speeding ahead with the work before them and there is every expectation that they will conclude by the end of the first week of November. Premier Mackenzie King, it is understood, plans to remain in Europe for ten days or so and will later pay a visit to the battle fields.

TALK BY BISHOP O'BRIEN TO THE WOMEN'S LEAGUE

The first regular monthly meeting for this season of the Catholic Women's League was held last evening in the hall of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, with a fairly good attendance. The president, Mrs D. Legendre, occupied the chair.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was present, and addressed the ladies briefly, explaining the work expected from the League, and commending its aims and objects. His Lordship suggested the holding of literary meetings under League auspices, every fortnight during the winter season.

Reports were presented by the first vice-president, Mrs. B. Law, the second vice-president, Miss Teresa McNamara, and the corresponding secretary, Mrs E. Cronin. Two interesting papers were given by Misses T. McNamara and B. Giroux.

CANADA IS A LAND OF 'GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY' SAYS AMERICAN VISITOR

Robt. Nelson Carlisle Sees a Bright Future Ahead Of Britain's Greatest Dominion Once The European Situation Is Stabilized.

GIVES SOME ADVICE

"You have become so accustomed to the phrase 'land of golden opportunity,' as applied to Canada, that you have come to think of it merely as a catch phrase, useful in government pamphlets," said Robert Nelson Carlisle, M.A., interviewed on Canadian National Train No. 98, on the way to Belleville this morning. Mr. Carlisle is an actuary and a statistician, and the author of a brochure on "The Resources of the Nations." His home is in New York City, but he has travelled extensively, having left Yokohama shortly before the earthquake occurred. It is his intention to visit the Maritime provinces to observe the fishing systems.

"Canada is a land of unequalled opportunity," continued Mr. Carlisle. "I zig-zagged through the western provinces, often taking slow trains, and oftener still going off on side trips wherever I thought I could find something worth noting, and the sight of hundreds of threshing machines pouring out their millions of bushels of grain was nothing short of overwhelming. The bed rock of prosperity in Canada is the wheat harvest, but it seems to me that you are as badly off as we are in that the farmer is not getting a fair trading value for his produce."

Wheat Land Condemned.

Mr. Carlisle, who interestedly noted the farms and buildings adjacent to the track; remarked on the many acres of logged over land dotted with charred stumps and useless in its present condition. "Here we are in the heart of the greatest province in the Dominion," he said, "and there"—indicating several acres of gently sloping land—"is ground to raise 300 bushels of wheat going to waste because of the lack of energy required to dynamite the stumps."

Not many farms, this keen observer noted, are made as comfortable as they might be, especially in the western provinces. Water, he said, is often carried in pails for distances up to a quarter of a mile, when it might be piped into the farm house for a few dollars. Coal oil lamps are used almost entirely in lighting the western farm, despite the low cost of a lighting plant.

If these things were remedied, and life made more comfortable and attractive, farming would attract a great many more immigrants, and would keep its hold on the sons of farmers who now go to the cities to work in the over-crowde garages and railroads.

Ahead in Exports.

"The export trade from Canada," said Mr. Carlisle, is the greatest per capita of population of all exporting countries in the world. If we in the United States could boast of that we would blazon it to the world, but I have met many Canadians in prominent positions who are not aware of the high position their country holds in the foreign market. The value of Canada's export business is fourth in the list o fthe exporting nations in the world."

"Business on the North American continent is fundamentally sound, declared Mr. Carlisle, and the apprehension that exists is largely psychological. "For once the great Wall street guessed wrong, and now does not know just where it stands. The steel industry, which is somewhat of a guage to business conditions, had two bad years in 1921 and 1922, but this year has shown a steady improvement, and the business revival which many prominent financiers on the street prophesied would collapse at its crest, is holding steadily. I believe that a false optimist can do as much damage as a pessimist, but I believe too that conservative expansion and stick-to-it-iveness at this time will be well rewarde."

Future is Bright.

With the settlement of the European situation, Mr. Carlisle believes will come the crest of the boom for Canada and the United States.

"When Europe gets down to work, and earns real money," he said, "we shall get the lion's share of the orders. It is true that a great deal of the re-building orders will go to Britain but she in turn will look to us for a supply of the raw material.

The present industrial situation is healthy; Canada has had a wonderful crop, your grain mills are filled to the doors with orders, and your other factories are picking up. I would like to say that you have the greatest country in the world, and next to my own, of course, you have," said Mr. Carlisle, wtih a smile.

PRICE GAS IS HIGH IN CITY

Mayor of Hamilton Declares He Will Open Civic Gas Stations.

The city of Hamilton is discussing the advisability of opening civic gas stations with the object of bringing down the price of gasoline.

Mayor Jutten declared he could import gasoline to Hamilton at 14½ cents an Imperial gallon, and the vendors in that city are charging 28 cents.

In Peterborough the price is 4 cents higher than in Hamilton and 12 cents higher than in Aylmer, where the motorist can fill his five-gallon container for $1.00, as compared with $1.60 required here.

Figures supplied by the Canadian National Railway this morning indicate that the difference in freight rate cannot account for the large difference in price. The freight rate on gasoline from Petrolia to Peterborough is 36 1-2 cents per hundred pounds, which at the railway tariff computation at 7 pounds to the gallon is 2.55 cents a gallon.

The per gallon rate from Petrolia to Aylmer is 1.36 cents, a difference of 1.19 cents a gallon, against an increase in price of 12 cents a gallon.

From Petrolia to Hamilton the freight rate is quoted at 27 1-2 cents a hundred pounds, or 1.92 cents a gallon. The difference in hauling cost between Hamilton and Peterborough is only .63 of a cent, against a difference in price of 4 cents.

High Price Here.

Taking the rate quotation of the railway company as a basis, there does not appear to be any reason for the exceptionally high price of gasoline in this city.

In Hamilton, with the price now 4 cents lower than the Peterborough quotation, the matter has been made a civic issue, and the Mayor of the city intends to push his scheme for the lowering of the cost of gasoline to a figure which he considers fair.

CADILLAC AGENCY GOES TO A. BROWN

The Cadillac Motor Car, which is one of the most popular products of the General Motors Corporation in its class, is now being produced in Oshawa. Their recent announcement of the new models, V 63, equipped with four wheel brakes, has created a great deal of interest.

The representation of this well-known car in Peterboro and district has been entrusted to Mr. A. Brown, who has made such a success of the McLaughlin-Buick agency in this territory.

NEW TRIAL FOR S. MURRELL AND SLIM WILLIAMS

Charged With Slaying of Russell Campbell, They Will Face Judge And Jury in January.

JURY DISAGREED

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 19—(Canadian Press).—The jury in the trial of Sydney Murrell and Jack ("Slim") Williams, charged with the murder of Russell Campbell, of Melbourne, on April 11th, 1921, reported to Mr. Justice Wright at the opening of court this morning that they were unable to reach a verdict, and in view of their disagreement were discharged.

A new trial will be held in January next.

A Sleepless Night.

Following their failure to reach a decison last night, the jury were ordered locked up for the night, and they made their appearance this morning carrying their hats and coats with every evidence that they had passed a sleepless night.

On learning of their disagreement, Mr. Justice Wright said to the jury: "It is to be regretted that you cannot agree. Are there any points of evidence, any exhibits you would like to see, or is there anything in the case you would like to have explained?"

The foreman replied, "I think not, my lord. "That is the opinion of the jury."

New Lease of Life.

Mrs. Murrell, mother of Sidney Murrell, who with other relatives were in the court-room early this morning, did not realize that her son had been given a new lease of life by the verdict until newspaper men made known to her what had happened.

SINISTER HAND SEEN IN RUN ON DOMINION BANK

Felt There is a Deliberate Attempt to Shake Public Confidence.

There have been stories, that the run on the Dominion Bank was the result of the misunderstanding of a foreigner, when told there was no money for a cheque he had presented, the amount not being deposited by the party drawing the cheque to cover it, or that the bank "had closed," it being after three o'clock, banking hours, but there is a more sinister aspect given to the situation, as intimated by Premier Ferguson, that there is reason to believe the run was the result of a deliberate campaign to shake public confidence.

And it would not be a very great surprise if a further attempt was made on some other bank or banks by those unscrupulous enough to do so. It is the simplest thing in the world these days to start a run on a bank, no matter how strong, and the depositors in all the banks represented in Peterborough, should not be stampeded into a panic when they hear any whisperings of this kind, if they happen again. The only effect it has is to unsettle business and leave a suspicion that would not exist if the true facts were known.

If the people of Peterborough will put a quietus to any rumour that comes to them, and "sit pat" where they are in the banks of Peterborough, they will be doing a good deal to offset the evil some parties are endeavouring to bring about in this country.

CRIPPLES OF WAR STORM BAKERIES

Mob in Berlin Demand Bread to Keep Body And Soul Intact.

BERLIN, Oct. 19. — (United Press).—A mob of more than one thousand war cripples, unemployed Veterans, to-day stormed bakeries in the Berlin of Neu Koellen. Leaders demanded a loaf for each of the men and offered pledges of their government pensions in payment.

A BANQUET AND SOUVENIRS FOR BASEBALL CHAMPIONS

Six Teams Will Be Entertained as Peterboro City's Guests, And Group Photos Presented Individual Members of Title-Holding Organizations

The big baseball night to celebrate the achievements of the Peterboro baseball teams will take the form of a banquet to be held on the night of Tuesday, October 30th, probably at the Empress Hotel. Besides providing the banquet the City Council will present a group photograph of their team to each player of the Intermediate, Junior, Midget and Bantam champions and the Juvenile finalists. The clubs to be entertained will include the Central Ontario League team.

Such was the decision of the Reception Committee of the City Council, which met representatives of the Peterboro A. A. A. at a meeting held last night. Mayor Taylor and Ald. Holloway will have charge of the arrangements for the banquet.

Representatives of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association will be invited to attend the banquet and officially present the veritable pile of silverware and medals won by the champion teams, and donors of the trophies for city baseball honors will also be in attendance to do their share in the honors. The Spalding medals will be presented by a representative of the company.

IMMIGRANTS ON ELLIS ISLAND HAVE MIXED JOY AND SADNESS

Egyptian Family Made Crossing Three Times Before Getting in—Despair of Would-be Immigrant Who Arrives to Hear 'Quota Exhausted'

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—It is "Ellis Sigh Land" these days. That puzzling word "quota" is the reason. One thinks it is Finnish, Flemish, Portuguese, Italian or Turkish, as the case may be, while one is on the racing ship. When it is recalled that last month's quota was exceeded before the month was half gone by Albania, Australia, Belgium, Fiume, Great Britain, Greece, Palestine Portugal, Russia, Spain Syria and Turkey it is not difficult to picture the sighs of immigrants awaiting deportation. And when these eager incomers hear the derad words "quota exhausted," writes Anne Collins in the New York Tribune, there are tears, trembling lips, despairing gestures; sometimes it is the shrug of fatalism; often voluble argument and explanations in native tongues. Often, perhaps, the expression of bewilderment and fright.

The quota for Egypt is four a month. An Egyptian couple of the better class felt that America was the land of opportunity; that the United States provided educational advantages for their two children. Twice the family made the long, long journey from Alexandria, only to find that Egypt's quota had been exhausted. They tried it the third time. On the night of July 30 at two and one-half minutes past 12 they disembarked and were placed in quarantine. Of course, the first words uttered were, "Did we make it this time?" They were told that they were the first four in and were quite safe. The words were hardly out of the officer's mouth when another ship raced into port and shouts were heard:

"The Egyptian quota, is it filled?"

"Just."

A beautiful Russian, whose husband is in business in New York, spoke sadly.

"My husband is an Englishman, but expects to become an American citizen. Our children, Joseph, Miriam and Sidney, were born in Scotland, but I, alas! was born in Russia. My children may be admitted because the British quota was not exhausted when we arrived, but I am excluded because the Russian quota is complete. My husband is allowed to visit us three times a week, but what is that when we have been separated a year?"

Blue eyes set in a creamy face; straight bobbed hair; orange beads wrapped around a slender throat —a girl as chic as a magazine cover was Jessie Gardner. She laughed as she said: "I'm Scotch and I'm not 'near' —I came second class! Barrie is my favorite author; I loathe this waiting around . . . I expect to get a job as cashier in Minneapolis. . . I feel like a bauchel. That, you know, is Scotch for an old worn-out shoe! That is exactly what I feel like, what with all this uncertainty."

Better fed Than at Home

Some years ago Willa Cather wrote a novel, "My Antonia." The story of the immigrant's daughter has touchel countless hearts. Life for Miss Cather's Antonia was difficult but she had youth, health and, finally a home. Another Antonia waits on Ellis Island. She is little and old and bent ;she looks 90, but she says she is 70. Antonia Yachodva is her name; two daughters soon will come to claim her. Where do they live? She shakes her head, she forgets. But, yes, the city is pinned to her chemise. She fumbles tremblingly at the shawls wrapped around her; she looks appealingly, uncertainly, at a group of children who gather.

"Do not mind, Mother Antonia," they say. "Your children will come—and soon it will be time for soup" A guide, a kindly fellow, reassures her.

"Don't you know," he said, "that that old woman—in fact, 90 per cent

Orders For Arrest Of Saxon Cabinet Were Issued Today

DRESDEN, Oct. 19. (United Press.) — The orders for the arrest of the Saxon cabinet were in the hands of the Federal military here to-day, a government official said he was reliably informed.

Inflammatory speeches and organization of illegal Communist military groups, were said to be the charges.

The delay of the Berlin government in allowing the orders to be executed, was attributed to incompleteness of military preparation.

LLOYD GEORGE CHANGES PLANS

Cannot Stand "The Pace That Kills" in American Campaigning — Pities U.S. Public Men.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 19. — (United Press). — Two weeks of American "campaigning" have done more to undermine the health of David Lloyd George than all the nerve-shattering, health-wrecking years of the war and the multiplied problems of the reconstruction period.

Lloyd George says so himself. "This," he said, "is the pace that kills. No wonder your public men die if they must undergo this sort of thing as I am told they must."

"By this sort of thing," Lloyd George meant the rear platform speeches, public luncheons, dinners and receptions, "circus parade" rides through crowded streets, shaking hands, writing autographs, posing for photographs, and still more photographs, and all other incidentals of a speech-making tour in America.

Day Basis Tour.

As the result of a very definite fear that an attempt to carry through the programme mapped out for his tour would cause a breakdown or at least a serious straining of his physical resources, Lloyd George's tour is to-day on a "day basis." Plans are not being made longer than twenty-four hours ahead and not that far in most cases. From now until he sails back to England Lloyd George will commit himself only to such engagements as he feels he can keep without hurting himself.

Camp in a Tent.

Lloyd George and Dame Margaret, his wife, who is the guardian of his health and well-being, explained that the reason he was able to come through the war with its terrible strain on physical and mental powers without the serious impairment of his health was that ever so often he would steal away to Wales for a few days and get close to his mother earth. On these occasions he would go away into the mountains, perhaps, with his wife, and the three of them would camp in a ten for a few days. Lloyd George always returned from such holidays thoroughly recovered and ready for anything, he said.

BAVARIAN GOVT. IS EXPECTED TO CAUSE TROUBLE

Threatened Increase Of Tension Already Prevailing Between Berlin And Munich Indicated

SITUATION IS ACUTE

BERLIN, Oct. 19. — (Canadain Press.)—It was reported here to-day that the dispute between Federal Government and the Government of Saxony will be solved by the former displacing General Von Mueller, commander of the Reischwehr in Saxony, whose mode of procedure is said to have been too harsh. This action, reports add, will be accompanied by a rebuke of the Saxon government for its interference in politics of the Republic.

UNPLEASANT PROSPECTS

The Stresemann Government is also confronted with another unpleasant prospect, for it is reported to have decided to recall General Von Lossow, commander of the Reichswehr in Bavaria, who it appears, it is said here, to be unable to withstand the domination of Dr. Von Kahr, the Bavarian dictator.

Such action, it is considered, is likely to meet with strong opposition from the Bavarian government, and thus increase the tension already prevailing between Berlin and Munich.

MAY USE TROOPS

Although nothing has been officially announced regarding measures Minister of Defence Gessler proposes to take in connection with Saxony, it is understood the government has determined that the "Proletarian Hundreds" shall be disbanded by the Saxon police, and if the latter are not up to the task then troops will be used to put extremist military organizations out of business.

A TRENT WATERWAY EXHIBIT, NEW YORK

Requests Ontario Government to Show Live Fish At the New York Motor Exhibition.

At the well attended meeting of the Trent Waterway Development Association held last Tuesday in the Y.M.C.A., Orillia, presided over by Mr. G. K. Fraser, of Burleigh Falls, it was decided to again petition the Dominion Government to place an exhibit of the Trent Waterway in the National Motor Boat Show of New York at the Grand Central Palace, from January 4th to 12th.

It was thought this would be a particularly good opportunity for advertising this district, owing to the fact that the New York Motor Show will be held during the same week. With this end in view the Association is also petitioning the Provincial Government, with the object of securing an exhibit of live fish at the Show, and the fish, particularly maskinonge and bass, to be presented to the New York Aquarium at the close of the Exhibition.

Through the efforts of Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., the Association was advised that the model of the Lift Lock which is owned by the Imperial Tobacco Co., will be at its disposal for the exhibit in New York.

Publicity.

The secretary reported on his visits to the Rochester and Detroit Yacht Clubs during the past year, expenses being paid by the Provincial Government, which he considered should result in considerable increase in traffic on the Waterway netx year.

In consideration of the big demand for charts of the entire System, and also descriptive matter, it was decided that in the event of securing permission from the Dominion Government for the use of charts, that a book be published by the Association, which would include theirin small size charts and descriptive matter of the System. The last descriptive booklet issued on the Trent System was printed in 1911, in which charts were included that are now out-of-date and therefore of very little value.

The issuance of this new book will be financed by the advertising secured, and also by the subscriptions from municipalities. 15,000 illustrated pamphlets will also be issued.

At the conclusion of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was extended to the Town Council and Board of Trade of Orillia for the luncheon, and to the Y.M.C.A. for the use of their rooms.

Alderman Stocker Given Souvenir of His Cricket Days

Alderman Walter Stocker was presented this morning with a souvenir which he prizes very highly. It is the cricket bat wielded so skilfully by the late Charles Halliday, son of Dr. J. T. I. Halliday, and vividly recalls to the Alderman's mind exploits on the cricket field here in which he and Charles Halliday shared years ago.

The bat, which bears the year stamp 1892, together with marks of many a heavy clout, was presented Ald. Stocker by Miss Halliday.

ANOTHER CLAIM FOR DAMAGES

Joseph Longo Claims His Property's Value Impaired by Hunter Street Bridge—Legal Committee Met.

The City Council's Legal Committee are getting quite "fed up with claims for damages by reason of the Hunter street bridge. At least that impression was conveyed last night by expressions dropped by members on receipt of notice from A. E. Dixon, that Joseph Longo, Hunter street expects to eb reimbursed by the city to the tune of $1,000 for alleged damages to his store by raising the grades of pavement and sidewalk fronting that property.

Chairman Ald. Holloway, sarcastically remarked that the city should enter a counter claim of $1,000 for improving Longo's premises instead of impairing their value; and, acquiescing in that sentiment committee will recommend that Council take no action regarding the claim.

Seeks Compensation

John Green's request that he be re-instated in enjoyment of his property, paving 34 feet frontage on lot two south of Wolfe and west of George streets, or that he be compensated on a just and equitable basis, enjoyed committee's attention for a short time. Enquiry into the pros and cons of this claim resulted in decision that Mr. Green be invited to meet Mayor Taylor, Chairman Ald. Holloway and the city clerk to discuss the situation.

Mr. Green contends that he has been deprived of the use of this property by encroachments on and obstructions of the highway, where his lot is situated by C.P.R. and Canadian Packing Company's sidings.

In this connection it appears records show that in 1900 the C.P.R. paid $150 and got in return a release from all claims up to that date. Subsequent to this date, however, the Dominion Railway Board issued an order granting the Canadian Packing Company permission to run a second siding along Wolfe street and across George street to their factory, and this siding is one of the obstructions Mr. Green complains of.

While awaiting the arrival of a committee from the P.A.A. to plan suitable recognition by the city of the achievements of its from champion baseball teams; the question of ways and means was debated.

All were agreed that a civic banquet should be tendered the victorious teams to which a limited number of the public would be admitted at so much per plate.

Ald. Maher inclined to the view that some sort of entertainment should be provided at the banquet, also that each of the boys would appreciate a souvenir in the shape of a group photo of his team. Prints of the original photo plates would cost $1 each, he believed.

Ald. Crowe thought Committee should definitely fix the amount to be spent by Council for this civic recognition —$100 or $125, say or which ever sum is needed—but costs could not be exactly estimated until agreement had been reached with the P.A.A.A.'s Committee as to full details.

Conclusions arrived at between the two committees will be found under another heading.

There were present Chairman Ald. W. T. Holloway, Mayor Taylor, Aldermen M. J. Maher, Nagel Phelan, Walter Stocker, Joseph Crowe and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing.

Examiner Came in For Its Usual Share of Criticism — Picture to Be Shown Here for Women Only.

FROWN ON JACK LAIT

The Local Council of Women held their first regular meeting for this season in the green room at the Young Women's Christian Association yesterday afternoon, with a good attendance of about thirty of the representatives of the affiliated societies. The president, Mrs. A. Mowat, occupied the chair, and opened the meeting with a brief, timely address of encouragement to the members, asking for increased interest and endeavor for the coming season.

Mrs. Mowat referred to the example of Wilberforce, the hunchback, who for over forty years labored unceasingly for the abolishment of slavery within the confines of the British possessions. Just a month before his death, Wilberforce was informed of the final victorious result of his four decades of struggle. "When we have spent as long as that in striving for better conditions, then it is time for us to be discouraged," said Mrs. Mowat, summing up with an admonition to the members to use their voices in spreading the influence of the Council to all the affiliated societies. "Let us talk more and try and contrive some plan to interest the ladies of the organizations we represent, to spread the work in our city."

Sundry Business.

Minutes of the previous spring meeting were read by the recording secretary, Mrs. Joseph Wearing, and the treasurer, Mrs. N. D. Seaton, reported that the response of the affiliated societies to the Council's appeal for contributions to a general fund had resulted in the sum of $99.35 being received, over and above the associated societies' fees for the National Council. Expenditures of about $62 left a balance of over $37 remaining in the general fund account.

The corresponding secretary, Miss S. A. Tomkins, read accumulated correspondence, and referred to a bulletin received from the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, in which education was stressed as being the greatest preventive of the dread disease. The restricted area plan with cattle, and examination by Government testers, was also mentioned. Statistics were quoted that showed different racial tendencies toward consumption. Among native-born peoples, those of Finnish and Irish extraction showed a death-rate from tuberculosis which was three times as high as that of other native-born inhabitants. Jews had the lowest percentage, Italians also were low in the list, while the negro showed a high figure.

One lady wondered if the low Hebrew death-rate from tuberculosis was due to the fact that their food was carefully supervised, and they always ate "kosher" meat.

A letter received from the Local Council's representative at the annual convention of the National Council reported a great deal of independent thinking manifested among the ladies who attended, with plenty of discussion and differences of opinion over various matters. The proposal advanced at the convention that a Home Economics Department at Ottawa should have a woman in charge had resulted in expressions of varying opinions, some of the ladies regarding it as inadvisable to specify particularly the supervision of a woman. One lady had remarked that she "always liked to see a father in the home, as well as a mother."

WOMEN PHYSICIANS

CAMBRIDGE, England, Oct. 19.—At a conference of the Head-mistresses' Association, where careers for girl students were discussed, incidentally, Professor Culshaw said the impression had been created that the medical profession was overloaded with women. It was not true to say women were in excess in the medical profession, he declared.

There was a need for women doctors; a good woman practitioner was bound to be a success. It offered big plums, because large numbers of women practitioners were earning incomes of four figures, the professor said.

DELUGE OF TROUBLES THREATENS TO ENGULF BERLIN'S GOVERNMENT

Population Heading to Financial Disaster as Mark's Value Shrinks—Socialists Fear Loss of Popularity as Communists Lead Masses.

SAXONS DEFIANT.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—With the situation in the Ruhr and Rhineland rapidly approaching a condition of an acute social and economic crisis, with Saxony's Socialist-Communist Ministry continuing its defiance of the Central Government, and with Bavaria having severed diplomatic relations with Saxony, Chancellor Stresemann's Coalition Cabinet is confronted with issues which will afford it an early opportunity to make use of the dictatorial authority voted it by the Reichstag in the Emergency Power Bill.

While these are the outstanding developments which harbor elements of immediate danger, the internal situation in its entirety, especially with respect to the financial cataclysm, toward which all classes of the population are heading through the further depreciation in the value of the mark, is automatically constituting itself a contributory factor which is destined to have a decisive bearing on the further course of events.

With the dollar soaring around the nine billion mark notch today a new period of price chaos set in, and with it the Government's helplessness with respect to the adoption of speedy reformatory measures became more emphasized.

Socialists Restive.

The Social situation growing out of the complete wreck of the nation's economic structure is making the Socialist Party restive, in that it apparently no longer is able to cope with the clamor of the masses, whose cause is being espoused by the more militant of the Communists. This phase of the situation already is seriously reacting on the United Socialists Party's attitude toward the coalition government, in which it is holding three cabinet posts, and as the party, as such, also is demanding the repeal of the state of emergency act in an effort to placate the rampant Saxon Government, it is viewed as not improbable that the Socialist Party will instruct its members of the cabinet to retire from the Government.

Such an eventuality in all probability would wreck Chancellor Stresemann's present cabinet, unless President Ebert in the emergency should give Stresemann carte blanche authority to wield his dictatorship with out heed of party or partisan sentiment.

Radicals May Unite.

Herman Mueller and Otto Wells, who are the traditional emissaries of the Socialist Party when important assignments are decided upon, today had a lengthy conference with President Ebert. Representatives of the Socialists and Communists also have been conducting informal deliberations looking toward the creation of a "proletarian working alliance," although the Ultra-Reds have put forward such extreme demands that the conferences have been postponed for the time being. The conferences, however, are significant as representing the first serious attempt to unite both the radical parties on a common platform, especially as the Socialist Party, as such, up to quite recent times has openly and repeatedly asseverated its refusal to make common cause with the Communists.

Since the German Bolshevists joined in the formation of the Saxon Ministry the previously existing line of cleavage has become considerably blurred and there is an insistent demand in the ranks of the Berlin Socialists that the Central Government forthwith assume a more conciliatory attitude toward Premier Zeigner and his Red Saxon regime.

Communist Delegates.

By way of laying stress on its defiance of the Berlin Government the Saxon Government to-day announced the appointment of two rabid Communists, Herr Boettcher and Herr Heckert, as Saxony's delegates to the Federal Council. Herr Boettcher, who is Minister of Finance in the Zeigner Cabinet, is a young Communist who has just returned from Moscow, where he is reported to have taken "a course of instruction" at the Soviet's fountain-head. Herr Heckert is Minister of Economics, and as such holds a portfolio of strategic importance to his party in view of Saxony's pre-eminence as an industrial state. Both these ministers have refused to take the oath of allegiance to the Republic's constitution and this is being made a cardinal feature of the present controversy with the Berlin Government. A section of the bourgeois press demands that both men be forced to swear fealty to the Republic, or retire from office.

The Central Government's failure to obtain even a small degree of accommodation from M. Poincare, the French Premier, in connection with its programme for a resumption of the Ruhr industries also has gravely complicated matters for the Stresemann regime, and official quarters appear to be wholly without counsel or wisdom with respect to a solution for the problem of the Ruhr and the Rhineland.

TURKS EXCLUDED NEW AGENCIES

Press Director Says Action Is Meant to Stop Foreign Propaganda.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 18.—Beginning on October 5, the sale or introduction of news into Turkey by foreign agencies was prohibited. The official Anatolian agency, like its prototypes all over central and eastern Europe, assumes a monopoly of the distribution of news in Turkey. This displaces the British and French agency services, which are now confined to the function of outgoing news.

During the war and the Allied occupation it has been the custom of the Embassies or High Commissions to distribute to the local press, vernacular and foreign language, their official wireless news service. This is stopped. Embassies may make public news relating to their own countries, but the publication of news now supplied relating to another country is prohibited.

Zekarias Bey, Director of the Press, said this was done to stop propaganda in Turkey. He is not yet certain of the Government's plans relating to the source of the Anatolian agency's foreign service. They are testing out the European agencies .He admits they may have to use them for a while, but the plan contemplated is to have native Turkish correspondents and bureaus in all the world capitals.

Havelock-Owned Horse Wins Splendid Record.

HAVELOCK, October 19.—Now that the fall fairs are over, it is interesting to note the splendid record of Mack R., the five-year-old bay horse owned jointly by Messrs. Charles Armstrong and Steve McQuaig of town.

Mack R. is a grandson of Dan Patch, and was bred by Bobbie Patch, and was purchased from a Mr. Reid of Shannonville. His season's racing record commenced at Tweed in July last when he won third place, but on 8th August at Madoc races he won first money.

Commencing at Peterborough for the fall fair racing he won first and third places on 13th and 14th September.

In succession he won first money at the Stirling, Coe Hill and Marmora Fairs. At the Campbellford Fair he was third, but on his last appearance at the Tweed Fair he won first in his best race of the season, winning over those good horses Hal E. and Leo Stewart, of Tweed, and Maud Murphy of Tamworth. This race took five heats to decide, as in the first Mack R. only secured second place and third in the second heat, but made a "garrison drive" of the event by coming out and winning the next three heats. This is really his first summer racing, although last year he had some matinee racing experience.

COUNTERFEITERS ACTIVE

BUDAPEST, Oct. 19.—(Associated Press)—Tempted by the high rate of exchange for American money the counterfeiters in central Europe are concentrating their talents on the dollar. The Budapest police have discovered a wholesale scheme for the distribution of genuine two dollar notes which have been cleverly transformed into two hundred dollars notes. The press that produces this transformation is supposed to be in Warsaw. Counterfeits of this sort have been found in 16 different European towns.

The little girl stepped directly in front of the car, which was going about 20 miles an hour. Mr. Williams, who is a careful driver, is completely prostrated by the accident, which was entirely unavoidable upon his part. An inquest will be held next Thursday.

NO INFLATION IN OLD COUNTRY

Rumor of Artificial Money in Britain Denied in Statement.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Great interest has been aroused recently by reports that the Government was considering a policy of currency inflation as a remedy for the present serious unemployment which some economists had attributed to too rapid deflation, but if the Government ever contemplated such a change of policy it would seem that it has thought better of the idea. Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, Postmaster General in a speech at Colchester to-day emphasized the need of a sound currency stem and said of the rumors that the government intended to manufacture artificial money that there was not the slightest ground for such fear; it had no such intention.

Frederick Goodenough, chairman of Barclay's Bank, in a speech at the same meeting, made it clear that he is opposed to any policy of inflation. He pointed to Germany as an instance of the danger of unchecked inflation and declared his belief that a policy of delibertae inflation would not cure the evils of unemployment, nor secure commercial prosperity for the emipre. On the other hand, deflation was a matter requiring handling with the greatest care and with due regard to the conditions existing elsewhere.

It was to Mr. Goodenough that Minister of Labor Barlow in a speech last week erroneously attributed the plan for currency inflation.

'OTHER HALF' OF NEW YORK TELL HOW THEY LIVE

65,000 Actions to Evict Tenants This Year — Woman and Children Work to Pay Landlords.

BABIES LACK FOOD.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18—Stories of whole families suffering from malnutrition because they could not pay the rent and buy food too; of mothers starving that their babies might eat; of tenement districts where the average infant was 6 pounds under weight; of "safety-last" fire escapes and gouging land-lords—all because of the shortage of homes and exorbitant rents — were related before the State Housing Commission today.

Judges, welfare workers, professors wage earners and mothers with babies-in-arms, appealed to the commission to recommend renewal of the emergency rent laws, so that when they expire next February thousands of families may not(be thrown upon the mercy of landlords.

The climax is a steady recital of conditions variously described as horrible inhuman, indecent, and deplorable, came when the commission asked Justice Aaron I. Levy, president of the Board of Municipal Court Justices, if he would suggest any amendment of the emergency rent laws.

Wipe Out Rent Laws

"Yes,' answered the Justice. "I would wipe out the rent laws and abolish the landlords' right to summary proceedings and ejection of tenants. He still would have the common law to fall back on.'

Contrary to previous testimony presented by Dr. Samuel Lindsay, professor of social legislation at Columbia University, an emergency exists in the housing situation and there is needless widespread suffering. Justice Levy declared. He cited that during the first nine months of the year landlords brought action to evict 65,000 families who were unable to pay rent increases demand ed of them and unable to find other homes.

17,000 Rental Cases

Seventeen thousand rental cases now await jury trial in Greater New York, and it will be years before the courts can dispose of them the Justice said. Last year, he asserted 86,000 such cases were tried in the greater city.

There were stories of whole sections, hitherto devoted to homes for the moderate-salaried man or wage earner, which were now exclusive high-priced districts, or rooming-house centers herded with humanity at so-much-a-room-a-month, after thousands of families had been crowded out.

Exclusive "Bohemia"

Greenwich Village, with its antiquated tumble-downs, gas lights and absence of plumbing has thus become an exclusive residential section for wealthy disciples of "Bohemia," it was testified "Old Chelsea," once reserved to the families of moderate salary-earners, has become an overcrowded rooming house section.

Women and children of the East Side are becoming wage earners in rapidly growing numbers; they have to help husbands and fathers pay the rent, the commission was told. Settlement workers testified that more and more under-nourished children were being taken from unsanitary, crowded tenements, to be fed and given charity sunlight and air.

Is That So?

Some doubting Thomases have been casting aspersions on the authenticity of Gilda Gray's "hula hula" dances, to the effect that they are not original or anything. But to this, Gilda makes neat rejoinder, saying she should worry or something like that, because she's copied her stuff from South Sea originals. So there!

CAPE BRETON MINERS STRIKE TO COME UP

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.— (Canadian Press.)—Cape Breton miners' strike may be included in the investigations of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the strike of the steel workers, if the relationship between the two disputes is shown. This was decided upon at a preliminary meeting of commission here this morning when the scope of the investigation was decided upon. The commissioners are holding daily sessions here acquainting themselves with industrial conditions in the Cape Breton district.

NEW YORK WETS ATTACKED FROM TWO QUARTERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The Federal Government to-day fired a double-barrelled charge into "wet" forces alleged to be drenching New York and New Jersey with illicit liquor.

With one charge, Federal agents, working under direct orders from Washington, brought down a bag of eleven alleged conspirators, rounded up in the Hotel Pennsylvania and elsewhere and alleged to have been using $80,000 to bribe prohibition agents not to stop the brewing of real beer in New Jersey; not to interfere with the converting of industrial alcohol into strong liquor and to block the flooding of New York and New Jersey with beer from rivals in Pennsylvania.

Saloons "Wide Open"

With the other barrel the Government fired a broadside into the first of several thousand saloonkeepers alleged to be running wide open in New York City since the repeal of the State prohibition law. Fifty-four suits were filed in Federal Court to padlock these alleged speak-easies, under provisions of the Volstead Act and United States Attorney Hayward added that more actions would be brought as soon as clerks could pound out the complaints on their typewriters.

The round-up at the Hotel Pennsyvania came at the close of day. Federal prohibition and Treasury agents, on appointment made with alleged bribers, waited in several rooms and took their guests into custody one by one as they arrived. It was stated that a regular weekly bribe of $4,500 was accepted by one of the agents before making the arrests.

Among the men arrested was J. Harry Foley former secretary to Senator Edwards of New Jersey.

The men are charged with conspiring to give bribes to influence the conduct of prohibition agents.

Alcohol Trade

It was explained that denatured alcohol was redistilled into grain alcohol and used for manufacture of whiskey, that grain alcohol which was to have been denatured was instead used to make whiskey and that money was paid to permit these practics and to protect those carrying them out.

With the $4,500 received by Federal agents to-day, the total of bribes seized by the Government forces and confiscated was $84,500, according to United States Attorney Hayward, who estimated the total given in bribes since the conspiracy originaed was about $700,000.

Shocking Condition

Mr. Hayward said baring of the alleged conspiracy revealed a "shocking and sensational state of affairs in New Jersey, and possibly Pennsylvania." State and other officials, politicians and persons high in social standing, he said, were in league with the bootleg conspirators.

He declared he was powerless to act against these corrupt officials except insofar as they came within his jurisdiction, but he said he intended to submit all his findings to Attorney General Daugherty for direct action.

All of the eleven were arraigned before Federal Commissioner Boyle late in the day and released on $15,000 bail each for a hearing November 1. All were well-dressed and appeared at their ease as they heard the charges read. A bonding company furnished bail.

Saloons Card Indexed

When, earlier in the day, United States Attorney Hayward filed his injunctions suits to close alleged wet saloons and cabarets, he said he had a locality card index of some 1,100 open saloons. He estimated that there were probably more than 2,000 in Manhattan and the Bronx alone, and declared they had taken on a new lease of life since repeal of the State prohibition act.

"The old saloons," he said, "are with us still and have taken a new lease of life since they defeated the efforts or the State of New York to put them out of business and this great State has surrendered to them."

Stubborn Cases of Constipation

A famous physician says:— "Put three heaping teaspoons of bran into a cup of boiling water. Spoon it up slowly. Half a cup of this wet, hot bran twice a day between meals will relieve the most stubborn case of constipation." Tillson's is pure, natural bran, and therefore the most effective bran you can use.

GASHED HIS THROAT AND CUT "HALO" ABOUT HEAD

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 18.—Amherstburg police are seeking friends of James Troy, 43 years old, who was found dead in that town yesterday with his throat horribly gashed. After inflicting several wounds, any one of which, doctors say, would have been fatal, the man sank to the floor while his life blood formed a hideous halo about his head. A razor, freshly sharpened lay beside the body. Provincial police here took charge of the case to-day. Troy is thought to be a native of Louisville, Ky.

It is said the matching and fitting of artificial eyes is a most subtle and difficult operation.

CARE IN THE WOODS.

The terrible forest fires raging in the Michigan woods and the fact that in Ontario there has been a long period of dry weather that has left the forests in an unusually—for this time of the year—inflammable condition, should not be lost sight of by the hundreds who will shortly be leaving for their northern haunts.

The conditions are ripe for a series of fires in Ontario such as have caused so much damage in Michigan.

With hundreds of hunters scattered through the Northland it will be necessary for each of them to remember that they have a responsibility in regard to their conduct.

Upon their actions may depend whether or not Ontario is to escape a devastating forest fire or a series of them.

A lighted match cast carelessly to one side, a glowing cigarette or cigar butt thrown into leaves or moss, a camp-fire left burning when the camp is deserted, or half a dozen other similar exhibitions of carelessness by members of hunting parties, will start a blaze that might before it was extinguished wipe out many square miles of valuable timber and quite possibly cause many deaths as well.

Under the present conditions all huntsmen should be doubly careful this year.

A LOSING GAME.

Following up the article on immigration which appeared in this column of the Examiner last evening, it should be of interest to know that during the nine months ending with June last 67,000 immigrants entered Canada, while during the same period 100,000 people left this country to become residents of the United States.

That represents a net loss of 33,000 people in nine months.

The problem that faces the Government seems to be not only getting people here, but keeping them here.

And it is a very serious problem, towards the solution of which not only the Government, but everybody else interested in the future of Canada should direct their best efforts.

How can the drain on our population because of the lure of the United States be stopped?

In the final analysis perhaps by making the conditions on this side of the line so comfortable and prosperous that there will be no motive in taking up life elsewhere.

That would involve many things, including economy in our Government machinery so that the burden of taxation could be reduced and the development of markets for our products both from our farms and industries so that there would be adequate returns from agriculture and sufficient orders for factories to keep our workers steadily employed at adequate wages.

We are extending our immigration machinery, redoubling our efforts to secure more people from overseas.

And meanwhile we are losing thousands of our citizens, people already familiar with our methods in Canada and who need no Canadianization.

So far, according to the figures, it has been a losing game.

ENLISTING THE CITIZENS.

Mayor Fred. H. Briscoe of Chatham is trying out a new plan by which he hopes to overcome the apathy in civic affairs that exists in his town as well as generally in Ontario.

Chatham's Mayor declares that the citizens do not take enough interest in municipal affairs, a charge that has often been made by the Examiner against Peterborough people and never denied.

Accordingly, he proposes to call a public meeting to discuss several civic problems of importance, and particularly to formulate a scheme to induce business men to seek election to public office.

Through the interest stirred up in this manner Mayor Briscoe hopes there will be an awakening on the part of many citizens to the fact that they have been neglecting their own best interests by failing to pay attention to the question of civic administration, and at the same time some of the business men of the community will be aroused to a sense of their responsibility as citizens.

The Chatham plan may not succeed in getting anywhere, but at least it is an attempt to deal with a condition that exists in practically every community in Ontario, a condition of indifference that keeps good men out of office and leads to municipal mismanagement, extravagance and inefficiency.

Calling the citizenship as a whole into consultation is a new method, and perhaps Mayor Briscoe has hit upon a plan that will produce results.

At least he deserves credit for trying.

CHEERS NOT ENOUGH.

With no desire to interject a discordant note into the arrangements for honouring the city's baseball teams who have brought four Provincial championships to Peterborough this year, it may be remarked that the occasion is an opportune time to point out that some of the interest that is now being manifesed in the winners would have been of much greater assistance had it taken the form of larger patronage at the gate during the championship series.

It must be admitted that in this respect Peterborough has not proven worthy of one, let alone four championships, when a study is made of the support accorded teams in other towns.

Not one of the four teams who won out was given enough patronage to pay its expenses, and the three winners who met outside teams will have to apply to the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association for financial assistance from the fund set aside for that purpose, thus advertising to the Province the fact that although Peterborough's boys and young men were skilful enough to win four out of the six Provincial titles Peterborough people did not take enough interest in any of them to see to it that the gate receipts at home at least equalled expenses.

One team in its last home game in the Ontario series drew a gate of $6—a striking enough proof of what the Examiner means.

The unparalleled record established by the various local clubs this season and the interest now evidenced in their exploits should lead to a general resolve that in future there will be better co-operation on the part of the public.

Cheers when the season is over are welcomed, but they do not buy uniforms or bats or balls or pay for motor cars, railway fares and hotel expenses.

That is a point to be remembered now as preparations are being made to do honour to the clubs who have brought so much honour to their home city.

"THE FORESTS OF CANADA."

A very valuable report entitled, "The Forests of Canada," has recently been issued by the Dominion Forestry Branch. The report contains forty-three pages of text, and gives a detailed resume of forestry activities in Canada.

Many people are indeed prone to associate too little significance to the vast forest wealth of Canada. We have been liberally endowed with forests, and have even been termed the "softwood storehouse of the British Empire," yet we should always bear in mind that together with the fact that we have been abundantly endowed with forest wealth we have the added responsibility of the care and preservation of these forests. Therein lies the important point, and it is a Government responsibility. And that responsibility must be measured by the extent of our resources, not by the extent of our lumber industry, or our population, or any other factor.

The loss of timber in Canada by fire, fungi and insect pests is enormous—running into millions of dollars annually.

Under the caption, "Consumption Compared With Increment," the report states:

"Though the loss of merchantable timber by fire and disease has been very greatly reduced in recent years as a result of the organization of forest-protective services, it still constitutes a serious drain on the forest resources. The annual consumption of standing timber for use amounts to about 2,600,000,000 cubic feet. At a very low estimate, fire destroys annually about 800,000,000 cubic feet of merchantable timber and the young growth on 1,300,000 acres. During the last ten years the destruction occasioned by the spruce budworm has averaged 1,345,000,000 cubic feet per annum besides the injury from bark-beetles and other insects. The loss due to fungi is not known, but is undoubtedly large. It may be safely estimated that the forests of Canada are being depleted at the rate of upwards of 5,500,000,000 cubic feet per annum. With about 475,000,000 acres of potential, but at present unmerchantable, forest land, an average increment of 11.5 cubic feet per acre would supply this amount, but in view of the destruction of young growth which occurs and the deterioration of the forests, and the soil, caused by repeated fires, there is little ground for the hope that this increment is being produced."

With their attention directed on the same subject the Empire Forestry Conference passed the following resolutions:

(8).—Forest Fire Protection.

"The widespread damage to timber, property and life resulting from uncontrolled forest fires is a menace to the economic well-being of the British Empire, and constitutes the greatest single deterrent to the pactice of forest management. The conference endorses the report of its Forest Fire Protection Committee, believing that the forest fire problem, though difficult, is capable of solution if the forest authorities receive full public support and the requisite assistance from the Government."

(9).—Silviculture; Canada.

"In view of the disastrous effects of fires, insects and fungi upon the supplies of standing timber, and of the results of the existing logging methods in impoverishing the forests of their valuable species and in impairing their regeneration' this conference strongly recommends the application of more effective silvicultural methods to the Canadian forests and commends the report of the Committee on Silviculture to the earnest consideration of the Dominion and Provincial Governments and of the timber industry."

The various Canadian Governments have a great responsibility in connection with the efficient administration of our forests. And it must also be borne in mind that every man, woman and child in Canada has his or her part to play, especially in regard to forest fire potection.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It begins to look as if the next United States presidential campaign would be Fordized.

Chief Brown of Port Hope is doubtless giving thanks these days that all crooks with revolvers do not shoot straight. And probably the hold-up man who made his escape is grateful that all policemen do not shoot accurately either.

The Department of National Defense is said to be reducing the number of its employees. There are other departments at Ottawa that could do the same thing very easily and with good results.

The main thing about any inquiry into the Home Bank fiasco is that some light shall be thrown upon the question of who got the money of the depositors and shareholders.

A test case is being made of the legality of racing at Niagara Falls. There are more of such charters in existence, and it is just as well for Ontario to find out just how valid they are.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 19. — With 2,021 cattle weighed up on Wednesday about 1,000 head was left for disposal yesterday and the balance of the week. Yesterday morning's run was 169 cattle, 23 calves, 166 hogs, and 415 sheep and lambs. Of yesterday's cattle five loads were Westerns. These were a good class of butchers and one load of heifers were almost in the baby beef class. For this bunch the sellers hoped to get 5 3-4 cents a pound. The wind-up of the week will be very slow.

Only 40 fresh native cattle were in yesterday morning, but these were mostly of the poor butcher class with which the market is already congested.

In the estimation of most of the commission salesmen the change in prices this week means a decline of 75 cents a cwt. in the entrance for grades of butchers below the choice and good variety. For these two there was little perceptible change except perhaps an easier feeling in consequence of the lower prices for medium and common butchers.

The week closes a little earlier for calves. A heavy shipment of Eastern grassers came in on Wednesday and sold in bulk at 5 cents a pound. The choice colt is still in demand, but local veal consumption is falling off.

Lambs were none too strong yesterday morning and buyers were not disposed to pay more than 11 cents. A shipment of 700 lambs from Montreal were still on sale yesterday. These are not as good as the domestic lambs. The sheep trade holds steady.

Some hogs went to the packers last night at their bid prices of $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b. The differential between f.o.b. and fed and watered is now to be lowered from 60 to 50 cents. On shop hogs and heavies the discount now made is $1.50 a cwt. from the select price, which is 80 cents over the thick smooth.

IMMENSE ENGINE ON LINDSAY LINE

C. N. R. Mogul Has a Capacity of 3,800 Tons.

LINDSAY, Oct. 19.—A huge C. N.R. locomotive of the Mikado type is at present engaged in grain hauling operations between Lindsay and Midland, and will shortly be seen in Peterboro. The engine, which bears the number 3416, is equipped with labor-saving devices that for ingenuity are quite remarkable. The first improvement is an automatic stoker for feeding coal to the fire box. A short, powerful conveyor brings the coal up slightly below the level of the cab floor, where a couple of small scoops brush it into the fire holt. The conveyor and scoops work automoatically and are under complete control of the engineer. In addition to this equipment, there is a heating system whereby all water is fed to the boiler at the boiling point by being conveyed through a system of heated pipes and a small heater. Thus there is no loss of fuel energy and no slackening of power when handling the tremendous loads this engine is capable of moving. It is estimated that this locomotive will lift 3800 tons. The first train taken out of Midland consisted of 41 cars, representing 2800 tons.

PROBLEM SOLVED.

HAVANA, Oct. 18.—(Associated Press)—There are many strange sights for the tourist to see in Havana, but perhaps one of the most surprising comes when he visits a Cuban home and sees the family automobile sitting in the front hallway.

In all of downtown Havana, with its population of some 400,000, space is at a premium. Streets are narrow and houses are joined together and are flush with the sidewalk. When the automobile came along many families who could afford one did not feel able to pay garage rent, or did not care to have their machine kept blocks or even miles away. Practically all of the front entrances have wide double doors, and so the cars found parking space indoors, usually near the staircase. They can be seen in scores of homes, but the oils cans, extra tires and greasy cloths usually found in an American garage are tucked away out of sight.

CAMPBELLFORD HAS SPLENDID LIBRARY

Stocked With 5,000 Volumes And All Latest Magazines — Well Patronized.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 19. (By a Staff Reporter.) — With a dozen well filled shelves, containing 5,000 volumes, the Campbellford Library is well equipped to serve the community. All the latest books are on hand, Miss A. M. Campbell said, and the institution is growing in favor.

There are 1500 borrowers on the books of the library, who read at least 2000 volumes a month.

The library rooms are prettily decorated with flowers and ferns, and here and there throughout the building are animal pictures, showing the extent to which the institution caters to the children.

Opening at 2:30 in the afternoon the rooms are crowded with children who swarm in after school.

There is a section devoted to books for the school children, and the very little tots have picture books of absorbing interest.

Stories Read Aloud.

Miss Campbell gives special attention to the little children, reading aloud to them from their favorite books and directing them to the best volumes.

Another praiseworthy innovation by the Librarian is the placing of seasonable books on a table near the door, where they attract immediate attention. In anticipation of Hallowe'en the table is now laden with boks of games, plays, charades and kindred subjects. Books are available describing cheap and effective fancy costumes, and the latest magazines offer a variety of menus suitable for the festive season.

Many people use the Library in the evenings when they gather to read the latest newspapers. All the best of the up-to-date magazines are received, the Library Board being generous in the provision for this work.

Saturday is the busiest day in the circulation department, two or three hundred books being taken out on that day. Miss Campbell would like to see more use made of this department. "If people only knew the pleasure and benefit contained in the shelves they would soon become members," she declared.

INDIANS CLAIM THEY'RE DEPRIVED OF OWN CASH

CHICAGO, Oct. 19. — (United Press).— Methods used by the United States Government in handling funds belonging to American Indians were attacked by spokesmen for the "Original Americans" at a convention recently held here.

Indian spokesmen complained that of $35,000,000 held in trust by the United States Commissioner of Indian Affairs not a dollar is available to the Indian owners without the Commissioner's consent. Further, they say, although the Government holds their money in trust they have no proof of ownership.

"During some of the past hard times for us Indians," said Robert J. Hamilton of the Blackfoot tribe, from its reservation in Montana, "many of our people who were among the owners of this money in the bank found themselves in great need, some in actual want. But they were denied the use of their money."

"An agent in Oklahoma," he declares, "defrauded Indians under his supervision of more than $100,000. Private investigators brought about this agent's conviction and he is serving a prison term now, but no recovery of the money was made, so far as I have been able to learn."

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Oct. 18.—Great interest was shown in the annual meeting of the Cobourg General Hospital Board held in the council chamber here, President J. D. Hayden presiding. It was decided to leave the election of officers over until Oct. 31, when it is expected that the new charter will have arrived changing the name of the hospital from the Cobourg Cottage Hospital, as it was known at its modest beginning, to the Cobourg General Hospital.

The report of the treasurer, Col. Neil F. MacNachtan, C.V.O., showed that the hospital had received the past year from the Ontario Government $1,124; from the Town of Cobourg, $500; from Hamilton township, $150; from Haldimand township, $125; from patients, $14,005; from subscriptions, $215, and $350 from other sources, making a total of $17,200. The expenditure was slightly more than this.

Nucleus of Building Fund

The hospital, through donation work, such as Mrs. Rowe's garden party, Mrs. Chas. Espeer's work, etc., and some bequests has now $7,000, the nucleus of a building fund.

Reminiscences

President Hayden in reviewing the past said that Cobourg's first efforts towards a hospital were made in 1897, when a committee took over the Old Folks' Home, and incorporated the undertaking under the name of the Cobourg Cottage Hospital. The fees were at first 50c. a day and were raised a little later to $4.00 a week. In 1914, the new hospital having its home in the present fine building, began work and has a record that it may well be proud of. The building and equipment cost $80,000. The average cost per day for each patient last year was $3.25. Mr. Hayden referred to the fact that the hospital had lost a number of good friends during the past few years, the late Messrs. W. H. Rowe and W. F. McCook, Capt. Walker, General Charles Fitzhugh and Mrs. David McNaughton.

The lady superintendent, Miss Walsh, presented a comprehensive report of the work of the hospital. The nursing staff consists of an assistant superintendent, a night supervisor and twelve nurses in training.

The nurses who graduated in August when public exercises were held in Victoria Opera House, were Misses Ethel Bradley, Maud Manley, Edna Lean, Hilda Wannamaker and Myrtle Little.

The hospital has cared for 491 patients during the past year, and has had 227 surgical operations, and 255 X-Rays.

At present it is necessary to rent rooms for the night supervisor and the domestic staff, and a wing or nurses' residence will soon become a necessity.

Matron in Hospital

Miss Burke, matron of the Counties Children's Shelter at Port Hope, has been confined to her home for several weeks as the result of an accident that happened last summer, when she was attending the Baptist picnic at Gore's Landing. The injury was to her foot and knee and she has suffered a great deal of pain ever since. Miss Burke has been removed to the Port Hope Hospital for treatment. She has many friends here who hope for her recovery.

Carried Still With Him

In the early days of the settlement of this country it was quite customary for a travelling tailor to go from house to house in order to make up the fall cloth, which the housewife had diligently woven into suits for her menfolk or for a travelling cobbler to carry his outfit with him and arrived at a farm house, make shoes for the family all around. But the district of Deseronto can go one better than all this, according to press reports. There, it is suspected a certain Indian has been carrying a still around with him from home to home, for the purpose, it is presumed, of making liquor for the Indians on the reserve. Recently, however, he came under the rude hand of the law. The still, it is stated, was found in a bag and was known as a threshing machine still.

CHICAGO MARKET.

CHICAGO, October 19 (Canadian Press). — Reported arrangements by which Russian exports of grain will be financed by leading British firms had considerable effect yesterday in bringing about lower prices for wheat. The market closed weak at 1-2c to 1 1-8c net decline with May $1.10 1-2 to $1.10 5-8. December $1.05 1-2 to $1.05 5-8 and

In corn, the outcome ranged from 7-8c loss to 1 3-4c advance.

Oats finished 1-8c to 1-4c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 12c.

It was asserted that three large English concerns would work in conjunction with the Russian Co-operative Associations in selling grain already in Russian port elevators, and that Norway had contracted for 7,000,00 bushels, her entire needs for the season. At first, the Russian reports were given only moderate notice and by many traders were regarded as propaganda. Later, the wheat market, helped by strength in prices for nearby delivery of corn, scored something of an upturn, but the effect failed to last, and with selling orders coming in a rush during the final half-hour, wheat underwent a sudden new tumble and closed at the day's bottom figures.

In connection with the late weakness of wheat, gossip was circulated that Russian shipments this week would total 2,000,000 bushels. Other bearish factors yesterday related to Argentina offering wheat cheaper than Canada and to prospects of enlarged acreage of domestic winter wheat south-west, Kansas in particular.

Forecasts of clear, frosty weather eased the corn market so far as December and later months were concerned, but October and November deliveries showed a decided upward tendency, owing to smallness of immediate supplies.

Oats lacked aggressive support.

Provisions went lower with hogs.

"WE DELIVER ANYTHING ANYWHERE ANYTIME"

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Oct. 19.—The public school teachers of Inspectorate No. 2, Northumberland and Durham, Col. J. W. O'Dell, Inspector, held their annual institute here, nearly every teacher in the inspectorate being present. Mr. S. J. G. Nichols, a well-known teacher of Hamilton Township, made an able presiding officer.

The outstanding speaker of the convention was Dr. Redcliffe of Toronto, who gave a most able and interesting address on "The Imagery of Poetry," and later in the sessions exemplified the teaching of a lesson in literature to a fourth book class, putting into practice in the lesson the theory taught in the lecture. The lesson selected was "Vitae Lampada," (The Torch of Life), by Newlott. Dr. Radcliffe is the efficient principal of Toronto Normal School, and his presence was a help and an inspiration to the sessions. Nearly all of the remaining work of the sessions was taken by the public school teachers, who evinced a keen interest in the success of the institute.

Mr. H. Serret, Brighton, representative of the Department of Agriculture for Northumberland County, gave a practical address on the educative value of the school fair, giving valuable hints as to the manner of conducting these valuable and popular adjuncts of school life, which have come so strongly to the front during the past few years. It was shown that this inspectorate had a large number of successful school fairs this season.

Mr. M. W. Sparling, Cobourg, another speaker from outside the school ranks, gave an interesting address on radio.

Col. J. W. O'Dell is the public school inspector for Inspectorate No. 2. The election of officers shows quite a change, as a number of new officials were appointed to positions as follows: President, Miss Eva Denike, Grafton; Past President, Mrs. S. J. G. Nichols, Cobourg; Vice-President, Miss E. Bell Rogers, Ida; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. C.S. Gummow, principal of Cobourg Consolidated Public School; Librarian, Miss Clara L. Scott, Cobourg; Executive, Miss May McCaughey, Cobourg; Miss Benette Taggart, Lakeport; Miss Anna Betty Russell, Millbrook; Miss Louise Montgomery, Cobourg; Miss Olive Elsey, Port Hope; Auditors, Miss Clara B. Scott, Cobourg; Miss Catherine B. Lern, Cobourg; Delegate on Northern Ontario trip, Miss May Lerrior, Cobourg; Alternative, Miss Mary McCaughey, Cobourg; Delegate to Empire Educational Association, Miss Ida Leslie, Crafton; Alternative, Miss Catherine B. Lern, Cobourg.

Among the teachers of Inspectorate No. 2 besides other teachers, including those from Peterborough, enjoyed a trip to Rochester, where they visited the schools of the Flower City, and compared methods of teaching. Their business session was a unique one as it was held on board the steamer Ontario.

No. 1 Inspectorate

Ninety-eight teachers assembled at Fort Hope for the annual institute of Inspectorate No. 1, Durham County. This was a very large attendance. The chairman of the Port Hope School Board, Dr. W. W. McKinly, extended a hearty welcome. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. A. Elliott, of St. John's Church, Port Hope. Miss Flora Galbraith, president, ably fulfilled the duties of chairman.

Highly instructive was the address given by H. G. Park, B.A., D. Paed., Peterborough Normal School, who took as his subject, "Some Common Fallacies in the Teaching of Grammar." "Difficulties in Lesson Procedure in Literature," was another subject ably treated by Dr. Parks. Lieut.-Col. E. E. Snider gave a talk to the teachers at the Friday afternoon session.

An outstanding event of the institute was a lecture on migratory birds, illustrated by moving picture films, which was given in the Royal Opera House, Port Hope, by Mr. Harrison Lewis, Chief Federal Migratory Bird Officer for Ontario and Quebec.

Miss Gertrude Petry addressed the convention in voice culture. Miss Helen Morris took up class singing in schools, and Miss E. M. Hanna, school nursing. Each of these timely subjects was ably treated and of deep interest. Another helpful feature was a demonstration of chorus singing by a class conducted by Miss Phyllis Smith.

Supreme Court Writ

Miss Lillian N. Redfern, of Colborne, has issued a Supreme Court writ, it is stated, against the Canadian Pacific Railway for $5,000 for damages for alleged injury to plaintiff and plaintiff's personal property, through alleged negligence of the defendant's employees. It is stated that plaintiff, on her way in her motor car from her home in Lakeport to her office in the village of Colborne, was run down on the highway by the defendant's train in August last. It appears that Miss Redfern was driving in a coupe from Lakeport to Colborne and was struck by a work train that was backing up, the car being damaged, it is stated, and the occupant receiving injuries.

Local and Personal

Mr. Scott Hutchison has sold his house and lot at Mt. Carmel to Mr. Smith, of Toronto.

George McLagan, who resides near Brighton, had a sale of his farm stock, implements and household effects last Saturday. On Monday, Mr. James Cavan, Brighton Township, sold his farm stock and implements. Mr. N. Montgomery was the auctioneer in both cases.

Potatoes Sell For $1.25

The price of potatoes has taken quite a slump in this district this week, and they are selling now for $1.25 a bag. Those offered on the market here are generally also of good quality. A number of residents are taking advantage of the low price to stock up for the winter season. Digging is in progress on most farms and the potato crop is turning out well.

Some Real Estate Transfers

James E. Whittington, of South Monaghan, has sold to Samuel Newhall part of lots 17 and 18 in the 3rd concession.

The administrator of the estate of the late George Minipi has sold to Frank L. Eagleson part of lot 4 in the 6th concession of Hamilton Township.

Nathaniel E. Merriam has sold to Alexander M. Campbell parts of lots 3 and 4 in the 9th concession of Hamilton Township.

John Kulgir has sold to Onni Jaskara part of lot 12 in the 5th concession of Haldimand Township.

Local and Personal

Mrs. C. M. Doheny has gone to Toronto to spend a few weeks before going to Seabreeze, Florida.

Mrs. J. H. McDowell and family have returned to Calgary after spending the summer here at the home of her father, Mr. A. J. Hewson.

A fruit shower for St. Joseph's Orphanage, given by the Catholic Women's League on Tuesday night, was a great success.

Bicycle thieves have been quite active here, but the stolen wheels have, for the most part, been quickly recovered.

A Community Orchestra

Hamilton Township Community Orchestra is a very live musical organization. On Monday evening they went out to Centreton to assist in the musical programme at a fowl supper that was held there. The orchestra is composed of local musicians who have spent considerable time and patience in ardent practice in order to play together with the most satisfactory results, and their labors have been abundantly rewarded. They are much in demand for community gatherings.

Another Sale

Mr. Rayner Kinsman, of Hope Township, had a sale of stock, consisting of horses, cattle and pigs. Mr. Fred S. White was auctioneer.

Bought Orchard

Mr. F. G. Bouskill has purchased the fruit from the ten-acre orchard in Hamilton Township, owned by Mr. William Goheen. The estimated pack is about six hundred barrels, and it is stated that the price paid was $1,000. The apples are spies, with some Baldwins, greenings and russets.

Medical Men Met

The Hastings County Medical Association held its annual meeting and banquet at the Gilbert Hotel, Trenton. Dr. L. J. Austin, of Kingston, was chief speaker, and Dr. Mather, of Tweed, presided.

"A COLOSSAL UNDERTAKING"

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Oct. 19.—The Evening Telegram, in an editorial captioned "A Colossal Undertaking," says:

"The announcement of the nomination of an English Barrister by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to conduct the investigation into the irregularities which led to the downfall of the Squires administration again diverts the attention of all to our public affairs.

"Beyond the fact that a thorough investigation has been promised, little is known either with regard to the constitution of the Committee of Investigation, the extent of its powers, the nature of the charges with which it will have to deal, or against whom they are made. There is no purpose served, so far as we can see, in withholding this information from the public, particularly in view of the fact that as the Imperial Conference takes place in October, the Prime Minister will be absent in all probability during the early stages of the enquiry.

"It is generally agreed that such an undertaking is beyond the capacity of one man who has no knowledge of the intricacies of our cumbrous departmental machinery, and that it would be asking too much of anyone, however brilliant his qualifications, to expect him to become familiar with them in the short time at his disposal. The appointment of two local men to the Commission would help materially to make the enquiry thorough, and would assist the nominee of the Home Government in arriving at a just and satisfactory decision. Surely it will not be confessed that we cannot produce two men sans peur et sans reproche.

"There are many Departments from which reports of leakages or irregularities, or culpable blunders have emanated, and from revelations during the past week it would appear that the warning, which should have been sufficient to ensure a rigid supervision in the public offices, has not been seriously taken to heart.

"In the past there has been great laxity in dealing summarily with civil servants who have been found guilty of malpractice. The law should be allowed to take its course, and dismissal from office should be the inexorable rule of the service. If respect for the public funds is not observed by some, then they must be made examples of promptly, in order that others may see that such conduct will not be tolerated.

"There is a wide field for the investigators to cover, and every facility must be given them, even though it result in their condemning our whole Departmental system."

NO SENSE OF PROPORTION

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (Associated Press)—Children four years old have little or no sense of proportion, is the conclusion of Miss Stella McCarty, associate professor of education at Goucher college, following a test over a period of three years to gauge the natural artistic impulses of children between the ages of four and eight.

More than 40,000 drawings submitted from all parts of the United States were examined in the test, the result of which has been announced here by the committee on conservation and advance of the Methodist Episcopal church. Children were allowed a free choice of subjects, which included more than 900 topics, with a very wide range.

"The majority of the girls submitted drawings of houses and domestic things, while the boys drew on their imaginations more and constructed pretentious buildings, bridges and mechanical devices," said Miss McCarty, who also is chairman of the Kindergarten club of her city.

"After carefully studying all the drawings, I came to the conclusion that children four years old have little or no sense of proportion. At eight years, about one-fourth of the number had developed it. Only one-eighth of the drawings showed any signs of perspective."

RAILROAD QUESTION FULL OF DYNAMITE

Consolidation Plan Has Been Dropped and U.S. Legislators May Sidestep the Entire Situation.

(By LAWRENCE MARTIN)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (United Press).—Had he lived, President Harding probably would have recommended to Congress enactment of a bill providing for compulsory consolidation of the country's railroads into a few great systems. That was the backbone of his plan for settling the railroad question, one of the most troublesome and the most interwoven with politics with which Congress will be called on to deal this Winter.

Now, however, the consolidation plan has been dropped. It is deemed unwise to press it at a short session, so crowded with other business and so dominated as this one promises to be by foes of consolidation, either compulsory or voluntary.

There are strong indications now that Congress will sidestep the whole business and leave railroads for the next administration to deal with. That makes the coming session an opportune time for all the conflicting groups, Republicans, Democrats and Progressives, to do a little educational work on the country by putting forth their own particular ideas about handling railroads.

Must Have a Program

In any event, if the administration permits the railroad question to be opened, it must be ready with a program, otherwise it will be on the defensive against vicious attacks on the Esch-Cummins law by both Democrats and Progressive Republicans. If the administration does not present a complete railroad plan in substitution for the Esch-Cummins law it will be in the position of defending the law, a very dangerous proceeding from the point of view of those who want the labor vote.

It also will find the progressives ready with plans. La Follette probably will try to force consideration by demanding a revision of the present law's rate-making provisions and elimination of the Railroad Labor Board. But those changes would merely serve to start a fight, without promising to bring about a solution. La Follette will introduce a railroad bill, which probably will lie in committee all session.

This transportation business is so appalling complicated that very few members of Congress have even the slightest comprehension of it. It is too big for most of them. They assimilate a few facts about some angle of it and talk from that angle alone. There are very few men in Congress, if any, who can view the question broadly enough and impartially enough to give it unbiased consideration.

Needs Fighting Heart

Senator Cummins, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, is probably more crammed with railroad information than any man in Congress. But Cummins is old and not so progressive in his viewpoint as once, and is interested deeply this year in being elected president pro tempore of the Senate. He lacks the aggressiveness to get things done, and whoever solves the railroad problem in Congress is going to need a good fighting heart, ability to "take it" as well as to give it, infinite patience and a six-cylinder brain that never misses.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is working out a consolidation plan. That may be submitted to Congress this winter. It may be considered wiser to with-hold it or to submit it without any recommendations for action.

Meantime, nobody is satisfied with the present railroad law, and the result of that dissatisfaction is found in defiances of the Railroad Labor Board, demands for changes in rates, mountains of work for the I. C. C.—and heaps of generalities by politicians who blame other politicians for conditions and promise bravely to remedy them if given a chance by the people.

TYPES OF BUILDINGS

LONDON, Oct. 19 (Canadian Press)—The many types of building now in course of erection in the British Empire Exhibition Grounds at Wembley, provide an interesting and instructive study in art, utilitarianism and national ideals. No two buildings are alike; each Dominion has asserted itself along lines of architecture different from each other, with national characteristics predominating.

The Canadian structure will probably attract attention as much for the artistry employed in its design as for its embodiment of Canadian national ideals. It is situated at the head of the main artery leading from the northern to the southern bounds of the Exhibition. By an adherence to ancient Greek lines of architecture the artist has succeeded in endowing Canada's edifice with a dignity that will make it conspicuous in the Exhibition.

In addition to merit of design, the pavilion will be imposing for its size also. It has a frontage of 415 feet, a depth of 280 feet and a height of nearly seventy-five feet, making it nearly, if not quite, the largest Dominion building to be erected at Wembley, and requiring for its completion about seven hundred artisans and workmen.

Immigration is Increasing Rapidly

OTTAWA, Ont. (United Press).—Immigration into Canada is increasing rapidly. Newcomers entering the Dominion in the three months ended July 1 numbered 40,952, an increase of 60 per cent. as compared with the corresponding quarter last year, according to figures compiled by the Department of Immigration and Colonization.

For the first six months of the year, the figures show total immigration was 53,592. June was the banner immigration month, with an increase of over 38 per cent. over June, 1922.

Of the immigrants who entered Canada during April, May and June, it is shown, 22,553, or more than half of the total came from the British Isles as compared with 11,695 during the corresponding period a year ago. Entrants from other countries numbered 12,026 as against 4,972 in the same quarter of 1922. Immigration from the United States for the three months was 6,393.

Students Working For Education

By GUS M. OEHM

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN (By mail to United Press).—Many German university students, for the first time in history, are working their way through school.

This American way of getting an education was something absolutely unheard of here, until recent months, when the mark deteriorated so rapidly that many students who a few months ago had sufficient to pay their way through the term now find themselves with nothing.

More than 230 students in Berlin alone are working as waiters, more than 200 play in orchestras, others work as ushers, porters and night watchmen—just like the undergraduates back in the state and other universities in the United States. Unnumbered others have obtained part-time employment in banks and other business houses.

Many people see a move in the right direction as a move toward democratization in higher education in Germany through such innovations as student work, lack of requirements for a lot of expensive clothing and so forth.

Swiss Are Tackling Unemployment Problem

By HENRY WOOD

GENEVA (By mail to United Press).—Switzerland has recently tackled the unemployment problem by means of the obligatory professional training route.

As a result of these tactics she ranks along with the United States and England as one of the three countries that have done more to solve the question of unemployment resulting from the war than any other nations.

Following the close of the war Switzerland quickly found that the great bulk of the unemployed were either amongst the ranks of unskilled labor or amongst those in trades and employments that were overdone.

To remedy this, professional courses were started in all the cantons, and especially courses for trades and occupations for which there is always the maximum demand. The Swiss federal government paid one-third of the cost of these courses and the cantonal governments the remainder.

The latter had the right to oblige unemployed to attend these vocational courses extending to them at the same time enough financial help to keep them going until they had perfected themselves in some new skilled employment and had found work.

The cantons which are now maintaining these obligatory vocational courses are Zurich, Berne, Lucerne, Glarus, Solothurn, Basle, Appenzell, St. Gallen, Aragau, Schaffausen, Vaud, Neuchatel and Geneva.

The principal courses maintained are in horticulture and arboriculture, domestic economy and housewifery, practical building, concrete work, masonry and joinery, carpentering, soldering and tin work, electricity and engineering, bookkeeping, languages, theory of commerce, shorthand and typewriting, hygiene, nursing and care of children.

Up to the present time over 25,000 unemployed have been obliged to take these courses, the great bulk of them finding work immediately afterwards or efore completiug their courses.

The cost to the Swiss federal government has been about $100,000, the other $200,000 being paid by the cantonal governments.

DRAIN LETTUCE.

Drain your lettuce in a wire salad basket after washing it so that the water will be drained off and not dilute the salad dressing.

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF THIS MEDICINE'S WONDERFUL POWER?

Hundreds of men and women say they are amazed at its wonderful effects on disorders of the Stomach, Kidneys, Liver, Bowels and Blood. How does it wipe out disease?

"I started to belicve my case was impossible to c ure," says Mr. John Veine, Woodside, N. S. "After years of suffering from stomach trouble, got relief in short order," says Mr. James Archibald, Halifax, N. S. Hundreds of others who tos sed about on Beds of Pain are now well.

Marvelous Banishment of Pain and Disease

If you have suffered agonies from rheumatism and neuralgia during the past months; if dyspepsia has gnawed at your vitals and tortured you from day to day; if kidney and liver troubles threaten to end your life; if poisoned and impure blood has shown its effect in boils, pimples and skin eruptions; if sleeplessness and nervousness have made you miserable and despondent; if headaches, sideaches and backaches give warning of approaching disorders; constipation, rheumatism, or stomach disorders have you in their grasp. If you have tried everything under the sun to get relief, and have failed, don't you think it is time you gave Dreco a chance to lift you out of the slough of misery and set you again on the path of perfect health and the full enjoyment of life, which is every man's and woman's God-given right?

Dreco seems to be the most talked of medicine today. Almost everywhere you go—in homes, offices, shops, factories, clubs and meeting places of all kinds, you are almost sure to hear someone tell of the wonderful results secured by this "Miracle Medicine," as it has been called. Scores who doubted the powers of this marvelous reconstructant and invigorant have been prevailed upon to give it a trial, and are now singing its praises.

Dreco is made entirely of natural herbs. It contains no minerals or anything to hurt the system.

Here are just a few signed statements, selected at random, from the many which are being received daily from men and women everywhere. Read them carefully and see how true they ring.

Spent Almost $1,000.

Nova Scotia Man Tells of Wonderful Relief Dreco Gave Him.

"I started to believe my case was impossible to cure, as I have spent almost $1,000 on my stomach and bladder," says Mr. John Veine, Woodside, N. S. "After talking with the Dreco expert at Kinley's, Limited, I decided to give Dreco a trial. What a happy day that was for me. The first bottle did me more good than anything I had ever taken before. I noticed a big improvement in just a few days. The pain in my bladder is gone; it had been there for years. My case was of long standing, but Dreco seems to be just what I needed, as I feel so much better in every way.

"My stomach and liver were in bad shape. Things I'd eat would sour in my stomach. I had to be very careful with my food, otherwise I was troubled with terrible gas. I always had a bad taste in my mouth. I was bilious and spots would float before my eyes. I was troubled with constipation. I did not sleep well and my nerves always seemed to be on edge.

"Dreco has made a new man of me, I have gained four pounds. That's why I so highly praise and recommend Dreco for anyone suffering as I did should give Dreco a trial."

Dreco, the great herbal remedy, acts on the stomach and aids it in digesting the food, stops the formation of gas, relieves constipation, strengthens the kidneys, rouses the liver and relieves billousness, headaches, bitter taste in the mouth, heartburn, coated tongue, and purifies the blood, thereby banishing rheumatism.

Such praise as this, told in the straightforward, honest language of a man, cannot but convince even the most skeptical, that here is a medicine for which the world has long been waiting.

Read This Remarkable Story.

"My stomach troubled me for years. Gas would form after meals, and things I'd eat would sour," says Mr. James A. Archibald, 61 Queen street, Halifax, N. S., a trackman in the employ of the Government.

"My liver was in bad shape, spots would float before my eyes, and I used to get terrible dizzy spells. I would get up in the morning feeling just as tired as before going to bed. I never felt rested. I was nervous and didn't sleep well. My appetite was very poor.

"You can imagine how happy I am since taking Dreco, and I am free of these troubles. I never have gas in my stomach now. I can eat whatever I want, my bowels act regularly. I sleep well and feel like a new man. I am highly pleased with it."

No, it is not a miracle; just another case where science steps in to save a human being after all hope has been abandoned.

Dreco is credited with hundreds of cases similar to the above. Cases where everything else had failed, and this new medicine discovery was tried as a last resort.

Dreco is not a cure-all; it is not a miracle worker, but there are very often cases of organic disorders that will not yield to a rational scientific treatment. That's why so many are telling grateful stories of the good this medicine is accomplishing. Try a bottle yourself and see. Do it today.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, J. E. Birks, Campbellford, and by a good druggist everywhere

EASY FOR SWEEPING.

A long-handled dust-pan is more expensive than the short-handled variety, but it is much easier to manipulate and makes the job of sweeping much less arduous.

SKUNK EDGING.

Wide bands of white skunk edge the collar, cuffs and bottom of the coat of a suit of creamy tan wool in which threads of yellow and black are interwoven.

YELLOW EFFECTIVE.

Yellow is used most effectively this fall in millinery and in gowns. The all yellow crepe frock, beaded with pearls or rhinestones, is one of the best things designers have to offer for evening.

PITCHED FORWARD OVER WHEEL, DEAD

Guided Auto Through Crowded Street in a Dying Condition.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Frank Alton, a salesman, carried a "safety first" motto pasted on the windshield of his car, and observed the caution at all times. Yesterday, however, he quit driving for all time, but left behind an example of carefulness to every automobile driver.

Driving into the city, he had reached the densely congested boulevards, when death tapped him on the shoulder. He had suffered heart disease for several years, and knew what the summons meant. Despite his failing strength, his mind remained clear, and he managed to guide his car through the mass to the curb out of the danger zone, and to stop the engine. Then he pitched forward over the wheel, dead.

HUNGARY GRATEFUL TO BRITISH EMPIRE

Will Never Forget Debt She Owes To Britain And Dominions.

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press)—Count Albert Apponyi Hungarian Statesman, speaking last night in Convocation hall made an eloquent plea for support of the League of Nations. The moral force in the world he said, should not be underestimated.

The classes suffering most in Hungary and in Europe are the intellectuals, he said, the salaried class to a smaller extent the wage earners and the farmers, especially the small farmer.

He referred to recent reports which seemed to show that Hungary would receive treatment similar to that accorded to Austria. From the beginning of the action the Hungarian Government took to secure a foreign loan and the suspension of the foreign mortgage, it was supported generously by the British and the Italian Governments, he said. Hungarians had national defects, he said but ingratitude was not one of them, and the great nations of the British empire never would have to complain of that ingratitude.

NO JOHNS OR MARYS MARRIED IN CAMPBELLFORD THIS YEAR

But There Were Several Williams and Maudes — Thirty-Six Deaths in Village This Year and Sixty-Four Births.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 19. — Campbellford parents, have no particular choice in the matter of names for their children say the records in the Town Clerk's office. Of the 64 babies born in the town this year, 27 were girls, 17 boys and the remainder stillborn.

The biggest number of girls receiving the same name was 3 and the honors go to Helen. Florence and Doris were close with two each and the remaining 20 had each a distinctive name. They were:—Dorothy Anna Verna, Edna, Vera, Marguerite Katherine, Agnes, Marion Maisie Grace, Audrey, Lorna, Loretta, Margaret, Betty, Mary, Alberta, Burmuda, Inez, Mildred, Viola, Lois and Violet.

Less diversity was shown in the naming of boys, the old favourites John, Walter and George being bestowed upon three babies each, trailed by Douglas, Donald, and Charles with two each. Other names were Kenneth Derrell, Lionel, Austin, Francis, Percy, Matthew, Murray, Robert, Clarence and Benjamin.

Marriage Preferences

Not a single John or Mary has succeeded in making a match in Campbellford this year. Only two young men choose young ladies of the same name, Maude being the favored name.

Slightly less particular were the young ladies who took two Williams and two named James. There have been 14 marriages in the town up to yesterday.

Here is how they grouped: Harold and Francis; Russell and Helen; Charles and Dorothy; James and Isabella; Ernest and Annie; Robert and Mae; Alfred and Maude; George and Irene; William and Mildred; Leo and Loretto; James and Maude William and Estella; Alex. and Almeda; and Simon and Pearl.

Well Mated

According to the dictionary of names the joining of George and Irene in the matrimonial alliance should be peaceful and prosperous, the former meaning "good husbandman" and the latter "peaceful." The linking of Alfred and Maude should be productive of success, perhaps not so tranquilly earned, Alfred meaning "good counsellor" and Maude "mighty battle maid."

It is impossible to forecast the result of the marriage of William "resolute" and Mildred, "mild threatener."

During the period January 1 to October 18 there were 36 deaths in Campbellford.

LLOYD GEORGE PAYS HOMAGE TO THE MEMORY OF LINCOLN

Placed Wreath on Tomb of the Martyred President at Springfield--His Ideal From Boyhood.

SPRINGFIELD Ills., Oct. 18. — David Lloyd George came here today and paid homage to the memory of Abraham Lincoln.

With bared head, heedless of a cold driving rain, the war-time premier of Great Britain approached the monument and entered the tomb of the martyred president where he placed on the sarcophagus a wreath with his card bearing the words:

Standing with head slightly bowed below the sarcophagus and for a moment in deep reverie, the man who also has known the pressure of greatest responsibilities in the time of war said audibly, as if speaking to himself rather than those about him:

"He is the greatest man grown up on the American continent. He is growing too;—Oh yes, he grows.

"I've just been reading about the time he had. I read of most recent ones about 2 years ago. It was rather an account of the troubles he had in the war with generals and politicians. They were worse than mine."

Before going to the tomb, Mr. Lloyd George visited the Lincoln home near the centre of the city. Evidencing the greatest interest in all matters concerning the great president whom he has regarded as an ideal since boyhood, the former Premier went through the different rooms and examined all articles with minute attention to all details.

THRESHING SLOW 600 MORE OUTFITS

EDMONTON, Oct. 19. — About 600 more threshing outfits are at work in Alberta than last year, according to the records of the Department of Agriculture. To-day 4500 threshing licenses have been issued as compared with 3700 last year and additions are still being made to the list. Threshing is making only slow headway, it is reported, owing to the unusually large amount of work to be done, the heavy straw to be handled, the comparative lack of machines and in some parts of the province unfavorable weather.

In the south about 50 per cent. of the crop has been threshed, but not more than 25 per cent. has been done in the central and northern parts of the porvince.

Under the most favorable conditions threshing will be going on well into the winter.

WAYS AND MEANS OF SPEEDING UP EMPIRE

LONDON, Oct. 19. — (Special Cable to the Canadian Press by George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent).—Ways and means of speeding up empire communication were again yesterday before the economic conference. The trend of the discussions on the matter was that rapid communications were vital to the development of empire trade.

There was a general hope expressed that the conference discussions on the subject would result in improved methods of communication between one part of the empire and another.

Shipping was the subject of discussion at to-day's sitting of the economic conference, being a continuation of the previous discussions on this subject.

INDIA HAS RECEIVED MANY WATER TURBINE

LONDON, Oct. 19. — (Canadian Press).—In addition to 750 tons of water turbines shipped to India and New Zealand in the last three months the Vickers Company have secured a substantial order from Winnipeg to supply three units of 7,300 horsepower each.

Another interesting overseas contract received by British engineers relates to an order involving £1,500,000 given to Pearsons to extend the Valparaiso breakwater. This project was repeatedly postponed on account of the technicians' doubts regarding the feasibility of building a breakwater seven hundred miles long in a depth of 180 feet of water capable of withstanding the Pacific storms.

OTTAWA, October 19. — Ottawa police solved the mystery of the and wreck early Sunday morning of a $4500 coupe automobile owned by R. R. Bremner, when Detectives arrested Aurelien Brunet, Ivan Mousseau, Lionel Godbout, and a minor aged 14 years.

All except Godbout were taken into custody from their homes. Godbout was found in an hospital suffering from severe cuts to the face and head received when the stolen car smashed into a freight car in the New York Central Railway's freight yard.

Brunet and Mousseau, about 17 years of age, appeared before Magistrate Hopewell later, and pleaded guilty to the theft charge.

The case was remanded until October 25, when Godbout will also appear. The other boy will appear in the Juvenile court.

MONTREAL'S BILL FOR PUBLIC WORKS

Spent Thirteen Millions Under Present Administration.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Over $5,000,000 will have been expended by the City of Montreal in public works this year, it is estimated from compilations that are being made at the City Hall under the direction of H. A. Terrcault, Director of Public Works. This coupled with over $4,000,000 last year and $3,500,000 the preceding year, make a total of almost $13,000,000 spent under the present administration.

FORT WILLIAM Oct. 19.—Almost two million bushels of grain cleared yesterday in ten boats, five of which were vessels of the United States fleet, the largest argo being aboard the A. E. R. Schneider of the Cleveland Cliffs Co. Chairman Leslie Boyd of the Grain Commission is still in Winnipeg, but will return to-morrow with Commissioner Snow and the full board will meet Hon. Thomas A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce. It is stated here that the grain trade is anticipating that some steps will be taken to hold grain rates on the lakes to a reasonable level but that little relief can be expected by the suspension of Coasting Laws unless United States vessels owners can be made to see their way clear to come into the trade more freely than they have done.

OFFICIALS PUZZLED BY ACID-THROWER

PONTIAC, Mich., Oct. 19.—A peculiar psychological study is Mrs. Daisy Lee, American wife of Charley Lee, Chinese laundryman at 2611 Virginia Park, Detroit, who is held in the county jail here awaiting the outcome of the condition of Dr. Frank D. German, Pontiac physician, into whose face she threw a pint bottle of acid Monday afternoon. Officials are at a loss whether to refer her to a sanity commission or to swear out a complaint charging her with attempting the life of Dr. German, who is in Harper Hospital, Detroit, suffering from severe burns which may deprive him of his sight.

Confinement in jail does not seem to alter the woman's attitude of cheerfulness over the successful outcome of her long-planned attack. Her charge that the doctor was responsible for the death of her 10-day-old baby in the City Hospital here a year ago is believed to be a fanciful one, due to long brooding over the child's death. She said when first taken into custody that she wanted to make the doctor suffer as much as she had. She did not want him to die, but hoped he would be blind, she said.

Her mental condition appears quite similar to that of Mrs. Hazel Luikart, Royal Oak woman, who several years ago attracted nationwide attention by giving her two young daughters slow poison tablets. She was confined in the Ionia State Hospital when a sanity commission found her mentally deranged.

CONVENT COST BEFORE COURT

Architect Alleged to Have Appropriated Money of Sisters.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18—Monseigneur A. Beaudry, Cure of the Parish of St. Alphonse de Richelieu and Chaplain to the Sisters of the Precious Blood, Ottawa, was the main witness here this afternoon in the trial of Alphonse Contant, architect who is charged with appropriating $91,000, the property of the Sisters, between May 1915 and November 1920.

Father Beaudry stated he had power of Attorney to collect any moneys due to the Sisters of the Precious Blood. In virtue of this he went to Contant's house on February 16th., 1922, and explained his mission. He was given a very cordial reception and invited to dinner, where he found the "food good and the cigars excellent." However, no result came of the visit, Contant stating that certain papers in connection with the case were at Woodlands, near Chateauguay.

On February 28, the Cure again called on Contant. This time his reception was not so cordial and he was told that the papers at Woodland had been stolen. Father Beaudry appealed to Mrs. Contant stating that the Sisters had no place to sleep as the floors and partitions of their convent were unfinished. He asked that a number of bank shares of which Contant was supposed to be in possession, might be converted into cash and paid to the Sisters.

Following this, Mgr. Beaudry wrote to Contant, but received no answer. Finally he testified that Contant had told him over the telephone that "such a letter was not worthy of an answer." Negotiations of a friendly character then ceased.

A document was put in by the prosecuting purporting to be an account of what had been spent by Contant, in connection with the building of the convent and what the Sisters had paid to the architect. According to this the accused had spent $297,000, and the Sisters claim they paid him $191,000.

Wilfrid Phaneuf, sub-contractor for the architect, stated that during the six months he superintended the building, not more than $15,000 could possibly have been spent for labor.

Sister Marie de la Trinite who also gave evidenc during the morning session regarding the sums of money paid out swore that the Sisters of the Precious Blood have paid $191,000 to the accused.

The trial was adjourned until next Tuesday.

STRIKE DECIDED BY PANEL DOCTORS

Goes Into Effect January As Refusal to Accept Lower Fees.

LONDON, October 19 (Canadian Press). — A strike of several hundred British physicians on 1st January next, was decided upon yesterday The strikers are members of the Panel Doctors' Union, which serves 15,000,000 men and women contributors to the National Health Fund.

The decision to strike was taken at a conclave of the doctors in London as an act of refusal to accept a reduction in fees.

At present the doctors get 9s 6d annually for each patient registered on their respective lists. The Minister of Health has proposed reducing the rate to 8s 6d.

The Health Fund is an outgrowth of the National Insurance Act passed when Mr. Lloyd-George was Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1911, being one of his many measures aimed to help the masses.

During employment the workers pay 5d in the case of men and 4d in the case of women, weekly, the employers contributing an equal sum into the fund. Heretofore the approved societies to which all the contributors belong, had paid from their reserve funds 7s 3d annually for each member, the Government making up the difference between that sum and the doctors' fees.

The system cost the taxpayers more than £26,000,000 in 1921, and the Government proposes to cut the rate and have the societies foot the entire bill. The societies have refused to do this, thus bringing another party into the dispute.

Fourteen thousand doctors are affected by the decision of the conclave, but unless two-thirds of them resign the decision will remain ineffective.

BILLION IN GOLD AT THE BOTTOM OF RIVER

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (Mail to the United Press).—One billion dollars' worth of gold dust lies at the bottom of the Kawaru River in this country.

No one owns it. It has been there for thousands of years and can be seen glistening along the river bed.

When New Zealand rivers were cutting their channels through rocky country many years ago they washed through many tons of gold-bearing quartz.

Gradually this quartz was worn away and carried down stream, while the raw gold was precipitated to the river bottom. Gold dust lies in rich profusion along the fissures of the river bed, according to geologists.

The gold might be obtained by dredging, but the current is too great to allow safe dredging, so it is planned to dam the lake source of the stream during cold months, when there is not a great deal of water feeding from the mountains. Building the dam will not be expensive, according to the syndicate which has the project in hand.

Work will be begun in 1925.

Five large, modern condensaries in the finest dairy districts of Canada, are required to supply Canadian housewives with this every-purpose milk.

JURY DISAGREED IN LONDON MURDER CASE

LONDON, Oct. 19. (Special.) — The jury in the Murrell-Williams murder case, still disagreeing, this morning, they were dismissed.

Long Deliberation.

Seven hours after the case had been sent to the jury, with one announcement of disagreement, and an an hour of fruitless reconsideration the jury in the Murrell-Williams murder case reported at midnight, through Sheriff Graham, to Mr. Justice Wright, that no verdict was yet in sight. The court was adjourned at 12 o'clock until 9 o'clock this morning. The jurors were locked in the jury room under guard, and left to wrestle with their problem. No provision was made to reassemble court in event of an agreement being reached.

The case went to the jury at 4:55 o'clock. At 9:30 they filed back into court and foreman W. J. Nutkins, a London building contractor, announced that there had been disagreement. He asked for extensions on the possibility of a separate verdict being returned, and indicated that an effort to bring in one verdict covering both accused had failed. The jury was advised of their right to bring in separate verdicts, and retired within eight minutes to try again.

Hundreds in Streets.

Motor cars were parked in the streets for blocks around the court house and hundreds waited in the streets in the vicinity for news of the verdict.

Interest in the case is at fever heat. Thousands swarmed about the court house in an eager effort to hear judgment ,and, being refused admittance they loitered about the lawns of the court house and in the vicinity until adjournment was announced.

The case went to the jury at 4:55 p.m. after J. M. Donohue, counsel for prisoners, T. J. Rigney, K.C., crown prosecutor, and Justice Wright had delivered their addresses. Mr. Donohue took up an hour and twenty minutes scathingly criticising much of the evidence offered by the prosecution, and endeavoring to show that it was neither Murrell nor Williams who fired the shot that killed Russell Campbell, with the probability that it was "Fat" Norton who had committed the murder and who, with William Murrell, is still sought by the police .His entire address was in behalf of Murrell, as he had previously claimed that there had been no evidence adduced to prove that Williams did the killing.

Mr. Rigney, for the crown, dealt with the case in chronological order, gradually weaving evidence in a story that, he declared, left no doubt as to the fact that Murrell killed Campbell and that Williams was equally guilty, as he had gone on the mission of robbery which culminated in murder.

A bill of $125 had been run up by him and was unpaid, and there was another bill for $229 for another local hotel also unpaid.

Manley is suspected of having operated in hotels in Quebec, Ottawa and Buffalo. When arrested he was found to have his pockets filled with apples and three bread rolls staled into the hardness of bricks. The latter, he said, were to give to poor people who had no means of buying food.

TEN BOXING BOUTS EXCITED INTEREST

TORONTO, October19 (Canadian Press). — Five knockouts featured the Eastern Canada Olympic amateur boxing tryouts at the Arena here last night, in which the great majority of the contestants were from Central and Western Ontario.

Owing to a misapprehension regarding the status of the tournament, there were no entrants from Quebec, but several were received from the Maritimes.

Chairman P. J. Mulqueen, of the Olympic, stated that he wished to emphasise the fact that the bouts were not Olympic trials, but preliminaries to provide prospects for the trials to be held next June.

There were ten bouts in which boxers from outside Toronto took part. The best heavyweight bout staged at an amateur tournament in years was that between Williams of Hamilton and Pook, of St. Thomas, the latter proving the victor after the judges ordered an extra round.

In the 118-pound class, King, of Toronto, defeated Green, of Hamilton.

In the 126-pound class Donovan of St. John won from Gilmour of Toronto.

Britain's Air Fleet

By LYLE C. WILSON

LONDON, Oct. 13 (United Press).—Trans-Jordania is the seat of the most recent, and temporarily the most vigorous, of the wars in which the British empire is engaged.

Trans-Jordania is a narrow strip of land across the River Jordan from Palestine. Its farther boundary has never been properly determined. Somewhere in the desert Trans-Jordania ends and the realm of nomad Adwan and Belka tribesmen begins.

These latter are now engaged in what the British foreign office describes as seasonal raids on the bulging granaries of the Emir Abdullah, who is the ruler of the territory.

The war is still in its infancy and has not, so far, engaged the serious attention of English airmen. When the native quarrel becomes too violent, a squad of Royal Air Force flyers will sail out from its Palestine base. There will be a brisk machine gunning of the tribesmen's raiding caravan. Many camels and a few natives will be killed and the war will end.

Must Have Camels

The raiders must have camels for their speedy swoops on well-stocked villages. As soon as the airforce begins to cut into the number of their animals, the tribesmen call the war off in the region of the Jordan and do their raiding where the R. A. F. is less likely to hear of it.

The weakness of the Adwans and Belkas is that they cannot put up a solid front. Always there is a clan or two which prefers to side with the English.

The same is true in India. A R. A. F. report relates the story of a plane crashing about 15 miles west of Wana in northwest India.

"Directly the machine crashed," the report says, "friendly tribesmen rushed forward and escorted the two occupants to Wana, fighting a rear-guard action against some hostiles the whole way.

"The hostiles burned the machine.

"One week later a machine landed in the Sang Toi river bed, about one mile north of Sperkai. The pilot and observer were immediately taken in hand by some friendlies and rushed into a house. Late that night, disguised as hillmen, they were escorted to Wana.

"On the march to Wana the native guides showed thorough acquaintance with the movements of bombing planes within the last months.

"At one point the pilot was taken aside by one of the guides who pointed out to the pilot a village which had never been bombed and which was inhabited by the guides' enemies.

Wanted Personal Vengeance

In Egypt, Aden, Palestine, Trans-Jordania and Malta the Royal Air Force has taken up its vigil.

The Cairo-Baghdad airmail is its most important flying function in Egypt. The route has been newly marked out by ploughing and by the tracks of heavy motors.

Owing to the persistent Makhudmi and Mansuri depredations the Aden garrison of the R. A. F. was forced to carry on a three-day war against these tribes which ended in their complete surrender.

In Palestine the political situation remains unsettled, but no active operations are being carried out.

GREAT AUTHORS AND THEIR BOOKS

Archbishop Benson, Chas. Kingsley And Others Contribute To Peterboro Library.

(F M. Dela Fosse.)

I have seen many well-known authors in my time but have been on terms of easy familiarity with none. In fact, I could almost echo the words of the late George Augustus Sala, who remarked plaintively, "I knew a lord once—but he died." On my own part I can say, "I knew a well-known author once—but he died."

The author to whom I have special reference was a noted Hebrew scholar and had been a highly-placed Wrangler at Cambridge. On one occasion the great man asked me to go out for a walk with him. I gave up a very pleasant prospect of an afternoon's cricket to be civil to him, and trotted along patiently by his side. We walked past hedgerows glorious in blossom and through meadows fragrant with the breath of spring. Everything was redolent of happiness; the sun was shining; sheep were bleating; cattle were lowing; birds were singing. But the walk provided no joy to me, for my companion stalked on and on and spoke never a word. At last I could stand the strain no longer and timidly blurted out, "It's a fine day, Sir, isn't it?" To my surprise he turned on me almost savagely, and, taking me by the shoulders, roared out, "Boy, I asked you to come out for a walk with me, not to talk to me—that remark of yours is neither original nor brilliant."

But I did know another author, with whom I can affirm that I was on terms of familiarity, although I am bound to add, that the familiarity, a very obtrusive one, was entirely on his side. The person to who I refer was the late Archbishop Benson. I knew him long before he was an archbishop or even a bishop. He was headmaster of my school and a fairly severe headmaster at that, as the aching backs and hands of many among us could have abundantly testified.

To-day he is chiefly remembered as the father of the three well-known writers, A. C., E. F., and the late Hugh Benson, but he was a hymn-writer and a producer of homilies which even at this day are favorably spoken of.

Dr. Benson had a close friend with whom we were all more or less associated, and that was Charles Kingsley, a governor of the school. His rectory of Eversley was only fifteen miles distant, and I remember distinctly that when he died we were told that all who desired to go to his funeral would be permitted to do so. I was too young at the time to realize the greatness of the man who had passed away, and did not go, but his death did cause me to turn to his novels and to his poetry, and the pleasure that I then gained from reading them has lasted through the years. "Westward Ho," "Hypatia," "Two Years Ago," and his beautiful lyrics are of an order that does not suffer by the efflux of time.

Whilst penning these random recollections I call to mind many another of whom I had a sort of personal knowledge whilst they were in the flesh. It was through Mrs. Gaskell's sister, Mrs. Drake, that I first received my introduction to Cranford and Mary Barton and in after days to that gloomiest of gloomy biographies, the Life of Charlotte Bronte.

Personal acquaintanceship with Algernon Blackwood in the days when he was struggling to make a living in Toronto turned my attention to his writings. We have most of them in the Library. "Day and Night Stories," "Garden of Survival," "Jimbo, a Fantasy," "Julius LeVallon: the Wave," all of them strongly reminiscent of the personality of the author and of the weird beauty of his violin-playing.

Of Sabine Baring-Gould, that wonderful old man of ninety years of age, I used to hear a great deal from close relatives of his and of my own. He has had a long life of authorship, and has been a most prolific hymn-writer as well as a writer of fiction. Some of his hymns are amongst the best-known in the language, and include "Now the day is over," "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Through the night of doubt and sorrow," and that beautiful Easter hymn, "On the Resurrection Morning." His writings, extraneous of fiction, include "Lives of the Saints," 15 vols.: "Curious Myths of the Middle Ages," and "The Origin and Development of Religious Belief."

ROOSEVELT'S CAREER IS TOLD IN SCRAPBOOKS

NEW YORK (United Press).—When the restored birthplace of Theodore Roosevelt is dedicated as a museum of Americanism Oct. 27 interest is likely to centre in these scrapbooks in which the career of Theodore Roosevelt, from candidate for Assemblyman to the close of his picturesque career, it recorded in pasted newspaper clippings.

The first scrapbook was begun by Theodore Roosevelt, father of the late President. Subsequent books were kept by T. R. himself, and the later one were clipped and pasted by members of his family. The early scrapbooks contain annotations in Colonel Roosevelt's handwriting, as well as letters written while he was at Harvard.

The beautiful and costly riding outfit presented by the Brazilian Government to Colonel Roosevelt at the time of his visit to South America on the River of Doubt expedition, form another attractive addition to the collection.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., wife of the present Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has contributed to the Roosevelt House collection the cradle in which the former President was rocked.

THIS LITTLE WORLD

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—There have been poets who couldn't even give away their verses, but they were lucky compared with a young Chicago poet who is compelled to give away a sizable number of his.

Literary friends of this poet for several years have been presenting to him autographed volumes of their first novels, plays and poems. He was not required to read the books so he took them.

Now he is going to have published a thin and soulful volume of his own. With only moderate faith in its financial success, his publishers allow him only two copies as his only return from the venture beyond a small percentage in the sales.

And he has to return the compliment to those who have given him books by reciprocating with his own work. That means going to market and buying 15 copies at $3.50 each.

Mr. Average Man buys a new suit of clothes only about every year and seven months, or at the annual rate of 62 new suits for each 100 men, according to the National Association of Retail Clothiers, just in convention here. But what of the "well-dressed man," who has the money and inclination to gratify his ambition as to appearance?

"Ten or a dozen suits a year will keep him comfortable in body and mind," says an executive of a Michigan avenue men's shop. "The conservative well-dressed man will have about 30 garments in his wardrobe, including four or five lightweight overcoats, the same number of heavy ones and a tuxedo, afternoon frock coat and full-dress suit.

"A lavish dresser would buy 15 or more suits a year, and have a wardrobe of 40 garments. That isn't unusual."

This isn't new, but supposedly it is still local, available outside Chicago. The boast that the packing houses use every part of the pig except the squeal has been superseded by a claim of total efficiency and no exceptions. The squeals now are canned and turned loose on emergency for fire engine sirens.

Your own town can tell its own story about prohibition evasions. But if it has discovered any method of concealing liquor which hasn't been tried out by importers in Chicago, it's a progressive community. Here they label the barrels "Cement" and "Oil" and "Molasses." They hide bottles in automobile springs and tires, chair seats, shoes, stalks of bananas, bread baskets and books. Butchers secrete them in sausages, grocers among the spinach, cigar stores in tobacco cans and—oh, go ahead and imagine for yourself.

Conventions are given the glad hand by everyone in Chicago except Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, the collector of internal revenue.

Mrs. Reinecke, being a woman and incidentally the only woman collector in the service, takes with a large pinch of salt the heavy descriptions of conventions given to wives by homecoming delegates. Conventions are occasions of pleasure and not of business, she has just ruled, and money "blown" there cannot be charged on expense account for income tax exemption.

BEGGARS STUDY ENGLISH

(By JOHN O'BRIEN)

PARIS, Oct. 19.—(United Press)—Beggars in Paris are not doing so badly. An American was accosted the other day in the Place Vendome it's right in the centre of the city, two or three steps from half a dozen hotels and the same number of branches of American banks—by a person in rags, who bowed and said:

"A little charity my dear sir, if you please. I have four little children and have nothing to eat."

This is not a translation of what he said. They are the exact words although the accent was unmistakable Gallis. In the tourist season the centre of Paris becomes American, or at least Anglo-Saxon. The signs on the stores are in English. The announcement, "English Spoken," is not a vain word. So this mendicant devoted part of the proceeds of last year's season to paying for a course in 'English as she is spoken" at a well-known language school.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

BEAUTY

Eva Tanguay says: "After having been on the stage since I was two years old, I couldn't help having wrinkles and sagging muscles. First I had six inches taken from my neck, then I had an incision to lift the muscles of my face. My eyebrows came next. All this took about four weeks. The most painful thing was having my face ironed—that means putting carbolic acid and oil on the skin to form blisters, which are then removed to leave the new skin underneath."

This verifies the old saying that beauty is only skin deep. But the knowledge, that beauty has tricks up its sleeve such as Eva describes, is enough to make a bachelor take the next boat for a desert isle.

EASY

The first water-power grist mill in America was the one at Scituate, Mass., built in 1640. It's the mill described in "The Old Oaken Bucket." Recently it has been restored by an historical society, so that it's the same as when pioneers hauled their grain or carried it on their backs to the mill, to get it ground to flour.

Today we phone the grocer and the delivery boy brings the flour. In this and many other ways we live a soft and easy existence, compared with the pioneers. That's why we have more illness, especially colds, indigestion and lazy livers.

The dollar is worth only 65 cents now, compared with its buying power in 1913. This is the government estimate.

Rather discouraging situation to anyone preaching thrift, the fact that 35 cents of each dollar saved in 1913 has vanished. It works another way. The 65 cents saved now may be worth $1 of buying power later on. That'll depend on long-range trend of prices.

YAWNS

Cannibal and other wild tribes in the interior of South America shrugged their shoulders and yawned when they saw movies for the first time, reports Lederman, film man who cranked the machine.

The movies for some time have been charged with a tendency toward stupidity, but we didn't realize they were quite as dull as this.

Lederman says his cannibal audience boasted, through an interpreter, that nothing he showed them in movies was rough as some of their own antics. We'd investigate a lot before agreeing.

PLOW

The plow is said to have changed very little in 3000 years. It and the mason's trowel have come down through the centuries in almost identically the same form as the original inventions. The trowel recently was improved by an American. And now a Frenchman improves the plow—substitutes for it a set of deep-digging metal fingers which, he claims, completely prepare the soil for seeding.

Everything is in process. Nothing is perfected. Opportunity is everywhere, though the eyes to see it are few.

The rebel asked of the citizens if any desired to volunter to fight for their country against the then existing government One citizen volunteered and entered the fort where he had dinner and slept during a part of the night. On the following morning the citizen volunteer was not to be found, having taken peaceful leave during the night.

HOW TO AVOID GAS POISONING

Health Commissioner Nicoll Gives Seasonable Hints--Chemical Actions

Gas poisoning was the subject discussed recently by Dr. Matthias Nicoli, r., State Commissioner of Health, in radio address broadcast from the leneral Electric Company's Station /GY at Schenectady.

"It is at just this time of year," said Dr. Nicoli, "that we begin to see newsaper accounts of people being overome or dying from gas poisoning. uch accidents are of common occurance all during the period when it is ecessary to supply artificial heat in ur homes. In Ohio last winter there ere 69 deaths and 113 partial asphyxtions from gas poisoning. What are he dangers and how can they be voided?

"As the weather gets cool, we close ur windows and seek some method of applying a moderate degree of warmth ithout starting our stoves or heating ystems. Later, we seek auxiliary ways f bringing up the temperature of our oms quickly in the early morning. o meet this demand, manufacturers ave placed on the market many difrent kinds of gas heaters. Reputable oncerns selling such apparatus give areful directions as to how it can be afely installed, but all too often gas ppliances of this kind are sold by perons who know little and care less bout what may happen after the arcle leaves the store. A short explanaon of what takes place when gas is urned will help us to understand what he dangers are and how they may be voided.

Carbonic Acid Gas Formed

"When artificial or natural gas is urned completely, that is, given sufficient oxygen for complete combustion, arbonic acid gas (also known as carbon dioxide) is formed. It is not dangerous in small amounts; in fact, it is he same gas that is thrown off by the ungs in breathing, so that there is always a small amount of it in the air of crowded halls, theatres, churches, odge rooms, and other indoor gathering places. Of course, if you stayed in a ightly closed room into which carbonic acid gas was being constantly thrown ff, you might smother after a while, ut long before that time came you would feel oppressed and stifled and would naturally seek fresh air. Even when a person is overcome with this gas he revives very quickly in the open air with no apparent ill effects.

On the other hand, when gas is burned with only a limited supply of air or if the burning gas strikes a cold surface, deadly carbon monoxide gas s formed. This gas when breathed acts quickly; so quickly in fact, that ersons are often overcome before they ealize that they are in danger. Even they realize it and try to reach the pen air, they may become unconscious before they can get to the door. Moreover, once a person has breathed in a lot of this gas he does not recover at once in the open air, but may be sick for hours or days or may not recover at all. This is because the monoxide actually combines with the red blood corpuscles and prevents their giving oxygen to the tissues of the body. When and under what conditions is carbon monoxide formed?

"Gas heaters are of two kinds: The luminous or bright flame and the nonluminous or blue flame type. In the former no air is mixed with the gas until it is burned. With this kind, combustion is usually complete unless the flame comes in contact with a cold surface, in which case carbon is deposited, and reduction of some of the carbonic acid gas to the deadly monoxide is liable to occur. In the non-luminous or blue flame type combustion is complete so long as sufficient air is supplied at the mixer and the flame does not come in contact with a cold surface.

Flues Should Be Used

"Trouble may arise through an uninformed person tampering with the air adjustment, but it is more often due to the flame hitting some part of the apparatus purposely or otherwise. In the latter type of heater the only safe rule is to have a flue connection to carry off the products of combustion. What has been said regarding heaters applies equally well to gas logs, gas radiators and gas water heaters. The latter should always have flue connections because carbon monoxide is sure to be formed in large quantities when the hot flame strikes the copper coils chilled by the water they contain.

"Artificial or illuminating gas before it is burned is poisonous in very small amounts. Therefore see to it that there are no gas leaks in your home, and notify your local company immediately if the characteristic odor of gas is apparent in any room. Flexible gas tubing rapidly becomes porous. It is far safer to have all gas connections made with metal pipe.

"There are a number of other ways in which gas poisoning may occur: ordinary coal stoves and ranges will throw off a dangerous amount of carbon monoxide if draughts are closed too tightly following the addition of fresh coal. Gas burners left lighted but turned low and gas pilots may go out if the gas pressure decreases sufficiently. Then when the pressure again increases unburned gas is thrown into the room and may not be detected quickly enough to avoid accidents, particularly during the night time. Never go to sleep in a closed room when there is a lighted gas burner, and never install a gas water heater in a bath room.

"Perhaps the most common condition resulting in gas poisoning, in recent years, at least, has been brought about because people have not realized that carbon monoxide is present in dangerous quantities in the exhaust from gasoline engines. No work should be done in closed garages with the automobile engine running.

"Gas is used by over one-half of our population. Safety from gas poisoning depends on your observing the warnings which have been given in this health talk and in always taking pains that there is sufficient ventilation in the place or rooms where you are working, living or sleeping."

SAYS NAPPING MINDS MAKE US SUBNORMAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 15 (Associated Press).—Detailed photographic studies of the motions of human beings, made possible through the invention of an apparatus called the scale cage, have led to the conclusion that absent-minded persons temporarily indulge in motions similar to the motion behavior of imbeciles, according to the Engineering Foundation of this city. The foundation says also that great waste results, in some manual occupations, from ill-directed motion.

Many persons occasionally are absent minded and, while their wits are wool gathering, the motions of their bodies, as recorded by photography, are strikingly similar to those of the weak-minded and subnormal.

Bricklayers of ordinary training have used the same methods probably for 7,000 years. The berry picker, the most ancient of craftsmen, has followed simple and natural methods for thousands of years. Studies of these workers give no indication that the best way to do work is a matter of instinct, or is developed through successive generations by natural processes.

By finding out the best way, as demonstrated by the most expert worker, the bricklayer can be trained to do more than three times as much work with the same effort. The amateur berry picker, most highly educated in everything except berry picking and motion study, may be so trained as to increase his output fifteen fold.

ROSY-CHEEKED WOMAN A 'SAM GOMPERS' OF ENGLAND

With Plenty of Charm and Eloquence, Margaret Bondfield Is Head of Britain's Supreme Organizations of Trades Unions.

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Margaret Bondfield, a rosy-cheeked youthful-looking woman of 50, with plenty of eloquence and abundance of nervous energy is the Samuel Gompers of Great Britain.

Which means that just as Sam is head of the supreme organization of trades unions in America, so Miss Bondfield has just been elected chairman of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress of Great Britain. She is the first woman in the English-speaking world to hold such an important job.

MARGARET BONDFIELD, BRITISH "SAM GOMPERS."

It's a long journey from being a shop girl in a London store to helping rule he destinies of the whole British labor movement, but Miss Bondfield made it by hard work, long study and intense application.

Modest as to her own achievements, she stopped from her office work only long enough to say of her election to the head of the Trades Union Congress:

"I regard this appointment as a very signal proof of the reality of the claims made by organized labor that it believes in equality of opportunity for women. This doesn't mean privilege. It means recognizing the ability of women to share the burdens as well as the pleasures of office."

Over 30 years ago Miss Bondfield came to London a shy young Somersetshire girl looking for a job. She started work behind the counter in a small shop. And she joined a girls' club where they sometimes discussed their troubles—standing on their feet for long hours, feeding in underground cellars, and sleeping in dingy cold attics.

One evening they had as a guest an organizer for the newly-formed and struggling Shop Assistants Union. She joined and soon was assistant secretary of it. She dropped her job and devoted herself to unionism.

She became known not for intense feminine emotionalism in her speeches, but for her lively exposition of dry statistical facts which she had gathered together by hard study. At 25 she was not only an official of the Shop Assistants Union, but was a member of and presided over the West Ham Trades and Labor Council. She became one of the recognized big figures in the labor movement.

Today she is secretary of the woman's section of the National Union of Garment Workers, member of the executive committee of Women's Trade Union League and a member of the administrative council of the Independent Labor Party. She has twice run as a Labor candidate for Parliament in the Northampton district, largely increasing the labor poll.

She has made a number of trips to America. One year she was British delegate to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor and made a stirring speech. In 1919 she was appointed British labor adviser to the Labor convention held in Washington under the League of Nations.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

HOW MANY CHUCKS?

"Oh, hello!" cried Nick. "Thats a poem I learned.

"How many chucks can a woodchuck chuck
If a woodchuck could chuck wood?"

sang he as he and Nancy and Mister Dodger were walking along the orchard in Squealy-Moo Land.

"What's that!" asked a voice suddenly, and there sat Wall Woodchuck on his hind legs eating a sweet apple.

"Oh, hello!" cried Nick. "That's a poem I learned. It's a riddle. It's in one of my books. Do you know the answer?"

Wally threw the core of his apple away. "Haven't any idea," he said "But then I didn't hear it very well. Perhaps if you would say it over again more slowly.

"All right!" said Nick.

"How many chucks can a woodchuck chuck
If a woodchuck could chuck wood?"

"Oh, yes! Yes, indeed!" nodded Wally pretending to look wise. "I would have to figure it out. I've been so busy lately about my diet that I've been neglecting my book learning. And I was never much good at figures."

"Figures! Ha, ha, ha! That's good!" said Goosey Gander, who was passing by. "If you just had a looking glass you'd know how right you are. Since you've started stuffing yourself like a sausage your figure is about as fine as a soft pillow's."

"Never mind!" said Wally quickly "I know what pillows are stuffed with and it isn't woodchuck feathers."

At this Goosey Gander blushed so that even the knob on his nose turned red. And as he couldn't think of another thing to say, he waddled away to the creek, hissing like a steam pipe.

"Well, we're off the subject," said Mister Dodger when he'd gone. "Have you counted up yet, Wally?"

"Let's see," said Wally with a worried look, holding up five black fingers on one of his hands and starting to count them off with the other. "How many—what did he say?"

"Chucks!" said Nick.

"Chucks!" repeated Wally.

"Can a woodchuck chuck?"

"Can a woodchuck chuck?" repeated Wally patiently.

"If a woodchuck could chuck wood."

"Say," he said suspiciously. "There's no sense to that. I believe you're making fun of me!"

The Twins and the fairyman laughed. "Yes, we were, Wally. But you're so good natured we thought you wouldn't mind."

"How many cakes can a woodchuck eat,
If the cakes are sweet and good?"

"I'll show you," said Wally. "I can count better that way."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

If you have overlooked some string beans in your garden you need not let them be wasted. If the pods have become really stringy and uneatable let them stay on the vines until they are dry. Then shell the beans and you have really delicious ripe beans usable in many ways.

A substantial dish can be made with beans of this sort, taking the place of meat. Or the beans are sometimes combined with a little meat merely for the flavor.

These vegetables are not worth while canning or drying for winter use, so eat them while the eating is good. They will of course keep several days as green beans would not. By clever planning the produce from the kitchen garden can be used late into the fall.

Ripe Bean Croquettes.

Two cups cooked beans, 2 tablespoons cream, 2 eggs, dried bread crumbs, salt and pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 slice onion.

The beans should be cooked until tender and easily mashed. The onion can be cooked with the beans or rubbed through them. Rub beans through a ricer or sieve and work smooth with cream and one egg unbeaten. Form into small balls, roll in crumbs. Beat egg slightly with two tablespoons milk. Dip balls in egg and roll again in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat, drain on brown paper and serve with tomato sauce. The fat should be hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread from the soft part of the loaf in 40 seconds.

Tomato Sauce.

Three or four tomatoes, 1 sweet green pepper, 1 onion, 2 tablespoons butter or bacon fat, 1 tablespoon flour, salt and pepper, ½ cup boiling water.

Scald tomatoes and cut in quarters. Chop the firm flesh and let the pulp stand in a strainer to remove seeds. Melt butter, add minced onion, pepper, dipped in boiling water to remove thin skin, seeded and minced, and cook five minutes. Care should be taken that the vegetables do not burn, but let them become a pale brown. Add flour and stir well. Stir in boiling water. Add chopped tomatoes and juice and cook, stirring constantly until smooth and of the consistency of cream.

Cream of Ripe Bean Soup.

One cup beans, 1 onion, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 2 tablespoons minced carrots, 3 cups cold water, 2 tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Put beans on to cook in the water without the other vegetables. Bring to the boiling point and simmer half an hour. Add other vegetables and simmer until beans are soft. Rub through a ricer or puree strainer.

Melt butter, stir in flour and add milk heated in a double boiler. Beat with a wire whisk until smooth. Add bean puree, season with salt and pepper and bring to the boiling point, but do not let boil.

The water in which the beans and vegetables were cooked will boil away almost half, but the beans will thicken this amount when the whole is put through the puree strainer. This soup will be of the consistency of thin cream. If a thick puree is desired use two or two and one-half tablespoons of flour.

Dried beans can be used in these recipes, but they should be soaked in cold water for two or three hours before cooking. Beans that are a year old should soak over night.

ARMENIAN BOYS IN PALACE OF KAISER

CORFU, Oct. 19 (Associated Press). —From primitive hut to Kaiser's palace is the fairy story reality of 500 Armenian boys, now enjoying the luxuries of the palatial mansion of the former German emperor, situated along the coast about five miles from here. The boys are all under American care, being the wards of the Near East Relief and directed by H. R. Murphy, of Lawrenceville, Mass.

The luxuriant gardens, filled with tropical growths and dotted with statues, give the boys a chance to enjoy an imperial walk. They do not maintain a dignity such as an emperor is supposed to maintain, but enjoy themselves just the same. Their walking consists mainly in romping and playing. Great affairs of state do not seem to bother them. All seem to be happy.

"Ah," said one of them to the Associated Press correspondent, "we are all happier than the emperor himself."

The villa was constructed first for the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria. It is ponderous in its style with lavish decoration everywhere. There is a striking statue in the center of the garden called, "The Dying Achilles." It is the best piece of original sculpture in the garden. There is a bronze statue of colossal proportions in the very front of the garden overlooking the sea. It also is Achilles and is supposed to represent the former Kaiser.

The Greek government has tried to take over the property but as it is the private property of the former German emperor, they cannot proceed with their purpose. During the recent Italian occupation of the island, it was a favorite resort of the Italian officers, who would go there as for a day in the country.

Paper was first made from rags in A. D. 1000.

TO COMPLETE A.E.F. CEMETERIES ABROAD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (United Press).—Congress probably will be asked this winter to provide funds for completing the cemeteries in France where the American soldier dead sleep.

Headstones to replace the wooden crosses which now mark the graves will be asked for as part of the plan for permanent beautification of the American cemeteries.

Charles Moore, chairman of the commission of fine arts, who, with Major H. L. Green, in charge of construction work in the permanent American cemeteries, has just finished an inspection of the American cemeteries, reports that all contracts for necessary buildings have been let and progress of the work thus far shows that the results will be satisfactory.

"Everything has been done to bring about a sense of good order, quiet and appropriateness," said Moore. "There is no elaboration and no striving for unusual effects.

"At Surenes, on the outskirts of Paris, the French Government has been especially liberal by placing at the disposal of the cemetery authorities the entire wooded slope leading up to the French post, Mont Valerin. Surenes is designed to be the gem among the American cemeteries because of the large number of American visitors, especially on Decoration Day.

"At Belleau Wood the graves have been arranged in the form of a segment of a circle at the base of the cliff.

"The largest of the American cemeteries is Romagne. In this cemetery the landscape lends itself to impressive treatment. The main road from the town of Romagne to Verdun runs directly through the cemetery. On one side the graves slope to the crest of the hill."

At Belleau Wood alone, Moore said, more than 25,000 American visitors registered last year, indicating that Americans abroad are making shrines of the final resting places of those of the A. E. F. who fell.

BENGAL GOVERNOR WARNS PLOTTERS

Crime Outbreaks Attributed to Secret Revolutionary Societies.

CALCUTTA, Oct. 19 (Associated Press).—In proroging the Bengal Legislative Council, Lord Lytton, the Governor, voiced a note of anxiety and warning regarding the recent recrudescence of violent crime in Calcutta and other parts of the province. These outbreaks are attributed to the work of secret revolutionary societies, having as one of their aims the assassination of government officials.

"The crimes of violence which have in the last few months deeply shocked the public of Calcutta have been generally assumed to have been the acts of ordinary criminals. The latest murder in the post office at Sankaritolla and the trial and conviction of one of the gang who committed the murder has revealed to the public the workings of organized revolutionary societies of which Bengal has had such an unhappy experience in the past. The revival of a menace, which many will remember as a hideous nightmare, and which everyone had hoped had gone forever, has created a situation in which the government will require, to an exceptional degree, the support of the public.

"The contaminating influence of these gangs of fanatical idealists, who adopt terrorism through robbery and assassination as their weapon, is a danger to the younger generation from which no family can feel altogether immune.

"A week ago the latest victim of this sinister conspiracy told in the dock the story of how he was sought out by those whom he acknowledged as his leaders and ordered to join with others in a robbery which led to the murder of a perfectly innocent man. It is the impressionable youth of Bengal who are seduced and sacrificed by this insane organization. I appeal to all those who remember the dark days through which Bengal passed from 1912 to 1916, to all those who have sons of their own to protect, to rally to the support of the government and to help us stamp out this disease before it grows to dimensions which will make it difficult to cope with.

"This is no case of mere political opposition, of criticism of the government, of seditious propaganda. It is a conspiracy of dangerous, fanatical criminals among whom violence is an acknowledged creed and terrorism a deliberate policy, whose agents are trained in robbery and murder, whose victims are selected without motive or discrimination, and who constitute a danger to every household in the country. I have every confidence that when this is realized the whole educated opinion of Bengal will demand that vigorous and effective measures shall be taken to exterminate the evil."

THE WORLD'S GREATEST HEALER

SWEDEN EXPECTS SOON TO SEND ORE TO RUHR

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 19 (Associated Press).—Sweden's industries will be affected both favorably and unfavorably by the settlement of the Ruhr conflict, according to the third quarterly statement for 1923 which has just been issued by the Royal Board of Trade. It is pointed out that in normal times the Ruhr district took about two-thirds of the total export of Swedish iron ore. This market was closed by the French occupation, and the Swedish ore producers have been diverting their shipments to America and elsewhere, while large stocks have also been accumulating in home ports. In the near future Germany will doubtless again become a large importer of Swedish ore.

On the other hand, Swedish machine shops, especially those manufacturing mining machinery, paper-making machinery and motors, have been prospering because the previously severe competition from Germany ceased with the occupation of the Ruhr. Renewed competitive offerings from Central Europe will force the prices on Swedish machinery down to the minimum margin of profit, and the hopes of being able to continue considerable exports lie in the high quality of native materials used and the excellence of workmanship.

PREMIER KING IS LANDED IN LONDON

Extolled as Having Shown Worthiness for His High Office.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press) — "We believe," declared Premier Mackenie King last night at a dinner given in his honor by the Canada Club, in the British Empire as community of Free State. It is a community in which we have interests in common, and he believe that if the honor, integrity of common interests of that community are attacked, every part and portion of the empire may be expected to rise and act as one. We believe also that in this community of nations, as you give expression to national life of different parts of empire, as you permit them authority and full rights which goes with the growth of the nationhood, so you will help to instil not only a feeling of greater pride in their own countries, but gerater confidence in the empire to which they belong."

The large dining room of the Savoy hotel was crowded for the occasion. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, presided and referred to Premier King as having shown his worthiness for the high office he filled with honor to himself and with credit to his country.

The Duke of Connaught and Duke of Devonshire, who likewise spoke also had a word of welcome for the Canadian Premier. The Duke of Devonshire expressed the profound hope that the Imperial Conference would make some material contribution toward solutions of those problems which "are pressing with such severity upon the world-war weary to distraction."

POKER DEVELOPS WOMAN'S QUALITY

Game Will Readily Reveal Real Stuff in Male or Female.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn, Oct 19—"If I want to find out the real stuff in a man or woman I find it more quickly in a poker game than any other way."

No, this isn't a professor of psychology speaking —one of your so-called students of human nature or of mental complexes—it is a woman

Miss Emma Redell, whose swift ascent in the business world took her from stenographer to assistant secretary of a big railroad system in 14 years—only woman in the world to hold such a position on a railroad—finds poker not only a stimulating recreation but a valuable aid in business.

"There's nothing more fascinating to me," she says, "than —sh-h!—a little game of poker."

Nominally, Miss Redell is assistant secretary of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad. Actually, she is chief assistant and "right-hand man" to W. H. Bremner, the president who calls her the "best man on the payroll" and all-round "trouble shooter" of the M. & St. L.

Like Running Home

She believes there is a definite analogy between running a railroad and managing a household.

"I've been a business woman all my life and haven't had much experience in running a home," she says, "but there can't be any difference if a household is managed correctly. Show me a man or woman who is discourteous and cold-blooded with employes and Ill show you someone who isn't very popular with members of his own family."

Miss Redell declares there is no better avenue to success than stenagraphy for the young woman entering business. At 16 she went to business college and then held stenographic positions with several firms before going with the M. & St. L. in 1908. In 1913 she was made chief clerk of the law department and in 1917 chief clerk to the president. And last year the board of directors made her assistant secretary of the road.

She gives the following advice to young girls who are learning stenography:

Know Your Stuff

"Be an enthusiast and learn all the detail in your office you can absorb.

"Never discuss a subject in which you are not thoroughly grounded unless for the purpose of obtaining information. You will only reveal that you are superficial.

"Dress neatly but not flashily. Don't spend time powdering your nose when you might be doing important work. Above all pity the girl who wants to be a vamp. There's only one place where the vamp gets away with it, and that's on the screen.

"Remember to be pleasant at all times. The pouting girl never gets anywhere. A man can come to his office with a grouch, raise Cain generally and get by, but the minute a woman tries it she bacomes a 'hen.'

"Never overlook an opportunity to learn. When you figure you know it all, pull down the shades and get on your carpet slippers. Young or old, you are in the first stages of senility."

KEEP HER POLICE AT HOME.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—(United Press).—Germany will not be represented at Commissioner Enright's conference of police chiefs of the world in New York, because Germany believes she needs her police chiefs at home. Possibilities of serious internal trouble makes it inadvisable for the heads of the police depatments in Germany's principal cities to leave.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Miles Sheridan is facilitating his wife's obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. He is taking a yacht trip, supposedly with

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl, known as the Million Dollar Doll. In reality, however, he is not with the Doll, but

Teresa Desmond (Terry), Juliet's unbelievably innocent half-sister, whom the Doll sent to masquerade as herself. Ever since a kindness, Miles did her in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and they are now madly in love with each other, although he does not recognize in her whom he knows as Juliet Divine, the little girl he befriended so long ago.

Paul di Salvano, a han dsome Italian fortune-hunter, who has deserted Betty for

Rose Callahan, a somewhat ordinary young heiress, now travelling in Europe with her father.

Miss Caroline Sheridan, Miles' aunt, also writes to Betty about Terry's beauty and charm.

Betty has just learned of Paul's desertion, and she is opening a letter from Nazlo.

Betty goes to Europe, to find Paul and possibly retrieve her husband.

Miles receives a telegram that his wife has come aboard the yacht at Algiers and wants to see him.

CHAPTER LXX

"Not Fit"

"Mademoiselle!"

The French officer saluted. "I hope that this great beast of mine has not alarmed Mademoiselle? She speaks French?"

Terry's eyes were misty, for it was even worse than she had expected to see Miles go away—far away through the desert. Her life went with him! It was difficult to come back, and to speak just then. But this, no doubt, was a brave soldier of France. She must not seem rude and hurt his feelings, so she smiled, almost the same smile as that which Captain Guilbert had thought the professional smile of the "baby vamp."

"I learned French at school," she said, "from a dear French nun, a Parisienne. It's nice to hear the language, and speak it again. Your dog hasn't frightened me at all, Monsieur le Capitaine. I never saw a dog before who really smiled."

Guilbert was delighted with her friendliness, which he attributed to his own good looks and the charm which he was confident few women could resist. He had expected her to snap at his advances; but just in case he should have deceived himself, he had sent the dog out as an excuse to enter into conversation quickly, before the girl should go upstairs. It was according to his experience that ces jolies dames were keen on a little fun when the men of whom they tired left them alone for a few hours or days. His comrades, two lieutenants and military surgeon attached to the regiment, had bet that la belle Americaine would snub him, and he knew that, even more than in winning his money, they would be pleased if he failed with the young woman. He had rush things a little but he was sure now that he was on safe ground.

"It is a trick I have taught the animal," Guilbert explained. "He is only a zi dog, such as the nomads keep to guard their tents, but I have had him since he was a puppy. Besides, if he had never been taught, he would still smile at Mademoiselle!"

"Thank you," said Terry, blushing. "I like him so much. But now I must go in, Monsieur le Capitaine."

"Not yet, I beg!" exclaimed Guilbert, throwing himself between her and the door.

'I must tell you that I have had the great pleasure of seeing you before. I went to New York in 1917, after the Americans entered our war. At the theatre one night I was dazzled by a vision: a living statue of such perfection that I lost my sleep thinking of it. Your beauty of face and form could never be forgotten. Today I was struck as with a bomb—thrown by Venus! To find you again—at the end of the world! It is Destiny!"

The words poured out, and Terry's breath was taken away. This man in the desert had been to New York! He was one of those who had seen Julia! What should she do? What would Julia do in her place?

These were her first thoughts, the broken thoughts of an inexperienced child who knew nothing of men, and who only had instinct to help her separate insolence from compliment. In the man's eyes began to burn the fire she had seen in Nazlo's eyes and (she wished to forget it!) in Sheridan's for one ugly moment. The girl shrank from it with all that was delicate in her nature and upbringing. Horrid as it was to be rude to a soldier who had fought and suffered, Terry knew that she had to keep him back.

"I am sure, Monsieur le Capitaine," she said, "that you mean to be kind, but—but you see we don't know each other. Please let me go in—now!"

"Do not break my heart," he implored, in a low tone which he knew how to use at right moments. "Beautiful dream of my heart, do not be too cruel to one who has gone through much in these years: only a poor soldier in the desert, yet a man! And love in the desert, believe me, is beyond any love you have known, though you have been much loved and by many—"

One of the sudden rages that came to her blood from Terence Desmond poured through the girl like a flame. She looked at Guilbert as she had looked at Nazlo. "Taisez vous! Allez vous ont!" she flung at him between her teeth; and as he fell back from the insult she passed him like a flash.

She rushed through her bedroom and onto the balcony which was like her own now, because only her window, Sheridan's and Harky's looked out upon it. She stood grasping the rail for steadiness, and her knuckles were white. The man—his eyes—! Besides, there had been Nazlo. He, too, the first time when he had got her alone—and he hadn't then mistaken her for Julia, as this man had, and Miles! She felt soiled, as if she could never be washed clean.

The peace of the desert was gone. What was there about her, she wondered, and about Julia? What was there strange, bad? Was she herself terrible somehow, without knowing why or in what way? Everyone seemed to take her badness for granted: Nazlo—Miles at first, though he had forgiven her, through love: Miss Caroline Sheridan: people to whom she had never spoken, who stared rudely: men with a bold, hungry look: women with curiosity or scorn, and even Mrs. Harkness, who had grown fond of her, it seemed, was sorry that Sheridan had given his love to such a one as she. There must be something more than just the "boldness of coming on this trip.

"I don't believe I am going to be happy after all—here or anywhere, ever," she said. "I see now that I'm not fit for Miles. Not fit!— He'll be taken away from me by God—or Fate, that the horrid Frenchman talked about. The wonderful thing was too good to come true—too good—to come true."

She had feared this in the night, as she lay awake, listening to her own heart. But it was Captain Guilbert who had driven the keen realization fully home.

(To Be Continued.)

A STRIKE OF MUSICIANS

(By JOHN O'BRIEN)

PARIS, Oct. 17 (United Press).—French musicians and singers are aghast at the inroads of the wireless concerts on their emoluments. They believe they are facing ruin.

Who is going to pay the price of admission to a musical recital or a song-fest when, without moving from your apartment, without having to trudge through the Parisian rainstorms or pay what the taxi night-hawk demands, you can "listen in" on the best voices in France, the most accomplished musicians, the most renowned orchestras?

This fear was translated into action when the Paris Orchestra, giving a recital in the Salle Gaveau, refused to play in front of a wireless receiver. The musicians advanced two reasons. First, they were expected to supply the wireless organizers with something for nothing, which is naturally against their principles. Second, they do not want their music to be deformed, and —so they aver their own pretentions to artistry to be nullified—by transmission through a medium over which they have no control.

It is all very well for the wireless people to talk of the publicity they give us," said Georges de Launay, leader of the Paris Orchestra. "Perhaps a musician who is absolutely unknown to the public may have something to gain. But a Paderewiski, a Risler, an Isaye, what has he to gain? On the contrary, he has everything to lose. You can listen to what he is playing, but you do not get his technique.

"There is another side to the question. When we gave the concert in the Salle Gaveau it was for the benefit of the parish of St. Roch. Hundreds of persons, who have wireless equipment, boasted that they were going to enjoy the music without paying a son. A wireless society tried to get the Lamoureux Soceity to permit wireless transmission of its weekly concerts. The wireless people offered a ridiculous sum, which was not accepted. The Lamoureux Society will lose at least a quarter of a million francs a season through this unfair competition. The broadcasting of concert programs is likely to empty the concert halls."

Devries, one of the tenors of th Opera Comique, told an interviewer that he was offered fifty francs—a little more than three dollars—for singing into a wireless receiver. His nightly pay at the Opera Comique is a thousand francs. He pointed out that it was ridiculous to expect him to sing for 150,000 people for fifty francs when 1,500 persons who compose the audience at the theater have to pay from fifteen to fifty francs for a seat."

The president of one of the broadcasting societies laughed at the fears of the musicians and singers. He referred to the growth of the movement in the United States, where it has not affected the earnings of the artists. On the contrary, he declared, it develops a love for music among people who never frequented opera performances.

SEVERE ON TRAITORS

LEIPSIG, Oct. 19. — (Associated Press).—Germany's highest court shows little mercy for men arraigned before it for treason in the great war.

Gerhard Strey was recently given a life sentence for having betrayed his command in March, 1916. The evidence showed that he deserted the German army and went over to the French. A short time later concentrated French artillery fire against the entrenchments where Strey had been serving showed that he had revealed all details of the positions to the enemy.

Strey returned to Germany in 1920, and was arrested at his home in Magdeburg and charged with high treason, which he admitted. His defence was that he was badly treated by superiors, and could not endure further military service.

Radium will make a real diamond sparkle in the dark, while it has no effect on an imitation.

PANAMA TRADE PRIVILEGES WOULD BENEFIT DOMINION

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 19.—"Canada's failure to establish a customs officer at the port of New York, is depriving the Dominion of invaluable trade privileges made possible by the Panama Canal."

This was the comment of Julius Barnes, eminent authority on international trade, in discussing with the Royal Canadian Commission, in a general way, the Dominion's future trade and development.

G. F. Earl, manager of Sanday and Co., D. C. Harrover, one of the editors of the Wall Street Journal, Yale Kneeland, chairman of the grain section of the New York Produce Exchange, and many other prominent business men of Buffalo and New York, whom the commissioners have met, have expressed amazement that the Dominion Government has so long delayed official action on a detail so obviously to the commercial advantage of the whole Canadian people.

"A customs officer at this port would not cost the Government a dollar. His salary would not exceed $5,000 annually with his expenses, and one Canadian ship touching at this port enroute through the Canal for British Columbia, would save the shippers of the Dominion ten times this amount in freight charges," observed Chas. Nason, the ship broker, discussing the case. "Still I don't think we of this zone who reap the reward of Ottawa's stupidity in this matter should say anything to hasten this move. Of course, it will come, and in the meantime we of New York and Pittsburg are selling steel and iron products and other heavy freight to the North Pacific Coast, which we could not outbid Canadian manufacturers of Ontario and Quebec on if they could get the cheap water rate on their products to British Columbia, the Canal supplies."

"We can pay the duty and underbid Canadian manufacturers the way it is on the North Coast heavy stuff. All heavy freight shipments from this coast to the American Pacific ports go by the Canal.

Cheaper Than By Train

"It is almost as fast as a freight train and three-fourths cheaper. U.S. roads have long recognized this fact. They no longer pretend to compete with the Canal for this business. If Canada had a customs agent in this port it would operate this way:

"Heavy freight from Ontario and Quebec would come by the short rail haul to New York, in bond. Boats leave this port daily for the North Pacific Coast. To reach Seattle they pass within four hours of the Vancouver Harbor. Then there are boats coming down the St. Lawrence and from Halifax for the North Pacific frequently. They can't stop at this port when a Canadian customs officer is here to mark their papers and without these agents vise these Canadian ships would find their entire cargo even if every pound was of Canadian origin subject to full duty on reaching Vancouver. This ruling has actually been made by the Canadian Minister of Customs on a shipment of iron and steel from the Eastern Canadian ports, ordered by a Vancouver firm.

Forced To Pay Duty

"The ship stopped for additional cargo here. This part was of U. S. origin and of course subject to duty. The rule forced the whole of the Halifax iron shipment to pay duty. Ontario cities, like Toronto, Hamilton and London are large manufacturers of heavy mining and lumbering machinery. With a Canadian officer here they would supply the whole of the vast British Columbia trade, but they don't. The rail tariff is so much heavier than duty plus the water haul from here that all heavy machinery used in the British Columbia mountains is made in Pittsburg and other Eastern U. S. cities. One customs officer from Ottawa would switch all this and the Canadian railways would lose nothing for they can't get this business anyway. We would lose and Canadian industry generally and wage earners there would gain."

HUNTING GOLD, BRAVE RIGORS OF SIBERIA

VLADIVOSTOK, Oct. 19 (Associated Press).—Up in northern Siberia, several miles inland from the little town of Okhotsk, a band of Americans are "panning" the river beds for gold as their fathers did in the California and other mining camps of the west 70 years ago. Last winter there were 35 of them, but about half the number came out this year and all will not return. They have not made any big discoveries, such as those which caused the rushes to the west from '49 onwards, but they have made a good living and have always before them the dream of riches which, through centuries, has kept prospectors at their calling.

There are also a large number of Chinese and Korean placer miners in the country and latterly, an entirely new undertaking for them, Japanese have been taking a hand in the ever entrancing work. Some of the latter have gone 300 miles inland, and the miners along the coast are awaiting eagerly the reports of their discoveries, if any.

There is also an American trading station at Okhotsk, the manager of which is Captain D. A. Holmes, formerly of the United States army. Besides supplying the miners and natives, this station engages in the fishing industry and sells its catches to the Japanese canneries.

The Soviet officials, who are in control, do not interfere with the miners, fishermen or traders so long as they do not mix in Russian politics. Thus far no taxes have been levied on the miners, who work any and all claims despite the fact that a concession for mining in this district was given a British company.

FAIL TO LOCATE SLAYER

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Death of Mrs. Adelaide Graham Was a Shock To the Community.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 19. — The death of the late Mrs. Adelaide K. Graham, which sad event took place on Monday evening, came as a distinct shock to the entire community though it was known that deceased had been in failing health for some time, the youngest daughter of the late Mr and Mrs. William Graham, deceased, was born in Cavan, the homestead being just north of the village of Cavanville, and was one of a family of five children, three sisters and two brothers ,only one of whom, Mrs. A. Purser, of Cobourg, now survive. Mr. Graham's parents predeceased her by a number of years, her mother, whose maiden name was Hannah Grandy, being a sister of the late Mr. Thomas Grandy, of Millbrook.

The sudden death of one sister, Mrs. M. Swain, a little over a year ago, came as a seveer shock to the deceased from the effects of which she was slow to recover, and which may possibly have hastened her own death.

The late Mrs. Graham was twice married and was a lifelong resident of Cavan, her home after her marriage to her first husband, Mr. David Staples, being on what is more familiarly known here as the "Stanton farm," now occupied by Mr. A. Coyte, a short distance north of the village. Previous to her second marriage to Mr. John Graham, deceased resided in Millbrook, her home, on Anne street, having since been purchased by the Misses Armour, Mr. and Mrs. Graham bought and considerably improved the handsome residence on King street, now owned and occupied by Mr. J. R. Eakins, but before they had completed the alterations which they had in prospect Mr. Graham's death occurred very suddenly about seven years ago.

Deceased was a life long Methodist and was faithful to her church in attendance and such assistance with its organizations as her health permitted her to give. For the last two months she had been unable to be in her place on Sundays and was confined entirely to her room for several weeks past, with constant medical attention and a nurse in charge.

The funeral took place from her late residence, Cavan street, on Wednesday, Otcober 17th, Rev. S. T. Tucker and Rev J. Wilks having charge of the services at the house and graveside. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Stanley and John Purser, Cobourg, C. Sager, Brighton, J. Bruce, Valentia Earl Fallis, Lindsay, (nephews), and W. Cathcart, Peterborough. A large number of friends and relatives gathered at the house to pay a last tribute of respect to the departed the floral offerings also showing the esteem and respect in which deceased was held. Interment took place at Graham's cemetery ,Bethany.

Among those from a distance who were here for the funeral were: Mrs. Purser, Mr. and Mrs. C. Sager, Misses A. and V. Purser, Messrs. Stanley and John Purser of Cobourg, Mr .Norman Purser, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fallis, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Graham, Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. J .Bruce, Valentia, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Swain, Valentia, Mr. Herb Shields, Mr. W. Cathcart, Mrs. Richard Staples, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grandy, Miss Jennie Cathcart, Peterborough, Mrs. J. Grandy, Springville, Mr. and Mrs. T. Graham and Mr. and Mrs. R. Graham, Mount Pleasant.

Rev. G. S. Gervan took charge of the services in the Presbyterian church, Campbellford, on Sunday, exchanging pulpits with Rev. Mr. McIntosh, who preached anniversary sermons in connection with the Sunday school of Grace Presbyterian church here morning and evening. Rev. Mr. McIntosh is the Synod's convenor of Sunday schools, the territory with which his duties are concerned including six Presbyteries and extending from beyond Kingston on the east to north of Mount Forest on the west. His sermon in the morning was a strong appeal for Sunday school workers, emphasizing the importance of this high calling from illustrations of Christ's love and consideration of the children. The junor choir, consisting of Jean and Edna Gervan, Ruth Thorndyke, Vanita Ingram and Margaret Armstrong, sang at the morning service the selectons being aways a source of pleasure to the congregation. In the evening Mr. McIntosh spoke on the text, "Love suffereth long and is kind," from the 13th chapter of First Corinthians and the 4th verse though the whole was included, breathing as it does, the atmosphere of Christian love which is the substance of life as was most impressively set forth in an eloquent and inspiring discourse.

The anniversary services of Fairmount Methodist church will be held on Sunday, October 28th, Rev. W. B. Tucker, B.A., B.D., being the preacher for the occasion. The churches at Cavanville and Mount Pleasant will withdraw their services for the day. Rev. Mr. Tucker, who is a brother of Rev. S. T. Tucker, was, at his own request, left without a station for the current year when conference met last June.

AUTOMATIC CAMERA TO SNAP OLYMPIC WINNERS

PARIS, Oct. 19 (Associated Press).—The French Olympic Committee is experimenting with a mechanical photographic device to record the finishes of the running events during the 1924 Olympic Games. Thus far the experiments have been successful, and there is every likelihood that a camera will be on hand at the finish line of all races to confirm or infirm the ruling of the judges.

The arrangement is practically the same as that in use for some years in Belgium to photograph the finishes of horse races, and which is likely to be adopted at French race tracks next season.

A camera is set just over the finish line about three feet from the ground, and a string is stretched out across the track about the same height, and three feet from the actual finish. The string, upon being broken by the chest of the arriving winner, automatically releases the kodak, which snaps the runners just as they cross the line. The negatives are developed in two minutes.

The photograph also will record the time of the race to one-twentieth of a second. A huge clock nine feet in diameter will be installed right opposite the finish line inside the track in direct line with the camera. Through an electrical arrangement it will be released by the firing of the starting pistol and stopped by the breaking of the string at the finish line. The second hand, making a complete revolution splits the seconds in twenty fractions, while a smaller hand records the seconds and another the minutes.

HONEY BEE USEFUL

Only two of the insects are very useful to man, the honey bee and the silkworm. The bee gives us a delightful food, the silkworm, larva of a moth, produces for us a fabric, rich and regal. Honey, a sweet, within the reach of all, is, in truth, an aristocratic food; silk, a fitting garb for queens is rarely put to plebeian uses.

What is honey? Honey is the nectar of flowers, modified by bees. What alchemy is this Yet, perhaps it is no alchemy. Nectar suggests sweets and perfumes, and this is exactly what bees do: they transmute, transform some of the loveliness of the flower into the satisfying and subtly-flavored sweetness of honey.

Many people think that honey is always the same and that if a sample does not have the appearance of that "back on the old farm," it is adulterated. This is a mistake: for pure honey may have a heavy body or it may be quite thin. It ranges in color from almost water-white to a color as dark as the darkest molasses. The flavor varies according to the flower from which it is obtained—the lighter colored honeys being, as a rule, milder. White clover, sage, sweet clover, alfalfa, willow-herb and raspberry honeys are quite mild, each, however, having its own distinct flavor. Golden-rod, aster, heartsease and buckwheat are darker and stronger in flavor, especially the last, which is very strong and practically the darkest honey sold.

Honey is placed on the market in four forms: First, comb honey, as found in the small section boxes; second, extracted honey, so-called because large combs are whirled in a honey extractor until the liquid honey flies out; third, bulk comb honey, that is, both comb and extracted honey together in bulk; fourth, granulated honey, extracted honey that has been kept until it solidifies.

FARM CREDIT

LONDON, Oct. 19. (United Press).—Farm credits are as vexatious a problem in London as in Omaha or Kansas City. The Agricultural Credits Act passed by Parliament has been approved by the King.

Loans repayable within sixty years and for sums not to exceed 75 per cent. of the value of the land involved may now be obtained from the Public Works Loan Commissioners. Borrowers must be "approved." These loans are restricted to persons who began the purchase of farms between April, 1917, and June, 1921.

When the full sixty-year mortgage is required, interest rates will approximate 5½ per cent. The mortgage must be secured by "mainly agricultural land actually in process of purchase.

The act also authorizes the formation of agricultural credit societies which, with the assistance of advances from the Government, lend money to their members. These loans are limited to five years and the purposes to which the money is put must be approved by the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries.

The third division provides for loans to land owners for permanent improvements. The Government will back anything from sewers to silos.

A MULTITUDE OF WOMEN RECOMMEND IT.

The strongest recommendation possible for any medicine to have is the sound testimony borne by the vast multitudes of women who have used it. It has been proved that 98 out of every 100 women once ill with ailments that caused suffering and despair have been restored to the joys of health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This marvelous record shows its power over the ills of women, and the letters of recommendation we are continually publishing in this paper should induce every ailing woman to try it.

Smoking Out Jack Frost

How Airplanes Are Now Used to Lay Down Smoke Screens Which Protect Orchards and Truck Farms

By H. D. MORGAN, Ph. C.

THE forces of the United States Weather Bureau and the Frost Survey have joined hands in plans for smoking out Jack Frost and saving orchards and gardens from death in his icy grip. This newest method of protecting fruit and vegetable crops is the result of a peace-time development of the navy's use of the protective smoke screen to hide its battleships from enemy guns and conceal its maneuvers from hostile eyes. These protective smoke screens are laid down by airplanes, as shown in the accompanying illustration.

A smother is really all that is needed to protect fruits and vegetables from frost, and any method that will act as a blanket should suffice. To keep the sun off is the vital need, for are not fruits and vegetables frozen while being shipped to market? The damage is not done while the fruit is in darkness or while the frost is on, but while thawing. Of course, if you can head off the frost to begin with, so much the better. But it is an expensive protection in any case. And how are we to know when to throw out the blanket? This is what two scientists, Mr. E. H. Jones, of the Frost Survey, and Mr. E. S. Nichols, of the Weather Bureau, are planning to do.

Is it not possible to use the barometer as a warning? Now we only have frost where it is extremely dry and the barometer is very sensitive. The relative amount of moisture may be high, yet the actual moisture in the air is slight. The thermometer will not help, as it records only after the frost is with us.

During the war the use of a smoke screen as a blanket gave splendid results in hiding the movements of fleets and armies. I have seen this smoke so thick that you could not see more than fifty feet, completely shutting out the sunlight. This screen hangs close to the ground or water, and especially to wooded or hollow sections. It is non-poisonous, and leaves no ash or soot, and suggests itself as an ideal blanket, especially as it quickly spreads over whole districts. Batteries could be arranged at various points in a district, thereby materially cutting down the cost per orchard.

There are many chemicals that were used during the war and are now an overstock in government warehouses. This would suggest a peace-time use for a war-time product. One of these is silicon tetrachloride—SiC14—a clear, colorless and very mobile fuming liquid of suffocating odor. It has a specific gravity of 1.524 at O°C and boils at 58° C. Liberation through a fine nozzle, especially in the presence of ammonia gas and moisture, releases tremendous volumes of dense smokelike clouds.

The reaction is a fine chloride dust. As an imperfect though graphic illustration, hold a cork from a hydrochloric (muriatic) acid bottle over the opened bottle of ammonia water. While the density of fumes are not equal, yet you will see how readily the smoke forms.

This smoke has a tendency to cling to the earth or water, especially around objects forming a blanket. It can be regulated to any density or thickness of stratum. This chemical screen is not poisonous or sooty.

Nitrozen, a component part of ammonia gas (which is a combination of nitrogen and hydrogen), is particularly valuable in fertilizers, and this chemical smoke, even though falling in small quantities, would act as a valuable addition to soils.

Jack Frost has a mighty cold grasp if you remember what he does to water pipes. When he takes hold of fruit or green garden truck he surely raises cain with their delicate in'ards. His icy grip chills every cell in the fruit that is filled with moisture. Now just before freezing water begins to expand you'll recall how the water pipe in the back yard "blew up" last Winter. Well, this is just what happens to fruits or vegetables. The sap cells will not carry on the work of feeding the growing fruit. Not only this, but where the atmosphere is relatively dry, frost draws the moisture to the surface, forming hoary particles. When the ripening season is on we find strips or sections of the fruit dry and fibrous instead of succulent and tender.

Now out comes old Sol of the sunburn Summer rays. He never did get along with Jack Frost anyway. His one desire is to unclasp the icy grip. He isn't as gentle as he might be and at once begins to change the temperature of the surroundings. This means uneven temperature in different parts of the fruit or vegetable. When the moisture on the outside of the fruit evaporates it robs the sap cells of their necessary moisture.

If you have had the misfortune of having your ears or feet frozen you will remember how you began to thaw them out first with snow, then cold water, and finally warm water. It is the gradual thawing that benefits, and not sudden changes.

Fruits and vegetables are the same. This is why a smoke blanket is used, not so much to keep off the frost as to keep off the sunlight.

Before the advent of the smoke screen various methods were used to protect gardens and orchards from frost. Small plants, such as strawberry plants, young tomatoes, etc., were protected with newspapers made cone-shape and fastened over the plant, and straw scattered over the entire field. This not only keeps off some of the frost by forming what is known as "dead air" space around the plant, but keeps off the sun's rays in the morning.

Larger plants or small trees are often protected by bundles of straw or cornstalks tied about the stem—the protection of these is similar to the use of paper or straw for smaller plants.

Orchards or groves of small trees have both screens or houses built over them on the order of the nurserymen's greenhouse. Cloth has been used in a similar manner. However, under these a huge fan is sometimes set going to keep up the circulation of air.

Later came the smudge-pot, in which kerosene or crude oil was burned. It was built on the order of a Rochester lamp and filled the air with black, sooty particles that didn't respect even ma's clean bedspread or sister's party dress. Then along came a new contraption, that looked like a lamp, only it was larger, with the chimney like a joint of stove pipe all filled with little holes.

A recent suggestion made was that of flying over orchards with an airplane and scattering a fine dust during the frost period. Still another method suggested was that of spraying the orchards. Fine water spray was to be used, which the inventor claimed would not hurt the fruit.

WITH more than 13,000,000 automobiles now in use throughout the country, a recent census has shown that the horse, instead of becoming a museum curiosity, has increased greatly in numbers.

Better horses, and more of them, it is reported, are being bred now than at any time during the past quarter of a century, a gain in numbers of 2,750,000 being shown in the 25 years since motorized vehicles began to appear, according to Popular Mechanics.

While more horses than ever before are being used on farms, they are gradually disappearing from city streets, many municipalities having laws forbidding their use on certain thoroughfares and in congested districts, in order to expedite the flow of traffic.

With the change, new problems in city planning have arisen. As the speed of transportation increases, square street corners are being changed to long, sweeping curves. It has been found by experience that the short turns slow up, while the long ones hasten, traffic. Fronts of buildings also have been cut away, the sidewalks being placed under the overhanging second stories to permit the widening of the streets.

Another problem has been the growing number of accidents. Approximately 14,000 persons were killed by motor cars last year, it is estimated. Based on figures, furnished by surveys of 60 cities with populations numbering 25,000 and over, during the past eight years, the following table has been prepared:

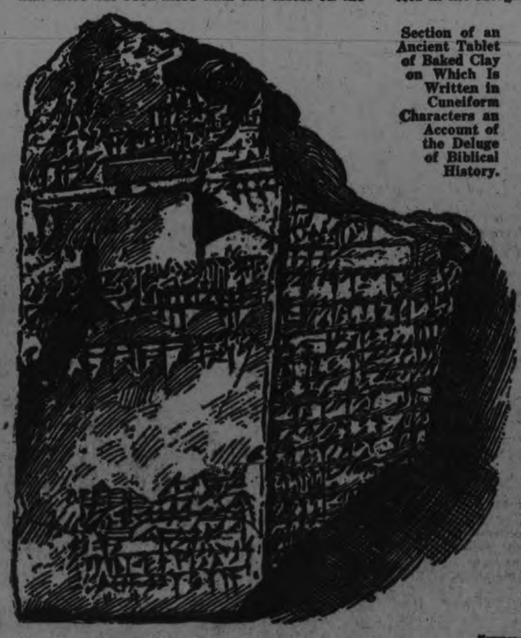
Year	Deaths per 10,000 Cars	Total Deaths
1915	24.0	5,800
1916	20.8	7,300
1917	18.2	9,000
1918	15.5	9,300
1919	13.0	9,700
1920	12.0	11,000
1921	11.9	12,500
1922	11.6	14,000

To meet these conditions, double-decked streets have been proposed in New York and Chicago. Subways and great underground parking spaces also are seen as a means to relieve the crowding. One-way streets already are in use in many cities with good results.

Did a FAMINE Precede the Great FLOOD of the BIBLE?

A FAMINE preceded the great flood of Biblical history, according to ancient traditions written in cuneiform on tablets in the collection of J. P. Morgan and elsewhere. A. T. Clay, professor of Assyriology and Babylonian literature at Yale, claims the deciphering of the inscriptions makes it necessary to abandon the prevailing view that the Hebrew traditions were borrowed from the Babylonians. He says the Hebrews were native of Amurru, a region between Babylonia and the Mediterranean, and that the antiquity of their culture is as great as that of Egypt or Babylonia. He believes that the familiar Biblical characters were historical personages.

Study of the inscriptions convinces him that history in that region of the world can be traced to 5000 B. C. Tablets found at Nippur show that there has been more than one effort on the part of ancient scribes who lived prior to the time of Abraham to give a history of the world, beginning with the story of creation and extending to the time the tablets were written. The Babylonians had several ideas about creation. Even the Old Testament, as a writer in The Pathfinder points out, gives two versions of creation and also of the flood, as well as other duplicate traditions. The Hebrew tradition told in the Morgan collection is a more extended version and was compiled a thousand years after the flood. For a long time it was used for incantation purposes. It is known as the "Ea and Atra-hasis Legend."



Section of an Ancient Tablet of Baked Clay on Which Is Written in Cuneiform Characters an Account of the Deluge of Biblical History.

Atra-hasis is the hero of the deluge story and Ea was an Amorite god, being lord of the earth, the rivers, the wells, the springs and the waters beneath the earth. These cuneiform tablets relate that a famine preceded the flood. The legend was copied in 1966 B. C. from a still earlier inscription. The inscription says that the people practiced cannibalism during five foodless years. The god Enlil, tired of the clamor of men and determined to destroy them, sent disease after the famine. Sickness, headache, malaria and calamity are mentioned several times.

To explain the cause of the great deluge described in the Bible science has advanced the theory that if some celestial body in its wanderings through the heavens passed sufficiently close to the earth—that is, within ten or twelve thousand miles—there is no doubt that such an encounter would have caused havoc on earth. Science is not concerned with what this body was. It might have been the moon or any other planet, or a comet of a bulk as large as the earth, or even as small as the moon passing sufficiently close to the earth—say, 2,000 miles.

A Bug Whose Sting Has a "Kick" in It

THE world is full of bugs. Taken by and large they usually provoke little enthusiasm, but a bug is said to flourish in one of the Philippine Islands that might be welcomed in some arid sections of the United States. Its habitat is the island of Mindaro and the native name of the insect is "a-nik." The effect of its sting is said to be distinctly inebriating, causing complete but temporary paralysis of the sensory nerves within thirty minutes. Motor nerves are not affected, and the alcoholic stagger is conspicuous by its absence even in extreme cases of inebriation. Nor is there any pronounced effect upon heart or lungs.

Nevertheless, according to the Japan Advertiser, the anaesthesia produced it quite complete, in fact so much so that it has been suggested that the insect might be used in connection with minor operations. But at the same time there is a marked mental exhilaration, comparable, it is stated, to the effect produced by certain drugs of the cocaine group.

Persons emerging from under the influence of the poison, or whatever it may be, are said to be able to perform extraordinary feats of memory.

Natives who have been stung by the insect claim the experience is distinctly pleasurable as soon as the effects are apparent.

Farm Woman Is 'Jill-of-All-Trades'

GOVERNMENT agents recently visited over 10,000 typical American farms for the particular purpose of seeing how the average farm women spends her time doing housework, helping about the farm, etc. Lack of electric and other modern labor-saving devices was especially noticeable. Many farms had the latest in up-to-date farm machinery but the poorest sort of kitchen and other domestic equipment.

The survey, as a writer in the Pathfinder points out, tends to show that the wives and daughters of farmers waste valuable time in drudgery which could be overcome by the farmer giving as much thought to his household and his wife's work as he does to his cattle, his crops and the general farm work. The welfare and comfort of the woman, seems to be disregarded on many farms.

The government survey, carried on in 35 northern and western states, indicates that if farm women were aided by efficient household appliances and their working conditions made more attractive, they could exercise more brain power and less brawn, and do better work in less time than is now possible.

The modern farm woman is a "Jill-of-all-trades;" she must play cook, seamstress, laundress, nurse, purchasing agent, hired girl, teacher, gardener, poultry raiser, etc. Her morning starts at five or six o'clock when she lights the fire and begins preparations for breakfast. She draws the water—sometimes from a distance of 200 feet away from the house—feeds the household, then the chickens and sometimes the farm animals, then she does many chores in addition to her ordinary household duties. Only 21 per cent of the farm homes in this country have lighting systems other than kerosene lamps. About 54 per cent of the women have to start coal and wood fires each day during the cold weather and carry the fuel and tend these fires.

After breakfast is over, the average farm housewife awakens the children, feeds them, and, except in summer months, prepares their lunches and gets them off to school. She then washes the dishes. In the summer she gathers vegetables from the garden for the subsequent meals. There is baking, sweeping and dusting to do, also marketing, washing, making beds, filling and cleaning lamps, mending and ironing, and other duties too numerous to mention.

Just think, 900 of the farm women visited told the agriculture agents that they worked nearly 12 hours a day—the year round! Eighty-seven per cent said they never took any vacations. Only 32 per cent of the 10,000 farms visited were supplied with running water; only 20 per cent had bathroom facilities. Only 1-10th of one per cent of the farms under consideration have hired help all the year round. Eighty-one per cent of the women care for the poultry; 36 per cent of the women help with the milking; 56 per cent care for the home vegetable gardens; 25 per cent help with the livestock and farm chores, and 24 per cent assist in field work.

Why LEAVES Turn Color in the FALL

THE beautiful colors of Autumn foliage are due to the decomposition of the green coloring matter that gives leaves their Spring and Summer verdure, according to Charles H. Butcher in a contribution to Conquest (London). While some of Mr. Butcher's examples are peculiar to England, this explanation holds good all over the world, wherever there are deciduous trees, or those that shed their leaves at the approach of Winter.

"During the Autumn the trees are very busy with preparations for their Winter rest," says Mr. Butcher, "and from the leaves, which during the Summer months were building up the plant tissues, every particle of value is being withdrawn and stored in the permanence of trunks and branches. The green coloring matter—chlorophyll—that made the leaves so vivid in the Spring and so refreshing in the Summer, begins to break up into substances of chameleon properties. When the sap has an acidic character these substances are red, and when it has an alkaline reaction they are blue, or intermediately violet. Some yellow granules, hitherto overshadowed by the green, come to light, and the rich tints of the Autumn leaves—reds and orange, yellows and purple—are produced.

"Never in their brightest season and never in their full luxuriance of maturity are the trees so brilliant and so finely colored as in Autumn, when they exchange their verdant Summer tints for the richest crimson and orange and purple. Some are anything and everything—golden yellow, glorious crimson, rich brown, rusty red, glowing scarlet, deep purple—all blotched and blended together into a thing of beauty, which one wishes would remain a joy forever.

"The coloring matter, chlorophyll, is a remarkable substance, and its presence gives the distinctive green color to the plant. Under the exciting influence of sunlight it absorbs carbon dioxid from the air, and then, together with water vapor absorbed from the soil, forms the constituents from which Nature builds up the solid portion of the plant. The substance may be extracted by macerating green leaves with spirits of wine, when that present in the ruptured cells dissolves, yielding a green solution, and leaving the plant tissues yellowish white. It appears to consist of two compounds, one of them yellow and the other blue, and it is generally supposed that the Autumn change from green to yellow and yellowish brown is largely due to the gradual disappearance of the blue compound.

"Every tree and shrub has its own characteristic Autumn coloring, which is often so distinctive as to render identification perfectly easy for some distance. The hedgerow containing maple, elder, and buckthorn will in Summer appear very possibly all equally green. But when the influence of Autumn makes itself felt, the various shrubs stand out with vivid distinctness. The maple changes to a deep tawny yellow, the elder remains green almost until its foliage falls, while the buckthorn turns to a mass of rich purple brown.

"The wayfaring tree becomes a deep chocolate color and makes a strong contrast with the ever-green ivy and the crimson and bronze-purple creepers. The horse-chestnut foliage passes from green through yellow to ruddy brown, and all three colors may often be found on one leaf, more or less blended and mottled. The nut varies from dull yellow to reddish brown, the elm becomes a golden yellow, and the ash turns a dull yellowish green; the barberry becomes scarlet, while the dogwood is crimson, and the oak is golden yellow.

"The horse-chestnut, one of the earliest, is usually the one in which the change in color of foliage is first perceptible. Then come the limes, the elms, the beeches and the oaks, the fading leaves of each trying to rival the others in their color. The year grows complete—a sheen of purple spreads over the lower slopes of the hills, the bracken turns golden and the woods become amber, carrying with their splendor a wonderful charm. In the sunshine the beech presents a glowing mass and a wealth of color that little else in this direction can surpass."

Liquid Oxygen as an Explosive

LIQUID oxygen is produced commercially by the fractional distillation of liquid air. The latter substance, just like the ordinary atmospheric air, contains 21 per cent of oxygen and 79 per cent of nitrogen. The nitrogen is more volatile, and evaporates more rapidly than the oxygen. Taking advantage of this, apparatus has been designed for evaporating all the nitrogen out and leaving the liquid oxygen. This is cheaper than condensing free oxygen, because it avoids the expense of getting the free oxygen in the gaseous state, free from impurity.

Among the interesting possible applications of liquid oxygen described in the Scientific American, is as an explosive in connection with charcoal. Wood charcoal at zero Centigrade will absorb 18 times its volume of gaseous oxogen; at the temperature of liquid oxygen it will take up 230 volumes instead of this mere 18. The charcoal thus impregnated burns with such extreme speed as to give violent detonation.

The explosion described was produced by liquid-oxygen, impregnated charcoal, using home-made methods exclusively. The charcoal was finely powdered and placed in a linen sack, 3½ inches in diameter and 15 inches long, to the end of which was fastened a dynamite fuse without any percussion cap. A hole was prepared under a 14-inch stump; and after submerging the sack of charcoal in liquid oxygen for about two minutes, it was placed hastily in the hole, tamped, and the fuse lighted. The explosion was similiar to that of dynamite. The stump was entirely removed and the roots so shattered that it would require very little additional work to remove them, while it seems that after using dynamite the stumps are often merely split without removing them.

It is suggested that liquid oxygen can be made at a price to compete with other commercial explosives. Other substitutes, such as cork, salt, sawdust, etc., may be used in place of charcoal.

HOW CALAMITY FOLLOWED SOME GLOUCESTER BOATS

Belief Held That International Fishing Schooner Racing Is Unlucky and That Men and Vessels Taking Part Often Come to Grief.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 19 (Associated Press).—While the ancient fishing port of Gloucester is preparing for the elimination race to-day to choose an American challenger for the International Fishermen's Cup now held by the schooner Bluenose of Nova Scotia, there is talk on street corners and in the forecastles of many a fishing boat of the "jink" that has followed these international racing series from their inception in 1920 up to the present time. With much uncanny fact the superstitious fisher folk back their belief that international schooner racing is "unlucky" and that vessels and men who take part in it too often come to an untimely end.

Two staunch Gloucester schooners that ventured into the danger zone of inter-country competition, one of them a cup winner, the other an intended challenger, rest today on the sands of Sable Island. Their bleached bones are often cited by believers in the Nemesis that stalks in the wake of racing fishermen. Bold skippers who sailed as masters or seamen on cup aspirants and contenders have met death in the adventure. Then there have been accidents, great and small, until the prophets of evil who say that "something is sure to happen when the schooners race" might appear to be amply justified.

The long record of mishap began in 1920, when the International Fishermen's Cup first was offered. During the elimination races at Halifax to choose that year's Canadian cup contender, the captain of one of the competing schooners fell overboard and was drowned while returning from one of the races. During the first international races series at Halifax in October, 1920, Benjamin Smith, one of the owners of the schooner Delawana, the Canadian competitor, died suddenly.

The next blow fell in June, 1921, when the Gloucester schooner Esperanto, victor over the Delawana, and the first and only American winner of the International Cup, went to her doom in the treacherous surf of Sable Island. By a strange freak of fate it was the schooner Elsie, destined to be the next defender of the trophy, that first reached the wrecked Esperanto and took off her crew. The Elsie was then commanded by Captain Alden Geele, whose present vessel, the Columbia, is favorite in next week's elimination test here.

Every effort to save the Esperanto from utter loss proved a failure. A wrecking expedition was fitted out here and operated for weeks from the beam trawler Fabria under the most hazardous conditions. Four times the wreckers brought the schooner to the surface only to see her sink again. Finally the venture was abandoned.

The Elsie, commanded by Captain "Marty" Welsh, lost to the Lunenburg schooner Bluenose in the series of 1921, sailed at Halifax. Ill luck attended her. During the second race, when the Elsie was making her best showing, her foretopmast was carried away.

Loyal Gloucester men who saw the Elsie lose at Halifax returned home and had the Puritan built as a cup contender. Their hopes died a-borning. Before the Puritan was launched the ancients of the waterfront knew she would never race. Her doom was sealed by an old superstition of the sea when one of her hatches overturned. The schooner left the stocks in April, 1922, and two months later she was claimed by the "graveyard of the Atlantic" when she piled up on the northwest bar of Sable Island, almost on the spot where the Esperanto was wrecked a year before.

Disaster and discouragement failed to deter the Gloucester fishermen. The Henry Ford was built. One hour after she was launched the Ford grounded on "The Spit," a treacherous sandbar at the mouth of the Essex River. For a week the hull pounded and jumped from one sandbar to another. Everybody but Captain Clayton Morrissey, who had sunk almost his entire savings in the Ford, gave her up for lost. Morrissey stuck to the work of salvage, and the schooner was floated, repaired and made ready for fishing.

Came the international series of 1922, the third since the cup was offered. The Henry Ford, after winning two straight races, one of which was disallowed by the judges, lost the next two and her chance at the trophy to the Bluenose. And tragedy continued to dog the racing craft. The night before the Canadian cup winner Bluenose was to sail for home Captain Bert Demone, one of her crew, fell from a dock in the darkness and was drowned. There had been minor mishaps during the series. In the Gloucester eliminations the Elizabeth Howard carried away her topmast in one race. In another she was kept from ramming a destroyer only by a cool, skilful management of her skipper, Captain Ben Pine. In the final international race the Ford was crippled by losing her foretopmast when about half over the course.

This year a syndicate of Gloucester men built the Columbia with an eye to cup competition. While on her second trip to the banks in command of Captain Alden Geele she was rammed by a French beam trawler off Sable Island and narrowly escaped sinking. She was towed into St. Perre for repairs and afterward resumed fishing. The accident prevented the Columbia from entering the race for the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy, sailed here this year in connection with Gloucester's 300th anniversary celebration.

During this year death has claimed Benjamin A. Smith, for many years president of the Gorton-Pew Company of Gloucester. As he was the man who made the first international race possible by fitting out the Esperanto when it seemed likely that the Nova Scotia challenge would go to default, his death is added to the lengthy list of unhappy incidents connected with the competition.

Today in talk along the waterfront fishermen divide into two schools of thought. Some look for additions to the chapter of accidents to cup contenders and aspirants; while others believe that everything has happened that can happen, and that luck is due to turn.

MOSLEM WORLD DECLARES A WAR ON THE EUROPEANS

Grand Shiek Says Followers of Prophet Will Battle Until Europe Is Driven Out of North Africa and the East.

(By EDWARD BING)

ANGORA, Oct. 19 (United Press).—"The Senussi will not rest until the last Italian has left the soil of Tripoli."

In the first interview ever granted by this distinguished and dramatic leader of a strange, mystic brotherhood, whose followers stretch from the western hills of Morocco to the desert banks of the Red Sea, the Grand Sheik of the Senussi told of the grim war that is being fought to drive the European invaders from the African shores.

"We are determined to follow the Turkish example," he declared.

"The Moslem world will oust the foreign invaders everywhere.

Backing New Caliph

"The Senussi and all Moslems are solidly backing the new caliph, Abdul Medjid.

"In reply to the recent suggestion recommending King Hussein of the Hedjaz for the caliphate, I declare that Hussein, although he is a direct descendant of The Prophet's family, has committed acts unworthy of any incompatible with his position as the Prophet's descendant.

"Except perhaps for a few of Hussein's personal followers, all Moslems recognize the Caliphate of Constantinople, as long as it is held by the Osman family.

"However, should the exiled ex-Sultan try to claim the caliphate, he will not find any followers.

"All Islam backs the new caliph and the Turkish nationalist movement.

"I believe that the abolition of the temporal power of the caliphate has raised the latter's moral position through the world of Islam, for now that the caliphate is not associated with any particular nation (as the old Caliphate was a joint office with that of the Sultan of Turkey) it has become the spiritual property of all Moslems.

"I believe that I speak for all the Senussi—that is, my followers—who number many millions, forming almost half the population of Morocco, a third of the population of Algiers, half of Tunis, the entire population of Tripoli, the Benghazi, comprising the western tribes of Egypt, and part of the population of the Hedjaz Yemen, numbering 3,000,000 people in the West Soudan alone.

"I voice the sentiments of all Moslems when I say that we admit that western technique and science are good working methods, but that eastern technique, especially Moslem traditions, spirit, culture and morals, must remain untouched.

"If we lost them we would lose much more than we might gain by adopting the methods of the western world."

WEEKLY BOOK REVIEW

Prize-Winning Novel Leads Reverence To The Mid-West

DEAN REVIEWS
The Able McLaughlins, by Margaret Wilson (Harpers).

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The significent note in new literature is the change in attitude of authors toward inland America.

Our cousins in Minnesota, Ohio and Iowa need no longer hang their heads because of the ridicule poked at them in "Main Street" and its contemporaries.

Authors have turned the time of action back a generation or two and are picturing the heroic careers of those who carried civilization beyond the Alleghenies. The provincial attitude of authors toward the provinces has changed to one of reverence.

Three of the six books of recent months are "A Lost Lady," "The Hawkeye" and "The Able McLaughlins." In each of them pioneer characters of the mid west are molded in heroic size.

* * *

Margaret Wilson won first prize in the Harper prize novel contest and was awarded $2000 for "The Able McLaughlins." She competed against 750 other novelists.

* * *

The able McLaughlins were Scot immigrants who settled 60 miles beyond the end of a railroad in Iowa, a father and mother and 10 children. Wully and Allen, the oldest of the boys, fought with the Union army in the Civil War. Allen was killed. After that it was the brave Isobel McLaughlin who sent Wully back into battle.

Isobel and her husband were Scotch Covenanters. Their days began and ended with scripture reading and psalm singing, the smaller children often falling asleep during the evening ceremony, thus being ready for bed.

If Isobel were prouder of one child than another it was Wully. When Wully came back from the war he married Christie McNair, a neighbor lass.

The early arrival of a son dealt Wully's mother a heart breaking blow. "She was a woman who had sympathy with the mother of Zebedee's sons. If she had been there with Christ, she would have asked unashamed for four places on his right, and for four on his left, the nearest eight seats for her eight sons. What dreams she had dreamed for them * * * Wully was a man now, and a man who brought women to ruin."

Later she learned from Christie that Wully had not been unhonorable, that Wully had driven the seducer from the countryside and had insisted on marrying the girl he loved. Wully's mother had to idealize her son again. She could see that he had done a generous thing. And she would see that the world saw that. She could run to meet Christie's mother, now, across the floor of heaven, unashamed.

The story goes on with the bleakness of prairie winters and the richness of prairie summers, with the pride of the McLaughlins, their home building and their up stream struggle. It ends with Wully and Christie coming face to face again with Christie's early betrayer. They drove him home in their wagon, to die.

Christie turned her smiling face to Wully. "And almost before Wully could smile in return he stopped. He turned around. He thought he heard a groan from his load. He couldn't even smile at her with that man possibly spying upon them. He looked—and from the end of the wagon that man had lifted his head a little, like a snake, and had seen the smile that Christie had turned upon her husband. At the terrible sight of that face he pitied his enemy. That coward, in his damned way, had loved Christie. And in his tormented sunken dying he had seen all the sweet intimacy from which he had been shut out and had sunk back, felled by the blow of that revelation. Wully had foregone revenge. He had forborne running a sword less sharp through his fallen enemy than Christie's wifely smile had been."

* * *

Wully McLaughlin is one of the most rugged heroes of contemporary fiction. Creation of such a character alone would have entitled Miss Wilson to the prize her novel brought her.

Best sellers during the past month, as compiled for The Bookman by Frank Parker Stockbridge, are:

GENERAL—"Life of Christ," "Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," "The Mind in the Making," "Etiquette," "The Outline of History," "The Americanization of Edward Bok," "A Man From Maine," "The Goose Step," "Up Stream" and "Damaged Souls."

* * *

It is interesting to note that "The Covered Wagon," which ran serially in the Satevepost several years ago, is now a best seller in book form. There can be no doubt that this is directly attributable to the influence of motion pictures on literature. "The Covered Wagon" was transferred to the screen several months ago. This has aroused the interest of the public in the story.

This situation also proves that the motion picture public is the reading public and that producers who have been turning out photodramas to meet moron intelligence have been shooting considerably below their target.

LOCAL COUNCIL

Miss Tomkins suggested that convenors of different committees within the Council's fold should bring to the meetings their own subjects for discussion in turn. "Everyone in the society should be an individualist, and everyone should do her own duty, regardless of her neighbor's actions."

Japanese Relief.

An appeal from the National Board asking for Local Council contributions to the Japanese Relief Fund was tabled. In the discussion which followed the announcement of this appeal, Mrs. Mowat asked if it would be advisable to make a break in the society's routine and get up some sort of a social function that would enable the organization to make money to donate to such good causes. "There is hardly another Local Council," said the president, "that doesn't raise money in some way, and it is astonishing how much money they do raise for local purposes." A motion that the appeal be tabled, with no action at present, was finally passed, after an amendment that the society have a tea for the purpose of raising money for Japanese relief work, failed to secure a seconder.

Benevolent Soap Wrappers.

Mrs. Mowat referred to a pamphlet recording the aims and objects of the Travellers' Aid Society, which does so much good in its travelling care of the aged, infirm and sick, and for children and young girls without escorts. The society has been receiving funds for this work largely through the gathering of soap wrappers, which the Council was informed netted the organization a premium from the soap company of 50 cents for every hundred turned in, but expenses last year amounted to $2,654, a larger amount than usual, and, in order to carry on their work, the society is making an appeal for increased donations of soap wrappers. The local W.C.T.U. Society acts also as a local Travellers' Aid Society.

Mrs. Mowat also announced that, at the next regular meeting of the Local Council, Dr. N. H. Sutton will give a talk on what the Government is doing with regard to maternity care for women. The President stressed the importance of the subject, when the excessively large infant mortality rate is considered, and recommended to the ladies the study, prior to Dr. Sutton's talk, of the report made by Mrs. Hannington, of Ottawa, who outlined the necessity for this sort of maternity care in a section of this year's Year Book, which was distributed at yesterday's meeting.

Local Sanitary Conditions.

One of the ladies brought to the attention of the Council several matters which she regarded as worthy of their thoughtful consideration. One was the high cost of bread locally, while flour was recorded as being as low in price in Peterboro as anywhere in the Dominion. The second matter was the apartment house-building in the city which contains twelve apartments and only four bathrooms, an unsanitary arrangement which it was reported was beyond the power of the Chamber of Commerce or various city officials to rectify. Attention was also drawn to the problem of women in employment, and the desirability of elevating the profession of domestic workers from the menial class, so as to encourage more young women to take up this most "desirable career for women." Dressmaking also was in danger of becoming a lost art to women.

Mrs. W. R. Morris was of the opinion that the dignity of labor and the cultivation of the intellect undertaken by technical schools would be a means of solving the problem.

Objectionable Literature.

The Council, through various members, had its usual criticism of The Examiner to offer. A strong objection was voiced in the reading of the correspondence, which had brought a letter and a copy of some offending material to the Council through the mail, to the inclusion in The Evening Examiner of the literary efforts of Jack Lait, several of whose stories were strongly disapproved of. Other members also voiced the opinion that reports from outside sources of scandals and divorce suits and certain types of love affairs should be deleted from The Examiner's columns. One lady, discussing the question, was of the opinion that publicity of minute details in connection with local unsavory sex affairs, when published, would be desirable, however, so as to obviate the danger of the public mind connecting innocent persons with such cases.

Film and Lecture.

Mrs. Mowat asked Mrs. W. R. Morris to explain the nature of a film called "The Gift of Life" which will be shown here next week to women exclusively. This is a Government film, which is being shown in various centres of population, the Government asking some one organization to be responsible for its showing, so that a reasonable number of people may be assured as an audience. Miss Moore, a Government employee, is explaining the film, which will be shown in the city, probably at the Public Library, during Thursday and Friday of next week, to selected audiences. The film is designed to stress the proper ideal of motherhood and to educate women in the facts of life from the highest standpoint. No entrance fee will be charged. The Social Hygiene Council of the city is looking after arrangements for the hall, light, etc.

Amendments to Laws.

Miss Hazel Moffat, convenor of the Law Committee, gave a brief but illuminating resume of recent amendments of laws affecting women, gleaned from the report made by the convenor of laws at the annual meeting of the National Council.

Mention was also made of the further provision made in the law regarding care of dumb animals, which are not allowed to be transported in a manner that will cause suffering, such as depriving cattle in transit of rest, food and water.

In April a law was passed making it legal for a woman to marry the brother of her deceased husband, or that brother's son. For desertion of his children, a man may now be forced to pay a sum not exceeding weekly a total of $20; a law has been passed giving a mother, as well as a father, equal rights as guardians of their children; a law raising the age of consent from fourteen to sixteen years was ratified by the Commons and squashed by the Senate; greater protection has been afforded feeble-minded women and girls by recent legislation; and two laws passed by the recent Provincial Government, and since practically declared null by a later administration, were those relating to publication of race-track information and "blue sky" laws.

In discussion of these laws, the remark was made that an endeavor by Mr. Watson, M.P.P. for Victoria, to have legislation put through making a will void which did not leave to a man's wife or children sufficient money to prevent them from suffering financially by such a will, has been frustrated by Mr. Nickle, the present Attorney-General, whose opinion as expressed was to the effect that the liberty of a man would be interfered with too greatly by such restrictions, and that any man should have full control of his own money and leave it as he wished.

The next meeting (November) will be nomination meeting.

SHIFTING.

The furniture industry is shifting from northern states to the south, according to a leading southern railroad official. Especially to North Carolina, where the lumber supply is big—same as cotton industry shifted southward to be near source of supply.

Interesting shifts will take place similiarly in other industries in years ahead. Long distance transportation is too costly for any of production to be far distant from source of supply. That's one of chief troubles of cities—too far from food sources. The airplane and cheap fuel could change the situation.

THICKENING.

Tapioca may be used very successfully to thicken a clear soup.

DOUBTFUL WHICH HORSE WILL RACE

Reports Say "My Own" Substituted For Zev Against Papyrus.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Zev has developed a skin malady which may prevent Rancer's colt from carrying the colors of the United States in the $100,000 race with Papyrus to-morrow, it was learned to-day. The Jockey Club's race committee, however, after inspecting the horse, indicated it would withhold decision pending arrival of My Own which has been ordered here prepared to take Zev's place if necessary.

My own to-day was substituted for Zev United States representative against the British Derby winner, Papyrus in the $100,000 international horse race at Belmont Park tomorrow, the New York Sun, said it learned this morning.

The air was thick this morning with rumors concerning the contest. One was to the effect that Zev had suddenly developed a malady akin to mange, but this was not confirmed. A crop of rumors rose upon the announcement late yesterday that My Own, owned by Rear Admiral Grayson had been ordered here from Laurel, Md., to be held in readiness as a substitute for Racer's entry.

PLANS TO PROTECT BANK DEPOSITORS

Will Demand That The Dominion Government Make Good Losses.

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Plans to protect the savings of sixty thousand depositors of Home Bank were made yesterday at a meeting of committee chosen by the general meeting of depositors recently.

It was decided to apply to the government to make good entire losses of the depositors, on the ground of negligence of the department of finance, inasmuch as they were "perfectly cognisant several years ago of the state of affairs of the bank."

It was felt, said a member of committee that when the assistant to the president of the bank reported to the government that dividends were being paid out of deposits and not being earned, that it was duty of the finance department to have protected the public in some way.

Failing redress from the government at Ottawa it is the intention of depositors to have a bill recouping them for their losses presented to premier.

WORLD EVENTS

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—A controversy has started between Henry Ford and Secretary of War Weeks which promises to count a lot in politics.

Ford blames Weeks for his failure to get Muscle Shoals. Not that he cares, Ford says. True, he thinks Weeks meant to injure him, but the fact is he has water power enough. No, he remarks, "it is not to me that Weeks has anything to explain; let him explain to the farmers."

That is, Ford declares, the thing for which the Shoals really are valuable is to supply the farmers with cheap fertilizer. And this, he predicts, if "Weeks' friends" get them, is just what they won't use them for. They can afford, he says, to pay all it's worth for the property, in order to let it stay idle, so as to "retain the endless millions they now make through exhorbitant prices of power and fertilizer."

Secretary Weeks' Reply.

Weeks though this statement by Ford worth a visit to President Coolidge right away. Then he issued an answer. "Reckless assertions" on Ford's part was its keynote. His reply, Weeks added, would have been "hotter if I were able to speak as a private citizen."

CRAFT CHARGES MADE.

The Oklahoma Legislature finally met in special session. It was called by Governor Walton to consider anti-Ku Klux laws, but many people thought an attempt to impeach Walton would come first. Instead, a huge graft scandal came to the fore. A debate started in which it was charged official corruption has been rampant ever since the State was admitted. An investigation's to begin at once.

FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The American Federation of Labor in session at Portland, Ore., re-elected Samuel Gompers president, after vigorously repudiating the views of the "red" element which Gompers accused of "boring from within."

WETS AND DRYS.

The labor federation also voted overwhelmingly for beer and light wine. Bootleggers were denounced by President D'Allesendro of the International Hodcarriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union, as among prohibition's strongest supporters, W. P. Clark, spokesman for the Flint Glass Workers' Union, declared whisky glass manufacture has enjoyed a boom since pre-prohibition days.

IN THE RUHR.

When Germany surrendered to France in the Ruhr she thought France would be ready to discuss a settlement. However, France says there's nothing to discuss. Just go back to work, she told the Ruhr people.

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, October 19. United Press. — Prices continued to move in a narrow range in the early dealings in the stock market, reflecting a balance between the continuing unfavorable aspect of the European news and the many constructive features of the domestic business situation. About the most striking of these was the maintenance of car loadings above the million mark and the $14,000,000 decrease in re-discounts of the Federal reserve system, which demonstrated that a plentiful money supply existed for all purposes. Industrial leaders showed little change from the previous close but Willy Overland continued its spectacular demonstration against a badly trapped short interest, jumping up to 68 against Thursday's low of 61. Irregularity continued in the general list during the first hour but a conspicuous feature of the trading was the fact that the main body of stocsk was no longer subjected to pressure when professionals attempted to get prices down. The openings were concentrated upon issues like the Pan-Americans, regarding which unfavorable developments are expected, and the tires shares, which are considered in an inauspicious trade position. If any positive trend existed in other sections of the list it was upward. Woolworth was a prominent specialty, continuing in demand around the year's best levels. Rumours that a stock dividend is under contemplation are persistent. The buying has been coming from interests in close touch with the company's affairs.

Opening prices included: Studebaker 96 3-4; American Can 92 3-8 off 1-8; American Woollens 71 off ¼; Great Northern Preferred 51 3-4 up 1-8; Steel 87½ up 1-8; Pan American B 51 1-2 off ¼; A 54 7-8 up 1-4; Baldwin 117 up 1-4; Marine Preefrred 26 3-4; Baltimore & Ohio 56 3-8 up 1-8; Northern Pacific 60 1-8 off 1-8; Anaconda 35½ off ¼. Bethlehem Steel 47 3-4 up 1-8. Southern Railway 86.

MINING MARKET.

(From Strobie, Furlong Co.)

The mining market for the past few days has been dull. Yesterday's volume reached about three hundred thousand shares on both sides. The feature of the market is the smart advance on Lake Shore.

Reaction seems to have run its course, and all the Gold stocks are popular again. Look for a rising market in Vipond, Tough Oakes, Burnside, and some of the Silvers, under the leadership of Keeley.

We think strong features will be Crown Reserve, McIntyre, Wright Hargraves, Castle Trethewey; and we look for greatly increasing volume.

Tough Oakes Burnside market has been cleaned of stock, and the technical position is probably the soundest on the Board. Enquiries continue to be heavy, and the volume large in this security. We hear Crown Reserve is being quietly absorbed by Rochester interests.

MORE BIBLE READING WITH PASSING YEARS

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(Associated Press). — People are reading the Bible to-day more than ever before, says the Daily Telegraph, which quotes figures of the British and Foreign Bible Society to support its assertion.

There was an increase in the number of Bibles published in the English and Welsh languages during the war, followed by a decrease after the close of hostilities. The year 1922 again showed an increase, however, which points to a "revival of Bible reading in the homeland."

Significant of the world-wide influence of the Bible are the society's figures of their issues in all languages for the past century and a quarter. The figures are summaries of totals at intervals of 25 years, and include Bibles, Testaments and portions of the Scriptures:

Take, too, the test of translation. Homer has been rendered into more than a score of foreign languages, and Shakespeare into nearly forty. Both together fall far short of the translations of the Bible, for the Gospel has been actually printed in more than 700 different forms of human speech, and the Bible Society, as their share of this work, has helped to spread the message in 558 languages and dialects.

Alpha Centauri, the nearest star to the earth, is 25,000,000,000,000 miles away.

CHALLENGER HAD ONE FINE CHANCE TO WIN

Fight Pictures at Capitol Show That At One Stage Firpo Had Victor Within His Grasp.

BALL TEAM TONIGHT

Peterboro people who do not believe that Luis Angel Firpo, the "wild bull of the Pampas," did not have one royal chance of wresting the championship laurels from the brow of Jack Dempsey in their memorable clash at the Polo Grounds last month, should see the moving pictures of the fight as shown at the Capitol Theatre, commencing last night and continuing for the balance of the week.

The film shows convincingly that Dempsey was at the mercy of the Argentine representative when he was shoved back into the ring near the end of the first round and that a more experienced a less excited workman than Firpo would have had little difficulty in putting the champion away. Dazed by the blow which drove him through the ropes Dempsey, was tottering, defenceless and wide open but the challenger failed to take advantage of the opportunity and his one chance to win faded away with the gong. Dempsey decidedly the superior fighter recovered quickly during the rest period and soon battered Firpo into unconsciousness in the second round.

The picture leaves little doubt as to the ability of the two men—but it also leaves no doubt as to the truth of the statement that the man from the Argentine had victory within his grasp at one stage of the short but sensational fight.

It is an excellent film remarkably clear and distinct in its photography and Peterboro people who see it at the Capitol can actually see more of the details of the fight than the majority of the 90,000 fans who paid high prices for seats at the Polo grounds were able to detect. It reveals clearly that the charges of unsportsmanlike fighting on the part of Dempsey were correct for on several occasions the champ standing over the prostrate form of his rival hit Firpo before the latter had a chance to regain his balance. As the picture is run through both with quick and slow camera this feature of the fight impresses everyone who sees it.

In addition to the actual fight there are some splendid pictures of the training operations of both men. Dempsey and Firpo are shown in action against their sparring partners and the difference in the style of the two is very noticeable. Dempsey is seen to be much faster and more clever than the challenger who looks slow and clumsy in comparison.

To-night Manager Kennedy of the Capitol is entertaining the members of Peterboro's four champion teams the C.G.E., Lakeviews, Curlers, and Rotary Bantams at a theatre party. The fight pictures and Jack Holt in "A Gentleman of Leisure" make a great bill for the baseball boys.

GEOLOGIST DESCRIBES BRAND NEW IRON ORE

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—Associated Press. — Minnesota is producing a brand new iron ore, according to Prof. George M. Schwartz, of the department of geology, University of Minnesota. Three hundred tons a day of the new product is going to Detroit for use in the manufacture of a widely known automobile.

Magnetite iron bearing rock has been known to exist for many years in Northern Minnesota. Schwartz explained, but it has been impossible to call it an ore because it could not be smelted by any simple process. The magnetic concentration process, introduced by an iron company on the Mesabi range in northern Minnesota, however changes the rock into a true ore capable of being smelted, and it is on this account that it is now considered a new ore.

This magnetite rock is found in huge beds at the east end of the Mesabi range and has limitless possibilities of development, according to geologists and miners at the Minnesota university. The concentrating machinery that is being used was invented some years ago by E. W. Davis, superintendent of the mines experiment station at the University of Minnesota.

"The magnetite ore being used at present," Dr. Schwartz declared, "is found on the part of the Mesabi range which lies east of the town of Mesaba. The pit of the Mesabi Iron Company, is near Sulphur Siding, at a new town called Babbitt. This part of the range is usually known as the East Mesabi, and extends from the town of Mesaba to Birtch Lake, a distance of 20 miles. It was in this area that the iron formation of Minnesota was first discovered, but on account of the absence of rich ores, it received little attention until recently.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR TEA

To a limited extent people of the Southern States of America have been familiar with cassena as a substitute for tea. The shrub grows wild and abundantly from Virginia to Texas. The Bureau of Chemistry at Washington has discovered a way of curing cassena leaves so that they make a "delightful beverage," and it believes that the laboratory experiments can be repeated on a commercial scale.

U.S. PREPARING FOR NEXT WAR

Great Test Mobilization of America's Military Forces Is Billed For Next Year.

By A. L. BRADFORD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(United Press).—Two million men to "fall in" for the first mobilization in the next great war into which the United States must exert its military power!

This is the expectation of the American war department under the plans of the new military policy which is to be put to a supreme trial in the great test mobilization scheduled to take place on the next birthday of General John J. Pershing, the man behind the nation's new military creed.

But war department official explain, this plan is none too ambitious in comparison with the military power of the other great nations of the world. They point out that France mobilized 2,000,000 men during the first two weeks of the Word War and that Japan can mobilize 2,000,000 men, equipped to the last word, inside of ten days.

In another great war there would have to be further mobilization beyond the 2,000,000 figure. America, it is estimated, could mobilize a total of 20,000,000 men. At the end of the World War, the United States had mobilized about 5,000,000 men.

But in order to effect such military achelevements quickly and smoothly and without the slowness and inefficiency that attended our unpreparedness in the World War, the new military policy of the United States must be made completely effective—America must put her heart into national defense. High army officers here repeatedly emphasize that the Allies held the enemy for us during many months in the World War—and aid that we cannot expect to count upon in another world conflict.

New Military Policy

Briefly, the plan of the new military policy of the United States is:

The army of the United States is divided into three components—the Regular Army, the National Guard and, more important than any, the Organized Reserves. In any democratic country, if not, in fact, every country, the great mass of the soldiers in any big war must be furnished by the rank and file of the people.

The basis of the power of the Organized Reserves at present lies in the training and experience that our citizen soldiers received in the American army on the battlefields of France—the military power instilled in men draw suddenly from the clerkships, the factories, the executive desks all over the country.

The citizenry of the United States is being further trained for another defense of America—and this is the real scheme of the new military policy—through:

1.—The Citizens' Military Training Camps held every summer, where citizens are trained the first year to be soldiers; the second year, non-commissioned officers, and the third year, second lieutenants.

3.—Organized Reserve Training Camps, where our citizen soldiers are trained to be the higher officers in the army.

The Regular Army and National Guard will bear the same relation the great citizen army of the United States in a future war that the Allied armies bore to the American army in the World War—that is, as a stop gap in the trenches against the enemy until the main forces arrived, officers of the war department point out.

KING TUT'S DISCOVERIES.

Mr. Howard Carter, the American archaeological expert who recently uncovered for Lord Canarvon the tomb of Tutenkhamen in the Valley of the Kings, is no amateur, but a graduate of the school of experience. In 1903 he was Inspector General of the antiquities of Upper Egypt, and was entrusted by Mr. Theodore Davies, a wealthy patron of archaeology, with the direction of some excavations that disclosed the tomb of Thutmose III. In the same year the tomb of Queen Hatshepsut was cleared out by him on a Davies endowment. Under a Davies commission Mr. Carter discovered the last resting place of Queen Ti, mother of King Akhnaton, predecessor of Tutenkhamen. He gave up his government post in 1904 to prosecute his recent search.

"Yachting tours" in ocean liners are popular with Americans, trips to the Arctic even being proposed.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Clifford C. Robinson

No out-of-doors exercise, such as golf, tennis, cricket, rowing or riding, has ever killed anyone except through accident. I have been a golf player for the past 15 years and as a physician can testify to its great health-building qualities.

What a real surprise you would get if someone should say—"Don't go out and play golf, if may kill you." Yet we are continually hearing this advice, in one way and another, from those who should know better.

The death of A. R. Smith, secretary of Dover College, England, while playing golf, has been made the subject of much newspaper comment on both sides of the ocean. It is not right to exaggerate such events. It scares a lot of old fellows out of their only fun in life. Golf wasn't to blame at all, but something else in body condition, that golf helps to overcome every day.

Mr. Smith was 65 years of age. The broadcaster at once gave out this query—"At what age should golfers quit the game?" John D. is almost 90 and still at it. It might just as well be asked, at what age should we begin?

No definite information or statistics are vailable, on the age of golf players, in the hundreds of clubs in this country. The only statistics we have, is that thousands are greatly benefited every day by this open-air exercise. To say that arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) has progressd so far, at 60, that golf swinging is dangerous—is pure bunk.

The fact is, there is much coordination between mind and muscles in this wonderful game. The leg muscles are strengthened, also those of abdomen, back and shoulders. The ankles, which often stiffen up a bit at 50—are kept free and supple by stretching and turning. While the strokes, hazards and distance keep the mind interested.

A new club has recently been formed in Chicago, limiting its membership to those over 50. Over 100 signed up the first week.

MULCH STRAWBERRIES

It Will Assure Larger Yields of Bigger Berries

Use Marsh Hay or Clean Straw—Apply in Fall When Ground Is Frozen—Renovating Old Patches—Winter Conditions for Bees—Why Plant Trees?

The practice of applying a coating of straw, strawy manure, or marsh hay over the strawberry bed after permanent frost has set in and the ground is solid, has proved of great value. This mulch prevents alternate freezing and thawing in the spring, and heaving of the plants, both of which cause at times heavy loss. It also protects the plants if the snowfall is light, and is even more valuable when pulled between the rows in the early spring. This conserves moisture and more especially keeps the fruit clean. Driving rains splash the fruit with dirt, particularly on sandy land, which will much lessen the value of the crate or shipment into which these berries are put. A box of dirty berries will ruin the appearance of a whole crate.

Marsh Hay or Clean Straw Best Mulch

Marsh hay or clean, medium length, straw are the best materials to use. Green manure is not good because of the large number of weed seeds it contains. No material which will pack over the plants is to be recommended. As two to three inches is sufficient mulch, and a heavy coating may cause heating in the spring before removal, it is not advisable to use more. About two tons per acre is required.

When it is desired to hold the plants back in the spring to prevent blossom killing by late frosts, the mulch is best applied on top of the first heavy snow fall. It should be removed in all cases before the plants start growth, as after that time much damage may be done by smothering. After harvest the mulch is removed, burned, or, if suitable, can be stacked in a protected place for use another year.

Renovating an Old Patch

In renovating an old patch it is not advisable to burn the mulch and mowed leaves on the patch. These should be raked off and burned outside the patch, to avoid injury to the crowns of the plants.

No crop should be grown between the rows in a strawberry bed for cover crop or protective purposes. This provides too much competition for the plants in moisture and food at a time when the grower wants them to fill up the rows for the following year's fruiting.—D. A. Kimball, O. A. C., Guelph.

WINTER CONDITIONS FOR BEES

To winter bees successfully the colonies must have:

A sufficient supply of proper food.
A good, fertile queen.
Plenty of good workers.
Sufficient protection from cold and wind.

While the winter food, either honey or sugar, should have been in the hives by October 1, it may still be given to the bees. Protection is afforded either by packing properly or insulating the hives outdoors, or by transferring them to a good cellar where at least five conditions can be maintained; darkness, freedom from disturbance, a temperature of from 44 to 48 degrees Fahrenheit, proper ventilation and freedom from moisture.

A dark place is best, as bees usually fly to windows, doors or lamps, and do not return to their hives. Freedom from disturbance includes not only absence of noise but absence of jarring and vibration. An even, reasonable temperature must be maintained in order that the bees may not break their winter cluster. Proper ventilation is required in order to prevent accumulation of moisture and to aid in maintaining the needed temperature as well as adequate supplies of air. Dryness is required or the bee-bread combs will mold, some of the honey will ferment and the bees will be uneasy.

WHY PLANT TREES?

Trees add value to property.
Trees cool the air in summer and radiate warmth in winter.
Trees help keep the air pure for man and the lower animals.
Trees provide homes for thousands of birds that help man in his fight against injurious insects.
Trees provide homes for many animals that are useful to men for food and clothing.
Trees help man in his fight for better sanitation.
Trees supply a large part of all the fuel in the world.
Trees give us wood, and wood provides us with building material, furniture, implements, utensils, tools, and other useful things in great variety.
Trees improve the climate and conserve soil and water.
Trees provide a great variety of miscellaneous, useful products.—The Maritime Farmer.

Where the walls join the floor of the stable, be certain that the cement is rounded; not like a "quarter-round" but like a "cove." It will help to keep the barn clean. Do not neglect this precaution because it may be slightly inconvenient for the person doing the cement work; remember the inconvenience it will be daily not to have the rounded corner.

Uncle Ab says: A community that doesn't pull together will get as much work done as a balky team.

Any one who likes game birds to eat, such as quail grouse and pheasant, can have a supply of meat just as good as any of these by raising a few guinea fowls. Guineas hunt their own feed nine months in the year, and are as good as a watch dog to raise an alarm when something goes amiss. It is a hardy hawk that will take a chicken when there are guineas around.

Do not include the common green or the purple barberry in your list of shrubs for this season's planting. Both are a host plant for the wheat rust and must not be planted near wheat fields. The Thunberg's or Japanese barberry is much more satisfactory for ornamental purposes.

The potato grower who gives thought to labor, seed, and fertilizer is tackling the potato problem in the right way. Seeds, like folks, like a good bed. Prepare it well and make more money.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—While working at the top of a telephone pole here to-day, Albert Menard, a Bell Telephone lineman, received a severe electric shock and fell from the pole. Although badly burned he is expected to recover.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

FOUR PERFORMANCES AT ROYAL SATURDAY

In order to accommodate the never ending crowds who want to see "Squibs wins the Calcutta Sweeps", the Royal will have four performances on Saturday. A special performance for the children at 10 a.m. regular matinee at 2.30 and twice Saturday evening at 7 and 9.

Capacity Audiences See "Squibs Wins The Calcutta Sweep"

English Photoplay at Royal Featuring Wonderful Betty Balfour, is Really Great

Giggles were followed by laughs, laughs by shouts, and shouts by screams at the Royal Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, when the famous English comedy "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep," literally screaming mirth with every flicker on the silver sheet and with a small dash of seriousness thrown in, delighted crowds that filled every seat in the theatre and then some.

"Me and My Gal," to which this picture is a sequel, was a comedy with a laugh at every foot, but "Squibbs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" is a riot of mirth. It came to London for the first time after it had left millions in "Ol' Lunnon" still in the throes of laughter, heralded by press notices that have been unsurpassed. The notices, however, did not and could not do justice to this comic masterpiece—it cannot be described in writing, but seeing is believing, and the capacity crowds personified the song. "With song and laughter they rocked the house from floor to rafter."

Betty Balfour, comedienne supreme, appears in the title role and her characterization of "Squibs" is one that will "jolt the bilious and jazz up the blue." England's foremost screen comedian, Hugh E. Wright, brings "Sam 'Opkins" into the limelight in a way that outshines even the light itself.

The greater portion of the action in "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweep" is staged in Paris—and really staged in Paris. The boulevards of Paris figure prominently and the entire company was taken across the channel for the purpose, and the result is such that it can be classed with the greatest feats of photography on either continent.

The plot is well worthy of the artists and the intricate weaving of the extremely comic by-plays around it. "The Calcutta Sweeps," the greatest annual horse race in the world, brings unlimited fortune to none other than Sam 'Opkins himself, who held a ticket bearing the same name as the "Sweep" winner—and thereby hangs the tale. Even the "Sweep" is transmitted to the screen, and the result is one that makes you feel like going out and buying the city hall. It's a great picture.

Art Acord in the "Oregon Trail" depicts the trials of the early pioneers in the West and seems to try to be historically correct. It is interesting.

Four performances are advertised for Saturday: 10 a. m., 2.30, 7 and 9.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The main attraction at the Capitol Theatre for the week end programme is the official picture presentation of the Dempsey-Firpo fight, which are described in detail elsewhere in this issue.

"A Gentleman of Leisure" is an entertaining feature of the society drama type, with Jack Holt shown to decidedly less advantage than in the usual run of pictures, where he is presented in more red-blooded fashion. However, as Robert Willougby Pitt, he has a rather interesting part that portrays his struggles to win various wagers. As a rich man about town, he makes a bet in London which he keeps in New York and does some lightning speed work in his courtship of Molly Creedon, played by Sigrid Holmquist. The impecunious Sir Spencer pursues Molly in half-hearted fashion, egged on by his aunt, Lady Dreever, a part that is portrayed in excellent style, with some new and natural effects in the lady's acting, but Pitt captures the heroine, after becoming involved in a mix-up which points to him as the clever thief of the famous Dreever pearls. Spike Mullen, of "Worthington," is a bewildered burglar who helps Pitt to achieve his purpose. Light comedy is the note achieved in the feature picture.

Larry Semon stars in "The Gown Shop," a hilarious comedy that shows a slightly different trend to Semon's style. Like so many of the other comedians, he improves with each picture, getting away by degrees from the slap-stick stuff laid on so heavily in earlier efforts. Although there is a good deal of smashed-up furniture and sudden baths and such things in "The Gown Shop," the treatment of episodes shows a certain amount of finesse that tend to bring constant chuckles from the audience, instead of loud guffaws of sudden mirth.

A feature of the Capitol entertainment is the really entertaining and instructive short reels that appear to gather from the earth's distant and queer corners the material for their brief sidelights on strange manners and things.

OLD SHOE CONFETTI

The practice of throwing an old shoe after a bride is, it seems, quite misapplied when it is done by some of her companions for luck. According to the spirit of the ceremony, which is of very ancient mileage, it should be done by a parent or guardian of the bride, as indicating a renouncing of authority over her. Chieftains in feudal times took off their shoes and handed them to their conquerors in token of accepted defeat, from which practice this slipper-throwing custom is said to have descended.

AT THE REGENT.

"SALOMY JANE" IS DELIGHTFUL.

One of the most delightful picture offerings seen in Peterboro in many months, is "Salomy Jane," a Paramount picturization of Bret Harte's celebrated story of California during the gold rush days, which proved delightful to a large audience at the Regent last night. Jacqueline Logan, George Fawcett and Maurice Flynn, the featured players of an unusually capable cast, were excellent in their respective portrayals of Jane, Yuba Bill and the stranger.

The scenes are laid in the mining town of Red Dog, and from the robbery of the stage coach at the start down to the finish, when Jane and the stranger plight their troth the thrills never cease for a moment. Western pictures may be regarded as ordinary, but this production by George Melford rises to the dignity of majesty of art and beauty. The shots of mountain scenery, and of a storm with wild rides, seldom have been equalled and never surpassed by any other picture. No one who likes strong, virile, beautiful and impressive pictures can afford to miss "Salomy Jane."

IMMIGRANTS ON

of the immigrants get better treatment right here than they were used to back in their own homes? People wonder why the immigrant tries a chance on being excluded. Folks wonder why they don't stay at home. Of course, it is disappointing when they can't land in New York, but the steamship company that brings them over is responsible for them until either they are accepted by the United States or until they are returned to the port from which they sailed. If he is deported, the steam ship company must reimburse the immigrant his passage money—about $100. Not only that the company, may be fined $200 for each immigrant it brings who exceeds the quota. In addition to this, the steamship lines provide would-be Americans with wholesome meals on Ellis Island. Look at this menu for to-day: Breakfast—boiled oatmeal with milk, stewed prunes (I don't like stewed prunes myself); coffee and bread and butter. And this is the dinner outlay: Split pea soup, pot roast and vegetables, boiled, rice pudding and coffee. The supper is better than the most of them are used to: Pork and beans, apple sauce tea or coffee and bread and butter. Besides that, milk is served to all women and children at every meal, and crackers and milk between meals and at bed time..... Of course, it's a short life for them here, but a merry one."

A husband, perhaps 30 his wife not so old by a few years He wrings his hands and she sobs. For a year he has been in New Jersey, and at last he has been able to send for her. But she is to be deported—she has trachoma and cannot be admitted. She is Syrian, and over and over again she cries in her native tongue: "I tell you, there is nothing the matter with my eyes. They are good You should see the needlework I have done all for our new place in Jersey. Won't someone tell the doctor he is wrong? My eyes, they are so good."

Kindergarten Provided.

It may be Ellis Sigh Land for adults, but for children of immigrants it is Wonderland. Scores of other children to play with, good things to eat, movies, music, and the kindergarten. This kindergarten, now. It is a place where one may go to learn and yet be happy. If you are old enough to walk you may attend, and if you are as old as 17 still the teacher will let you in. You can learn to write "Good morning, teacher," in five days if you try hard. When one has heard names like Bakulic or Zacharelli or Menandorez all his life is it not strange that a name so short, so simple as Pratt—Mrs. Jean Pratt—may stand for so much learning? She knows everything. Fancy a teacher letting you play and smiling at your mistakes. Yet that is her way. Why, did she not show them how to play a game called "Pinning the Tail on the Donkey," and, would you believe it, one boy who had got off the ship only one day before; yes, the simpleton had pinned the tail on himself! And when all laughed the teacher smiled and put her arms around him and caressed him. She is very sweet, but strange.

Suppose you were in Russia, and that you were very, very poor. Suppose you were an aristocrat and that you hated the red regime and all it stood for. Wouldn't it be difficult for you to obtain a passport? If your family had been killed in the revolution, if you had no money, if you met another ragged boy who was as eager as you to leave Russia, what means would you employ to get away?

Ah! You would stow yourself away in the bowels of the giant ship, and then when you were far out at sea they would find you, but they could not put you off! You acted as did two stowaways who had come, had glimpsed, had been conquered—and who awaited deportation on Ellis Island. One, a tall, slender youth, with a face that Whistler might have liked to etch. A broad brow, steay eyes, a finely chiseled nose, a stubborn chin that the golden beard could not hide. His ragged clothes he wore like a prince—or a Romanoff; his very white hands were handcuffed to the dirty ones of his companion, a coarse, glowering fellow with a cap pulled well over his close-set eyes. And as they stood on the boat that was to ferry them to the Battery, where their guards would whisk them to South Brooklyn and from there deport them on the very ship on which they had hidden, they looked at each other and smiled sardonically. To touch the very shores, to catch the crumbs from the mighty nation's table, to brush elbows for a moment with its free people and then to be sent back to misery and starvation!

It is estimated that 93 per cent. of the ocean floor is entirely devoid of plant life.

WHAT IS THE STRENGTH OF WOOD?

Because of disagreements and miscalculations as to strength of lumber, which have resulted in accidents, the United States Forest Service, the American Society for Testing Materials and 16 other organizations have appointed representatives to settle the question and work out standard tests for timbers. Detailed specifications for testing steel, cement and other products have been worked out, but the exact methods of learning the strength of wood have never been laid down.

JUNIORS PLAY TIGER THIRDS IN FIRST GAME

Local Rugby Squad to Meet Hamilton Team a Week From Saturday.

INTERMEDIATES QUIT.

The intermediate rugby club has disbanded and withdrawn from the O.R.F.U., leaving the local gridiron activities to the Juniors and the Collegiates.

With most of the members of the squad it was a case of sport interfering with business. They couldn't get out regularly for the practices, and as a team were not rounding into shape in time for the first game which was scheduled for Saturday with the Parkdale Canoe Club.

Had there been a local group with Belleville, Lindsay and Oshawa for example, there would have been an element of immediate competition that might have brought the team together more frequently. Certainly there was slight impetus in the bye which was really all the team expected when they organized.

Juniors Doing Well.

Although the intermediates have reluctantly and regretfully thrown up the sponge, the juniors are shaping up well. Their workout yesterday evening was one of the best they have been through. Max Sloan has been appointed manager, and the team will likely be drawn for its first game a week from tomorrow with the Hamilton Tigers' thirds. They may expect stiff opposition from the Yellow and Black cubs, but there is a promising lot of material in the junior crew, and they are showing the interest in the game that should put them in good shape for their first game.

Like the intermediates, the juniors have combed the district in search of opposition for an exhibition game. Rugby hasn't raised its head this season in the nearby towns, except in the interscholastic series, and the Lindsay and Peterboro Collegiate teams have their own problems to take care of, Kingston was considered as the nearest, but the expense of the trip put that town out of bounds for a scratch game.

ST. PETERS HELD QUEEN MARY TO A DRAW

Soccer Game Produced Some Good Talent.

St. Peter's school boys sprung a surprise upon the Queen Mary boys in the first round of the Alex Kay soccer trophy when they held them to a draw—no scoring—after ten minutes' extra play, at Queen Mary Grounds.

Queen's won the toss and compelled St. Peter's to face the sun. Mowry let McDuffee away on the wing but his parting shot was weak. Flynn returned to mid-field. There was nothing between the two teams, except that Jones (St. Peter's) was dribbling, checking and passing like a professional. Downer broke away on his own into goal until St. Peter's full-backs stopped him as he was in act of scoring. Each goal was visited in rotation but without any scoring. Half time—St. Peter's 0, Queen Mary 0.

Next 35 minutes was livened through individual efforts of the wing men in each team, Doris for St. Peter's and Jones, Queen Mary making splendid attempts to break through the defense which was checking close. The boys were getting acquainted with their positions and play was more interesting as the final whistle blew. Final—St. Peter's 0, Queen Mary 0.

Extra ten minutes was played but produced no result, although St. Peter's had Queen Mary's defense guessing when right on goal to get two unproductive corners. Queen Mary came right back in St. Peter's area where Jones, Holland, Flynn and Garry put up an excellent defense while three corner-kicks where centred upon their goal. They will have to replay.

St. Peter's—Garry, goal; Flynn and Holland, backs; Jones, Meagher and Holland, half-backs; Doris, Deforge, Collins, Connor and Mulvihill, forwards.

Referee—Alex Dick.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.— An exceptionally brilliant workout by Papyrus, with Steve Donoghue up, in the English Derby winner's final speed test, and orders for the shipment here of Rear Admiral Gary T. Grayson's My Own, ready to substitute for Zev in an emergency, were developments that held the centre of interest to-night in the $100,000 international turf classic to be run next Saturday at Belmont Park.

The Jockey Club's International Race Committee late to-day decided to have My Own here as a precautionary measure, it was announced by Major August Belmont, Committee Chairman, who denied that any eleventh hour shift in the horse which will carry the colors of the United States, was contemplated. Coming on top of criticism of Zev's showing in workouts for the match race, however, the Jockey Club's step had been interpreted in some quarters as indicating the possible withdrawal of the Rancocas colt.

Taking No Chance.

Major Belmont explained that the committee simply desired to leave nothing to chance, pointing out that My Own was designated as first alternate by the committee and that Untidy, the second alternate, had already been eliminated as a possible substitute by breaking down.

Meanwhile, Papyrus' chances of victory in the cup race were considerably enhanced in turf circles by the colt's final trial this morning, in which Donoghue guided the Derby winner a mile and a furlong in 1.51 2-5. One of the immediate results was the sharp decline of betting odds to even money, whereas about a week ago they stood at 3 to 1 on Zev.

Opinions Change.

The high early speed shown by Papyrus, which covered the first five furlongs in one minute flat, and the mile in 1:38 3-5, has tended to dissipate among experts the belief that Zev could be depended upon to outrun the invader through the early part of the match race. Those who have hitherto regarded the result of the race as dependent purely upon whether Papyrus could close the gap in the last quarter are now looking for a neck-and-neck struggle from the start. There was some opinion that the first six furlongs might furnish the real test of the race, with victory going to the horse which is able to "stand the gaff" of the early pace.

"He's all right," was the laconic comment of Donoghue after the workout, which Papyrus finished breathing easily.

Comparison of Papyrus' performance to-day with Zev's final trial yesterday, showed a slight margin most of the way in favour of the English horse, which completed the mile a full second faster than his rival.

RACE ZEV.

LAUREL, Md., October 18. — Admiral Gary T. Greyson, owner of My Own, to-day declined to enter in any match race with Zev, as proposed by Spalding Lowe Jenkins, President of the Association operating the Laurel Track, when the matter was put up to him yesterday.

Dr. Grayson gave no reason for his refusal. Mr. Jenkins had secured the assent of Sam C. Hildreth, the trainer of Zev, for a race for a purse of $50,000 here next Thursday, if Zev wins the International race with Paypyrus on Saturday.

GIRL LOOPS THE LOOP 98 TIMES IN 58 MINUTES

PARIS, October 18. — Madame Adrienne Bolland, French aviatrix to-day, established a record by looping the loop 98 times within period of 58 minutes, this including the time necessary for ascending and descending. A leak in the gasoline tank of the plane prevented her continuing.

Madame Bolland created a sensation in South America in April, 1921, when she flew over the Andes Mountains.

HEILMANN HORNSBY HITTING EROES

TOP—HORNSBY.
BOTTOM—HEILMANN.

In the matter of crashing the old apple, as the science of hitting is known in baseball circles, the H's have it this year, decidedly and unanimously.

In the National League the leader is Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals. Hornsby led with .385 and was followed by Wheat of the Brooklyns with .375. In the American League the honor went to Harry Heilmann of the Detroits. The Tyger outfielder hit .402 for the season just ended, and was trailed by Ruth the Babe with .394.

Incidentally both Hornsby and Heilmann led their respective leagues at the bat two years ago. It was the first time in years that right-handers had carried off the hitting honors in the majors.

The fact that the two were able to repeat again this year is further proof that a left-handed swing is not essential to hitting success.

PROUD OF HER TENNIS.

PARIS, Oct. 19. — (Associated Press)—There were 18,720 players entered and 14,123 actually took part in the popular tennis tournaments organized throughout France by the French Tennis Federation during the present season just closed. Several promising youngsters were uncovered who, with a few years more practice, may develop into Davis Cup timber.

The French are very proud of the development of tennis in France of recent years. It is pointed out that for the Davis Cup matches, in 1921, 1922 and 1923, they have put on the coutrs an entirely different team each year.

It is a common saying in France that if the Davis Cup matches were played six men to a side, French tennis would have a chance.

BIG FOUR ARE SATISFIED IS KINGSTON VIEW

MIGHT TURN EAST.

KINGSTON, Oct. 19.—Local fans who have been canvassing the baseball situation lately and holding forth on the prospects for next season, are not missing the agitation which seems to have developed in some parts of the C.O.B.L. circuit for dropping Kingston from the circuit and falling back on the towns which comprised the league two years ago. Those who are behind the plan seem to be forgetting that the single circuit as it stood two years ago was anything but a success and it is certain that but for the plan of the past season, which took Kingston in, was the only thing which appealed to the baseball heads last spring, and probably the only thing which would have sufficed to keep baseball to the front during the summer. Kingston was welcomed in with open arms, the franchise was worth much to the league as well as Group B, and fans in other centres should think twice before they take any step which would mean the extinction of this city as a baseball attraction in the C.O.B.L.

But those who are keen on keeping ball up where it should be have for some time been thinking over an alternative. If those who seek a single grouping, which would take in Leaside, for instance, are serious, why not go the whole route and embrace Ottawa, Perth, Smith's Falls, and other centres in the eastern district as well as Brockville, which did so well this year for the first start in O.B.A.A., and which, it is believed, would not be averse to stepping up in the status of the game. If the locals are to be grouped in a series extending as far west at Leaside, which by all signs, is clearly in Toronto, then why stop at that, why not make the whole of eastern Ontario into one big group? It is just as reasonable and as logical.

Another suggestion is that Belleville, Kingston, Ottawa and Brockville be grouped in a division of the O.B.A.A. or the C.O.B.L. This would make a compact enough division judged by the standard of those who would make the western boundary at Leaside with the eastern one at Kingston The jumps would not be any longer and the expenses not any heavier. The drawing power would or should be equally good, according to those who have given time and attention to the project.

Other suggestions are coming to light every day, for the advent of rugby and the near approach of hockey has not by any means dulled the keeness nor chilled the ogder of the local and district fans.

Just what will develop is still very much in the air. The four teams which were in the Big Four last year were amply satisfied with the manner in which the division panned out, and any attempt to change it will undoubtedly meet with opposition, and the heads of the Big Four teams will have to be shown a far better prospect of success than faced the teams in Group A last spring before they will consent to any arrangement which will put them into the same melting pot this year. None of the Big Four teams cleared much money last season that they can afford to gamble very much on the drawing power of baseball in the Group A centres this summer.

It is too early to talk about prospects for next year, but to the fans around the C.O.B.L. circuit it may perhaps be interesting to remark that all the players who figured in this season's games for the local team are her. Johnny Evans and Harry Batstone are at their accustomed places in Queen's and going great guns on the football team. "Teddy" Gallagher is "carrying on" at his old occupation, Moore is again conning his tasks in the medical faculty of Queen's, and Delaney is a freshman in that institution. Daley is still to be found at his place in the Medical Labratory at Queen's, Sommerville is in his old place with the Civic Utilities. "Bill" Evans is still one of the sterling members of the staff of the Canadian National Express Company, Lexis Rice is engaged in business with his father here. Cherry is sandwiching in some wonderfull football with Limestones between his working hours, Nicholson is with the Post Office staff, and Twigg is on Warden Ponsford's staff at the Penitentiary. Not one of them is above stopping a few minutes to discuss the past season's work, and all are keenly alive to discuss the past season's work, and all are keenly alive to what is developing now as they were when the season was at its best.

There are some odds and ends for the executive to clear up after the season's strenuous work, and as soon as they are attended to there will be a meeting of that body when the past will be reviewed and plans for the future will be developed.

WALKING RACE.

Early in November a twelve-mile walk will be staged in Hamilton, when, it is expected, that the leading walkers of the country as well as some from the United States, will compete here. The event will be through the city streets and Tom Crompton will have a survey made to make sure that the distance is correct, so that the time made will be recognized by the amateur union. —Hamilton Spectator.

Zev, The American Hope

ZEV.

Sande, To Ride Zev, Is Premier American Jockey

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(United Press)—Opinion was widely divided before the American thoroughbred was picked to run against Papyrus, the English Derby winner, in the international championship race.

Many turfmen thought that My Own was the best three-year-old in the United States and should have been picked instead of Zev.

Many still think so, and if the British horse should win, they will always maintain that Papyrus did not beat the best American horse.

There were no doubt, however, as to the jockey who should have the mount on the American color-bearer.

When the race was first considered, the name of Earl Sande suggested itself immediately as the only rider in the country who could complete the combination of the best jockey and the best horse against the foreign invader.

Sande is the premier American jockey of the present day. Many qualified judges of racing are willing to allow his star to shine into the past and they regard his as being as good as Snapper Garrison, Tod Sloan and other great riders of yesterday.

Leading Money Winner.

He is the ace of the staff of jockeys riding for the Rancocas stable, the largest and biggest money-making establishment on the American track. Considering the average of first, second, third, etc., scored last year Sande was sixth on the list of American riders but he was the leading money winner of the year.

Modest unassuming, clean living and possessng all of the qualifications of a great rider, Sande is the idol of the eastern tracks. He is wealthy and wise. He commands a huge salary from the Rancocas stable and when he is not up on one of Sinclair's mounts, he can almost name his own fee to ride for another stable.

Because the public has absolute confidence in his honesty and because he has an uncanny faculty of getting the most of horses, Sande has a tremendous following who make a lot of money of backing every mount he rides.

When Sande is up, past performances are discounted and figures are set aside. His horses are backed simply because his genius gets something out of horses that can't be figured.

His phenomenal success was due to a lot of natural ability that was developed by a willingness to work and take his profession seriously.

Considering the money he has made, the fame he has attained and the popularity he has won, it might be only natural that Sande should think pretty well of himself. But he doesn't.

Horses Like Him

Sam Hildreth, trainer of the Rancocas stable, says the Sande is the finest tempered and the most behaved boy he has ever handled. All the swipes, the exercise boys and the stable boys like him and so do the horses. His disposition, perhaps, is no small part of his success.

Sande is up every morning before sunrise. He helps exercise and workout the stable, from the greenest youngster in the barns to the leading blueblood of the flock. He helps the trainers take the youngsters when they are being taught the ways of starting and he works just as hard and as willingly as the most obscure boy on the staff.

The life of a premier jockey is not easy. In making $100,000 or more a year, it has its compensations, but its restrictions call for a great sacrifice from a pleasure-loving youngster, and most young fellows like to have a good time.

Sande cannot go around like other boys. To remain in shape and keep down his weight, he has to live sparingly and train religiously. He cannot indulge in any social pleasures and he cannot mix promiscuously, as racing is such a game that the supervisors of the sport must keep track of jockeys on and off the track.

Many boys love their work, and Sande, apparently, is one who gets his big kick out of life around the horses. He knows no other business and no other pastime and he seems to want no other.

HOCKEY DEBATED IN CAMPBELLFORD

Players Are Eager to Do Battle But Not Anxious to Incur Expense.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 19.—Hockey players in Campbellford are ready and eager to enter the arena in their section this season, but they are afraid of a fiasco like last year's when they were left with a big account against them.

Tommy Stewart who made a name for himself as goalie last year; Copperthwaite who managed the team besides playing a good defense position, and Smith, also of the defense line, are still in town. Others available are Archer, Wood, Dan White and Johnston who showed their mettle on the forward section.

McWilliams of Marmora would take a place on the local team if the residence rule would let him in.

Last Year's Record.

The Campbellford team entered the O.H.A. junior scrap last year, and although they finished outside they put fear into some of the teams they met. Among their victims were the Peterboro team who went down before them 5 to 3, and Belleville and Picton. They held Trenton to a 1 to 0 score in the last game.

The only fly in the ointmen: last year was the lack of funds. The rink at Campbellford is not adapted to the comfort of spectators, there being no seats, and the attendance consequently was small.

It has been suggested that one end of the ring could be knocked out and bleachers built there. This might help in attracting spectators and result in a better financial condition for the team. The boys are ready to take the ice but they can't see their way to pay the expenses out of their private bank accounts.

RODE ONLY ONE WINNER.

LATONIA, October 18. — Bettors who played the horses piloted by Jockey Ivan Parke, for the last two days at Latonia, and were duly rewarded for their chances when Parke rode ten winners, backed the boy in all of his seven mounts today. Parke however failed to duplicate his brilliant riding, bringing in only one winner and two second horses.

LAKEFIELD VETS LOSE TO FIREMEN

Masons Defeated U. F. O. By Score of 25 to 10 in Softball League.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 19.—The biggest crowd of the season saw last night's softball games at the rink. The Firemen won a fairly close game from the Veterans by a score of 11-7 overcoming an early lead of four runs, tieing the game in the third innings, and opening up another hitting session in the fifth for another four runs that made it safe. Each team got one in the sixth and the seventh was a blank.

The score by innings was:

Veterans ..... 2220010— 7
Firemen ..... 30404ix—11

Batteries—Veterans, Grier and McFadden; Firemen, Sabatino and Ridpath.

Umpires—Northey and Dench.

In the other game the Masons walloped the U.F.O. with the score of 25 to 10. Fifteen of their runs were registered in the first two innings, and a six and four sandwiched with two naughts raise the total to 25. The innings score was:

U.F.O. ..... 3102301—10
Masons ..... (10)50604—25

Batteries—U.F.O., Graham and Darling; Masons, Northey and Connell.

EDDIE COLLINS TO MANAGE SOX

Comiskey Refused to Confirm or Deny Rumor.

CHICAGO, October 18. — Eddie Collins, captain and second baseman of the Chicago White Sox probably will be selected to succeed William (Kid) Gleason as manager of the Club, it was reported in baseball circles to-night, although President Comiskey of the Sox would not confirm or deny the report.

Comiskey said Gleason's successor probably would not be named until after the annual meeting of the American League to be held here in December.

BANTAM TITLE FIGHT IS OFF

Champion Joe Lynch Injured Shoulder By Falling Over Dog.

NEW YORK, October 18. — The fight to-morrow night between Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, and Joe Burman, of Chicago, at Madison Square Garden, has been postponed, it was announced to-day ,by Eddie Meade, Lynch's manager, who said the champion had dislocated his shoulder when he tripped and fell over his dog.

Meade announced that efforts were being made to obtain a substitute for Lynch in order that a bout might be held. It indicated that Pancho Villa might take Lynch's place.

When informed of the postponement, Tom Walsh of Chicago Burman's manager, issued a statement in which he declared he had been treated unfairly, and would claim Lynch's title.

"Burman will weigh in to-morrow afternoon under the bantam limit, 118 pounds, before the State Athletic Commission as originally scheduled" asserted Walsh, "and will file a formal claim to Lynch's title at the same time. I am not in a position to pass judgment on Lynch's reported injury, but I do not think the champion has treated us fairly."

KANSAS CITY HAS TWO GAME MARGIN

Ferdie Schupp Won From Birds Yesterday—Move East.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18.—Ferdie Schupp pitched Kansas City to a five to two victory over the Baltimore Orioles here to-day, and gave his team a three to one lead in games in the contest for the minor league championship.

Both pitchers were wild, due to the cold northwest wind which chilled the players and spectators, but Schupp had better luck after his wildness than Groves. Schupp struck out ten men. Groves gave way to Ogden in the seventh after injuring a finger in his right hand.

The teams probably will open in Baltimore Saturday. Zinn probably will work for Kansas City in the first eastern game, his one-hit game of last Saturday making him a logical choice, while Ogden, who pitched two innings to-day, looks like Manager Dunn's best choice. The teams will play in Baltimore until one team has won five games.

DONOGHUE A MILD AND MODEST MAN

Epitome of the 'Gentleman Jockey' — Confident in Own Ability.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Steve Donoghue is mild mannered and soft voiced. One would never know that he was the idol of thousands, hailed as the greatest jockey of the present day, one of the greatest of all time. He is extremely modest and loath to comment on his record which has never been equaled—the winner of five derbies, three of them in succession. Yesterday he wore a salt-and-pepper suit, a gray fedora, a black tie with white polka dots in it, and not even a horseshoe stickpin. The only jewelry that met the eye was a little tie pin, almost inconspicuous in its modesty.

After seeing him and talking with him, it is easy to understand his popularity among all classes abroad. He is the epitome of the "gentleman jockey." Yet withal his quietness and bashfulness he radiate a spirit of confidence in his own ability. There is something about him that gives one the impression of nerves of steel, of coolness and daring, of headlines—prime requisite of men whose lives are so often in jeopardy.

"I'll tell you more about it after I've had a workout with Papyrus tomorrow" he said. "You see, I know very little about conditions of the track or of Papyrus. Our people at home seem to think that we have little chance. However, we are hopeful We may not win, but we hope to make a good race of it, and I think we will. I am proud to have been selected to ride and I am grateful to Mr. Joel for having released me from my contract so that I could come over and ride Papyrus. It is a great event, one that should prove a fore-runner of similar sporting events between the two countries. May the best horse win, whether it be Papyrus or Zev."

"Is Papyrus the best horse you have ever ridden?" Donoghue was asked.

The little jockey thought for a moment and then replied: "No, I'd hardly say that. But he is certainly the best horse in England today. He has proved that by his work this year. And he is one of the best-tempered horses I ever rode. And he is fast, make no mistake about that. I don't know whether the break in his training, caused by the ocean voyage, the voyage itself, the dirt track and the difference between climatic conditions here and in England will affect him. It is certainly a handicap he will have to surmount just the same as an American horse would experience if it came over to England."

A Born Jockey.

The noted little jockey, rated as England's premier jockey, who will match wits with Earl Sande, astride Zev in Saturday's race, was evidently fashioned by nature for the profession which has won him fame and fortune. He is a pocket-edition man. His growth stopped when he attained four feet eleven inches. He is short-legged and his legs are slightly bowed. He is a small-proportioned and with a tiny pair of feet that many a woman would envy. His weight is a trifle over eight stone, or 112 pounds, normally. He rides at seven stone, ten, or 108 pounds, and says that he has to make no especial effort to get down to that weight. He has regular features, black hair, brown eyes and a fetching smile.

Fairly Fast at Getaway.

"Is Papyrus a fast breaker?"

"Yes, he is a fairly good horse at the getaway," answered Donoghue. "They say that Zev is away like a flash. I don't think he will have much advantage over Papyrus on that score. You see conditions will be different at Belmont from what they are at home. At Epsom Downs, for instance, the first half mile is on an upgrade with a fall-away at Tattenham Corner. We'll have to plan a different sort of race here than if it were in England."

"Have you any particular plans as to how you will ride Saturday's race?"

"Well, I have in a way," Donoghue replied, smiling, "but I'll know more about it after I see Mr. Jarvis and have a look at the track and at Papyrus.

"They say that you are to receive $50,000 for riding Papyrus, is that true?"

"I'd rather not say anything as to that. Of course I had to give up a number of contracts at home to come over here and ride Papyrus."

KITTY AND THE PARROT

KINGSTON, N. C., (United Press) —Oct. 17. —Willard Anderson's pet tomcat's meals must be carried to him. "Tom" refuses to respond to any amount of calling. For three long years the cat jumped at every mention of his name, racing to the kitchen entrance.

It overdid the thing. A hundred futile sprints to the back door followed until "Tom" got wise to the deception. Now a slinking feline loiters in the flower beds about the Anderson front porch. Maybe that bird will come down off its perch some time.

RACE FANS SHOW ADMIRATION FOR JOCKEY DONOGHUE

STANDS TEST WELL

Belmont Race Track, Oct. 19. — American turfmen yesterday had the first look at Steve Donoghue in the saddle under racing conditions. They had nothing but admiration for the little jockey's poise and the way in which he handled the speedy black, Papyrus.

"Donoghue rides like Tod Sloan used to," Foxhall Keene declared, while Lady Torrington clapped her gloved hands and raised the familiar British cry of "Come on, Steve," as Papyrus and his rider swept past the Judge's stand.

Steve was asked immediately after the run what he now thought of the hard dirt track, and he shook his head somewhat dubiously.

"He'll run his best Saturday," he volunteered. "Of course, it won't be like the turf of old England, but we'll have to make the best of it."

As for the turns and the general layout of the track, Donoghue said they suited him perfectly.

"He came through without a scratch or a trace of soreness," the surgeon said. "Unless something unlooked for develops he will be in perfect condition."

Papyrus was scarcely breathing hard after the brisk gallop.

Basil Jarvis in a statement said he was entirely satisfied with the way things were going.

Papyrus still is not eating the way Jarvis and the trainer would like to see him but they both figure he will be fit on Saturday.

"He's glad to have stretched his legs a bit," Teddy Banham, the exercise boy, said as Papyrus nuzzled affectionately at his shoulder.

The colt submitted quietly to the rub down that followed his workout and then went to his stall, had a bite to eat, and then lay down for a nap.

The tattered rail birds set up a chatter of prediction that the showing would make Papyrus a favorite over Zev at the post. The turf experts however expect that the difficulties of climate and the hard track which confront the English horse will not permit him to be more than an equal favorite.

RUSSIA REACHES OUT FOR PERSIAN TRADE

MOSCOW (By Mail to the United Press)—Russia continues to extend her trade tentacles southward.

The Trans-Caucasian Trading Company, with a capital of five million of gold rubles, has been formed at Baku with the avowed purpose of fostering Russo-Persian trade.

Persian control of the company is vested in private business men. Russian control lies with a State-governed co-operative society.

In preparation for the trade boom which is expected to result from this and other ventures, the State-owned Russian merchant marine has sent a commission to Western Europe to purchase eight steam freighters.

Russians claim that theirs is the only Government in the market for or capable of using additional freight tonnage.

Mooneye Wanted To Put on Some Useful Roadwork

MEMPHIS, Oct. 19.—From off the levee docks of the Mississippi River came one Battling Mooneye, husky darky, with an ambition to carve his name deep in the pugilistic records of the world.

"But you will have to do a lot of road work" insisted Haack.

Several days later Haack came upon Mooneye in the middle of one of the city's main thoroughfares industriously applying a stiff-bearded broom to the cobble stones.

It was plain that Mooneye had been at his task for many hours.

SAYS PROFESSIONAL BALL IS LOSING IN CANADA

Under the caption. What's the Matter With Canada? the St. Louis Sporting News deplores the fact that professional baseball is losing its hold in this country. It points out that Winnipeg and other western cities have practically abandoned the game, and refers to the small attendance at the M.-O. games in Hamilton and London as another example of how the sport is "slipping" in the Dominion. The article reads, in part:

"Ontario was almost a cradle of baseball. The game flourished in cities like London even before most of the states adopted it as a sport, but today only Hamilton and London in the Mint and Toronto in the International make any pretense of patronizing baseball, and in the two Mint cities, as indicated above, that support is so meager that there has been talk of Mint league reorganization.

"Montreal a city of three-quarters of a million, talks of re-entry into the International league, but so far hasn't shown fever heat over obtaining a berth. Ottawa shows a liking for baseball, but not to the point of investing heavily enough to build a ball park. It has been a tough proposition to keep even four clubs going in the Eastern Canada organization.

"Wherein lies the answer? Certainly not in those who have promoted the game and spent lavishly to give it a footing, for a finer bunch of sportsmen never lived than the men who have backed clubs from St John's to Vancouver and back again.

"Why not send a special mission to Canada and inquire into the near-collapse of the game among our brothers to the north? Or have we too much need of missionaries at home to spare them?"

In 1922 there were 30,799 convictions for drunkenness in London, 6,410 of these being against women.

Something Nice In Lions Today?

GROH AND PIPP PLAYED THROUGH SERIES INJURED

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Miller Huggins has Cincinnati as his goal, likewise Heinie Groh. When the real heroes are set down in history, they ought to be Wally Pipp and Heinie Groh—Pipp, who played on a twice-injured ankle that gave him intense pain with every step, and Groh, who played with a rupture so bad that he had to wear a truss in every game. The heroic story of Groh did not come out until yesterday, when the last shout had died away. He told his friends before the series, but warned them to say nothing about it. So bad was the injury that his doctor cautioned him not to slide unless absolutely necessary. Now that the series is over, Heinie will undergo an operation in Cincinnati.

With the greatest of all world's series past and gone, the baseball men who had come here by the thousands began the big exodus. Judge Landis was still at the Commodore gathering together the threads, but Ban Johnston, President of the American League, checked out of the Belmont. Major league club owners, managers and players entrained for home, saying good-bye with the added wish that this would be the last all-New York series. The New York monopoly has been a fine thing for New York, but the out-of-town people now want to see another city get into the championship limelight.

For Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yanks, yesterday was the days of days. He acted as host to the manager, players and club officials at an informal celebration. The Colonel wore a smile from ear to ear and was overwhelmed with congratulations.

"Give the credit to Miller Huggins," he said. "He made the team what it is, and he can have a job with me as long as he wants it. The Yankees played the kind of ball I knew they could play. It took lots of faith to keep a brave front in the last two years, but I always felt that Huggins and the players would justify my confidence in them. When the Yankees did win a world's series, it was the greatest one that was ever played."

GOVERNORS TO DISCUSS K.K.K.

This Topic Will Be a Feature of Gathering of Governor W. T. McCray's Guests.

WEST BADEN, Ind., Oct. 19 (United Press).—The Governors of about forty States are expected to gather here on Wesnesday, Oct. 17, as the guests of Governor Warren T. McCray, to discuss problems which the State Executives believe can best be solved through co-operation. It is the fifteenth annual Governors' conference.

Following the last session on the three-day program on Friday the State heads will leave at once by special train for Washington to confer with President Coolidge, at his request.

Several of the Governors will present papers on special problems which confront them in their home States. In addition to the scheduled program, uniform enforcement of the prohibition act and the narcotic drug laws, freight rates on coal and uniformly of legislation will be discussed informally.

Taxation—Governor Morgan, West Virginia.

Executive Clemency and the Parole System—Governor Sweet, Colorado.

Wheat in the Nation's Business—Governor Nestos, North Dakota.

Agricultural Problems — Governor Parker, Louisiana.

Klan as a Topic

The Ku Klux Klan is almost certain to come up as a topic for discussion also, although it has not been placed upon the program. Methods for dealing with the "invisible empire" occupied almost the entire time of the Governors at their last conference.

The possibility of establishing a permanent location for the headquarters of the Governors' Conference in Washington is certain to come up again during this meeting. Several of the Governors proposed at the 1922 session to establish a "clearing house" in the capital to proposed at the 1922 session to establbring about closer relationship between State and normal Government. It was proposed at that time to place the present secretary, Miles Riley, at the head of this insitution, operating on a budget of $75,000. Although no action was taken in 1922, it is thought probable that this plan will be put under way during the coming conference.

Representatives of the National Commission on Uniform Legislation, composed of experts from every State, will be present at the conference to present the report of the commission on uniform State laws. They will especially advocate adoption, through the Legislatures of the various States, of uniform marriage and divorce laws. This subject has been taken up at several previous Governors' conferences.

Child Labor Laws

An attempt to secure uniform child labor laws and the abolishment of prison flogging will be put before the State Executives.

Expenses of the conference, which has no basis for existence in the Constitution, but is an extra-legal institution growing out of Theodore Roosevelt's first conference of Governors on the conservation of forests, are shared by the various States. An assessment of $250 is levied on each and is met by legislative appropriations.

The wives of many of the Executives will accompany them and Governor McCray has planned a formal dinner and a number of other social functions for their entertainment.

ORTHODOX JEWS OUTLINE POLICIES VIENNA CONGRESS

Adopt Six Resolutions at Closing Session, Which Set Forth the Immediate Task of Organization.

VIENNA, Oct. 19 (Associated Press) —The World Congress of Orthodox Jews, convened in this city to deal with everyday Jewish problems in their purely religious aspect, adopted six resolutions at its closing session which, taken together, set forth the immediate tasks of the organization. These are:

To regain, through organized effort, spiritual contact with dispersed and estranged Jewry, in particular the Jews of the west and the east;

The promotion on an extensive scale of the study of the Thora and Jewish education, especially in the countries where opportunities along these lines are most lacking;

The amelioration of the economic situation of the Jewish masses in impoverished countries, and Palestine;

The organization and promotion of the means of prompt succor in cases of emergency;

The promotion of the Jewish spirit in the daily press and in literature;

To obtain the recognition, as authoritative spokesman for the entire body, of Jews who consciously seek inspiration from the Thora and who live according to its precepts.

The congress, described also as the "Kenessio Gedauloh of the Agudas Jisroel," was attended by 450 delegates from 22 states. Most of them came from central and eastern Europe. They sat through three sessions a day for eight days, and listened with religious fervor to the orations and exhortations of men highly esteemed as leaders and students.

The Agudas Jisroel was founded 11 years ago. It was a practical expression of the conviction that the mechanical achievements of this generation, such as fast travel, the opportunities for the rapid accumulation of wealth in distant lands, and a host of other social and economic factors, were isolating Jews into small groups in a manner to make it more difficult for their spiritual leaders to keep before them the religious traditions and past ideals of the race. It was to avert these dangers threatening Jewry that the Agudas Jisroel was organized.

The congress did not concern itself with political matters. Even in the question of the creation of a national home for the Jews in Palestine, the organization was less concerned with the number of those taking up their abode there each year, than with the motive actuating the immigrant and his spiritual attitude toward the land of his destiny. The Chassidim-Rabbi of Sokolow said much irreligion was observable among the Jews in the Holy Land, and Rabbi Katzenellenbogen (Jerusalem) described the many difficulties against which the Jews of the independent orthodox group were compelled to fight.

As proof of the sympathetic interest felt by the organization for the Palestine movement, may be cited the dispatch to Sir Herbert Samuels of a cablegram expressing warm sentiments of gratitude on behalf of the Agudas Jisroel for his efforts in the interest of Zionism.

But it is the strengthening of the faith of those who yave hitherto taken their religious duties lightly, and the moral regeneration of the Jews far removed from the staunch Thora adherents of the East, to which the chief efforts of the organization are to be directed. These Jews are to be taught that every observance laid down in The Law is an essential in the life of the believing Jew.

RULES FOR WEDDED BLISS.

CENTREVILLE, Mich., Oct. 18. — (Associated Press.) — County Clerk John Niendorf of St. Joseph County believes that a county clerk's responsibility does not end with the issuance of marriage licenses. He has had printed a supply of cards containing his rules for a successful marriage, and each couple is given one.

One side of the card carries the county clerk's blessing: "May all your days be as happy as your wedding day."

On the reverse side appears ten "rules" to insure happy marriages. They include:

"Keep up the courtship. Go 50-50 on the money and 50-50 on the love. Make your own home and don't live with relatives. Beware the boarder and don't be a tightwad."

"They're all good rules," Niendorf said ."I have tried them in my own home, and I know."

MARTIN—BICKELL.
A quiet wedding was solemnised by Rev. C. D. McLellan at Greenwood Presbyterian Church, when Mabel Agnes Bickell, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bickell, of Peterborough, was married to Mr. Eldon Floyd Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Martin, of Peterborough.
The bride wore a beautiful gown of French blue chiffon, velvet grey hat, with shoes to match, and a Lucille fox fyr, a gift from the groom. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Martin.
After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Jack Knox. The happy couple will reside in Toronto.

COYTE—MARSHALL.
A very pretty wedding was solemnized at noon yesterday, Oct. 18th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hunter, Fowler's Corners, Smith Township, when Jennie Marshall, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marshall, Englehart, New Ontario, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Clarence Coyte, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coyte, Welcome, Ontario. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. L. Craw, of Springville.
The bride, who was given away by Mr. Joseph Hunter, wore navy taffeta. The bridesmaid, Miss Freda Moncrief, was attired in pale green canton crepe. Mr. Melville Moncrief acted as best man.
The wedding march was played by Miss Alta Moncrief, and, during the signing of the register, Miss Daisy Medcalfe sang "All Joy Be Thine."
After the ceremony a reception was held, the house being tastefully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of autumn leaves and white streamers.
Mr. and Mrs. Coyte left on the 3.50 afternoon train for Toronto, the bride travelling in a dress of brown velvet, with sand-colored hat of panne velvet and seal-trimmed coat. On their return, they will reside at Welcome.
The bride was the recipient of many useful and handsome gifts, including a lovely bar pin set with amethysts and circled with pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, who presented the bridesmaid with a silver bar pin set with sapphires, the best man with a pair of gold cuff links, the pianiste and soloist with bar pins set with rhinestones.

VOL. LIII., No. 93 PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1923 PRICE THREE CENTS

LARGE SUPPLY EATABLES FOR LOCAL MARKET

TO-DAY'S PRICES.

The farmers' market was overflowing this morning, with produce and customers alike. On the big square, one could buy anything, from the "good vice" that one auctioneer was disposing of from a collection of tools, or the "wheel of a flying machine" that the other professed to have, to a good second-hand car or buggy. On the Midway, as two casual visitors expressed it, there were numerous attractions, including a universal remedy, calculated to make a sick person well with lightning-like rapidity and a collar button that could be adjusted with one hand in the sale of which a lean brown horse took a great interest. "I am going to give all you folks a fountain-pen," was the generous pronouncement of another vendor of colored studs.

The elements for a tasy meal were assembled in dainty fashion in a small basket that adorned one of the carts and that contained a dressed and decorated fowl, a small bottle of cream, a half dozen of eggs, a bunch of green onions and a jar of appetizing-looking corn relish, the latter selling for a quarter.

Produce was plentiful. Cars and carts overflowed with apples and big yellow pumpkins, fussy-looking cauliflowers and big cabbages of the Savoy and ball-head varieties.

Northern Spy apples were selling for seven and eight dollars a barrel; Rhode Isand Greenings were five dollars a barrel, and Peewaukies four dollars. McIntosh Reds were 60 cents a peck cooking appies 50 cents cents; Culverts 50 cents. Tolman Sweets 75 cents, and Snows and Baxters 50 cents a peck. Red onions were 80 cents a peck, and potatoes, fairly plentiful, were $1.50 a bag.

Little beets were 40 cents a peck green tomatoes 35 cents a basket, and red tomatoes, the last of the season's offerings, 65 cents a basket The frost is on the pepper and the melon, which are on their last legs just now.

Little pigs were selling for seven, eight and nine dollars a pair this morning. Hind quarters of pork were 18 cents a pound.

Summer turnips, the round, white variety, were 25 cents a peck, and winter radish was 75 cents. Upstairs there were novelties in the shape of the little salsify or vegetable oyster and bunches of dried summer savory sweetly strong in scent. Fresh sage was available at another counter.

A load of hay was selling for $14 and the wood men have made their initial appearance, with a couple of loads of mixed wood at $10 a load.

Upstairs, in the basket section, fowl loaded the tables, chicken selling at 25 and 28 cents a pound and duck at 30 cents. Butter was plentiful also, at a price ranging from 40 to 38 cents a pound, and eggs were very scarce, at a general price of 45 cents a dozen.

ZEV WON BY SIX EASY LENGTHS

BELMONT PARK, October 20 (Special from Canadian Press). — Zev won the International race this afternoon by six lengths over Papyrus, the winner of the English Derby.

The horses were separated by one length all the way, but Zev broke away in the last quarter-mile.

BLOODSHED IN RUHR DISTRICT FORESHADOWED

Riotingand Famine Likely to Follow, Government's Withdrawal of Subsidies toIndustrials

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(Special.) — A wave of famine, rioting and bloodshed is predicted in the Ruhr valley within a fortnight as a result of the German Government's decision to cease subsidizing the German industrialists in that area, according to a Berlin despatch to the Echo De Paris to-day.

Quoting "well informed quarters" in Berlin, the despatch says: "Officials and workers in the occupied area of Germany must henceforth work for a living. The magnates refuse to pay the workers unless the government pays them first, and the government continues its payments to these industrialists. Therefore Germany will shortly feel a wave of frightful want.

Blames France.

Germany to-day sent a note to twenty-three nations, placing on France the responsibility for the hunger and starvation it claims is impending in the country.

France is accused of having made it impossible for Germany to regulate the situation in the Ruhr.

The note said Germany had done its utmost to restore the Ruhr, but without result. It painted Germany's immediate future in dark colours.

It was sent to German diplomatic representatives at Washington and other capitals.

"The Hunger Death."

Berlin despatches say that Germany to-day suggested to its diplomatic representatives at Washington and other capitals that they tell foreign governments it would hold France responsible for starvation impending in the country. The charge was understood to be that France was inhumanly and brutally strangling the nation into hungerhood—"The hunger death."

ONLY TWO NOVICES OF REAL PROMISE

As Result of Eastern Canada Olympic Boxing Tryout.

TORONTO, October 20. Canadian Press. — Only two novices of real promise were discovered as a result of the Eastern Canada Olympic boxing tryouts here last night, and both boys belong to Hamilton, Ont. They are Mike McDonald, 126 pounds, and Jack McGregor, 112 pounds. Both won the finals in their classes after meeting strong opposition in the preliminaries.

The final bout in the featherweight class was the best of the tournament and showed McDonald to possess nearly all the qualities that go to make a champion boxer. He has speed, cleverness, a rapier left, and packs a knock-out punch in either hand Barber of Toronto, his opponent in the final, is a boy who has been meeting and beating the best amateurs in his division around Toronto. He proved the victor over Donovan of St. John, N.B., in a slashing bout, and in which the boy from the Maritimes displayed much gameness and fighting ability, something which the large crowd recognized by giving him a great hand at the finish.

McGregor won his division by sheer ability. He is a shifty boy, with a knockout wallop that will go far with careful handling. He had two knockouts to his credit in the tournament.

Only one incident marred the tournament and that was when W. Doherty, 118 pounds, of Ottawa, quit in the second round of his bout with Jack Johnston, of Toronto, and alleged that Referee Corcoran had been coaching his opponent. Doherty had been warned repeatedly for his foul tactics when he shed a glove. Referee Corcoran stopped the bout to have the glove adjusted, but Doherty gesticulated about the ring shouting out his allegations. Then his second entered into the wordy battle and the officials of the tournament ordered that Doherty be disqualified.

CLEVELAND MEDIUM CAUGHT IN AN ATTEMPT AT FRAUD

Efforts of Mrs. Josie K. Stewart to Prove Existence of Spirit Communication Revealed as Nothing But Trickey.

NEW YORK, October 20. — United Press. — The mystic handwriting of the spirits conjured up by the Cleveland medium, Mrs. Josie K. Stewart, was a fraud, according to announcement of the Scientific American Magazine Board, before which she performed.

The fraud was detected, the board said, by changing the sizes of paper cards upon which the mystic writing was inscribed. The board charged that Mrs. Stewart stole five cards at her first unsuccessful seance, and substituted these cards for those blank cards given her before her "successful" seance. The sizes of the cards were differnt.

Therefore, the board stated, Mrs. Stewart is not entitled to the prize offered by the Scientific American for proof of spirit communication.

FRANCE WINS DIPLOMATIC VICTORY BUT NEEDS CASH

Will Herself go Down to Defeat Unless She Solves Pressing Problem of Domestic Finance—France Still Borrowing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (United Press) —Having crushed German resistance in the Ruhr and completely outflanked the diplomacy of Premier Baldwin, of Great Britain, the French government will itself go down to defeat unless it can solve the pressing problem of domestic finance. For France has shown extraordinary diplomatic skill, but very poor financial ability since the ending of the war.

The victories of the French diplomats over all opponents, have distracted attention for the time being, from the basic fact that out of all the recent glory France hasn't got any money. Great prestige has been acquired by the Poincaire ministry in the European chancellories and for the time being France has far more weight in the European councils than Great Britain.

France Still Borrowing

But France still is not paying her way. She is living on borrowed money and must continue to borrow in order to live, unless as enormous increase in taxation is sanctioned by the government. If taxes were raised adequately, Premier Poincaire would fall from power over night. This is the fundamental reality of the situation. It has been lost sight of amid the cheers of the Ruhr victory. It cannot remain hidden for long.

During the Ruhr occupation, the printing of French francs was rigidly kept down to a minimum. Now, however, there has begun a new demand for paper money in Paris, and a perilous period of inflation is under consideration. That is the road to financial anarchy, as Russia and Germany have so tragically demonstrated. How France will escape it is now the paramount problem of the whole European situation.

There are always at work in France three influences. First, the influence of big business, which would accept governmental financial chaos if only the Ruhr could be torn from Germany an could pass under control of the French industrialists. Second, the militaristic influence, which would be content to see France flounder in the financial mire, if only Germany were broken into separate parts and if France could annex the Rhine. Third, the peasant and middle class influence, which isn't interested in Germany's destruction, but which wants Germany to be compelled to pay to the full so that the French people may be saved from new taxes.

People Want Low Taxes

The Poincare ministry owes its power to popular vote and there is to be a general election in France next year. The majority of French people are concerned neither with increasing the wealth of big business nor with the ambitions of the imperialists. They want low taxes and want to see the color of German money.

Thus far, Poincaire's policy has been eminently successful from the big business and militaristic standpoints. It has been a failure from the standpoint of the peasants and the middle classes, because Poincaire has not succeeded as a collector. Continuation of this policy will either bankrupt France, or will compel the French people to bleed themselves financially as they were bled during the period of Bourbon absolutism. How Poincaire can find the way out is his own secret. But he cannot hold the secret much longer. He must soon put it to the test of experience, or make way for another premier with more financial courage.

ROBBER TRIED A NEW METHOD

Searched a Woman's Stocking For Money and Made Getaway.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Two gunmen, one masked and armed with two revolvers held up and robbed Mrs. Sadies Grupstein, Grange Avenue of $2,375 and Louis Rice, Darcy street of $750 and a gold watch on the Kingston Road near Toronto at midnight last night.

Mrs. Grupstein was driving east along the highway in her coupe with Rice sitting beside her, when as she slowed up the machine to have Rice examine a flat tire two men sprang out of the darkness, opened door and seized Rice and dragged him from the car robbing him of his watch and $750. Then they turned their attention to Mrs. Grupstein and demanded her money at the point of revolver.

"Please don't shoot at me, Mr. I am a mother," she cried as the armed robber pressed his gun against her. He then searched her, opening her blouse, but did not find any money there. He went through her pockets and found some change in her dress pockets. Apparently convinced that she was in possession of money the gunman rolled down her stockings and extracted $2,375 from the folds.

Mrs. Grupstein and Rice were then forced to proceed in the direction of Toronto.

ROBBED 75 TAXI MEN IN NEW YORK

Couple Confess When Apprehended by the Police.

New York, October 20. Canadian Press. — Trapped by chauffeurs into holding up a decoy, Edward McDonald and his two months old bride, were reported by the police to have confessed that they had robbed seventy five taxi drivers, and stole their cabs in the last two months.

Ten cab drivers identified the couple as the man and the woman who posing as fares, last night directed them to quiet sections of the city, robbed them and then drove off with the cars. When captured the woman was covering a victim with a glass pistol, while her husband turnout his pockets.

McDonald is alleged to have told the police that he had wanted to quit the hold up game on Friday night but that his wife had insisted he carry on one more night for a big clean up before they retired.

REFEREE STOPPED BOUT.

MONTREAL, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Elzear Rioux, French-Canadian heavyweight, sustained such punishment in his bout with Skinner of Scotland here last night that the referee stopped the bout in the fifth round. Rioux came out with a broken nose, broken jaw and a severe cut on the temple.

SATURATED WITH KEROSENE BURNT TO DEATH IN A BED

Mother Charged With Fiendish Slaying of Six-Year-Old Son While He Lay Asleep and Father at Work.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., October 20. — United Press. — Mrs. Joseph Vargo is alleged to have saturated the clothing of her six year old son in kerosene, and burned him to death. She is under arrest here on a murder charge.

City physicians who examined the woman in jail to-day said that she was criminally insane.

The woman is the mother of four children. The father was at work when she set fire to the boy as he lay asleep in a bed at the Vargo home here, it is charged.

KIWANIS CLUB LADIES NIGHT A BIG SUCCESS

Fines Were Numerous and Included the Sergeant-at-Arms, Walter Kidd.

A GOOD PROGRAM

Last night was Ladies' Night for the Kiwanis Club, and the ladies, twenty-eight in number, were entertained in royal fashion by the members of the club. Although inclement weather and an interesting soft ball game at the Armories prevented the attendance of some of the members the evening was spent in delightful fashion, with a sumptuous dinner served at the Empress Hotel in the usual excellent Empress style, followed by a musical programme of real merit, interspersed by merry quips and pranks that kept the ladies entertained in pleasant fashion. President Jack McKone was at his best last night in the chair, and kept the ball of fun rolling with the aid of frequent admonitions to Sergeant at Arms Kidd; "Walter, do your duty." A ruling at last night's affair made the ladies subject to fines, which their escorts were obliged to pay. Walter Kidd who was fined at the beginning of the evening for forgetting his collecting plate, grew so anxious in the performance of his duties that he requested permission to fine Mrs. Kidd for some slight breach of decorum. A sad incident marred the pleasure of the evening somewhat. Jack Marshall rose to explain the action of the club in deciding to present Sergeant at Arms Kidd with a token of its appreciation of his energetic and unfailing service with the collection plate, Alec Dick held in impressive fashion a large tray containing Mr. Kidds gift. Entrusted to the care of Charlie Cook on its journey to its destination, the cut glass borne on the tray was accidentally smashed by a mis-step on the part of the careless-walking Cook, and, to the vehement upbraiding of various male members, the glassware lay shattered on the floor. After much discussion, it was decided to at least present Mr. Kidd with some thing, and the bill for forty-five cents was bestowed on him.

The prizes last evening, presented by Bill Conway, Jack Jeffries, John Meyers and Joe John, were numerous and pretty the ladies who drew lucky numbers professing much surprised delight over their gifts, which included such things as a lovely white sweater embroidered handkerchiefs and large packages of tea.

Lucky winners of prizes were Mesdames W. Oke, J. John, W. Byers, A. Dick, M. Yelland, J. Dewart, R. French J. Mervin, W. Kidd, M. B. Chenhall, and Miss T. Taylor. Numbers were drawn by Jim Rollins.

Visitors to the Club's banquet last evening were: Mr. and Mrs. John Mervin, Mrs. Robert French, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Macdonald, Mrs. Robert Candage of Winnemucca, Nevada Miss Violet Cuffe, and Eric Roberts.

The singing of Kiwanis songs from the pink sheet enlivened the dinner service, and included a special Kiwanis Ladies' song, with the refrain: "Say, boys, ain't they grand" to the tune "I love a lassie." By request, Walter Kidd and Jack Dewart repeated this ditty as a duett, with Jack falling down lamentably, leaving Walter to wade to a noble finish unaided, amid vociferous applause. The "going, going, gone" song a dismal lament for the vanished "rock and rye," to the tune of "Old Black Joe," found a critic in Hamish McIntosh, who was fined a quarter immediately.

The "Alouette" chorus, led by Alec Dick, was superb. The gusto and, technical perfection manifested in the singing of this interesting selection, and the manner of pronounciation of the French words were illuminating and memorable. It was the vocal feature of the evening.

Several of the members suffered through absent-mindedness during the course of the entertainment. Bill Conway, answering the roll-call, forgot to introduce his wife, and was promptly penalized. John Meyers also was claimed to be the owner of a notebook found in the rotunda, from which various astonishing entries were read by the chairman. The parting of Lloyd Hamilton's hair was objected to, and Douglas Grant slipped in at a late moment, in a vain effort to escape the eagle eye of the chairman and the plate of the Sergeant At Arms.

The musical programme rendered

VETERAN MUST SERVE COMMUNITY IN PEACE DECLARED A SPEAKER

G. W. V. A., Remodelled From a Reparations League to a Citizens' Club Will Render Inestimable Service to The Country.

LOCALS HAD RALLY

"The G.W.V.A. is not a pedestal to exalt the veterans' war service."

"There are rumours of another war. It is our right to see that they do not unscrupulously plunge us into another bath of blood."

"Let the dead past bury its dead," was the call sounded last night at the G.W.V.A. rally by Dr. N. H. Sutton, president of the local branch of the organisation.

There was a good attendance of ex-service men, a great many of whom had not previously entered the G.W.V.A. Hall, but last night signified their intention to become members.

The gathering was addressed by W. D. Sharpe, Dominion President; C. G. MacNeil, Dominion Secretary; Dr. Sutton, and S. Whatley, secretary of the Peterborough branch.

It was announced by Sid Whatley that with a week of the membership drive past, the campaigners have succeeded in bringing in one-seventh of the required number.

One thousand new members is the aim.

Veterans Are Citizens.

In a splendid address, which revealed in every sentence the high aim the president of the local organisation has for the G.W.V.A., Dr. Sutton outlined the campaign for membership and its object.

The leaders of the local Association have lowered the membership rate to $1.25 a half-year, and on this amount they can carry on if a membership of 1,00 is obtained.

"We hope to make a very great advance in the days to come," the speaker said. "The period of restruction has gone now and the majority of us are settled in life.

The time has come when we should no longer leave our experience unavailable to the country for which those sacrifices were made. We must move forward as Canadian citizens. There is no doubt in my mind that if we were once established on this basis it would not be long ere our fellow citizens would recognize that we have learned something over there and that we are better men to run the affairs of our home life. We must transfer our G. W. V. A. from a reputations league to a citizens' club. We must demonstrate to our fellow citizens that we have constructive thought. It is our object to foster the spirit of Canadian citizenship you have fought for and got, and we do not wish to hear any whisper of death."

It was at this point that Dr Sutton exclaimed 'Let the dead past bury its dead—let us find and follow a constructive programme."

The President concluded with an optimistic prophesy that the G. W. V. A., imbued with the spirit he had outlined, would become a live force in the community.

A Service Organization.

Comrade W. D. Sharpe startled his hearers by declaring in his opening sentence that he is in the G. W. V. A. position as Dominion President for what he can get out of it.

"I get out of it a sense of satisfaction that comes to a man who has made an effort to do something for his fellow man," he said.

"The man who has not tried to do something for his comrade has missed a great deal in life. The man who does try will miss opportunity for personal advancement perhaps. The G. W. V. A. is really a service organization.

Having performed their duty ever-

VALUED GIFTS LOCAL MASONS

Bro. W. J. Francis, Montreal, Makes Highly Appreciated Presentation to Corinthian Lodge, A.F. & A.M.

Members of Corinthian Lodge A. F. and A. M. were rejoicing to-day in the receipt last night of a highly appreciated and costly present from Bro Walter J. Francis, formerly of Peterboro, but now resident in Montreal.

The gift was in memory of many happy hours spent by the always welcome visitor in Masonic circles here, and consists of three handsome columns—Master's Junior and Senior Warden's—highly valued in Free Masonry structural labors, built of solid brass. All three columns are master-pieces of art-craft, beautiful in design and arresting in finish. They represent the noble forms of architecture and constitute Masonic equipment of and for which Corinthian Lodge may well feel proud and grateful.

The presentation was accompanied by one of those stirring and eloquent adresses for which Bro. Francis is deservedly distinguished among the Masons.

Bro. W. J. Francis' mother lodge is Corinthian, this city, and a striking feature of his gift last night is that the Master's column is suitably inscribed in memory of the Lodge's seventy-fifth aniversary. It is also fittingly noteworthy that Wor. Bro. M. A. Morrison, Master of Corinthian Lodge twenty two years ago, when Bro. Francis was first initiated into the secrets of Free Masonry, was present on this occasion.

SUPREME COUNCIL MEETS IN TORONTO

Highest Rank of the Craft Will be Represented.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— Leaders of Scottish Rite Free Masonry from all parts of Canada will be in Toronto next week to attend a meeting of the Supreme Council for the Dominion of Canada on Oct. 24th and 25th. Supreme Council consists of thirty-third degree members of Masonic Order and is thus representative of the highest rank of the craft. Sir John M. Gibson, of Hamilton, who is in his eighty-third year, and is often referred to as North America's greatest active mason, is just completing his tenth year as Sovereign Grand Commander of Scottish Rite of Canada and will preside at the gathering of the Supreme Council here next week.

In spite of his years, Sir John is keenly active in business as well as fraternal affairs and spends much of his time on trains between Hamilton, Toronto and Montreal to attend to interests of various financial and philanthropic institutions of which he is director.

GOOD SHOWING BY S.A. BANDS

The two bands of the Peterboro Salvation Army made a splendid showing at the big Salvation Army gathering in Toronto over the last week-end.

On Saturday evening the Temple Band, under the direction of Bandmaster F. Robinson, after playing a concert at Earlscourt, took part in the big musical festival in Massey Hall, in which eight bands participated, and the band made a most excellent impression.

Monday evening the Young People's Band took part, giving an open-air concert in front of Massey Hall, and afterwards playing at the Young People's rally inside. Little five-year-old Billy Brooks directed the band during one number and made a decided hit.

The Salvation Army wishes to express its thanks to Mr. R. H. Turner, who interested a number of citizens in the event and made it possible for the Young People's Band to go to Toronto.

STOLEN—A SIDEWALK

Twenty-Six Residents Accused of Theft of Neighbor's Walk

OSHAWA, Oct. 19.—The police court during the past three days has been working overtime some 63 cases being heard by Police Magistrate A. F. Hind. Most of the cases called have been of a minor nature such as theft, assault, speeding, with two B.O.T.A. charges, one of which was withdrawn.

Last evening theft charges against 26 residents of the Base Line East, were heard. All of accused were placed on suspended sentence.

This case involves a condemned sidewalk on the Base Line, which was purchased by Fred Chimara, but which when torn up by the town, was said to have been stolen by the accused residents.

Col. J. E. Farewell, K.C., of Whitby, appeared for the Crown, and D. A. J. Swanson acted as defendant for all the accused.

Weekly Dance

The weekly Wednesday evening dance was held by the N.C.O.'s of the Ontario Regiment, with one of the largest crowds of the season attending.

Local shareholders of the L. R. Steel Company are jubilant over a report given out by Howard Bradley, local advisor to the shareholders, to the effect that part returns upon shares may be paid.

The sophisticated youth of our jazz generation would roar with laughter if he read the old-time nickel thrillers. Youth's heroes now are the Jules Verne sort, using radio and airplane where a former generation's fiction heroes used horse and buggy and a phone that had to be cranked to get Central. . . Later comes jazz and sex fiction, disreputable successor of Nick Carter and The Dude Desperado.

FARMERS MOVING TO LUMBER CAMP

Plenty of Winter Work in Quebec Woods and Mills.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—With the winding up of farming and harvesting operations, a brisk movement of men to the lumber camps is now on. Several hundred millions of feet will be cut in Quebec province alone and Ontario is also a great timber province. Inquiries at pulp and paper company offices and employment agencies in this city indicate that there are openings for thousands of men who are qualified to go into the bush and cut wood.

Wages are reported thirty per cent higher than last year when the minimum on the straight rate basis was $35 a month with board. The general rate this year is $45 a month with board. The general rate this year is $45 a month with board and transportation to destination, but it will run as high as $60 to $75 dollars a month in special cases.

LLOYD GEORGE MAKES POINTED RETORT TO FRENCH JIBE AT HIM

Answers French Colonel's Remark, "May the Lord Protect Us Against Our Friends" — Directed at Him.

PROVED FRIENDSHIP

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 19—Because of the record of the British Empire in the great war, when it went to the help of France against Germany" we have a right to give advice,' David Lloyd George, the war-time premier of Great Britain, declared in an address here to-day on the German reparation situation.

Speaking at a luncheon given under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, he said that "we have a right to give advice ;we have a right to say that we have friends, but we've a right to claim that the sacrifice which we made was not made to perpetuate strife and anger and wrong."

The statement was made in reference to a report of a speech on the subject of reparations made in this city yesterday by Colonel G. A. L. Numont, Military Attache of the French Embassy, at Washington, in which, according to newspaper report, he said:

"Pray may the Lord protect us against our friends."

Declaring that the speech "was obviously addressed to me," Mr. Lloyd George expressed regret that the phrase had been used adding: "I never heard that prayer between 1914 and 1918. There are 900,000 dead throughout the British Empire as the proof of our friendship. The evidence of our friendship is scattered over very extensive graveyards in France and in Flanders.

'Protect us against our friends?' No. I would ask him not to repeat that. Not to repeat that—900,000 dead. Why at the present moment there are 1,300,000 or our best workmen eating the bread of charity because we went to the help of France in 1914 to 1918."

Pointing to his friendship for France, as evidenced in his public life, the traditional position of his political party and the record of Great Britain in the war and declaring that he was not an apologist for the German government, he declared that Germany should be made to pay reparations, "up to the limit of the capacity of the country to pay, reasonably interpreted."

But by "reasonable interpretation" the former premier said, he did not mean the making of Germany a nation of bondsmen.

An Ancient Craft Is Unearthed in Harbor.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—(Associated Press).—The framework and planking of a craft which has withstood the stress of years and which is believed to have been used centuries ago by Chinese or Spanish explorers or pirates, have been uncovered many feet beneath the earth's surface at Los Angeles harbor in excavations for an oil storage tank.

The boat, less than forty feet in length, with high sides, is built of a heavy, thick wood. Some of the timbers are half rounded, as is the case in many old Oriental vessels. Metal used to fasten pieces of the craft together had rusted away. The construction of the ship indicated that it was not built by Indians.

More than a century ago, channels of the harbor are said to have extended much farther inland than today, and mariners say they believe the vessel entered, became fast in a mud bank and was abandoned by the crew.

What is believed to be the tusk of a mastodon was uncovered near the timbers.

That a Chinese master brought the craft across the Pacific ocean; that it crossed the Bering Sea and sailed down the coast to California, and that it might have been brought around the horn by Spanish explorers or pirates are theories advanced to account for its presence here.

VENERABLE PEAR TREE.

DANVERS, Mass., Oct. 20.—(Associated Press)—A pear tree which was brought from England by Governor John Endicott of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1630 and planted on his farm at Danversport is still bearing fruit. About a bushel of pears was its harvest this year.

The tree is protected only by a picket fence. Tradition has it that it was a custom of the governor to send a basket of the pears each year to the King of England. President Lincoln is said to have visited the tree and eaten of its fruit. When President Calvin Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts he came here to see the tree and characterized it as "one of the most remarkable living landmarks of the early history of New England."

Strychnine In Home Brew

SASKATOON, October 20 (Canadian Press).—"For the love of Theodore Cleskiw, Mrs. Katrynka Tracz.... poisoned her husband by putting trychnine in his home brew," was the verdict of a coroner's jury at Rosthern yesterday afternoon at the close of the inquest into the death of Tracz, who succumbed to poison last week.

The preliminary hearing of the woman and of Cleskiw as an accomplice commenced immediately after the inquest.

Both are charged with murder.

PAID DOCTOR TO KEEP HIM WELL

Baldwin Locomotive President Tells of Ten-Year Contract.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—Five years now have elapsed since Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, made a contract with a physician to keep him in good physical condition for 10 years.

Mr. Vauclain said today he had agreed to pay a flat sum every year for being kept well, increasing this sum each year, on the assumption that the older he grows, the more difficult it will be for him to keep well.

Under the contract, if Mr. Vauclain falls sick, a deduction is made from the doctor's annual retainer according to the length of time of his illness.

"I have been sick," he said, "and I didn't like it. I did not want it to happen again.

"Since the inception of this contract, I have kept my part of it, and my doctor has kept his, except once or twice.

"I have been examined not less than every two weeks, and have guided myself entirely by the doctor's instructions. In that time I have not lost a day from business, nor have I been ill in any way.

"I am heavier, stronger and more active than I was five years ago."

PRISONERS MADE TUNNEL IN CELL

Irish Prisoners Still on a Hunger Strike — Will Release Some.

DUBLIN, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Discovery of a tunnel used by prisoners for communication between their cells was reported yesterday by authorities of Mount Joy Prison where several hundred "Republican" soldier prisoners recently started a hunger strike. The authorities declare that none of the prisoners are very ill as yet in consequence of the strike.

At the Government offices this morning it was stated that eighty of the Mount Joy prisoners had been taken from that institution during the forenoon. This followed the removal of eighty other last evening. Prisoners were taken to a new place of detention which was not disclosed.

Eighty of the Mount Joy prisoners were released today, some of them after signing an undertaking to keep peace. It is expected in Sinn Fein quarters that sixty of these prisoners will be released unconditionally.

DISCOVERED A COAT AND GUN OF ROGERS

NORTH BAY, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Wm. Hogan and Oscar Parks made an important discovery yesterday while out shooting partridges. Reaching a heavily wooded portion of the bush near the C.N.R. line, four miles east of the Bay, they stumbled on a blue serge coat neatly folded and a pair of brown boots on top of the coat. On searching the coat pockets the "phoney" gun used by Leo Rogers, bandit in his sensational getaway, from the court house here, was found.

HUNTERS SUFFER MANY ACCIDENTS

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(Associated Press).—The hunting season has opened in France, and already the list of accidents is unusually long and grows steadily. Not a few accidents are fatal.

One member of the Chamber of Deputies has given notice that he will introduce a bill requiring that would-be hunters pass an examination in the handling of the shotgun before the necessary license is issued.

HARVESTERS TO BE GIVEN WORK

Soldier Settlement Board Lists More Jobs Than May Be Needed.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19. Canadain Press. — The active canvass for openings for winter employment for the eleven thousand odd Imperial ex-service men and others who came to Canada to help garner the crops is closed, and Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Immigration, to-day made the statement that the Soldier Settlement Board field supervision staff went well over the top with 15,074 places listed.

Over half the number, or 7,846, are for farm jobs, 6,334 are for lumbering and bush work, 460 are required on railway construction in Saskatchewan, while there are openings for land clearing and mining in British Columbia and Alberta, as well as some work opportunities in a number of the trades. By soldier settlement board districts the numbers are: St. John, N.B., 66; Sherbrooke, Que., 150; Toronto, 4,526; Winnipeg, 577; Regina, Sask., 859; Saskatoon, Sask., 830; Prince Albert, Sask., 3,025; Calgary, Alta., 1,322; Edmonton, Alta., 2,875; Vernon, B. C., 360; Vancouver, B.C., 474.

It is pointed out that the opportunities for winter employment are necessarily restricted to certain industries. There is not the same range of choice as there would be in the spring when many branches of industry become more active. It is anticipated that a large majority of the overseas harvesters who are anxious to remain in Canada over the winter, and be on hand for more remunerative employment in the spring, will accept the opportunity presented at reasonable wages rather than return to the old country.

ELIHU ROOT OFFERED THE AMBASSADORSHIP

LONDON, Oct. 19.— (Canadian Press.)—Report that President Coolidge is offering Elihu Root the Ambassadorship to Great Britain is featured appreciatively by the morning newspapers, most of which display Mr. Root's portrait with brief notices recalling his service and lauding his abilities as a statesman and lawyer. Mr. Root has a brilliant reputation here and it is evident that his appointment will be highly popular.

BANK TO CASH VICTORY BONDS

Special Facilities For the Holders of 1923's If Payment Is Desired.

OTTAWA, October 19.—Holders of 1923 bonds who have not yet exercised their option of conversion into the year 1928 or 1943 refunding issue, may have their bonds paid off in cash through any branch of any chartered bank in Canada, it was announced this evening by the Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance.

The bonds call for payment of the principal at the Department of Finance, Ottawa, and at the offices of the Assistant Receivers General at Charlottetown, Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Victoria. In addition for the greater convenience of the holders the minister has now made special arrangements with the chartered banks for the payment of the bonds without charge.

It is urged by the Minister that it will facilitate settlement promptly at the date of maturity if, when dealing through a bank, the holders will deliver their bonds for examination and listing as early as possible before November 1. Holders must be prepared to await payment for a few days.

The banks have received instructions as to the form of endorsement required from the holders of registered bonds. In the case of these as well as bearer securities payment is only made on the surrender of the bonds themselves. Interest ceases at the maturity date, and if the bonds are retained thereafter, claims for further interest cannot be entertained.

CAUGHT AFTER 5 YEARS FOR DRAFT EVASION

FORT SNELLING, Minn., October 19 (Canadian Press). — Frank Schweighofer, aged 33, of Stratford, Wis., was brought to Fort Snelling yesterday on the charge of draft evasion, and probably will face a court-martial.

Schweighofer disappeared in 1918 after his name had been drawn for military duty, and was discovered three weeks ago when his mother died.

During the five years he hid in his mother's home, working a farm at night and going out in the day time disguised in his mother's clothing.

SAYS CHICAGO DRIEST CITY IN UNITED STATES

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Chicago is the driest large city in the U. S., Mayor William E. Dever declared in an address last night. "And it will be entirely dry before my administration is over," he said.

GERMAN PRESIDENT IS FACED WITH PROBLEM OF BAVARIAN BOYCOTT

Refuse to Enter Into Formal Relations Henceforth With Central Government — Conflict of Authority Causes Breach.

STRESEMANN JOLTED.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.— Diplomatic relations between the Berlin, Munich and Dresden governments which local official quarters represented today as having assumed "a more tranquil aspect during the past twenty four hours," late to-night were given an unexpected jolt by Dr. Von Kahr, the Bavarian dictator.

Dr. Von Kahr informed the Central government that Bavaria hereafter must decline to enter into formal or official relations with Dr. Otto Gessler, the Federal minister of Defense, who is military dictator for all Germany under the provisions of President Elbert's recent proclamation.

This latest Bavarian attack on the Central government's prestige and authority is the direct result of Dr. Gessler's recall of General Von Lossow, commander of the Reichswehr in Bavaria, who was removed from office on the ground that he had deliberately sabotaged Dr. Gessler's order to suppress the Voelkescher Beoabchter, personal organ of Adolph Hitler, the National Socialist leader, after Dr. Von Kahr had declined to carry out the Berlin government's request to prevent the appearance of the Bavarian Fascist organ.

Mocked at Authority

Gen. Von Lossow's attempt to barricade himself behind the Bavarian government in this connection, and his disinclination to retire voluntarily rather than further incur Gessler's displeasure, drove the issue to a point where the Central government felt its military authority had been seriously undermined, if not mocked at, and its decision to-day to recall Von Lossow now has been answered by the Bavarian government's boycott of Gessler.

President Ebert is the sole judge for the adjudication of controversial issues. He is not obliged to consult Chancellor Stresemann or the members of his cabinet, although the Chancellor is being constantly drawn into the conversations which are proceeding between President Ebert, Gessler and Gen. Von Seeckt, chief of staff. The president is reported to be firm in his determination not to raise the state of emergency while the situation is in its present stage and has so informed the socialist leaders, who yesterday apprised him of their wishes.

Troops to Saxony

Reports that Dr. Gessler had ordered a score or more of battalions to Saxony have been dismissed as grossly exaggerating the gravity of the situation although the minister of defense, who now is military dictator has ordered additional contingents to Saxon industrial sectors which are being terrorized by Communistic mobs. The Reichswehr will be used with discretion in connection with Pacifying the situation in Saxony. President Elbert is desirous of avoiding too rigorous procedure there, despite the insistence by the Munich government that the Central authorities forthwith proceed to bring Saxony's red regime to time and that a condition of public safety be established there like that obtaining in Bavaria.

The immediate fate of the Ruhr and the Rhineland constitutes an outstanding source for apprehension in cabinet circles, especially as Chancellor Stresemann is without the slightest inkling as to the intentions of F. Poincare, the French Premier, since Poincare dismissed Herr Von Hoesch, the German charge d'affaires, with a wholly negative reply to Von Hoesch's recent proposals.

Default Payments

The Ruhr industrialists are seeking to work out their own salvation, since the Berlin government apparently is unable to accord them even a promise of relief, so far as its ability to finance a resurrection of the Ruhr economic situation is concerned.

According to statements appearing in a section of the press, it would seem that the Stresemann government has decided to default on future reparation payments and in kind unless Germany is placed fully in the position by the occupying powers to resume her administrative authority in the Ruhr and the Rhineland in connection with the task of getting the mines, the steel plants and the railways started.

Grain Carried On Air Stream

FORT WILLIAM, October 20 (Canadian Press). —Affording a peep into the future when grain might be carried on the winds from Western Provinces to Eastern shipping ports, abolishing the use of train and ship, is a device used at the N. M. Paterson elevator here yesterday. It is a pipeline systm by which grain is conveyed from Elevator K, 1,400 feet inland, to a vessel at the water-front,... without the use of the familiar belting.

Called an "airveyor," the scheme comprises the use of a hurricane of wind in a pipe, the force being created by giant fons.

While passing through the airveyor, wheat is suspended on the air stream.

The machine carries 4,000 bushels an hour.

Auto Goggles Made From Old Gas Masks.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(Associated Press).—Automobile goggles advertised for sale for ten centimes each or a little over 170 to the dollar at the present rate of exchange, recently brought a rushing business to a second-hand store on the left bank of the Seine, and caused much speculation as to how, in these days, any manufacturer could place such an article on the market at the derisive price.

A former poilu solved the riddle. The goggles had been cleverly cut out from the original gas masks issued hurriedly to the French army when gases made their appearance on the western front as a weapon of war One model, it was recalled, was cumbersome and inefficient, but the poilus had to put up with it for nearly a year, until the improved model was manufactured.

The second-hand shopkeeper had discovered several thousands of them in the war stocks and bought them by the hundred weight.

LAKE FREIGHT LAW PASSED TO HELP FARMERS

Hon. Thomas Low Gives Pledge That There Will Be No Grain Blockade.

SHIPMENTS LESS.

FORT WILLIAM, Oct. 19.— In the course of an address to the Canadian Club at a luncheon held to-day Hon. Thomas Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce dealt in part with the situation of the grain trade as affected by the Inland Water Freight Rates Act.

The Minister stated that the legislation passed last session on the lake freight question was put on the statute books solely in the interests of the farmers of the west. He frankly admitted that it had not worked out just as had been hoped but that, up to the present time, there had been no serious complications nor were there likely to be any critical developments in October. Up to the present, the Minister stated, Lake shipments had been only slightly under those of last year, in fact barely ten per cent. less. Of the total cargoes carried, Canadian vessels carried about 20 per cent. more than they carried last year, while United States vessels have carried only about 50 per cent. of their last year's cargoes.

The receipts at Fort William and Port Arthur are about 10 per cent. less than last year, while stocks in the elevators in these two ports are about twenty per cent. less than they were on the same date in 1922.

Speaking as the minister in charge of the department responsible for congestion, with all the serious consequences there involved, far reaching, not alone in the west but in the east, consequences that might paralyze the activity of this country for months, Mr. Low stated that if necessity arose he felt that there was hardly any measure, however drastic, that he would not feel justified in taking to cope with the situation. He stated emphatically that he would consider himself unworthy the office he held and derelict in his duty to Canada if he did not pledge himself that there would be no blockade. He stated absolutely that there would be no congestion through lack of carriers. Within the last few weeks, he stated, he had been overwhelmed with telegrams and letters on this matter but that not one person who approached him seemed to realize the possibility of the most serious danger, one over which neither he nor the government of Canada had any control, and which they could do little to alleviate, that is the danger of serious lack of export demand.

CONFLICTING OPINIONS.

It must be difficult for those who are entrusted with the duty of government to come to a conclusion as to what the people really want along some particular line or other.

In the matter of the immigration of farm labour, for instance, there seems to be a wide difference of opinion.

At a Farmers' meeting the other day the Dominion Government's policy in regard to farm labourers was soundly denounced in a resolution, and speakers also condemned the Ontario Minister of Agriculture for wasting time in endeavouring to secure labourers for Ontario's farms.

"What is the use of trying to bring in farm labourers," asked one speaker, "when conditions are so bad on the farms that the farmers are refusing to remain on the land any longer?"

And on the same day this meeting was held a Montreal paper was hammering the Immigration Department with great gusto for not bringing in enough farm labourers.

The farmers of Quebec, according to this journal, were crying out for help.

There was not enough labour to get all the work done.

And there you have the two sides of the shield:

The Minister of Immigration has no sinecure, as the Examiner has more than once pointed out.

CANADA'S COMPLAINT.

The protest voiced by Hon. G. P. Graham at the Imperial Conference against discrimination affecting shipping on the St. Lawrence, strikes the Examiner as being a very important matter for Canada.

The trouble centres in the fact that the insurance rates charged by Lloyds for shipping on the St. Lawrence are just as high now as they were in the days before the hazards were practically eliminated.

The improvements made by the people of Canada at the cost of many millions of dollars in dredging, lighting and buoying the St. Lawrence route have gone for nothing so far as the insurance rates are concerned.

And as a result Canadians importing or exporting goods are at a disadvantage in comparison with those using the port of New York.

In addition, the freight rates charged by British ships on flour shipments discriminate in favour of New York, the rate for flour shipments from Montreal being heavier than that from New York, for Canadian flour, in spite of the fact that Montreal has better facilities for handling grain and that the long railway haul from Montreal to New York is saved.

In these two matters Canada has sound ground for complaint, and Hon. Mr. Graham has done good service in bringing them before the Imperial Conference.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

The report from Dutton that the annual convention of the West Elgin United Farmers placed itself on record as strongly opposed to the U.F.O. as an organization taking an active part in politics is a sign of the times.

There will be many more such resolutions at Farmers' conventions before long.

U.F.O. members are beginning to see what was long ago pointed out to them by urban newspapers that they were endangering the safety of their organization by launching it in the political arena.

"The U.F.O. is nearly wrecked," declared the mover of the resolution opposing any further political activity, a resolution that was very strongly supported.

There is a place for the United Farmers organization in the scheme of things in Ontario, there are problems affecting farmers that can best be solved by a co-operative effort, there are many reasons why farmers should link themselves together for the advancement of their industry, the development of markets and matters of that kind, but there never was any sound reason why farmers as a class should enter politics or endeavour to govern this Province.

That fact is being realized more and more among members of the United Farmers, and the developments at Dutton are likely to be followed by similar results in other sections of the Province.

TOO MUCH BETTING NOW.

The majority of people in Ontario should be behind the Attorney-General in his protest to the Dominion Government against the extension of racing and attendant betting privileges in the Province.

The part that betting on horse races in Ontario plays is shown by the report that $36,000,000 was wagered in legalized betting during the present year.

That means that this huge sum was bet at the tracks through the machines from which the Province takes a levy.

But $36,000,000 by no means represents all the gambling done in Ontario in connection with the races.

Hundreds of people who never go near the race tracks are almost daily engaged in betting upon the results, and it has been claimed with a good deal of authority that fully as much money is bet away from the tracks as passes through the machines.

If that be the case the total of legalized and illegal betting would amount to some $72,000,000 in one year.

And that signifies, as anybody will realize who knows anything about gambling, that sums aggregating millions of dollars are being lost by many people who cannot afford to lose.

In endeavouring to prevent the establishment of any more tracks to take more money out of the pockets of people who need to be protected from their own folly, Mr. Nickle should have the support of a large measure of public opinion.

RAILWAY CROSSINGS AND MOTORS.

Te Board of Railway Commissioners has decided upon the wise course of trying to draft legislation aimed at reducing automobile accidents at level crossings, says the Montreal Star Grade crossing fatalities are increasing so rapidly as to cause widespread concern. From information gathered by the Railway Commissioners, the charge is made that the augmentation of the accidents is in a "very great measure" due to the "carelessness" of automobile drivers. In a bulletin issued by the Commissioners the following statement occurs: "If the growing number of accidents are to be lessened the 'sane' motorist must educate the 'negligent' motorist. It is hoped by the Board of Railway Commissioners to initiate a country-wide campaign so as to impress on all drivers of vehicles the necessity of exercising the utmost care when approaching level crossings, and also to pay special attention to all signals and warnings."

The fatal level crossings are still very much in evidence in Montreal. For decades past various civic administrations here have discussed abolishing the level crossing, but up to date nothing of note has been accomplished. Many years ago the city was authorized by the Legislature to borrow two million dollars for the purpose of aiding in raising the tracks of the Grand Trunk Railway, but the amount was deemed not large enough by officials of the company. There were officials, indeed, who intimated that five millions would be a more acceptable sum. This amount was refused by the city.

BACK TO SANITY.

Russia has stopped her note printing presses and if Chancellor Stresemann can weather the storm of opposition for two weeks, Germany will follow suit.

In both cases the action of the Government is of the greater moment, in that it means a sincere effort to abandon the crack-brained scheme of getting something for nothing and to establish the credit of the country on the only method that has stood the test of time and experience.

Of all the wild theories which were hatched in the brain of Lenin during the years of his banishment when he elaborated his new States, none was more fantastic than the attempt to carry on the commerce and the government of the country without money. It was Communism that brought the degree of absurdity and it took the rulers of Russia three years to convince themselves of the sterility of such fustian theories. Germany, not obsessed with any such Utopian visions, must have realized from the first that the feverish activity of the printing presses could only bring chaos and ultimate ruin. Germany did not embark on such a course deliberately, but clutched wildly at the chance of postponing the day of settlement with Micawber-like faith.

Two years ago Russia realized that her hopes of converting the world into that farrago of nonsense that she called world communism must be given up and with a wholly comprehensive worldly wisdom the leaders of Russia reversed their engines and went back to the economic theories that have been hammered out through the centuries on the anvils of bitter experience. Lenin and his associates continued to brag of the coming world revolution, but they cut down the appropriations for propaganda and they dropped the pretext of the new experiment in State control.

Communism as a practical creed enjoyed two years of trial in Russia with the result that the rouble fell to a point where it ceased to be currency and commanded value only as wrapping paper, and the nation was brought to the verge of starvation, so that appeal had to be made to those peoples who had not pinned their hopes on any short-cut to wealth and prosperity for money to save their women and children from the horrors of famine and death. Russia introduced the budget system, cut down the number of State servants by many millions, imposed taxes, raised domestic loans, made definite attempts to stabilize her currency and established credit and savings banks.

Unfortunately Russia's conversion, miraculous as it was, was not quite complete. With her dreams of Marxism dissolved, she still clung to those voracious devourers of savings and revenue—State control of industry and State railways. Mr. Wilgress, Canadian Trade Commissioner, who has just returned from Russia, marks the giant strides taken along the road to financial stability, but says that in spite of all its efforts the Government of Russia has not yet been able to make its revenue and expenditure balance, "owing to the heavy losses from State-controlled industry and State railways.

There are other countries whose inability to balance their budgets is due to the cause of "the heavy losses incurred by the State-owned railways."

Germany's rapid plunge into bankruptcy has been due to political rather than economic causes. The Germans are too clever a people to believe that national credit can be maintained by the printing press process. They adopted it because they needed every available mark of real money to bolster up their policy of passive resistance in the Ruhr. Now that this has gone by the board, Chancellor Stresemann will have an opportunity of returning to the only rational method of State financing that has ever been the basis of national prosperity.

Dreams and visions, paper presses and promises may be all right for pink Bolshevists and parlor Socialists, but when it comes to the prosaic and practical work of financing a State and of maintaining a country's credit the gold basis is worth a million of such "schemes."—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The banquet to be tendered Peterborough baseball teams by the City Council promises to be the biggest night baseball has ever known in this city. And it's right that such should be the case.

John Grier Hiltren, President of Princeton University, who has recently returned from an extended trip through Europe, declares a future war between France and Germany can be avoided only if United States employs its good offices to relieve tension now existing in Europe. Germany, he is convinced, is playing a "waiting game." Her attitude toward reparations is insincere, he said, as she is entirely able to pay.—New York Metal Market.

Paris reports a fish with a horn like that of a rhinoceros captured off the coast of France. If that story came from Montreal there would be an explanation readily at hand.

Cobalt is endeavouring to make former prisoners whose families were looked after while the breadwinners were in jail pay the cost of such relief now that they are at work again. The experiment will be followed with considerable interest by the authorities in other cities.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Now that the world series is over footballers come to pass.

Football players are among the few who cheered for kicking.

Zuppke of Illinois is a football coach even if he does sound like a foreigner asking for soup.

While Zuppke writes football plays he is not a playwrite. He writes so they won't play wrong.

Best football players come from the broad open spaces where men are men and women are girls.

While the football season ends on Thanksgiving this is not the original excuse for Thanksgiving.

Learning football is no easy matter. Arguing with traffic cops and ice men is fine training.

Excellent way to learn football is by kicking every lap-dog you see and then running.

Football players must be tough. They msut be tough as cafe steaks. Eating cafe steaks will help them.

Looking for needles in haystacks will train a football player's eyes to see the point.

Best way to train a footballer is make him fall in love. Then he will fight like a bedbug.

Whats' a little rouge between a girl and her football hero? Nothing, if it is on her lips.

Women should learn football. It would help in bargain counter rushes and opening tight windows.

Never play football with your mouth open. When you brush your teeth you may find an extra ear.

Teach the family football. No neighbor would dare talk about a family of football players.

This whole town needs football. If everybody could lick everybody, they wouldn't have to do it.

If everybody in Canada learned to play football we could chase the book agents ragged.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 20.—There have been heavy runs of cattle this week, the market opening on Monday with an offering of about 7,000 head. Choice quality well finished cattle were scarce. There was a good demand for the best offerings for butcher purposes, and supplies of the really desirable kind being firm, but steady, at from $5.85 to $6.25. A few very choice picked steers sold around $6.50 to $6.75.

The demand for the export trade took care of about 600 cattle, purchased during the week including heavy steers and a fair proportion of store cattle the latter to be fed and finished mid the hills and vales of bonnie Scotland. The weighty export steers sold from $6.50 to $7.50, and store cattle from $5.00 to $5.50.

The balance of the week's offerings consisted for the most of common quality cattle, the unfinished products of the annual fall farm clearings, where, from lack of feeding facilities or shortage of feed, the cattle are forced early to market. As a result of this overloading of the market prices this week on all the common grades of cattle have been from 2c to 50c lower and ranging all the way from $1.50 to $3.00 for canners and cutters and from $3.50 to $4.50 for common quality rough, heavy steers and heifers and light stockers.

Fat cows have been generally easier this week and 25c lower.

A few heavy export bulls sold at from $4.00 to $4.25, but market was easier and 25c lower.

Supplies of calves moderately heavy, with only a small proportion of really choice veal qualities, the latter selling steady from $10.00 to $11.00 for a few choice tops, but with the bulk of common grassers selling all the way from $3.50.

With heavy runs of sheep and lambs choice tops were selling steady from $11.00 to $11.50 for ewes and wether lambs, and $1.50 off for buck lambs.

Choice yearlings steady from $8.00 to $9.00; choice handy sheep, $6.00 to $7.00. General tone of the market weaker towards the close.

Hog market is weaker at $7.75 f.o.b., and $8.35 fed and watered, closing prices. Packers have announced that for next week's hogs the differential on fed and watered hogs will be 50c instead of 60c as formerly.

Receipts.

Union Stock Yards — Total receipts this week: 556 cars, 8,797 cattle, 2,431 calves, 6,064 hogs, 9,298 sheep and lambs.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 19.—Dom. Live Stock Branch)—Receipts, 1,190 cattle and calves, 110 hogs and 36 sheep and lambs.

The cattle market opened dull and draggy to-day and bidding generally showed no improvement over the close of yesterday. The few handyweight killing steers and heifers available met with a fair demand but good butcher cows were slow.

The hog market was a trifle firmer, packers bidding $8.25 for thick smooths or 25 cents over Thursday's close.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.— Influenced to a considerable extent by talk of Russian competition and of probable increased imports of Canadian wheat into the United States, the market had a downward swing the greater part of the time to-day. Prices closed heavy, 1-2 to 1 1-8 net lower, with December 1.04 1-2 to 1.04 5-8; May 1.09 1-8 to 1.09 1-4. Corn lost 3-4 to 1 1-8 and 1 1-4 and oats 1-4 to 5-8. In provisions the outcome ranged from 10c. decline to a like advance.

The finish in the wheat market was at virtually the day's lowest level, about 6c. under the recent high point. Persistent selling on the part of commission houses that were active buyers of late was a noticeable feature. Especially during the final hour, demand was swamped, and much of the unloading was ascribed to holders who had purchased in basis of assumptions that government farm relief plans would serve to advance values. Word that today's sales to Europe totalled 700,000 bushels, mostly Canadian wheat, had no apparent effect in rallying the market.

Assertions which were afterward denied that at present, prices of flour a miller as far south as Kansas could import Canadain wheat at a profit, did a good deal to start the day's downturns in the wheat market here. Temporarily an appearance of strength in corn was of aid toward steadying wheat, but weakness of hog values undermined corn, and with further bearish gossip about impending large wheat shipments from Russia new declines ensued.

Big receipts of hogs here pointing to decreased demand for corn made sentiment in the corn pit veer to the bear side. Oats followed corn.

Packers buying gave comparative steadiness to provisions.

MADOC PERSONAL WORKERS CONFERENCE AT MARMORA

Address on "Functions of the Church" By Rev. F. Langford of Toronto--Midweek Activities Discussed.

LIBRARY BOARD MET.

MARMORA, Oct. 19.—A meeting of the Library Board of the Public Library met on Tuesday evening. The main item of business discussed was the subject of new books. The Library has lately received a new edition of encyclopedia. A list of books to be purchased immediately was made out by the board and new travelling libraries are expected soon.

The regular meeting of the A.Y. P.A. was held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Litt. An enjoyable evening was spent in playing progressive euchre.

A committee met Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. F. S. Pearce to discuss the problem of university extension. It was decided to have a lecture every two weeks during the winter and further arrangements were left to Mr. Pearce to settle.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bell spent Wednesday in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Osborne and the Misses Dora and Marian Osborne motored to Warsaw on Sunday. Miss Dora Osborne was returning to her school there. The rest returned on Monday, bringing Mrs. George Taylor of Warsaw with them.

Mrs. Nickle of Madoc spent Wednesday and Thursday with Mrs. Victoria Nickle while she was attending the convention.

Personal Workers.

The Personal Workers' conference for Epworth League workers, Sunday School members, workers in Women's Missionary Societies or boys' or girls' work—any branch of church work—was held for Madoc district on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Delegates attended from Bancroft, Flinton, Eldorado, Ivanhoe, Bridgewater, Thomasburg, Tweed, Madoc and Springbrook. The delegates were given bed and breakfast in the homes of local people and meals were served at the church for a small fee.

A splendid address was given by Rev. Paulter on a "Challenge to Christian Workers" on Wednesday morning.

Mr. Sayer of Tweed acted as chairman in the afternoon meeting.

Mr. G. B. Airhart, Reeve of Marmora, extended a hearty welcome to the visiting delegates. Mr. Gordon of Tweed was on the programme to reply to the address of welcome, but due to his illness the Rev. A. H. Foster of Madoc took his place.

Functions of Church.

Rev. Frank Langford of Toronto then gave an address, taking as his text, "Jesus came preaching the Kingdom of God." Mr. Langford's definition of the kingdom of God was the rule of God in men's lives. He said there are three ways to set up the kingdom of God, or, in other words, there are three functions of the church. In the first place, there is the means of workship. Illustration, the idea from olden history, there was the coming together of the people into the temple.

The second function of the church is the use of instruction. Again the Jews used to meet in the synagogues to learn the laws of Moses and the teachings of the prophets.

The third function of the church is service.

Mr. Langford then took the different meetings connected with the church and arranged them in one or another of these classes.

The preaching service of our day or, as the Rev. Langford chose to call it, the public service of worship, falls in the first class. He thought that the main aim of the church was to create an attitude toward God such as reverence, hope, obedience, faith and loyalty.

Our hymns are sung in order to create some attitude to God. For example,

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall."

creates an attitude of reverent humbleness, while

"O Jesus, I have promised
To serve Thee to the end."

creates an attitude of service.

Prayer in the services has the same effect now producing the attitude of adoration, submission, supplication or thanksgiving.

The organ, the minister or stained glass windows—all these create different attitudes toward God amongst the audience.

Mr. Langford illustrated his ideas by several very simple illustrations. One was the idea of that famous doctor who had his patients repeat, "Every day, in every way, I'm growing better and better." The doctor was changing the attitudes of his patients.

The church service has also an element of instruction in it. The instruction is a minor characteristic of it, but is found in the Scripture reading and in the sermon.

There is service in connection with this meeting also, as illustrated by the ushers, choir members and minister, but this is very minor in comparison with the element of worship. The main characteristic of the Sunday School is the instruction. However, the first twenty minutes of the service is for worship.

Time for Teaching.

The rest of the time is spent in teaching. Children easily get wrong ideas. For example: A man and his daughter were taking a walk through the fog. Wishing to explain the fog in a simple way so the little girl could understand the father said it was only a cloud which was lying close to the earth. Then the girl said: "Then this is my beloved Son." On further questioning the father learned that the Sunday School lesson the previous Sunday had contained this verse: "There came a voice out of the cloud saying, 'This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.'" The Sunday School teacher thought she had made the lesson perfectly clear, but the child had come away with the idea that the cloud was the beloved Son. Sunday School is the place for clear instruction.

The third function of the church is service. The Women's Missionary Society, the Missionary Department in the league and Sunday School, boys' work—all these are for service.

The prayer meeting is for fellowship and service, and it is a failure when the people do not serve, but leave the work to the minister.

Many people are one-sided specializing on the workship side or the instruction, while in these modern times some are too busy serving that they forget the worship and the instruction.

Children must have all three elements in their lives, so they must be at church, Sunday School and a weekly meeting. This is very necessary that they may be all-round Christians.

Mid-Week Activities.

He said that we were passing through a period of change which we must recognize. At one time there were only prayer meetings and class meetings.

There is a time now when children are leaving the control of father and mother and when they are for the first time depending on themselves, that we must as a church do something to help. This period is perhaps being neglected by us. There comes a time when young people need more advanced ideas concerning personal relationship with God than those taught to them when small children.

In mid-week services this group must have some activity to make their life the three-sided life spoken of by Rev. Langford.

The Tuxis Boys are given some kind of training for life.

The mid-week activities are very important and a good thing to always have in them is the element of surprise. They must always be interesting and have the right kind of atmosphere.

Rev. D. R. Clare sang a solo as the Rev. Mr. White, who was to be in charge of the musical programme, was absent.

Decision Day.

One of the first questions discussed was decision day. Many of the delegates took part in the discussion, so making it much more interesting.

Decision day should be planned for months ahead by having a meeting of the Board of Management of the Sunday School and the teachers using their lessons to aid the pupils to make decisions. The teacher also can teach the meaning of conversions and decision.

As a result the decisions should be made before decision day. Decision day should be held about once a year. Different kinds of efforts should be used on different ages. Special effort should be used on those in the 'teen age. Statistics show that 8 out of 100 are converted before the age of 20 years, and only three out of one hundred decide for Christ after thirty years of age.

Fifteen, sixteen and seventeen are the most important ages, as one-third of the decisions are made then. Easter seems an especially appropriate time for decision day.

The Rev. E. M. Cook spoke of having teachers and pastors work together and form a special pastors' class which finally verges into a public reception meeting.

The question is: Is Decision day necessary? Sometimes decision means nothing. Derision must be made before decision day, and decision day should only be declaration day.

One way was by a harmony of idea in prayer hymns. These must be built around one main theme.

Should Be Prompt.

Another essential is promptness, because tardiness is demoralizing. Teachers and superintendents should be on time and even a little early. Attention must be had at once. This is really a matter of the personality of the leader who has preparation.

Other questions discussed were: How to start mid-week activities where there are none, and when without a leader" and the "Boy Problem" and "How to increase the attendance in Bible classes." These were discussed quickly because the time was short.

The first was impossible until one got a leader. In the second case, if the boy is given responsibility, he works much better. In the third case, the members of the class must do the work and not leave it all to the teacher. Some ideas given were to have a contest for new members or a monthly social evening and visiting committees.

Euchre Party.

The euchre party and dance held by the ladies of the Sacred Heart Church on Wednesday evening was a decided success. The prizes in the euchre party were won by Miss Mary Brennan and Mr. Clayton Neal.

Mr. S. Burrows, Belleville, was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Bernard Reade returned home Wednesday from Toronto where he has been working for some time.

SILENT POLICEMEN ARE LIKE HUMPTY DUMPTY.

Campbellford's Street Corner Guardians Come Back For More When Knocked Down.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 19.—(By Staff Reporter)—Striking a policeman at the intersection of two of Campbellford's streets, a motorist backed his car for another rush. The policeman was of the "silent" force and bobbed up again in the motorists path.

Waking up the motorist vowed to give these sentinels a wide berth in future. There are two of them in Campbellford, and on being struck they retire momentarily returning to their upright position with a speed that spells disaster to headlights or whatever else of a fragile nature that comes within their sweep.

These silent policeman prove very effective in regulating traffic at the town's busiest intersections, although it is whispered that there are some young bloods who amuse themselves in the small hours by pushing over the policemen just to see them rebound to an upright position like the redoubtable Humpty Dumpty.

JANETVILLE VILLAGE AND THE DISTRICT

Considerable Activity in Methodist Circles—Play to Be Staged—Potatoes Plentiful.

JANETVILLE, Oct. 20.—There is great activity in Methodist circles. The C.G.I.T. girls have purchased paint, and the painters are busy at the work of renovating the basement. The Sunday school is also developing an unusual enthusiasm. The primary class for 4-6 years of age meet at the parsonage while the older Sunday school is in session at the church. The parents are delighted at the progress the tiny tots are making in singing.

Choruses are also prepared at the parsonage for Mission Band meetings.

The Coming Play.

The young folks are enthusiastic over the coming play. The title is "Martha Made Over." There is a storm of debate on the question as to whether any improvement can be made on Martha. It will be staged in the Foresters Hall on November 9, and is expected to draw an immense audience.

The Apple Crop.

Apples are scarce in this section, but hundreds of barrels are being bought along the front and bought north to Janetville and Lindsay. In the neighborhood of Orono the crop is abundant, the quality good, and the price very moderate. Apples and potatoes are about the one price, and about the one size—both large and clean.

The Potato Crop.

Who has not heard of Manvers' potatoes? Well, the crop is excellent has not been better in years. There are not many in a hill, but they are large and free from spot or taint of any kind. Yesterday the correspondent passed a field where two waggons, about 12 people, and a potato-digger were at work. It was a very happy and healthy sight. No potato famine in this section.

Coming Events.

The Board of the Methodist church has requested the pastor to make his own plans for Missionary anniversaries this year, and the pastor has passed the courtesy on, and has invited Rev. C. Reddick of Lakefield and Rev. W. R. Tanton of Napanee, two former pastors, to take charge of these services. Rev. Reddick comes on the 28th and Rev. Tanton on the last Sabbath in November. These will be great days on the Janetville circuit.

LONDON PAWNBROKERS TO DIGNIFY BUSINESS

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(Associated Press)—London pawnbrokers are going up in the world. The latest example of this is the erection of an eighteenth century guild building among the many other famous guilds of London.

The pawnbrokers will moreover in the future cooperate on a plan similar to the old guilds and will live up to the reputation of the Guilds, by having elaborate annual dinners in observance of all the holidays peculiar to their trade.

The trade in London has an ancient record going back to the thirteenth century when the Lombard merchants were great money-lenders and played the chief part in the exchanges and money brokerage shops of those days. They kept up connection with the wealth Italian republics.

The pre-eminence of the Medici family at Florence in commercial and financial matters caused by the London merchants to adopt part as a trade sign, from which comes the familiar three golden balls.

LONDON TO HOLD GREAT WORLD'S FAIR IN 1924

LONDON, Oct. 19.—(United Press).—Nearly a quarter of a million Americans are expected to visit the British Empire Exhibition next Summer and Fall.

Without encroaching on the American title of "World's Fair" the organizers of the British Empire's show window modestly admit that theirs will have the largest, most and best of everything.

Americans with San Francisco and St. Louis in their minds will be on hand to point out mistakes and failures but from His Majesty King George V., who is patron of the exhibition, right down to the keeper of the meanest gate, there is an intention to put the British Empire's party over without either mistakes or failures.

Work on the Exhibition grounds at Wembley has been under way for months. The tremendous buildings are designed for permanency. There is a stadium reputed to be the largest in the world.

When it was first used last Spring for the finals of the English football season it proved to be too small, despite its premier position, and ten of thousands of the 250,000 would be spectators rioted and tore down gates and hands rails.

That won't happen again, according to the Exhibition managers. New and stronger gates and hand rails have been installed and the seating capacity increased by a few thousands.

The British Empire Exhibition opens in June and continues for at least six months. It is even possible that the show will be made permanent.

FRENCH POLICE STOP JAZZ BAND AT BURIAL

Dead Man Wanted It in Procession, but the Mourners Were Foxtrotting.

PARIS, October 19. — Music of a jazz band at a funeral is permissible, but the band must not play dance tunes, according to a decision of the police of the town of Udine to-day. The decree was issued and enforced at the funeral procession of one of the town's inhabitants.

The citizen had requested on his deathbed that the procession include a jazz band led by one of his closest friends.

The friend retained the band, and the musicians were doing their best to carry out their customers' wishes when several of the mourners surrendered to the spirit of jazz. For a few moments practically the whole procession was fox-trotting.

The police, scandalised at the sight, descended on the band and ordered it to stop playing. The leader pleaded his case so well, however, that the police consented that the band continue if it would change the cadence of the airs. This was done, and the mourners moved sadly forward to a one-step which had become a funeral strain.

FIGHT MOB'S LASH

MACON, Ga, Oct. 18—(United Press).—Macon's fight against the rule of the lash by masked mobs in Bibb County will be resumed at the December session of City Court.

With nine men under arrest charged with flogging nearly a dozen citizens accused, tried and punished without a hearing at a midnight court held in the woods near here, the prosecution expects to prove responsiblity for the series of floggings.

The first two trials met in reverses, but Roy Moore, city solicitor, is using the interval to strengthen his evidence against the alleged band of whippers.

Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, prominent dentist, charged with being the "whipping boss' of Macon, was acquitted at his first trial on a charge of rioting in connection with one flogging. A second trial a week later resulted in a mistrial, with the jury standing nine to three for conviction Dr. Yarborough still faces five other counts.

Macon for nearly a year has been terrorized by activities of floggers. One man suffering from consumption, was severely beaten. Another time a man and a woman were kidnapped and the woman forced to look on while the floggers severely lashed her companion.

Persons were kidnapped from the streets by men who dashed about in automobiles and for a time the police were powerless.

NO MORE CHANGES IN RACE CLUB CHARTERS

Federal And Provincial Governments will First Agree on Policy.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Assurance that the Federal Government would consult with the Attorney General of Ontario, before making any further changes in the charters of the Ontario Racing Clubs, was given by Thos. Mulvey, Under Secretary of State to-day, in reply to complaints by Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney General of Ontario regarding lack of cooperation by the Federal Government in the restriction of racing.

Mr. Nickle complained that in connection with London Jockey Club Limited Dominion Charter issued in 1917 was amended on September 10 last extending the right of club to hold race meets. Originally the charter was limited to London, Winnipeg and Montreal, but under the amendment the words "and else where in the Dominion of Canada," were added.

QUEBEC PREMIER IS CRITICIZED

Arthur Suave, Leader Of Opposition, Denounces 'Scandalous Patronage'

SUTTON, Brome County Que., Oct. 20—Protesting against what he termed undue influence used by Premier Taschereau and his colleagues, Arthur Sauve, leader of the Quebec opposition spoke here last night in favor of the Conservative candida J. N. Davigon. He denounced the promises of grants being made in the contested counties and the distribution of "scandalous patronage."

Mr. Sauve referred to Premier Taschereau's speech at St. Guillaume this week, and claimed that the Premier had inferred that if the people wanted bridges, roads, etc, it was essential they should vote for the Liberal party. He protested that this was improper for a Prime Minister.

Dealing with taxation matters he recalled the Liberal pledge of 1897 and the claim now being made by Liberals that the people were not being taxed. He said Ministers had a light regard for facts. Then the government voted a million dollars for public instructionus they imposed at same time, he said a ruinous obligation upon the school commissions and it was the same with grants given to municipalities. The result was that the municipal debt of the province was almost $250,000,000 from $35,00000 about twenty-five years ago.

The government debt had increased $25,000,000 or about a million a year since the Liberals came into power.

Mr. Sauve pointed out that on many occasions he had explained his program and he wished to lay down definitely his opinion that the government had directed agricultural and colonization organization without regard to the future. Millions of dollars had been wasted because of forest fires, caused either by forestry operations or a badly organized colonization plan. Colonists—the great national force—had been taken into regions that were unsuited to farming and resulting in the need for a costly and useless system. It was essential that such a state of affairs should be remedied and that the old neglected parishes should be reorganized.

Cameron Trial Echo of Merchants' Bank Crash.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—The trial of Colin O. Cameron, partner in the now defunct stock broking firm of Thornton Davidson and Co. whose failure had considerable bearing on the absorption of the Merchants' Bank by the Bank of Montreal, and who is charged with the theft of $500,000 from the firm of which he was a partner, will not be begun until after two trials now before the Court of Special Sessions have been completed. Judge Cusson, who presided at the first trial of Cameron two years ago, states that the case of Norris P. Bryant, local stock broker charged with the theft of fifty shares of Canadian Cottons stock, and that of Alphonse Constant, architect, charged with appropriating $91,000 from the Sisters of the Precious Blood, Ottawa, must be disposed of before the Cameron trial. It is expected that the latter trial will be a lengthy one.

Licorice is said to be the world's oldest confection.

MRS. LINDQUIST TELLS WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Kansas City, Mo.—"I was left in a very serious condition after childbirth and no one thought I could ever be any better. Then came the 'Change of Life' and I was not prepared for what I had to suffer. I had to go to bed at times to be perfectly quiet as I could not even stoop down to pick anything from the floor. I did not suffer any pain, but I was decidedly nervous and could not sleep. For nearly two years I was this way, and the doctor was frank enough to tell me that he could do no more for me. Shortly after this I happened to see in a newspaper an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a few days the medicine was in the house and I had begun its use and I took it regularly until I was well. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to others when I have the opportunity."—Mrs. MAY LINDQUIST, 2814 Independence Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Naval Reserve Officers Authorized to Enlist.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Officers of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve are authorized, by order-in-council gazetted this week, to volunteer for service afloat, or in such establishment as may be prescribed, up to a maximum of four months during every three years of their service. The order has been made following a report of the Minister of National Defence that it is desirable that such officers should be permitted to perform voluntary service in excess of the 14 days' annual training which at present is obligatory.

ASSIGNMENTS FEWER.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.— There are thirty-three notices of assignment under the Bankruptcy Act officially gazetted this week. Last week the number was sixty-four.

EQUAL TREATMENT FOR ALL NATIONS

Customs Dealings by Britain and Dominions on Equitable Basis.

GENEVA, Oct. 20.—The British and Australian delegates assured the international customs conference yesterday that Great Britain and her dominions would accord equitable customs-treatment to all nations. The assurance was given when Senor Buero, Uruguay, and the Japanese delegates, inquired if the proposed British inter-imperial policy would give preferential duties to the British Dominions.

Senor Buero said Uruguay exported the same products as Australia,—hides, meat and cattle,—and if Australia was favored, Uruguay and other South American countries would suffer.

DRAW WOMEN FROM TEMPERANCE WORK

W.C.T.U. Allege Attempt By Moderation Leaguers.

REGINA, Oct .19.—Charges that members of the Moderation League are bringing very strong pressure to bear on women belonging to the Women's Christian Temperance Union and urging them to sever their allegiance to that body were made by delegates to the Provincial convention to-day. The specific nature of the pressure was not stated but it was intimated that efforts were being made to draw them away from temperance work and some of them were inclined to leave their former activities in the W.C.T.U.

It was also stated that women belonging to various missionary societies of the province are resigning from the W.C.T.U. because they cannot see their way clear to take the "pledge imposed upon them in which they promise personally to abstain from the consumption of all forms of alcoholic beverages," and as a result it was proposed that a new department to be known as the Department of Temperance and Missions be added to the W. C. T. U. work. This proposal will be reported upon .

TEACH CHILDREN FIRE PREVENTION

Proposal Recommended By Fire Marshals in Convention.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 19.—Many resolutions seeking co-operative and educational methods in lessening Canada's fire hazard were dealt with during the fire marshars' convention. The organization of fire prevention committees provincially or municipally, throughout the Dominion was recommended. The plan outlined would follow closely that of the Fire Prevention League of Ontario. Another resolution endorsed asked the Dominion Government to remove or substantially reduce the tax on "safety" matches. It was felt that the removal of the tax would form an inducement to the public to use the safeties in preference to the more dangerous type.

On the grounds that the child of to-day is the "fire hazard" of to-morrow, the convention recommended an educational campaign among school children and that a syllabus be prepared on fire prevention methods for the use of teachers. Insurance companies also will be asked to point out the disastrous results of fires in Canada.

In an informal discussion to-day, the fire marshals agreed to pass along confidential information regarding fires in which incendiarism is suspected.

HEAVY DAMAGE BILL ALLOWED

Seven British Columbia Loggers Are Awarded $1,380,000.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 19.—By decision of the judicial committee of the Privy Council affirming a judgment of Mr. Justice Murphy, seven British Columbia loggers have been awarded damages, expected to aggregate $1,380,000 against the Canadian Timber and Lands, Limited, of Toronto.

J. C. Clausen and six other loggers contracted with the company for the purchase of cedar timber limits on the Toba River. The price would have worked out at about $600,000. At the end of the year's operations the company cancelled the contract by notice and on behalf of the loggers this was accepted as a repudiation of the contract and suit was brought in the Supreme Court, claiming damages for breach.

Mr. Justice Murphy decided the cancellation was not justified and awarded the loggers damages against the company, based on the difference between the cost of logging and the market price of the logs and this, according to the successful plaintiffs, will approximate $1,380,000. The court of appeal reversed Mr. Justice Murphy's judgment.

CANADA SHOULD AVOID TRADING

Loyalty of the Dominion Is Not to Be Bartered For Trade Preference, Declares Hon. N. W. Rowell.

ST CATHARINES, Oct. 20.—That the high commissioners of the various British Dominions now main ly concerned with trade and immigration could assume ambassadorial functions, on as favorable a footing as representatives of foreign powers with little difficulty and expense was the declaration of Hon. N. H. Rowell before the St. Catharines' Women's Canadian Club yesterday afternoon. Canada might be kept in constant touch with large matters of foreign policies that might affect her. There was also no reason why, either before or after the League of Nations assembly representatives of the Dominions could not meet annually with the British Government representatives to discuss matters affecting the Empire as a whole.

It would be a great misfortune, he continued, if the people of Great Britain ever got the idea that the loyalty and devotion of the Dominions would be affected in any way with the granting or with holding of trade preferences.

"Our loyalty and devotion to the Commonwealth is based on something much deeper than that. It is a political question that the British people must settle for themselves. If the people of Great Britain care to grant Canada a trade preference we as Canadians would appreciate it, but as Canadians we should hope that in the discussion of this question there should be no trading on the loyalty of the Dominions, and secondly that the Dominions should not interfere with the domestic policy of Great Britain."

The former chairman of the Dominion war-time cabinet made this statement in referring to the imperial conference now sitting in London representing a little more than one fourth of the people of the world, of all colors and diversities, and at the same time unity of our humanity.

Canada was vitually interested in reparations. She had a share in it. Germany owed nothing to any one nation, but it was a joint debt to all the Allies. If Germany could pay the whole debt 300,000,000 dollars would be coming to Canada. But we are not going to get that. Its greater interest lay in its effect on the whole industrial and agricultural activities in Canada. The price we received on commodities, on grain, depended on what our customers could afford to pay. The unsettled condition of Europe, the incapacity of our customers made the farmers of western Canada much less well off.

A still more important consideration was the investment Canada had made for the cause of peace in lives and in money, the greatest we had ever made, to preserve the peace and Liberties of the world. In making its proposals the British Government stated that they were not binding the Dominions. It was the first time that an empire conference had been called to consider the future peace of the world. For that reason there should be an agreement reached on an empire policy. That policy should be based on these principles. It should be based on justice. No agreement not based on justice could be permanent and provide a sure basis for the reconstruction of the world. It should be based on solid justice, protecting the rights and interests of all.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, shooting and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out, and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Sheriff and his aides were challenged on arrival at the place of meeting, and shots were fired at the party. In the stampede nineteen men were arrested.

BUILDING IMPROVEMENT STRIKES CAMPBELLFORD

Trent Valley Town Is Now At Its Prettiest Surrounded By Variegated Maples — Many New Houses.

FISHING WAS GOOD.

(By Staff Reporter.)

Campbellford, October 20.—Travelling men gathered in Campbellford yesterday were unanimous in describing it as the prettiest spot they had seen this fall.

"Winding down the hillside in the car," J. Roberts, of Toronto, said, "we came suddenly into view of the town, and it was a sight for the Gods. The maples are more variegated in color than any I have seen elsewhere, and the whole forests of them around Campbellford set off the town beautifully."

Red, green and golden, the trees lend as much to the appearance of the town with the silver Trent winding through it as rubies, emeralds and gold setting lend a scintillating diamond.

It is one of the curious commentaries on present day life that the only thing that mars the picture from the artist's point of view, is the one thing that makes the scene possible from the economist's standpoint, the factory smoke.

Extensive Building.

Although the principal industry of the town has not been booming lately hope is expressed that within a month it will again be working full time.

Building, after a few dull seasons, is brisk, and many new houses are being erected. Some twenty-three are under construction or just completed, many of them being pretentious and artistic. Several smaller houses have been built on the outskirts of hte town.

The advent of the new high school with its sewer conection, is proving a boon to residents in this district. Many houses on a quarter of a mile stretch will be connected with the sewer as a result of the extension.

Radio Club Successful.

The large aerials erected over some of the main stores of the city brought to a coterie of radio enthusiasts full reports of the world's series. About 50 citizens, it is said, are identified with the Radio Club.

Fishing Was Good.

Fishing in the Trent this year has been extraordinarily successful. Campbellford residents say. The fish were not caught — they committed suicide.

One man reported a splendid catch when he, with a party of five, landed 80 big specimens of different finny tribes.

The heaviest lunge, it is believed, that was caught this year, weighed 23 1-2 pounds. Bass weighing 5 pounds appear to have been common and pike of 12 pounds weight nothing to be surprised at.

Something different was a 16 pound pickerel landed by a local man upstream from the town. The same man almost caught a huge eel, but, unaccustomed as he was to the technique of eel killing, it escaped. He learned afterwards, he said, that eels should be struck on the tail in order to kill them, their heads being armour plated.

Low Awnings.

Although there is a town by-law which provides that awnings overhanging sidewalks must not be lower than seven feet, there are many in Campbellford which prove a nuisance to the pedestrian. These are hung or have sagged so low, that they brush the hats of persons of average height and compel some to either walk around them or stoop to pass underneath. In wet weather they are specially troublesome, it being possible to obtain an unexpected stream of water down one's neck by brushing against them in passing. There are several awnings in this condition on the main streets of the town.

Old Automobiles.

One thing that impresses the casual visitor to Campbellford is the prodigality of the citizens in the distribution of their discarded automobiles. It would seem quite possible to put together a car in running condition from the parts scattered throughout the town in back gardens. A visit to three points would provide the material for at least one car. Near the skating rink may be found a top. True, it requires patching, but it is still a top. Near the Fire Hall there are wheels, and along the river bank an entire body. As for tires, they are everywhere. Citizens of Campbellford do not sell their rubber tires to a junk dealer—they tie them to trees where they are used as swings by the children.

An automobile top is being used at one home as a playhouse, and at another there is an automobile wheel doing duty as a pulley for a clothes line.

Personal.

The friends of little Peter Winstanley will be pleased to learn that he is doing nicely after his tonsil operation at the surgery of Dr. F. F. Richardson.

Her Quinsy Yields to Vicks

THE DIRECT ACTION OF A VAPORIZING SALVE IS BEST.

Mr. Joseph Haley of 199 West Milk Street, Brantford, Ont., says: "My wife has suffered with quinsy for years, but Vicks VapoRub must have prevented it for she got through the winter without a single attack. We sent part of a jar to a neighbor, whose boy was very sick with a cold or grip. He also got relief. Vicks surely should be in every home."

They used to treat cold troubles externally with tallow, goose grease and camphor. Recently, internal dosing has been the habit and people naturally doubt the value of a salve.

For this reason, Canadian druggists introduced Vicks VapoRub, the vaporizing salve for all cold troubles, by giving away dozens of samples to responsible families and every jar sold was on 30-day trial.

The above report is just one of the great many received from enthusiastic Canadian families. With such endorsement and a positive money-back guarantee, every household ought to give Vicks a thorough trial as the home remedy for croup, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, catarrh, neuralgia, cuts, burns, bruises and sores.

At all drug stores, 50c a jar. For a free test size package, write Vick Chemical Co., 344 St. Paul St., W., Montreal, P. Q.

Though Vicks is new in Canada it has a remarkable sale in the States. Over 17 million jars used yearly.

ESCAPES AWFUL DEATH IN A GRASPING MARSH

Game Inspector Cobourne Of Belleville Saved By Comrades When Engulfed to Shoulders in Desolate Bog.

HEROIC EFFORTS

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 20.—(Special) —Dragged from the brink of a horrible grave after being engulfed to the shoulders in the ooze of a desolate bog, Game Inspector Cobourn of this city has lived to tell the story of the longest two and a half hours of his lifetime.

With Inspector Nugent, North Hastings, and Fred Brandt, he was hunting duck in North Hastings when he upset his canoe 125 feet from shore, and his friends answering his call, found him helpless in a muddy bog. They gathered posts and wired them together and passed them to him in an effort at rescue, but Cobourn sank to the waist. Frantically, his comrades extended an improvised bridge, using shoe laces, suspenders and belts to strengthen a snake-like contrivance. After two and a half hours of desperate manoeuvring the rescuers managed to shove the bridge within reach of Cobourn, who by this time had sunk to the shoulders. Then began a tedious haul to the shore. Finally a dripping black figure set foot on terra firma.

Thrilling Story.

From the northern wilds of Carlaw Township, on the border line of Hastings and Renfrew Counties, 100 miles north and east of Belleville, comes a thrilling tale of adventure, mishaps and rescue, all of which occurred at noon, one week ago yesterday.

During the forenoon of Friday last, Inspector William Nugent of Madoc, Mr. Fred Brandt, stock salesman, of this city, and Russel Cobourn, game warden of Madoc, were in the north country duck hunting.

The party walked into Conroy's Marsh, near Robinson's Lake, Nugent and Brandt going one way to their hunting ground, and Cobourn walking in the other direction. At 11.55 a.m., when the two men wished to leave the marsh, Nugent suggested that they should take a walk over and see if Cobourn was ready to leave the marsh. As they were walking out, they heard cries of "help" and "bog."

Fearing that some serious accident had befallen Cobourn the men rushed through the buck bush for a distance of one mile to the bog.

Sinking Rapidly.

On arrival at the bog, Cobourn was discovered upset out of the canoe, which he had borrowed, and was sinking rapidly in the bog, which was then above his knees. In a short time the treacherous bog would suck the man beneath the surface, possibly to a depth of 20 feet. The situation demanded immediate action and presence of mind and Nugent and Brandt did not fall down in either connection.

Cobourn was crying lustily for help. He was standing in the canoe which had been completely submerged under his weight, and the muck was upover Cobourn's knees. He was 125 feet from solid ground.

There was not a stick in evidence to aid the man, but in the distance, nearly half a mile away, were a number of stacks of beaver hay which were bound down by poles which were wired over their tops.

Act Promptly.

Rushing to the stacks, Nugent and Brandt quickly took the long poles, and ran with them to the bog. Taking of their braces and belts and shoe strings, and cutting their pocket handkerchiefs into strings, the two men tied the poles together so as to form a sort of raft. In order to make them secure they were wired but as there was but sufficient wire to go once around, the poles were notched deeply so that the wire would go further in securing the poles together. This improvised raft, the men gently shoved out to the canoe and man. By this time, Cobourn was submerged almost to his shoulders and sinking steadily, the canoe going down under his feet. When the raft reached the stricken man he reached down into the muck and took off his belt, and tied one end to the raft, then decking underneath the mire in a mad attempt to save his life, Cobourn hooked the other end of the belt to the middle thwart of the canoe.

Brought to Shore.

The men on shore then started to haul in, hoping momentarily that nothing would break and delay their rescue work. Walking along the shore, rather than pulling straight (as the canoe had sunk at an angle to the direction in which the men were on shore), the canoe and man began to rise out of the bog slowly but surely. Finally after some minutes, both came to the surface and were hauled gently in to the solid ground.

Cobourn was covered with the thick mush of the bog, and the tears were in his eyes as he grasped the hands of the two men who had saved his life under such terrible conditions and in a wilderness where the work of rescue was extremely difficult. Cobourn, who is more than 6 feet tall and a heavy weight boxer, is the man who recently boxed a Montreal at Madoc and defeated him He is a powerful swimmer and he cause of his great physical powers he did not collapse nor lose his presence of mind while in his terrible predicament.

When the canoe capsized in the six inches of water and bog Cobourn had presence of mind enough to remove the shells from his automatic shot gun for fear that he might shoot himself in the struggle and he also removed his Mackinaw coat, placing both in the bottom of the canoe before it went out of sight. This he did while hanging on to the canoe in which he later climbed. The canoe was a ten foot birch bark craft. It was just 2:30 p.m., when Cobourn stepped on solid ground after his harrowing experience. Conroy's marsh is a fruitful but treacherous duck hunting ground.

GIGANTIC CUNADER COASTED BIG WAVE

Passengers Thrown From Berths and First Class Cabins Drenched.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press).—The gigantic Cunarder Aquitania which reached port yesterday from Southampton, was lifted four times Thursday night to the crest of a gigantic wave, rested there an instant, and then coasted sidewise down the slope at an angle which caused all on board who were standing to lose their footing and slide or roll acros the decks. Many passengers were thrown from their berths and all first class cabins in which the port holes were open were drenched.

To say that the, 1,128 passengers were terrified is a mild description. Hundreds remained up all night. more than a score required the services of the ship's surgeon. Many of the women passengers were still hysterical when they came ashore.

Captain Sir James Charles who has been crossing the Atlantic 28 years, said he had never had such a freak experience. It was as if an earthquake at bottom of the ocean had transmitted its influence to the surface.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchang — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(United Press.)—Stocks finished the week on the stock market with a quiet display of strength which was entirely at variance with the general sentiment prevailing in the speculative community. Whether the short interest was so great that it bolstered up the general list or whether strong financial interests were accumulating stocks in the belief that the unfavorable aspects of the trade situation had been thoroughly discounted, the market as a whole had an air of underlying confidence, while decided strength was in evidence in various groups.

None of the sporadic outbursts of weakness, recently familiar, took place in the two hours of trading. Some observers advanced the theory that certain speculative cliques, knowing that a substantial bear following existed in the leading issues were trying to move pivotal stocks in order to help their work in that direction. If such was the case their opinions were decidedly impressive, for the leading industrial stocks moved up to the best levels of the current recovery, while market strength was displayed by the tobacco shares, especially American and Reynolds and by quite a sizable number of issues recently under pressure.

No selling of any consequence developed in the last hour and prices continued to display an improved tone up to the close. Pronounced strength was displayed by American Can, Industrial Alcohol, American Woollen, Hartman Corporation, Tobacco Products and many specialties.

The weekly mercantile reviews had a cautious tone, but said that the normal autumn improvement was noticable in many lines of business, in its current bulletin, the National Bank of Commerce, summarized what appeared to be the concensus when it appeared there was no denying that in some spots business was poor and in others bad, but that it was also true that regarded as a whole business was in fair volume and the outlook was for better conditions rather than worse.

Prices changed among the standard stocks in the early dealings were without significance, but the trading was characterized by a confident undertone.

Trading was extremely light through the first hour, the volume of dealings suffering from the absence of operations interested in various sporting attractions carded for the day. Prices, however, showed a steady front, the main body of stocks being free from selling pressure, while a few groups displayed special strength.

Chain Stores acted especially well, reflecting the high rate of earnings enjoyed in September which furnished unmistakable evidence of the nation's prosperity.

Rumors of financing by Pan-American Petroleum originated in the big expenditures made by the company in California.

The market closed higher with the following prices:

Steel 88 1-4, up 1 pt-8; American Locomotive 69 1-4, off 1-4; Texas Company 41; Pan. VETERANS MUST seas soldiers, the veterans have sacred rights arising out of their sacrifice, but have not lost sight of the fact that they have a duty to the country. As an organization, the G. W. V. A. is caring for the widows and children of returned men. It is helping to restore sound economic conditions in the country. 'We are out for an intensive Canadianism" the Dominion President said, 'The G. W. V. A. is a body of men who have given of their very best to help in what was accomplished during the war. You have rendered Canada safe for Democracy; you have spread abroad that feeling of good comradeship throughout Canada. The gauntlet of service in the home affairs of your country is thrown down to you. If you do not accepet that gauntlet the large part of the fruits of the service you rendered in France will be forgotten and void."

Become Political Force.

That no man is entitled to as large a share in the affairs of the country as the man who won it back, is the opinion of the speaker. The men who went overseas were the men who saw the opportunity and seized it to make the trouble right. "I don't say to become a political organization but I do say we should become a political force. We should form a platform founded on what we have seen and learned."

The speaker referred briefly to the Ralston Commission and the fact that although the Government lost as a result of the investigation it refused to pay the expenses of the case.

Regarding amalgamation, the Dominion President is of the opinion that this is the Utopia to be hoped for.

In closing, the speaker feelingly called the attention of the audience to the 65,000 soldiers of Canada who are buried overseas and the 7,000 in Canada. "We must not forget," he declared. 'It is up to us to see that the world does not forget."

MacNeil Had Ovation.

Comrade C. G. MacNeil was greeted with "He's a jolly good fellow' and cheers. He praised Dr. Sutton, who, he said, had distinguished himself as one who was ever ready to champion the cause of the returned soldier.

The speaker said, the ex-service man is a sadly disillusioned creature. 'He has many times expected bread and been offered a stone. We are still capable in spite of our cynicism to separate fact from fiction and throw out the worthless. We appeal for your support only because we have demonstrated the efficiency of the organization. The credentials of the G. W. V. A. are founded on service."

The Association is not a pedestal to exalt the veterans' war service. It was primarily designed to render service to the returning soldier and to Canada. The speaker reviewed the history of the G.W.V.A., calling attention to the success of the organization in dealing with the Pensions Act and in other fields,

"It is always ready to see that the right spirit of brotherhood is in evidence when the other fellow is in trouble," he said. "It has protected Canada from serious unrest by providing a constitutional method of redress. It has sought to maintain the ideals of citizenship and has fought anything that threatened the ideals on which the national life is founded.

The bitter disillusionment of war left men sick and apathetic, but the G.W.V.A. offers them the opportunity to do plain, simple things kindly and give life something more than is taken from it. "In honest, sincere work of that nature you will find satisfaction that you can not obtain otherwise," the speaker said.

"They are now talking about another war," continued the Dominion Secretary, "and rumors come to Canada every day. Those of us who have been in war do not wish to see those horrors repeated.

"Those who are talking so glibly about war had very little to do with the last one. It is our right to see that they do not unscrupulously plunge us into another bath of blood. If there is fighting to be done it is up to us who took the brunt of the last war to say where and when it shall be done."

Poppy is emblematic.

The simple poppy and the country's flag are the emblems of the G. W.V.A., the speaker said. "The poppy reminds us of the sacrifices our comrade made. We shall not forget the heroic dead who hung themselves on the uncut German wire. The last lingering notes of the 'Last Post' have a cleansing and stirring effect on our outlook on life and our motives.

"The flag stands for all that we fought for. It stands as the emblem of something new—of a new spirit of loyalty—of a new code by which we can make it a better world to live in; permeated with justice and mercy, liberty and freedom; and which emphasizes every man's right to happiness and life's joys."

Resolution Adopted.

A resolution was adopted demanding that the expenses of the Ralston Commission be paid from the canteen funds at present held by the Federal government.

R. J. Devey acted as accompanist and chorus leader, injecting enthusiasm into the new ditties and smiling at the enthusiasm with which the audience joined in the old trench favorites. Messrs. Lewis and Rush contributed to the musical programme.

PROTECT THE KIDNEYS

The heart and the kidneys are the most important organs of the body.

This time of the year particularly the kidneys are easily deranged from chills and exposure. Escesses in eating and drinking will often cause disease in the kidneys.

Never neglect a backache which is on of the first symptoms and may lead to other complications.

The best remedy for any kidney ailments is Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills. They will keep the kidneys in a sound and healthy condition and free the blood from all poisons.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, and if they fail to do what we claim for them your money will be refunded.

FIVE HUNDRED FOWL SUPPER

Anniversary Services and Concert at Dunsford Church.

DUNSFORD, Oct. 20.—On Sunday, Oct. 14, the Dunsford Methodist church held their anniversary services morning and evening at eleven and seven o'clock. The church at both services was crowded and Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., chairman of the Lindsay District, and pastor of Fenelon Falls Methodist church, preached at both services. His sermons were very inspiring and well enjoyed by all. The music rendered on Sunday was under the directorship of Mr. P. H. Skitch. The anthem used in the morning was "We Shall Dwell in the Land," the solo part taken by Mr. P. H. Skitch himself. In the evening the music was enjoyed by all, the anthem being "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," and "Hark, Hark, My Soul," the solo parts taken by Mr. P. H. Skitch and Mrs. Mel. Morrow; also a solo by Miss Luella Thurston, and a duet by Messrs. P. H. Skitch and Mr. Fred Skitch, of Peterboro.

On Monday night following a large fowl supper was held in the skating rink where over five hundred people were served, and then a good concert given in the Methodist church. The Sunday anthems were repeated, and a duet sung by Mrs. Mel. Morrow and Mr. P. H. Skitch, also a solo by Mr. Fred Skitch, which was heartily encored.

The speakers of the evening were Rev. Drum of the Bobcaygeon Presbyterian church, Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., and Rev. Billie Smith... The chairman of the evening was Rev. Mr. Trumpour.

FORTY-YEAR TRIP TO REACH STARDOM

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(United Press).—After forty years on the stage, an actress has been given an opportunity to prove that she is entitled to stardom and has succeeded. This is the story of Lucille La Verne who assumes the leading role in "Sun Up," an excellent American folk play by Lula Vollmer, now playing here.

The Players Company, Inc., an organization formed for the purpose of bringing out from obscurity American plays of merit, is responsible for the recognition of Miss La Verne.

"Sun Up" is a drama of the Carolina mountains, and Miss La Verne protrays an illiterate backwoods woman, to whom the war brings the meaning of brotherly love. Her interpretation of the character and the scenes in which she shields the son of the man who killed her husband, stamp her a character actress of high rank.

Miss Vollmer, the author, is a native of North Carolina, and in this play she has brought to the stage all of her knowledge of the way Southern mountain folk think and act. A capable cast surrounds Miss La Verne and the dialect is authentic—not the speech of Broadway backwoodsmen.

PREPARING FOR NEXT WAR

(By A. L. BRADFORD)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (United Press).—A great test mobilization of America's military forces, who will be called on to defend this country in the event of another world conflict, will take place throughout the United States the latter part of next year.

This event, which will be unique in the history of the country, will be held under present plans, on the next birthday of John J. Pershing, chief of staff, general of the armies of the United States, and the American military hero of the World War. Pershing is the man who has fought for the plan under which this mobilization will be held.

Pershing's birthday will be on September 13, 1924, and on that day, having attained the age of 64 years, he will be retired automatically from the army.

During this test mobilization, young American manhood, theoretically, will spring to arms all over the United States, and will report to commanding officers throughout the country.

It will be the first actual test of the new military policy of the United States, a policy adopted after the World War, and a policy intended to rear a great citizen army to defend American shores in the future.

As an illustration, this writer remembers an explanation given by the Spanish military attache here of the causes of the recent coup d'etat in Spain and the substitution of a military dictatorship in that country.

The Spanish military attache said that the government crisis in his country was caused by the Spanish failures in the Morrocan campaigns, failures suffered because Spain's heart was not in the fighting. "A nation's heart must be in a battle for it to succeed," he declared.

Perfect Their Plans

Committees of the War Department now working on plans for the execution of the great test mobilization. Later, these committees probably will visit the different army corps areas throughout the United States to perfect the mobilization plans.

When the test mobilization has been carried out, officers explain, it will mean that the United States will have worked out and actually tested the initial phase of such a mobilization as it will be called on to bring about in a future great war.

It will develop a system whereby America, upon the outbreak of war, will be able to accomplish in a few days all in the way of concentrating and training soldiers that it took this country many months to do when it entered into the World War.

When the command for mobilization goes out from the war department next September, the nation—although acting in test play, but sternly in earnest for a future emergency—will reach out into the highways and byways of America expecting to find its soldiers ready to march.

FOUR CASES AT LOCAL ASSIZES

All Are For the Recovery of Money — No Jury Cases.

There are four cases set down for hearing at the autumn court sittings in the Court House, opening on Tuesday next before the Honorable Mr. Justice Kelly. All are for the recovery of money and all are non-jury cases. One jury case was entered, but was afterwards withdrawn on settlement.

In McDonald vs. National Cooperage Co., the plaintiff claims the sum of $2,649.60, being the amount of wages and money the plaintiff alleges having expended for defendant. The action arises out of a written contract dated December 13, 1921, when plaintiff was hired to take charge of concrete and erecting work in connection with alterations to a factory. Gordon and O'Brien and A. S. Lowan are the solicitors.

Canadian Nashua Paper Co. claim of Coopers' Bakery the sum of $2,251.01, said to be the amount of goods supplied by plaintiff on defendant's written order, less $100 paid on account. Defendant states the order was for 50,000 whereas 500,000 bread wrappers were supplied. Gordon and O'Brien and Coburn, Brackin and Gordon are acting for the parties respectively.

Misrepresentation Alleged.

Robertson vs. Lumb is an action to recover $4,031.33, which it is claimed defendant covenanted to pay under an indenture dated January 22, 1920, and has refused to pay. The defendant states he was induced to enter into the contract for the purchase of the land for which a part of the money is claimed by the false and fraudulent misrepresentation of a material fact. He counter-claims for $100 damage for injuries by reason of the plaintiff's conduct and for deceit. The grounds of defence are that water enters the cellar and lodges to a depth of 18 inches. Gordon & O'Brien and Frank Baalim are the solictiors.

In Copping vs. Miller et al, the action is for recovery of an investment induced by alleged misrepresentation .Gordon and O'Brien will appear for the plaintiff and Erickson, Brown and Crawford for the defendant Miller.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Macaroni is an excellent starchy food. It is easily digested, very appetizing and cheap. Considering the number of calories per pound as purchased, macaroni is cheaper than bread or potatoes.

Keep in mind that macaroni is a starch, classed under cereals. When serving it plain potatoes should not be included in the meal. The dessert should not be of rice or tapioca and the bread should be whole wheat or bran.

Macaroni combined with milk and cheese provides the same nourishment as meat and potatoes. By this I do not mean just enough cheese to give a rich flavor, but a large amount of cheese comparatively speaking. Cheese is a concentrated food somewhat lacking in iron, but rich in lime. The iron can be supplied by a vegetable or cranberries as a sauce or jelly.

A nourishing, well balanced menu of which a dish of macaroni is a part might be worked out something like this:

Menu.

Tomato Bouillon
Toasted Bread Sticks
Macaroni and Cheese Baked Onions
Lettuce and Tomato Salad
Bran Bread
Grapes Coffee

This menu is a suggestion that may help in making other combinations. Buttered carrots or cauliflower, spinach or brussels sprouts might be substituted for the onions. If carrots or spinach are used the salad might be of cabbage. Celery, radishes or lettuce, endive or romaine as the salad do not repeat the taste of brussels sprouts or cauliflower and furnish valuable mineral salts as well as adding bulk to the meal.

Any fruit, raw or canned, is compatable with the rest of the menu.

Macaroni and cheese can be prepared in a number of ways, but these two are very satisfactory.

In choosing cheese for cooking you will find that a mild cheese is preferable to a strong cheese.

Macaroni and Cheese I.

One cup macaroni broken in inch pieces, 8 cups boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup chopped cheese, milk, paprika.

The water should be boiling rapidly when the macaroni is added. Add salt and cook 20 minutes or until the macaroni is tender. Drain and dip in cold water. Drain. Put a layer of macaroni in a buttered baking dish, add a layer of cheese. Continue layer for layer until all is used. The last layer should be of cheese. Pour over milk to almost cover macaroni. The milk should show through the pieces of macaroni. Sprinkle with paprika and bake 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Macaroni and Cheese II.

One cup broken macaroni, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1½ cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, tiny "pinch" mustard, 2/3 cup chopped cheese.

Cook macaroni in boiling water as in preceding rule. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Mix mustard, salt and pepper and stir into sauce. Add cheese and cook until cheese is melted. Add macaroni and mix thoroughly. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. The top can be covered with buttered crumbs or a tablespoon of cheese can be sprinkled over.

There is no more nourishment in the second dish of macaroni than in the first, but the thickened sauce is nicer to serve.

Plain Macaroni.

One and one-half cups broken macaroni, ½ cup milk, 2 tablespoons butter, salt and paprika.

Cook macaroni as in first recipe. Put butter, milk and macaroni in a sauce pan, season with salt and pepper and reheat. Stir to prevent sticking. Serve as a substitute for potatoes.

In the following recipe for macaroni, Italian style, the ham is used for flavoring. If you must serve a hot dish at noon time to a large number of people this dish is all that could be desired. So many clubs limit their luncheon menus to three or four dishes that the main dish must be nourishing and a "full meal" in itself.

Macaroni, Italian Style.

One cup broken macaroni, 1 cup chopped cheese, 8 mushrooms, 1 cup canned tomatoes, 1 cup white sauce, 4 tablespoons minced cold boiled ham.

Cook macaroni as in preceding rules. Rub tomatoes through a strainer to remove seeds. Heat and add less than one-eighth teaspoon soda. Stir in white sauce made with two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon flour and one cup milk. Add mushrooms cut in shreds, ham and cheese. Cook over hot water until cheese is melted. Add macaroni and heat until very hot.

This rule will serve six persons. Double all the ingredients to serve 12.

Q.—What is the scope of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London?

A.—A comparatively new Canadian connection in England is the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London, which has, during its existence of two years, proved its need and value. Sir George McLaren Brown, K.B.E., sponsored it as its first President, succeeded by Col. A. Lorne Hamilton, C.M.G. The objects of the chamber are "the encouragement and promotion of Anglo-Canadian Trade and Commerce, the development of Canadian industries by British capital, and generally the furtherance of Canada's interests in the United Kingdom."

PAIN IN THE JOINTS

Is An Indication That the Blood Is Thin and Watery.

The first sign of rheumatism is frequently a pain and swelling of one of the joints. If this is not treated through the blood, which is the seat of the disease, the poison spreads, affecting other joints and tissues—sometimes rheumatism attacks the heart and is fatal.

A remedy that has corrected many cases of rheumatism is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills enrich and purify the blood so that the poisonous rheumatic matter is driven out of the system as nature intended. Miss Gertie Denne, Washago, Ont., was attacked with rheumatism and found relief through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "About a year ago I was attacked by rheumatism and for two weeks was confined to my bed. The trouble was so painful, affecting the joints of my limbs so that I could not stand alone. Mother had a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the house and thought they might help me. I began taking them, and when I had taken these pills got a further supply, with the result that the rheumatism vanished, and I was a well girl. I may add that my mother and two of my sisters have also used the pills for various ailments with equal success, and now we are never without them in the house."

If you are suffering from any condition due to poor watery blood, or weak nerves, begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now, and note how your strength and health will improve. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail, at 50 cents o box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PROTECTING FRUIT TREES

Preventing Injury to Fruit Trees by Field Vermin

Poisoned Grain the Cheapest Method —Preparing the Bait—How to Place It—Bee Colony Winter Supplies—Feeding Facts—A Refrigerator Without Ice.

With the passing of snow each spring, the destructive bark gnawing of small rodents is in evidence in too many orchards.

Poison the Best and Cheapest Method

Poison offers the best and cheapest method of preventing mouse injury. Should there be any evidence of mice before freeze-up, or should there be an abundance of feed and shelter for mice in the young orchard through the presence of weeds, seeds, and fallen fruit, it is advisable to institute a mouse-poisoning campaign before snow covers the ground. An excellent poison bait can be prepared as follows: Make a clear starch paste by mixing one tablespoon full of gloss starch in one-half cup of cold water and stir this mixture into a pint of boiling water; then mix one ounce of strychnine sulphate with one ounce of baking soda, and stir into the starch until a smooth mass is formed, then stir in one-half cup of heavy corn syrup and a tablespoonful of glycerine. Apply this mixture to 40 pounds of clean wheat and mix thoroughly to coat each kernel. Put the poisoned grain in a strong paper sack, then burn the stick you used for stirring and scald the vessel, being careful where the wash water goes.

Where to Place the Poisoned Grain

The poisoned grain can be placed in containers of some sort such as tin cans, or open-necked bottles, small drain tiles and such like. These containers can then be placed at any likely place where there is protection or near the trunk of the tree. With the poisoned grain in a container so placed as to be protected from rain or standing water, it will always be on duty should a hungry bark-eating mouse approach a tree. The container with any unused poisoned grain should be taken up and put out of harm's way as soon as the mouse danger is over in the early spring. Put a poison label, large enough for all humans to see, on all poison grain sacks. When the sacks are empty burn them. Keep all poisons out of the reach of children and animals. —L. Stevenson, O. A. C., Guelph.

This Refrigerator Requires No Ice

A refrigerator that will keep food products at a temperature of 55 degrees Fahrenheit can be made easily at home. It consists of an open framework of shelving around which is tacked canton flannel, burlap, or some similar material, which is kept moist. The evaporation of the moisture holds the temperature down. A series of wicks, or trips of cloth, extending from a pan of water on top of the refrigerator to the covering of the refrigerator, provide the moisture. Such a refrigerator should be kept in the shade where there is a good current of air.

LITTLE KNOWN OF HUICHOL INDIANS

Lead Secluded Lives Among Fastnesses of Sierra Madres.

DURAGON, Mexico.—Occupying an almost inaccessible and very remote valley in the State of Nayarit is the Huichol tribe of Indians, whose strange rites and customs have just been investigated by a Government commission consisting of Dr. Pedro Monstratta, Jose Rodriguez and Miguel Fernandez, all of Mexico City.

These scientists have just arrived here after spending three months with the Huicholes and undergoing terrible hardships. In attempting to reach the mountain locked land of the Indians they got lost, and for three weeks wandered aimlessly in the Sierra Madres. Finally, they reached the valley through a narrow trail and entered upon an experience, the details of which they will give in the formal report that they will make to the Government.

The Huichol Indians are supposed to be descended from the Omecas, of Tartar origin, who made their appearance on the western coasts of the American continent about 1500 B.C., antedating by many centuries the Aztecas, or Aztecs.

The Huicholes occupy that section of the country lying between the southern boundary of the State of Durango and Rio Grande de Santiago, and from Rio Bolanos to the Pacific Cost.

Until recently the Huicholes have led a secluded life among the fastnesses of the Sierra Madres. No stranger dared penetrate their domain. But their country is rich in material, and occasionally a Mexican prospector or explorer would venture among the mountain spurs bordering their territory. When the natives became aware of the presence of a stranger they quickly expelled the intruder. While they showed intense antipathy to any intrusion on their domain therey were generally peaceably inclined and resorted to no warlike measures.

Guns Almost Unknown

The use of firearms is almost unknown to them, but with the bow and arrow they bag their game with accuracy. The small, white tailed deer abound in all sections of their territory, while in secluded barrances roam bear who have never heard a rifle shot.

The Huicholes are a pastoral people and have some wealth, as compared with neighboring tribes, in the matter of herds of goats, sheep, cattle and horses. Having their range in the rocks of the dry cap country of the Sierra Madres, their horses and mules acquire a hardness of hoof unequalled in any other section of Mexico, and sell in the neighboring mining camps at superior prices.

Within their territory can be raised almost any product of the torrid and temperate zones, from the occoa of the tropics to the potato of the North. Their lands are rich in gold, silver, copper, lead and tin. One of their chief industries is making rope from material obtained from the maguey and lechuguilla plants.

Men Grow Hair Long

From the same plants they also brew the national drink of Mexico, mescal. They manufacture belts, sandals, headgear and other ornaments of beads.

The men of the tribe never cut their hair, but leave it to hang down the back longer than that of the women.

Wardrobes are limited; when they clothe themselves with a new suit of manta it is worn until time renders a new outfit necessary. While a few speak Spanish, the majority have never heard any other idioms than their own. They are not given to journeying far from their territory and when they make their appearance in a neighboring mining camp they become objects of much interest.

While living under the authority of the Mexican officials in the districts in which they reside and observing the laws of the republic, they also have distinct laws and customs of their own to which locally they give precedence. They generally live in small communities or pueblos, chief among which are La Tuspa, San Sebastian, Santa Maria de Portal, Camatian and Amatlan de Jora. The last named was a silver mining camp of some note 200 years ago. After the Spanish evacuated the town, the Huicholes took possession and have held it ever since.

HUMOR IN OLD VIENNA

VIENNA (United Press).—Old folks are storming the police department here waving aloft what appear to be official invitations to their own cremation. But it's evidently all a joke. Somebody has sent these neatly printed invitations to many old people about the city, informing them that their days of usefulness are over and that they should bring along an urn for their ashes and prepare for the burning of their bodies. The police are investigating.

NEW EXPLORATIONS

A scheme is on foot to explore British New Guinea, the interior of the island never having been traversed by a white man. The aim of the expedition is to determine the economic value of New Guinea to the Empire, and to add to the sum of scientific knowledge. It is hoped to send out an advance party to select a suitable harbor as a base of operations. For the main expedition the personnel will include experts in entomology, botany, geology, mining, engineering, anthropology, chemistry, archæology, tropical agriculture and topographical surveying. The nontechnical staff will number eight, and so exacting are the conditions that out of 714 applications, only three have been found to comply with them. The party will number 30 all told, with a police protection of 100.

Unsolved Mysteries

In spite of the fact that everyone refers to Shakespeare, names his plays and quotes his writings with a greater facility than is accorded to any other writer in history, he who has gained fame as "The Bard of Avon" is one of the most baffling riddles the world has ever known—or has failed to know.—On the single question of the authorship of what are commonly called the Shakespearean plays no less than 20,000 volumes have been written, but it is still far from certain whether the object of all of this controversy was named Shakespere, Shakespeare, Shakespear of Shaxper. Little is known of his manhood and less of his early life, while the only thing certain about his birth is that he was the third child of James "Shakespeare," a glover.

The remaining events of his life, aside from the writings about which there has been so much argument, can be summed up in a short paragraph. At eighteen Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway. Five years later he joined a company of travelling players and went to London where, at the age of 25, he became engaged in revising plays. Then he became one of the leading actors in what was considered the best company in London and his play-writing ability commenced to attract widespread notice. At 32 he was able to buy a home at Stratford, where he retired at the age of 46, and died at 52.

All manner of conflicting statements have been made about Shakespeare's private life. Some authorities maintain that he was the illiterate son of uneducated parents and that even his own children could neither read nor write. Others claim that he was forced to leave home because of poaching in the park of Sir Thomas Lucy and still others who dispute his right to posthumous fame declare that he was known in Stratford as a petty tradesman rather than as an author of distinction. On the other hand, a number of biographers refer to the fact that Shakespeare owned stock in two of the leading London theaters and mention other supposedly authentic details to support their contention that he is entitled to all dignity which had surrounded the memory of "the master play wright."

Strange as it may seem, there are only a few examples of Shakespeare's handwriting extant and these are only alleged signatures, no two of which are similar. Therefore, argue those who maintain that Shakespeare's plays were written by someone else—presumably Marlowe or Francis Bacon—it is extremely unlikely that anyone with as little education as Shakespeare is known to have possessed and a man whose chirography is indicative of such lack of ease with a pen could ever have had the patience, to say nothing of the wide knowledge of history, literature and the sciences, to write the productions which bear his name. According to Sir Edward Durning Lawrence, "the real Shakespeare was a drunken, illiterate clown, totally unable to write a single letter of his own name and of whom we are told, if we understand what we are told, that he could not read a line in print."

It is apparent that the author of the plays which bear the name of Shakespeare must have been a man extremely well versed in law, history, court usages, etiquette and various other things connected with learning which no man in Shakespeare's original sphere of life would have been expected to know. It is also necessary that he should have been a master of Latin, French, Spanish and Italian; that he be conversant with the principles of chemistry and physics and that, above all, he should have possessed a deep insight into human nature. None of these, with the possible exception of the latter, was at the disposal of the son of a glovemaker at the period of English history at which Shakespeare lived and this appears to add additional weight to the claims of those who maintain that Lord Bacon wrote the plays and induced Shakespeare to place his name upon them in order that the real author might escape the wrath of Queen Elizabeth, who did not approve of the way in which the history of certain ancestors was handled.

But, in spite of the thousands of books which have been written upon the subject and the intensive investigations which have been conducted, the answer to the Shakespearean riddle is still far beom being reached, and it seems to be likely that the mystery which surrounds the authorship of the most famous plays in the world will never be dispelled.

LINIMENT FOUND TO BE POWERFUL GERMICIDE

Originally, Absorbine Jr. was sold only as a pain reliever and an embrocation. It was quickly discovered that the liniment was positive death to all forms of germ life, and it is now used as a mouth wash, for wound dressing and for all disinfecting purposes.

Another surprise was yet in store. A Wm. Pratt of Springfield, Mass., applied Absorbine Jr. to a varicose vein to relieve the intense pain. Not only did the pain leave, but he noticed every day the swollen vein becoming smaller. The treatment was kept up and, today, Mr. Pratt's legs, though he has never used anything else on them, are as smooth as when he was a boy. It has now been proved that Absorbine Jr. is an actual specific for varicose veins, leg ulcers, boils, pvorrhoea and a number of other ailments and injuries besides that for which it was first prepared. Nothing serves so many every day purposes and nothing is better entitled to its place in every home. When it is needed, it will be needed in a hurry. Don't wait for someone to be hurt. ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

BILLY BULL LEARNS A LESSON

Suddenly Billy lifted his head.

Billy the Bull didn't like red. Everybody in Squealy-Moo Land knew that, even Gadabout Gobbler had enough sense to keep out of the pasture lot.

Billy was really a fine fellow, but like lots of nice people, he had a fad. Just as you don't like soup with onions in it, or going to bed early, or let-down dresses, or an overcoat, or castor-oil, or the school-bell.

Really, when I think of it, Billy is quite sensible, there being only one thing he doesn't like and a hundred and one things we don't like. I'm as sure as anything that onions and dresses and overcoats and castor-oil and school-bells never worried Billy for a minute. No doubt he thinks we are queer.

But there! I'll have to start all over again.

One day Missez Cow said to him, says she, "Billy, you're very foolish to hate red so! Some of the loveliest things in the world are red. Roses and sunsets and barns. Why, my goodness! In the cold winter time you're tickled to death to stay in the red barn and keep warm."

"Yes, I know," snorted Billy, pawing the ground obstinately. " I do like a few red things. It all depends on what they are. If it's something I don't know about, then I get all upset. I just can't help it—like that thing that goes tearing along the road on the other side of the fence sometimes. It's not only red and shiny, but it snorts and yells and stutters and shrieks until it gets on my nerves. But it goes so fast I never can catch up to it—not even if I could get over the fence."

Suddenly Billy lifted his head. Off in the distance was a chug, chugging sound that came nearer and nearer.

"There it is now," roared Billy angrily. "It just comes here to tease me."

And before Missez Cow could stop him, he lowered his head and rushed for the fence.

Billy was so mad that his horns took off the two top bars and he went over with a leap—right at the shiny red thing that was almost beside him.

There was a noise and the red thing stopped.

In a few minutes Billy came limping back.

"I guess it didn't like me, either," he panted. "It can buck awfully hard. A lot harder than I can."

Nancy and Nick and Mister Dodger washed off his sore places and tied him up. Billy took it all as patiently as a lamb.

Missez Cow was just about to say, "I told you so, Billy Bull," but the fairyman stopped her.

"A good lesson like this is worth a hundred lectures," he whispered. "Billy won't meddle with an automobile again."

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Clifford C. Robinson

The fats form the third group in the foods that are a necessary requirement for the upkeep and health of your body. In the actual order of use, they probably rank second, the carbohydrates being first and the proteins third as regards percentage value in calories.

You will remember that in the fuel foods consisting of starch, fat and sugar, fat is also second. Its place and value as a food in making blood for body burning tissue is therefore well defined.

Some people are real enemies of fat. Yet fat as a food, not as surplus, non-working tissue, is absolutely essential to normal bodily health and growth. If your body does not receive some food rich in fats it will burn up. The tissues will be drawn upon to supply the deficiency. You will be thin, undernourished and weak in disease resistance.

Here are some foods, rich in fats, which will help to supply your body with blood to build tissue for fuel:

Butter, cream and cheese are in the front rank. Roast beef, roast pork and ham are runners up. Spinach, the great regulator, is rich in fat: eat it whether you like it or not. Onions well cooked come second to spinach in the vegetable list. In 100 calories of onions, 40 per cent. is fat food.

Baked beans are still good as ever. If they don't interfere with your digestion, they are a good fat producing food used once or twice a week. Peas and string beans are also excellent. Cheap fats are oleomargarine and cotton seed oil.

Potato chips contain 63 per cent. fat. Milk shares its value as a food material in good proportions, containing 52 per cent. fat, 29 per cent. carbohydrates and 19 per cent. protein.

It is well to learn and practice economy in buying food. But one should always remember that there is no better economy than the conservation of one's working power. I wish that the millions of our people, who are forced through necessity to live within well defined cost limitations, could in some way acquire the knowledge by which they would thoroughly know and be able to select, from these three great groups, a proper nourishing diet. The positive health program that so many newspapers with the aid of scientists and physicians are carrying out, at the present time, will help to a marked degree in bringing this about.

A VETERAN TEACHER HONORED

At the regular meeting of the secondary teachers of Central Ontario held in the town of Port Hope on Saturday, Oct. 5th, J. Davidson, M.A., LL. B., of Peterborough, was presented by President H. R. H. Kenner, B.A., with a beautifully engraved honorary life certificate in view of the fact that he was an honored and distinguished member of the teaching profession for over 40 years.

In presenting this certificate Mr. Kenner, who was once a pupil of Mr. Davidson, in very complimentary terms, referred to his scholarship, teaching ability, and in those days, to his exceptional physique. His exhibitions at the Caledonian games displayed such muscle that created in the boys a profound respect.

Mr. Davidson tahnked the Teachers' Federation of Ontario, of which organization, Principal Kenner of the city collegiate, is president, and gave an address of a reminiscent character dating from the old grammar school days and of the many changes in the educational system up to the present.

In the Secondary Teachers' Bulletin No. 2, dated April 23, Mr. Kenner writes as follows:

"From my personal knowledge I can bear testimony to the worth of three distinguished teachers, viz.: Mr. John Davidson, M.A., LL. B.; Mr. Dugald McBride, M.A., and the late Mr. Cortez Fessenden."

With respect to the first he writes as follows:

"It was my great privilege to be a pupil of Mr. Davidson at the Oakwood High School many years ago. He possessed accurate scholarship, splendid teaching ability and was an inspiration to his pupils."

Of the 43 years of teaching Mr. Davidson taught in five high schools, being a principal in four of these for over 40 years.

He taught 32 years in this country, being principal of Norwood High School for 26 years, and that of Havelock schools for the past six years. His name has long been a household word in the County of Peterborough. He was also an examiner of the model school candidates in this county for sixteen years.

Norwood High School is a very old one, dating back nearly 70 years, when Mr. Davidson took charge in 1882 the school numbered about 35 pupils in two rooms upstairs in the old building (now torn down) on the Hastings road.

In only nine years, with a stationary population, two new buildings were required, one built in 1886, now used as a public school, and the present commodious structure in 1891. Norwood high school in those days had a provincial reputation, not only for its examination results, but for its athletics.

Mr. David Eason, B.S.E., superintending engineer of the Trent Valley Canal, and an esteemed citizen of the city who was a distinguished graduate of the high school, bears testimony to the fact that Norwood High School in the later eighties and early nineties had nearly two hundred pupils in attendance. Nearly forty pupils came from five outside counties, passing by their own high schools and flocked to Norwood.

A report was made at that time to the Norwood board by the late Inspector John Seath in which he found fault with the board for not putting on higher fees to keep out many pupils who came from other counties. Six teachers are required to cope with the work and such an abnormal attendance, due tenirely to the ability of the principal. There were then four teachers on the staff.

On leaving Norwood to open the first high school in Sudbury, Mr. Davidson was the recipient of a valuable silver cabinet and a volume of 500 letters of appreciation from ex-pupils from three continents. No high school in Ontario for the population of the place can show such a record of graduates, distinguished in the learned professions and in the financial world.

Mr. Davidson spent three years in Sudbury. He managed their celebrated hockey team which created such a sensation in Northern Ontario in 1909 and 1910. After leaving Sudbury he taught the Richmond High School and organized the Metropolitan Athletic Association, comprising three high school schools on Yonge Street.

Six years ago Mr. Davidson became a citizen of Peterborough, taking charge in the meantime of the Havelock schools and returning at the week-end. He built his own house at the head of Gilmour Street, and has retired from teaching to spend the evening of life in his garden and home.

Mrs. Davidson, nee Sophia E. Cook, is a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. What is quite unusual with married women, in addition to her home and church duties, she found time to complete her matriculation in arts and studied at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, voice culture and harmony leading to the degree in music. She had three years' training in individual voice culture under Dr. Albert Ham and also the harmony course under the late Dr. Humphrey Aunger.

Mrs. Davidson had charge of several choirs in three places and was a conductress of a choral society of over 100 voices in the town of Sudbury. Both are members of All Saints Church.

CHAPTER LXXI.

Rivals

Miles had traveled only far enough to have the strange, table mountain at his back, when a tire punctured in the hot sand.z The car had been going at such a pace that the penumatic tore before the chauffeur could pull up. There was no stepney, and Sheridan foresaw three-quarters of an hour delay.

He offered help, but the chauffeur politely refused, and Miles walked restlessly about, picking up desert crystals of odd shapes here and there to take back to Terry (she would like them) examining without much interest the low-growing wild flowers, and glancing at his watch.

He never went out of sight from the car, as he did not wish to waste a needless moment. But half an hour passed and the chauffeur was still frantically at work, dripping sweat in the afternoon heat. It had occurred to Miles to offer aid again, when another motor came bumping over the stony desert with its little patches of rough grass.

It was a small, bright red car, and looked like one he had seen in the garage where he had hired his. A moment later the two occupants—both men, and in the front seat—caught sight of the stationery vehicle and slowed down.

"Yes, that's the one I saw," Sheridan decided. "I suppose the chauffeur recognizes my Itala, and means to stop."

The thought had hardly passed through his head when the scarlet automobile came level with him and his eyes met those of the man sitting beside the driver. It was Nazlo.

Somehow, Sheridan felt no surprise. He was aware that Nazlo had been following his itinerary since Monte Carlo.

* * *

Last night he had been ready to believe that this man had sent him a telegram in the name of Captain Yale, saying that Betty was on board "Silverwood."

Now, he knew through the reply to his wire received at luncheon that the message had come from Yale; yet it was possible that Nazlo had met Betty in Algiers, and had taken it pretty well for granted that her errant husband would rush back from Bousaada to see what she was doing there.

As for how Nazlo had found out about his being in Bousaada, that was easy: Sheridan had told himself this in suspecting the origin of the telegram. Learning that the owner of "Silverwood," his companion and the maid had gone off the yacht and left Algiers by motor, Nazlo would only have had to visit one or two garages to learn the car's destination. Then it would be like him to think of coming down and catching Juliet alone!

Nazlo spoke a word to his chauffeur. The red car drew up sharply, and the Shoe King sprang out.

"How do you do, Mr. Sheridan?" he said, in the civil yet reserved tone one uses to a distant acquaintance. "I thought it possible we might meet somewhere along this route between Algiers and Bousaada, but I'm sorry to see your auto's in trouble. Can we be of any assistance?"

"No, thanks," Miles answered gruffly. His mind was working fast. He did not want Nazlo to go to Bousaada, but it was difficult to see just how to stop him without a quarrel.

The possibility of a fight suggested itself to Sheridan; but he had that sharp sense of humour which maddeningly interferes violence.

He saw with his mental eyes a ridiculous, brutal picture of himself pummelling an older man with his fists, while two chauffeurs looked on, grinning, storing up stories to tell in Algiers—No. He must try some other way.

"I'm not much surprised to see you, as it happens. Under the circumstances, it's about what I might expect."

"What circumstances?" Nazlo enquired, with a cool politeness that made Miles long to strike the dark face. "I don't know that I quite understand what you mean, Mr. Sheridan."

"Don't you?" asked Miles. "If you'll take a short stroll with me I'll tell you what I mean."

"With pleasure," Nazlo civilly replied.

Sheridan's hands tingled. But he choked his temper down, and the two walked out of earshot from both cars, whose chauffeurs at once joined forces.

"You've been following me about for some time," Miles began, "and guessing I was likely to leave Miss Divine in Bousaada, because of business in Algiers, perhaps you thought you'd run down and thrust yourself upon her when she had no protection."

As he spoke, his eyes, under frowning brows, dared Nazlo's to meet them. And Nazlo's did meet them with an infuriating calmness and benevolence.

"Mr. Sheridan," Nazlo said (he had an irritating trick of repeating a name), "I do not follow you. Why should I? I know you only by name, though I've met your wife. The one I'm following is the young lady with you. I tell you that frankly. But not to persecute her, when she's unprotected. I want to offer her protection—the protection of a husband, which you can't give. And her name, as you know, isn't Juliet Divine."

Internal Bathing Removes the Cause of Painful Hemorrhoids in a Natural Way.

When the intestines fail to dispose of all waste matter properly and quickly, poisons find their way into the blood. This poison lowers the general health, causing hemorrhoids, constipation and digestive troubles.

Mr. A. N. Steele, Cupar, Sask., writes: "I had been troubled with my stomach, piles and constipation for years until I had become very thin and looked 20 years older. A leading doctor in Regina told me that the main canal was badly ulcered. I gradually became worse, until one day, when purchasing a threshing outfit from Mr. Russell of Regina, Mr. Russell noticed my condition, and said: 'I can cure you. Get a J.B.L. Cascade.' Well, I did so, and the first night I used it I slept all night for the first time in weeks, and in a short time felt quite myself again. It also cured my piles, which had troubled me for years."

If you are troubled with constipation, don't drug yourself. Internal Bathing with the J.B.L. Cascade is the only permanent way. This wonderful appliance is the invention of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, New York. It is pleasant and easy to use, and will serve the whole family. It should be in every home. See the J.B.L. Cascade at Warne Drug Company, where it will be shown and explained to you. Ask for 32-page booklet all about Internal Bathing, it is free. Or write Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute, 163 College Street, Toronto, Ont.

REPORTS ON VENEREAL DISEASE

TORONTO, Oct. 17 (Canadian Press)—In course of preparation for nearly two years, by a Medical Committee of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council, acting under the chairmanship of Dr. E. E. King of Toronto, and published by the Federal Department of Health a report on the Diagnosis and Treatment of Venereal Diseases has just come off the press at Ottawa. Over thirty well-known men and women physicians had a hand in its making, the final editing was done by Dr. J. J. Heagerty, Chief of the Division of Venereal Disease Control in the Dominion Department of Health, and it is the intention to place the report in the hands of every practitioner in the Dominion. It is an up to the minute, valuable medical treatise on the subjects dealt with, written for the instruction of the average doctor, with the object of arriving at some degree of uniformity of diagnosis and treatment of venereal diseases.

Issued after several years experience in Canada with very drastic legislation making compulsory the notification and treatment of those afflicted with venereal disease infection, this report which takes for granted the right of the community to protect itself against the social plagues, by law, as well as medical measures, offers a sharp contrast to the Trevethin Report on Venereal Diseases recently presented to the British Minister of Health, now issued as a Parliamentary paper.

Prepared by a committee of sixteen prominent medical men and women specially named for this purpose by Sir Alfred Mond, the then Minister of Health, to act under the chairmanship of the distinguished lawyer, Lord Trevethin, this report has also taken two years in the making. Its scope was "to consider and report on the best medical means for preventing venereal disease in the civil community, having regard to administrative practicability, including cost." While admitting that the venereal disease problem can never be handled satisfactorily as a medical question only, the British Committee does not "find" for compulsion in any form. Rather it stands firmly for the voluntary system and for inviolate secrecy as to registry of cases. It contents itself with asking for better instruction in venereal diseases for medical students, midwives and nurses; for extension and improvement of existing V. D. clinics; for certain ablutive and disinfective public centres in dock districts or seaport towns, where prophlyactic measures on a large scale may be put into operation and results noted; for better segregation and control of defectives; for continued freedom for British chemists in handling and selling of well-known specifics for the prevention of these diseases; for rural clinical centres; larger government grants and for better education of the general public as well as protective measures against diseased immigrants.

On the question of eligibility of marriage of those infected with venereal disease the British report is entirely silent. The Canadian leaflet enters fully into details regarding the Wasserman blood test, praises its diagnostic value, but depreciates its acceptance as a final or sole indication of cure, no matter how many times it may be "negative," and emphasizes the difficulty, in present states of knowledge of saying what constitutes complete non-infectivity.

The Canadian report calls for licensing of all laboratories, including university laboratories, doing Wasserman blood tests and supervision by Provincial Boards of Health.

Another medical committee of the Social Hygiene Council hopes to follow the present report immediately with one aimed specially for use in schools for nurses throughout Canada.

THINKING MUSIC

Music has been called "The universal language which, when all other languages were confounded, the confusion of Babel left unconfounded."

The student who fails to learn to talk music as he plays must never hope to interest human ears. If you are merely playing to consume time, all well and good, but if you want to interest real living people you must talk to them with your fingers. The people themselves know what this feeling is, else they would never have coined the phrase "He makes the piano talk," or "he makes the violin talk."

How can this be done? Principally by making each phrase a line of musical meaning, emphasizing the principal notes and seeing that at the end of the phrase it is punctuated right. Punctuation helps in understanding. In music it is a kind of breathing which enables the listening mind to grasp the meaning. Try playing "Parlando," "like talking," and see to it that what you have to say with your fingers is not a jargon of dialect, but a means of conveying some definite musical thought you have assimilated, so that your hearers will be convinced or charmed. Just the very thought of trying to talk with your fingers helps.

NO RISK OF INJURING PRODUCTS EXPERIMENT SHOWS

Tests were made by the Dairy Department during 1922 in order to note the effect of cows pasturing on sweet clover, with reference to the quality of butter and cheese produced from such milk. Part of the trials were made with milk from the College herd, and part with milk from patrons of the College dairy, some of whom allowed their cows to feed on sweet clover pasture and some of whom did not.

The tests of the College milk herd began May 25th, while the cows were in the stable part of the time and part time were grazing on natural pasture. After the cows had been on sweet clover for about a week, tests were again made. During December, several lots of butter were made while the cows were fed on clover silage.

Results—In no case of either pasture nor clover silage milk was there observed any objectionable flavor on the butter, which might be attributed to the feed the cows ate. There was a tendency for rather longer time than usual required to churn, and the losses of fat in the buttermilk were rather high, but these might have been caused by some factor or factors other than the feed.

The cheese experiments showed that the milk from cows pasturing on sweet clover did not contain an abnormal percentage of acid. The sweet clover lots at the time of adding the rennet was .182. The no-clover lots averaged at the time of renneting, .185 per cent. of acid. When the whey was removed, or the curds "dipped," the sweet clover lots averaged .17 per cent. of acid, and the no-clover lots .164 per cent. acidity, showing that the acid did not develop abnormally during what is known as the "cooking" stage of the curd.

The yield of cheese averaged 92.46 pounds per 1,000 pounds of milk for the sweet clover lots; and 97.05 pounds for the no-clover lots, but this difference was probably due to the higher fat and case in content of the no-clover lots, the average fat percentage of which was 3.67, as compared with 3.42 for the clover lots of milk. The yield of cheese per pound of fat in the milk was practically the same for both lots.

Regarding the effect on the quality of the cheese, there was not much difference except in one lot. In the series made from College herd milk, the sweet clover lots scored higher in flavor and in total score; but the average of the lots made from milk furnished by patrons of the Dairy Department of the College was higher in flavor and total score where no clover was fed. This was largely due to the fact that one lot of cheese made on June 19th had a pronounced flavor of sweet clover when scored on August 30th, and still had this flavor when scored six weeks later. While the was the only lot of cheese which showed an objectionable flavor that could be attributed to sweet-clover feeding, it indicates that there may be an element of danger in the milk for cheese manufacture when cows are feeding on rank sweet clover, as they were about the middle of June.

Taking all tests into consideration in the manufacture of sweet-clover milk into both butter and cheese, there would seem to be no great risk of injuring the product as a result of allowing cows to pasture on sweet clover, nor in feeding sweet clover silage for the making of butter.

ENRIGHT INSTRUCTS POLICE TO BE POLITE

"Courtesy Our Greatest Asset," He Declares in Circular Sent to 12,000 Men.

CITIZENS PRAISE THE FORCE

Letters to Commissioner Tell of Many Acts of Efficiency and Kindness

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Police Commissioner Enright yesterday began a campaign to educate members of the Police Department in the need for courtesy in their contacts with the public. He made public a circular letter he has sent to each of the 12,000 members of the department, emphasizing the importance of being civil, and enclosing reprints of newspaper stories and editorials praising policemen for politeness. He also made public more than 100 letters from persons in and out of New York City who have written to him praising members of the force, not only for courtesy, but also for efficiency, skill and courage in the performance of their duty.

"Ours is the most human of all tasks: a position of honor and trust," Commissioner Enright wrote in his letter to the force. "It offers unequalled opportunities for developing the finer qualities in each of us. These opportunities present themselves many times each day in our contact with great numbers of persons of every type and character. The impression we make in each of these contacts determines the public's opinion of the Police Department as a whole.

"This is a serious responsibility, and it rests squarely on our shoulders.

"Efficiency, devotion to duty, self-sacrifice are all necessary qualities for guardians of the public welfare. But there is another quality equally vital.

"That quality is courtesy.

"Nothing is more necessary in the conduct of a police officer, nor is there anything to which the public more readily responds. Such notives as those on the following pages, clipped from New York newspapers are invaluable. They are the best testimony; the best evidence. It is by acts such as these that w3 can build a greater public confidence and respect, that we can convince the public that its trust is placed in worthy hands.

"To live up to that trust and to deserve that honor, we must, at all times and under all conditions, no matter how trivial or how trying, give the public the courteous treatment they have every right to expect.

"Courtesy is the best investment we can make. Let's 'invest' at every opportunity."

An Additional Reminder

The following admonition appears on the back of the circular:

"Remember this—Courtesy is our greatest asset. It lightens our hardest and most trying tasks. It gains us the good will of the public whom we serve. It enhances our standing in the department. It samps us as worthy of our position. It marks us as gentlemen. Let's be courteous always!"

Some of the letters made public by Commissioner Enright were from persons who benefited by the acts they described; others from disinterested onlookers impressed by the commendable quality of New York's finest."

Governor George Silzer of New Jersey and Commissioner of Immigration Henr H. Curran of Ellis Island were among the prominent letter writers. Others were residents of such varied sections of New York as Riverside Drive and the lower east side, while still others came from out of town, even as far as San Francisco. The deeds commended range from courtesy in helping elderly women across busy streets to the finding of missing persons, the arrest of criminals and the stopping of runaway horses that had endangered the lives of women and children.

RATIONS FOR STEERS

A number of very good rations for the finishing of 2 or 3-year-old steers during the winter months, are herewith given. Note the following points:

1. Decrease succulent roughage as the animal nears a finished condition. For example, 60 pounds of turnips, per steer, per day, in the early part of the finish, should decrease gradually to forty pounds per day at the finish, In the same way ensilage might be decreased from 40 pounds to 30 pounds per day, or a mixture of equal parts roots and ensilage from 50 to 35 pounds per day.

2. Hay can be profitably increased slightly, at the finish. Alfalfa and clover hays are preferably, fed at the rate of from 10 to 16 pounds per steer, per day. If only rough, coarse, or poor quality hays are available, it may be profitable to cut the same and mix with the pulped roots or in the absence of roots, to mix with 1 to 2 pounds of molasses per steer, per day.

3. Straw can be utilized to good advantage. Clean cut straw is best and may be fed at the rate of about five pounds per day. This may be fed long as a separate light feed at noon, or it may be cut and mixed with roots and ensilage.

EGG PRODUCTION

There is no doubt that the egg yield would be higher in most flocks throughout the country if more attention was given to supplying animal feeds in sufficient quantity. Experiments conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture showed an average production of 41.5 eggs for the first four months from pullets receiving the same ration without animal feed. Experiments reported from the Missouri Station show that a hen fed a ration containing animal protein averaged 127 eggs, while one fed a ration containing no protein concentrate averaged 59 eggs only. At the Indiana Station a hen fed a ration containing animal feed averaged 135 eggs, whilst one fed a ration containing no animal feed averaged 32.5 eggs. Experiments conducted at Cornell show 130 eggs from animal protein, as against 55 eggs when no animal feed was given.

REGIONS OF POLE GETTING WARMER

That's Why So Much Rain in Temperate Zone Last Two Summers.

By GUS M. OEHM

BERLIN, Oct. 20 (United Press).—The North Polar regions are growing warmer.

That's why the north temperate zone has had so much rain during the last two Summers, experts declare.

Explorers who have been threading their way about the icy regions recently report they first noted the moderation of the weather several years ago.

Adventurers into frozen Northlands declare they have even noticed flora and fauna much farther North than heretofore and that have been able on recent trips to penetrate farther and farther before leaving the open and iceless seas.

The Norwegian explorer and geologist, Dr. Boel, in 1922 discovered coal deposits on the easern side of Advent Bay on the Island of Spitsbergen. He was able to navigate in free waters as far north as 81¼ degrees and noted the Gulf Stream that far North as a surface stream.

Another Norwegian captain who has been cruising around the Eastern Polar seas for thirty-four years reports the ice-melting in far Northern regions was noted by him as early as 1918. Many regions have changed entirely in the meantime, he declares. Where formerly only ice and glacial formations were to be seen explorers now find earth and stone sticking out and many peninsulas of ice have disappeared altogether. This explorer reported new plant growths in hitherto icebound regions.

Recent Summers have been exceptionally bad for seal hunters, these furbearing polar animals remaining far north, avoiding their usual haunts along the Spitzbergen coast on account of the warmer waters.

ENTIRE STOCK BIBLES DESTROYED BY 'QUAKE

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (United Press)—Yokohama, Japan, destroyed by the recent earthquake, sent out annually for missionary circulation more copies of the Bible than any other city of the world. From the Fukuin Printing Company at Yokohama copies of the Scriptures went out not only to the Japanese empire, but to China, the Philippines, Siam, and all other parts of the Far East. The quake destroyed the Fukuin plant and killed the entire operating force of from 700 to 1,000 persons. The entire stock of Bibles in depositories in Yokohama and Tokyo was destroyed.

The American Bible Society, with headquarters in New York, has sole responsibility for this part of Japan, To meet the immediate emergency the society has arranged to produce at once on presses running night and day half a million copies of the Gospels in Japanese, reproduced by photography from books in hand at the Bible House, in New York. It has arranged also for a shipment of fastest possible method of hundreds of thousands of copies of the Gospels in English, which are extensively sold in the schoo's of Japan. It has cabled to its agencies on the Pacific Coast, in China and in the Philippines to forward at once all available copies of Japanese Scriptures.

It has not been possible as yet to make an exact determination of the losses and replacement values. If the plates in Yokohama have been destroyed, as there is every reason to believe, it is estimated that at least $300,000 will be required to rehabilitate the work. An appeal to the public to that end will probably be made later.

A FLY'S LIFE

It was found at the Pasteur Institute that the longest life of a fly is about sixty-two days, so that at least three generations are required to span the winter months. Strangely enough, flies which feed on nothing but sugar never lay eggs. Some form of meat or animal food is necessary for them.

NUXATED IRON
Helps make rich, red blood and revitalize weak nerves

A CAUSE OF WOMEN'S ILLS

WOMEN OFTEN THINK THEY HAVE HEART TROUBLE, INDIGESTION, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, ETC., WHEN IT'S SIMPLY IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD.

Many women believe they are weak and nervous as a result of age, worry and overwork; they think that their disturbed digestion, headaches, heart palpitation, shortness or breath, pains across the back, etc., are due to some serious disease instead of the real cause—iron starvation of the blood. This is proven by the fact that when many of these same women take organic iron for awhile all their alarming symptoms quickly disappear and they become strong, robust and healthy. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living cells and tissue. Without it nothing you eat does you the proper amout of good—you do not get the strength out of it.

If you are not strong and well do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but take some organic iron—Nuxated Iron—at once. But be sure it's organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic NUXATED IRON is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and it often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, wornout women in two weeks' time.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on ever package and the letters N.I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists.

PLANES DWARF IN COMPARISON WITH BARLING BOMBER

Has Wing Spread of 120 Feet, Height of 28 Feet and Overall Length of 65 Feet.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 20.—(Associated Press).—The Barling bomber is the largest airplane. The Martin bomber, the largest airplane in use by the air service before the advent of the Barling, is a pigmy compared to it. The Barling soon is to make a tour of the country. The exact itinerary has not yet been announced, but the machine will be at New York about October 20.

The Barling has a wing spread of 120 feet, a height of 28 feet and an overall length of 65 feet.

The gasoline capacity is six tons, or 2,000 gallons. The oil capacity 1,356 pounds or 181 gallons.

Six Liberty engines are required to power the Barling.

The minimum crew required to operate the Barling consists of four men, but provision is made for a crew of eight.

The weight of the airplane loaded will exceed 40,000 pounds. Specifications require that not more than 5,000 pounds of bombs shall be carried at one time, but were anything so large as a 10,000 pound bomb developed, the Barling could lift it and fly for two hours.

Specifications required a flying speed of 90 miles per hour. On her initial flight the Barling accomplished 93 miles per hour without difficulty.

With 2,000 gallons of gasoline, 12 hours flight at full speed can be made. With engines throttled or some of them cut off completely, the time of flight can be correspondingly lengthened.

A total of seven guns operated from five positions or cockpits cover the whole field in which enemy aircraft may approach. The gun defense may be augmented for day flying, in case the airplane is used for day as well as night bombing, for which it is planned.

The tail is a biplane structure, forming two planes 25 percent larger than the main wings of the DH-4 airplanes There are four equal size rudders.

The Barling has eight wheels with tires 60x12 inches, the largest ever made. Two wheels with smaller tires are on a truck further forward under the fuselage to prevent the airplane from nosing over. A radio set has been installed in the bomber.

W. H. Barling, designer of the Barling bomber speaking of the purposes of such an airplane, says:

"Two elements have influenced the U. S. air service in investing the expenditures absorbed in the production of an airplane such as the Barling bomber. These may be classified as the known uses of such an airplane and the uses not yet known, owing to lack of experience with large airplanes.

"When a large airplane is spoken of, one of some 200,000 pounds, or four times the size of the Barling bomber, one which might drop two 30,000 pound bombs, is intimated. It is not impossible that such an airplane may be the logical development of the next 10 years, the Barling bomber being a step in that direction. Hence the Barling bomber is to be looked upon as a small big airplane rather than a big small one."

3,000 YEAR OLD TREE FALLS

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—Bavaria's oldest tree, a beech which foresters say wa 3,000 years old, has been felled in the Frankenwald, near Kulmbach, and scientists are greatly interested in the stump of the old monster. German naturalists say the tree probably germinated about the time Solomon was ruling in Jerusalem and the Kingdom of Israel was at the height of its glory.

Central Europe then was a wilderness, inhabited by tribes. That was the copper age, when iron and steel had not come into use. The scientists estimate that the beech was 1,000 years old when Cæsar and his Roman cohorts invaded Central Europe and gave the Teutonic tribes the arts and sciences of Rome and Greece which formed the basis of modern civilization.

Ex-Crown Prince Wants To Manage Own Estate

By FERDINAND C. M. JAHN.

DOORN (By mail to United Press).—The former German Crown Prince has grown tired of going to the Prussian government every time he wants to change an employee on German estate, Oels.

Oels has been under sequester of the Prussian state government since the revolution. The income therefrom furnishes the Prince most of the ready cash upon which he and his family subsist. A portion of it goes direct to the Prince and a portion to his wife, who usually lives with her children in Potsdam.

In an interview with me the Prince declared:

"I have taken the bull by the horns. It is an unbearable situation and every time I want to make a change in the administration of my estate, or have some slight renovations made, I am forced to apply to the Prussian finance ministry.

"Therefore I am demanding my rights in the courts, asking that the sequester be removed and complete control again be vested in me. Besides and above that, my aim naturally is to return to Germany and resume administration of my property myself, and live for and with my family."

The wife of the former German heir does not share the exile of her husband at Wieringen, off the Dutch coast, because the children could not be properly educated in that out-of-the-way spot and a private tutor would cost too much to maintain there. The general cost of living in Holland for the whole family would far surpass the Prince's budget. The Princess occasionally visits her husband at Wieringen, but for the most part they meet under the roof of Castle Doorn.

LAKEFIELD IS PROUD OF R. GLENN MADILL

Native Son of Village, He Has Won Distinction in His Career—Personals.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 20.—The following from the Ottawa Citizen refers to Mr. R. Glenn Madill, a native son of Lakefield, which is justly proud of the distinction his career has brought him so early in life, though regretting that his intrepidity should have forced upon him a diet of old mocassins and discarded sacks.

Mr. Madill's father, mother, sister and two brothers are resident here, and his wife during his absence, has been spending the time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jory.

The press despatch to the Ottawa paper was sent from La Pas, Man., on the 17th inst., and is as follows: "Leading a party of men, who in the last two summers have covered 4,000 miles, mostly by canoe, of the farthest north wilderness of Canada, R. G. Madill, assistant magnetician of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, has returned to civilization.

In the course of their journey which was made for the purpose of surveying the operation of magnetic forces—the magnetic pole is located almost due north of here—the party was at times on the verge of starvation, subsisting on such succulent provender as old moccasins, discarded sacks and dried suckers.

During part of their travels they crossed country that had never been trodden by a white man since Samuel Hearne passed on his historic journey from Fort Prince of Wales to the mouth of the Cappernium River in 1771. This summer Mr. Madill was accompanied by C. G. Nagy of Winnipeg, and Phillip Ross of The Pas.

The survey is a part of a world-wide research into the laws governing the magnetic forces of the earth, which are studied through magnetic elements—the variation of the compass, the dip and the horizontal intensity of the earth's magnetism. Owing to the constant movement of the north magnetic pole it is necessary to maintain a careful check on the magnetic elements not only for purely scientific purposes, but to inform mariners and others of the variation of the compass.

Mr. R. Meldrum Stewart, assistant director Dominion Observatory, stated that Mr. R. G. Maddill was the only Ottawa member of the party. He is expected to reach Ottawa in two or three weeks' time, as he has certain work to complete at The Pas."

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that Mr. George M. Douglas, who with his wife, has been occupying his picturesque home near Young's Point for several months, in his interesting book "Lands Forlorn," the story of an expedition to Hearen's Coppermine River, reports on the copper resources of the same river and gives valuable information about it. Mr. Douglas' party consisted of himself, his brother, Mr. Lionel D. Douglas, Lieut. R. N. R., and August Landberg, Ph. D., of Sweden, and they experienced vicissitudes not unlike Mr. Madill's while acquiring the knowledge which is fascinatingly set forth in his book which is illustrated by numerous photographic pictures of this wonderful region of the far noth.

ONE BILLION LIRE

(By HENRY WOOD)

ROME, Italy (By mail to United Press).—According to official estimates of the Italian government, the entire amount of money now being sent back to Italy by Italian emigrants in foreign countries exceeds one billion lire annually.

The amount plays a most important role not only in helping to overcome Italy's unfavorable trade balance, but also in keeping up Italian exchange. Even before the war, Italy's exports never equaled her imports and the balance in trade was only made up by these remittances from emigrants and by money left in Italy by tourists.

In 1914, the total amount sent home by emigrants in foreign countries was only about 150,000,000 lire as against nearly ten times that amount now.

In addition, the Italian government expects a steady increase in this total. As a matter of fact, in 1920 the remittances from emigrants totaled nearly a billion and a half lire, but economical crisis in the various countries where Italian emigrants work have cut this down nearly a third since then. As world-wide economic conditions improve, however, this total is expected to go back to the 1920 maximum.

As a consequence Italian emigration with its resulting influx of foreign currencies into Italy constitutes one of the latter's most important elements of nation wealth.

The billion lire annual that is now being sent back to Italy comes largely from the following countries and in the following estimated proportions:

United States	900,000,000	Lire
Canada	24,000,000	"
Brazil	52,000,000	"
Argentine	68,000,000	"
Other So. Amer. states	500,000	"
European states	100,000	"

"It's remarkable how much you can do with a little current on McClary's "TOR-RED" Elements."
—Says the Demonstrator

Every woman who spends a great part of her days in the kitchen realizes what a lot of fuel or current can be used without any equivalent of cooking results.

Ordinary electric elements, for instance, must be turned on "full" when the cooking top is in use, and there is a constant flow of current, whereas—

McClary's Electric Range is the one electric range with "TOR-RED" Protected Elements—the elements that conserve current and cut down cooking costs.

Turn your current "on" for a few moments. When McClary's Element becomes thoroughly heated you may turn the current to "low" and vegetables are kept at a moderate "boil". Even with the current "off" you can heat the dishwater with the heat "stored" in the Torred Element.

Because McClary's "TOR-RED" Protected Elements "store" the heat (on the same principle that keeps a fire brick hot so long), you can boil all your vegetables, fry all meats, heat all water, and perform all the thousand and one cooking duties required from the top of a range on "low" current—a remarkable advantage and a long step forward in kitchen economy.

If you could save three-quarters of the current used in your lighting fixtures, and continue to get the same abundance of light, you would be applying the same method of current saving to electric lighting as McClary's "TOR-RED" Protected Elements apply to electric cooking.

McClary's Electric Range compares with other electric ranges in the use of current, as the tungsten lamp compares with the old wasteful, expensive carbon lamp. McClary's Electric Range has brought down the costs of electrical cooking.

McClary's Electric Range Oven is equally celebrated for the saving of current and the production of wonderful baking—it's the most efficient "fireless cooker" ever built as well as the triumph among electric ovens for delicious baking. Sold and recommended in Hydro branches, electrical shops and hardware stores. Ask for a demonstration from your McClary's dealer.

The doctor said I had inflammation of the bladder and that an operation might be necessary. To this I refused, and began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. FORMER PETERBORO LADY WRITES OF HER TRIP TO PRINCE RUPERT

The following article was written for the Hamilton Herald by Mrs. H. D. Burnett, formerly of Peterboro. Mrs. Burnett is a member of the Hamilton Women's Press Club, and recently made a trip to Vancouver with the Women's Press Association. Mr. Burnett was formerly connected with the Peterboro plant of the Canadian General Electric Company.

Glorious sunshine, summer balminess, blue waters, white gulls overhead, verdure clad Vancouver Island mountains on one side and mainland spruce covered mountains on the other side provide the setting for the good ship Prince Rupert as she steams along the inside passage on her way up to Prince Rupert.

Our party is sunning themselves, bareheaded, out on the rear upper deck. They make a charming bit of color in smart traveling coats and gay angora scarves—an orange, cinnamon brown, pale blue and yellow striped scarf being particularly effective, worn with a big enveloping camel's hair coat. Her hat is a French velour in warm tan color, almost the color of her hair. The blue waters of this serene inland waterway are a perfect foil for this tawny traveling symphony.

We were told that Vancouver has not enjoyed such fine weather at this time of the year in ten years. It seems but one more Vancouver offering to the comfort and happiness of the Canadian Women's Press Club.

The next best thing to being a royal princess is to be a member of the C.W.P.C. Seemingly a magic carpet is spread for one's feet the moment the Press Club badge is seen—thanks to C.P.R. and C.N.R. hospitality.

For instance, when we reached Vernon, B. C., after crossing poignantly beautiful Lake Okanagan, we started out to inspect the town the moment we disposed of our luggage at the hotel. We counted on at least half an hour before dinner.

In a short walk down the main street we came to a weather-stained field gate guarding an inviting pine, spruce and fir wood lot. We leaned over that weather-silvered plank gate and drank in the pine cone nectar in deep breaths. No native joined us in our potations—no doubt they are so fed up on pasteurized ozone they don't even notice it, but city nostrils quiver and dilate in breathing it.

We turned reluctantly away only to have a more fascinating palette gorgeously set for our astonished eyes. Across the street blossomed an old-fashioned British Columbia garden. It looked as if it contained every flower one had ever heard of, loved and forgotten. We hurried over to that garden gate and beheld such tall American Beauty red dahlias as we never saw before. This was true of every other flower we caught a glimpse of—size and color almost beyond recognition.

To the door of the cottage came a middle-aged woman, who cordially invited us to enter the treasure garden. Sometime we shall tell about this garden.

Our loitering caused us to be late for dinner. As we hurriedly crossed the lobby on our way to the dining-room of the hotel we heard an authoritative masculine voice 'phoning. He ordered fruit of special excellence to be put aboard the afternoon train for Revelstoke.

We swiftly reflected. Those lucky men! Some convention which swings everything their way!" Of course, we did not know of such convention, but, Eve-like, we jumped at conclusions and pictured jolly men absorbing that juicy fruit as the landscape fled by.

We were soon in the dining-room enjoying an excellent meal. We told the waitress those escalloped potatoes gave much joy to one woman and to tell the chef. She came back smiling to say the chef was so pleased we liked his way of escalloping potatoes that he sent in the secret. He added a few slivers of onion to the sliced raw potatoes, seasoning, milk to cover, and then baked them in a covered baking dish slowly so as to enrich the flavor.

Later we learned that the man we saw 'phoning was the president of the Vernon Board of Trade. They had heard our party was the C.W.P.C. and it was for us the excellent fruit was intended. A box of magnificent "Wealthy" apples was put aboard our train; also a box of superb peaches, the gift of the hotel manager. It was whispered said box of apples had been packed for the Prince of Wales who was traveling a day or two behind us.

Is it any wonder we began to feel like royal princesses!

The Vernon Board of Trade provided autos to take us to see the Okanagan Fruit Packing Co.'s plant. An entire article would be required to tell about this experience. We should love to dwell on the beauty of Vernon's colorful setting, but all this time we have been trying to arrive at an account of the luncheon aboard the C.P.R. liner, the Empress of Australia, given in our honor yesterday (September 29) by the C.P.R.

We scarcely know where to begin to tell about that luncheon. It seems to us it really began at one o'clock in the morning when we left our hotel at nine o'clock bound for the Capilano Canyon, keeping in mind the luncheon at 12.30 on board the Empress of Australia.

A street car took us to the docks; then a ferry over to North Vancouver. The return ferry trip was 20c. We engaged a chauffeur at the North Vancouver dock to drive us to the Canyon for $1 a piece. Pages could be written about that trip.

We were told that people "in the know" pronounce it "Cap-i-line-o."

On our return to Vancouver ferry dock we proceeded straight to the Empress of Australia's berth.

Picture this Pacific port-to-the-orient docks flooded in September sunshine. Sketch in the two magnificent C.P.R. liners, the Empress of Australia and the Empress of Asia, riding at anchor in the marine blue waters close to the weathered docks. Note the apple green of the lowest waterline of the boats, the black body part, the creamy white of the decks, topped with huge lemon-colored funnels. Awesomely, etch in the coast-line mountains veiled in seven prismatic colors, and you will have some idea of the glory that is Vancouver's. Its harbor welcomes with stately dignity the fleets of England, France, Japan and China, and then has room to spare. The beautiful white gulls overhead chant, "See! See!"

We crossed the gangway of the Empress of Australia to decks fifteen feet wide—so it seemed to us. "Chinks" swarmed about the entrance. They wore the Chinese costume of black trousers, black jacket, white stockings and soft black slippers. Close-cut hair. "Pearls?" a "Chink" sybillated in convenient ear buns. The effect was magical. Acquisitive Eve was electrified. Pearls from Canton! Creamy pearls, pink pearls, small pearls—but that's another story also.

Past a gorgeous Chinaman done in cadet blue, we entered the ivory-tinted, pink-silk-curtains, rose-velvet-carpet dining salon; its dimensions were worthy of the Empress. The magnificence of this table set scene was awe-inspiring. Countless small tables were laid in immaculate linen, shining silver, pink carnations and silver trays of colorful French pastry.

In an overhead balcony musicians played that classic, "Yes, We Have No Bananas."

The labor aboard the Empress is entirely Chinese. In the dining salon the waiters were dressed in pure white garments of night-shirt suggestion. The garment extended from neck to feet. One glanced at these mute witnesses of Yokohama's tragedy—the greatest disaster of modern times. How had they behaved in that baptism of hell-fire?

In mental vision we saw the beautiful dining-room of the Empress packed with terror-stricken refugees It was the Empress of Australia which took aboard the fleeing people after the terrible earthquake in Yokohama.

In actual vision the dining-room was filled with gay and happy "Press girls" and their hosts and hostesses. It was a gathering of some of Canada's brightest women from all over the Dominion. One listened to names well known in the newspaper field and in fiction. It was a real pleasure to see the personality belonging to the name. All was happiness, jollity and beauty.

The soft-footed Chinese servants flitted like white ghosts about the tables. They moved about so silently and deftly one discovered plates and silver removed unawares.

The details of that luncheon would absorb columns; so straight to the luncheon speech made by Captain Robinson, the fine hero of the rescue work in Yokohama harbor.

How resplendent he looked in his handsome gold striped navy-blue uniform! He was evidently quite embarrassed when he arose to speak. Col. Ham said the captain had never made a speech before. Why is it that men invariably say the presence of so many ladies embarrasses them? Why should it?

The Captain's Story

The Empress of Australia lay at dock in Yokohama harbor, within one minute of sailing, September 1, 1923. It was Saturday. Thousands of people swarmed the streets of the down-town district for week-end shopping and recreation.

Passengers and crew were aboard the Empress. Friends were still saying a last good-bye; more people stood on the cement dock waiting to wave a last farewell to departing friends.

Captain Robinson stood on the bridge scanning the scene with the sailor's trained eye. Suddenly he saw the street leading down to the dock begin to heave and rise and fall like the waves. The earth was on the move! These fearful earthbreakers rose to the height of 15 feet. To his horror he saw people and animals roll up and down these land waves and disappear in the horrible cracks which opened up in them. People on board witnessed the same unspeakable tragedy.

The captain said the land waves seemed like the motion of sifting cinders—they first mounted in a straight forward direction and then in a cross-wise direction. These movements seemed to last a minute each way.

Then a bad shock occurred and a black cloud of dust arose accompanied by a horrible roar. Buildings fell like a pack of cards. Everything became lost to view, as he watched, in clouds of dust. The cement dock split and much of it sank after succeeding shocks.

It was all so sudden, the magnitude of the disaster could not be grasped. Orders were given to lower ladders and put out gangways to help refugees aboard.

A dense cloud of smoke arose and a gale of 60 or 70 miles per hour set in—the worst feature of the fire. It caused incredible destruction. By this time there was a quarter of a mile between the Empress and the shore edge. Masses of burning flying timber fell on board. The decks were flooded.

A huge silk warehouse on the dock took fire and threatened to communicate the fire to the Empress of Australia.

The way out to safety was blocked by a Dutch tank boat. The captain of it seemed extremely nervous when signaling. By this time it was realized that the whole city of Yokohama was gone and the harbor was full of burning lighters. No one paid the least attention to these little boats.

The Empress of Australia lay there all day. The Chinese crew manned rescue boats and brought 1500 refugees aboard to add to the 1000 passenger list. Into that burning hell went the Empress crew with no need to call for volunteers.

How we clapped and cheered the silent white clad figures at our elbows! They were no longer "Chinks." They were the gallant 100.

Dogs, cats and children found safety on this savior boat, and, best of all, everyone found a proud possessor.

We looked at the trained face of the captain, seamed with weather markings, and we pictured his sleepless vigil aboard the Empress that holocauset night. At 7 o'clock the next morning he stood looking through his glasses. A distant mass disturbed him. To his horror it boomed into flames, which came creeping along the top of the water—about one-half mile away.

Oil on fire! 10,000 tons of it! It was progressing forward towards the Empress in three distinct masses. Altogether there were 60,000 or 70,000 tons of oil on fire heading for the captain's boat.

Can you imagine the agonizing helplessness felt by Captain Robinson?

The oil fire spread in a wall of flame along the water front and reached the pier, or what was left of it.

The Empress' propeller was foul of the tank boat's cable. Another steamer was at its stern, which couldn't move because both its anchors had been let go. The captain of this ship had gone ashore and been killed. This was not known at the time, and naturally the mate didn't want to move without orders.

The Chinese boys behaved splendidly during this terrible time. Ropes were tied to them and they brought refugees back to safety out of the burning zone.

The masses of burning oil came nearer and nearer to the Empress. Hopeless terror seized the passengers. It was impossible to put out towering masses of flames 300 and 400 feet high. It crept along like three huge cruel fates, made up of greasy oil flames and dense black smoke.

Fortunately the wind changed in time, so that by dodging and clever manipulation of the boat the Empress managed to escape the nearest mass of flames which crept up within 200 feet of it. Finally the flames burned themselves out.

People kept coming on board all the time, helped by the faithful crew.

The Dutch tank boat tried to help the Empress to get into a better position. It was learned afterward that this boat carried 2000 tons of benzine and 2000 tons of kerosene. Her captain showed remarkable skill and courage in saving her. No wonder he showed signs of nervousness at the outbreak of the disaster.

At last the Empress found a safe berth. She lay there for seven days, carrying on rescue work.

We opened our eyes and beheld fair women, handsome men, mute Chinks and a captain blushingly acknowledging our tempestuous hand-clapping.

The luncheon ended in the singing of this gay little song, led by one of our members from the musicians' gallery on high:

All the nice girls love a sailor,
All the nice girls love a tar,
For there is something about a sailor,
Well, you know what sailors are;
Free and easy, bright and breezy,
They're the ladies' pride and joy,
Falls in love with Kate and Jane,
And he's off to sea again.
Ship ahoy, ship ahoy."

PRESENTATIONS TO CHURCH WORKERS OMEMEE LEAGUE

Miscellaneous Shower to Mrs. Harry Stinson — French Ivory to Mrs. Boyd.

OMEMEE, Oct. 20.—Interest grows with each meeting of the Young People's League, and Monday evening a large gathering assembled to enjoy the meeting conducted by the married men. A smile of triumph passed over the faces of many of the married ladies present, when the chairman (Rev. Rowland, had to call on Mrs. Rowland to act as pianist in the absence of the gentleman who was to have performed this duty. The meeting opened with a rousing song service, in which marked attention was given to exspression. A series of sentence prayers were offered, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

A talk on "Patriotism in Religion," was given by Mr. Fred Johnson, ex-President of the League. That beautiful duet, "Alone," was well rendered by Messrs. Fred Lowe and Rev. E. W. Rowland.

Mr. Rowland then called forward Mrs. Boyd, 1st vice-president of the League, and in a few words of appreciation for her long and faithful service in the choir, league and Sunday School as well as the other church societies, presented to her, on behalf of the said societies, a handsome array of French ivory in which was included an electric boudoir lamp and clock combined. Mrs. Boyd, who with her father, Mr. T. B. Laidley, leaves shortly to take up residence in Toronto, was completely taken by surprise, but in a few well-chosen words, thanked the various organizations for their beautiful gift which would ever serve as a link to bind her to her old home town.

Miscellaneous Shower

When married men do things, they do not do them by halves, as was demonstrated on Monday night. Following the presentation to Mrs. Boyd, Mr. F. Johnson was called forward, and a glowing tribute was paid to his daughter, Mrs. Harry Stinson, of Oshawa, nee Miss Reta Johnson, who prior to her marriage was a tireless worker in league, choir and Sunday School. Following which, Messrs. Fred Parker and Emery Windrim presented to the proud parent, in the absence of his daughter, a handsome miscellaneous shower, containing a gift from the officers and teachers of the Sunday School, one from the choir and many gifts from friends.

Mr. Johnson thanked the many friends for their appreciation of his daughter's services to whom it had always been a joy to help in any way possible. Mr. Johnson also assured the gathering of the joy his daughter would feel in this tangible evidence of their esteem and good wishes, for her happiness.

After the gathering had viewed the many beautiful gifts of the two presentations, the meeting was dismissed with the watchword.

The meeting next Monday night will be in charge of the young men of the League.

A large number of motorists from Omemee and vicinity attended the fowl supper at Bethel on Wednesday night.

Mr. Alex. Ross, of Lindsay, was in town on business this week.

Mrs. Phageon, of Winnipeg, is visiting with the Misses Curry in town.

Mrs. (Dr.) Phelps and daughter, Miss Nellie, Mrs. Isaac Laidley and Dr. C. Laidley of Lindsay, and Miss Edith Stinson, of Peterborough, were the guests of Mrs. Elsie Boyd, this week.

Among those from Omemee who attended the play "Cheerio," in Lindsay on Wednesday evening, were Mr. and Mrs. H. Lamb and daughter, Miss Jessie, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Corneil, Miss G. M. Meredith, and Miss Muriel McGinnis.

Mrs. S. T. Wilson was a visitor to Lindsay on Tuesday.

Miss Carnegie, teacher in the Orange Line School, spent a few days at her home in Uxbridge, having sprained her ankle last week.

Messrs. A. Scott and E. W. Rowland were visitors to welcome on Thursday.

The many friends of Mr. T. A. MacPherson will be pleased to know he is favorably progressing after his recent operation.

Mr. Ira Toole, of Lindsay, spent a few days at his home in town this week.

Mr. Horace Hill left on Thursday for London, where he will attend an A. Y. P. A. convention, being a delegate from the Society here.

Friends of Mr. Harold Weir will be sorry to hear he had the misfortune to have his knee cap knocked off by being jammed between a truck and a car in Oshawa last week.

Mrs. R. J. Mulligan and Miss Ella McCrae of Lindsay, called on friends in town this week.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

SHREWD

The greatest "grafts" involve small sums. When German marks dropped to 10 cents a million, a shrewd young man in New York went up and down Broadway with a pushcart selling 10,000 mark banknotes for 20 cents apiece. And they sold like hotcakes. Every time he sold $20 worth, he had a profit of $19.90.

MILLIONAIRES

The young peddler who bought German marks at 10 cents a million and retailed them in New York at $20 a million probably yells like an Indian when he pays an extra dollar a ton for his coal.

Most of us are profiteering millionaires at heart. That's why we have profiteering millionaires. They just happen to beat us to it.

RUM

Liquor lifts civilized man out of the rut, says Lord Dawson of Penn., distinguished physician to the King of England. His idea is that in our age of specialization, with high-pressure industry making us cram 12 hours into six, the mind of man at the end of the day is running in a single groove or rut. "Alcohol in moderation gets that man out of the track. It livens his mental touch," says Lord Dawson.

Yes, and after lifting him out of the rut, it pushes him back deeper than he was before. Alcoholic stimulation has its equivalent reaction to as far below par or normal as the drink raises the drinker above par. The truth is learned in the cold gray dawn of the morning after.

LINCOLN

Lincoln, instead of scribbling his Gettysburg address on the back of an envelope while on his way to make the speech, spent 10 days carefully preparing and polishing it. So claims Dr. D. K. Dodge of University of Illinois. He's one of the greatest living authorities of Lincoln.

This will start years of argument and will waste hours upon hours of time on the part of able intellects.

TAXES

Three states (New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois) paid almost exactly half of the total personal income tax collected by Uncle Sam in 1921. This is figured out by Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

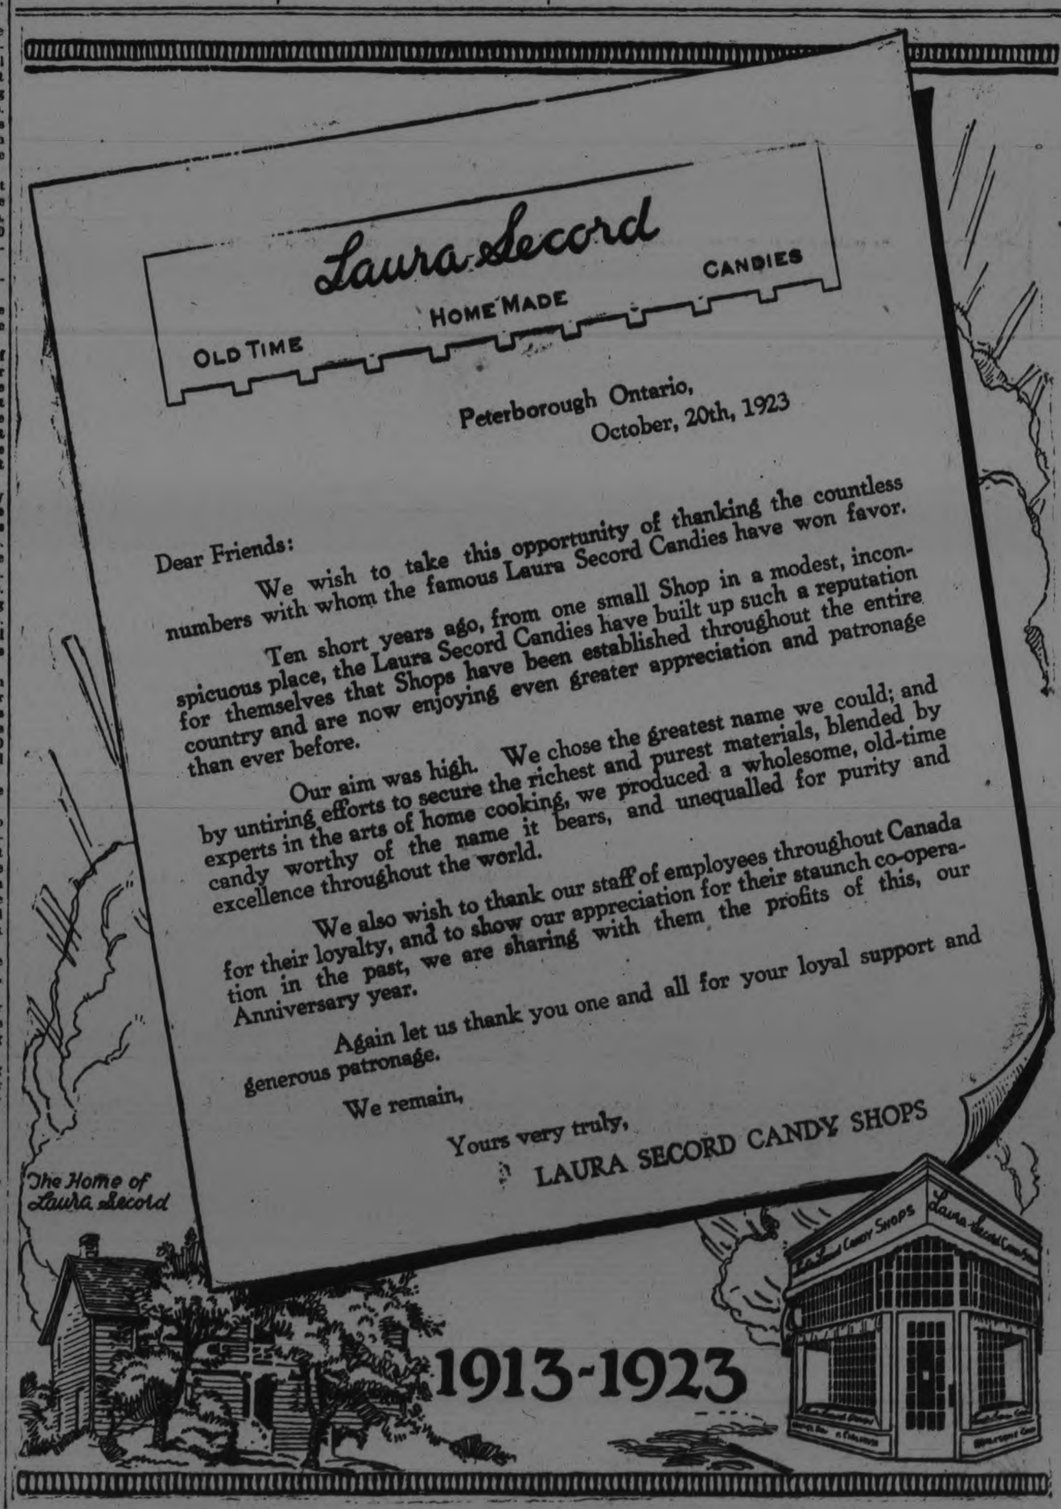
The three are manufacturing states and have large populations. Eventually the one state, Texas, probably will be more important than the three put together. The future greatness of our nation will be west of the Mississippi. Airplanes, destined to handle the bulk of our freight and express, will deal the cards all over again.

TITAN'S BIRTHPLACE

The house at Pieve di Cadore in which the great painter Titian was born has been proclaimed a national monument by the Government, as has the birthplace of the poet Count Vittorio Alfieri at Asti.

THREE DIVORCE BILLS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.— (Canadian Press.) — Notice appears in this week's Ottawa Gazette that Mary C. Dooley, Brockville, Ont., will apply for a bill of divorce at the next session of Parliament from Alfred John Dooley, Toronto; also Marie Darling Irving, Toronto, from Reginald Stewart Irving, St .Lambert, Que.; and George P. Simpson from Laura Lajoie, both of Montreal.



Jocelyn, Journaliste

by Jack Lait

THE late J. Bernard Hanleigh's blue-blooded though impecunious daughter, Jocelyn, rebuffed at the offices of the "Eagle," whither she had pursued her latest variant in her campaign for a medium of livelihood, was not to be so easily dismissed. The smell of printer's ink had gotten into her patrician nostrils.

Among the interests in which her lamented father had dabbled was international banking. He had frequently mentioned Hector Sibley, financial editor of the "Express," to whom he had given that which is far more than money to a newspaper man—inside information. Sibley had twice dined at the Hanleigh home. He would not remember Jocelyn, of course, but he might feel a sense of duty toward the daughter of his old patron and friend. Jocelyn took the chance.

Sibley was, indeed, willing to help her. He was amazed that a Hanleigh should need work, but he asked no embarrassing questions. He ran out of the room and was back in ten minutes to escort Jocelyn to the local room, where he presented her at the desk of Larry Hackett, city editor.

Hackett glanced her over, curiously. Like all professional newspaper men, he had his misgivings about girl journalists, amateurs, good lookers and folks horning in through any other gateway than being sent for after they had made good on some other paper. Of course, everyone had to start sometime, somewhere, somehow—but he wasn't worrying about the source of supply. He was willing to let others pick the promising new material, and he was satisfied to draft his staff from those who had gone over the top.

Sib, who was his friend as well as one of the oldest and most valued members of the "Express" family, had put it pretty strong, however. He had hooked Hackett with one obligation that few newspaper men fail to recognize—the paper's debt to the late J. B. for exclusive news. Besides, Hackett was only human, though there are those who assert city editors are not exactly that, and he, too, in spite of the big titles and big things that passed under his fingers every hour of every day, reacted to one of the best names in the Social Register.

He seated Jocelyn and went through the routine that every newspaper executive learns in time, the monologue detailing the heartaches, the hardships, the brutalities of working on a daily; the limitations that confront even those whom Nature—by accident—endowed with the extraordinary combination of faculties and characteristics it demanded; the minute percentage of those who crash in that get anywhere; the devotion the business exacts and the abnormal hours it sets; the illusions that are wrecked and the complexity of things that no outsider could anticipate which must arise.

Jocelyn heard him out. She was dazed, but game.

"Still, I'll try it, if you'll let me," she said.

Hackett had known she would answer just so. They all did.

"Very well," said he. "If you were my sister, I wouldn't let you do it. But I can't turn Sib down giving you a trial, so you're in, if you're willing to play our game according to our rules. And it can't be played any other way—around here.

"Turning out a newspaper every day is one of the most complicated tasks under the great blue dome. Added to all its temperamental, individual, psychological and artistic phases, there is always the mechanical necessity of filling so many columns with so many words, getting them set in time to go to press by the clock, covering so many fields and towns and territories and departments.

"Therefore, we haven't time to be perfect. We try to be accurate and strive to be bright, besides. But we MUST go to press. So we have to work on more or less of an established system, which, while it may make us conventional in spots and undeniably leaves much that could be improved, at least gets our circulation trucks started as per schedule. A paper isn't brilliant if it doesn't reach the reader.

"Now, we don't want any radical suggestions for the good of the service, at least not right away. I have warned you against starting at all. But if you choose to hazard the faith that you know yourself better than I do and that I am either trying to scare you for no good purpose or am underestimating your stamina and special fitness, you still must remember that you are joining an organization, an old, honored and successful institution, and it will be some years before you will be equipped with the specific experience to revolutionize our methods advantageously.

"I tell you this not to be satirical, but because there are obvious blowholes in every newspaper and amateurs can see them at a glance. They are not revelations to us, either. But we have worked out, through the years, a balance between the ultimate of a perfect paper and the makeshift of a rush job, so that we are getting out the best we know how in the time allowed us. It will require master experts to do much improving. Little by little, of course, we are getting nearer to our own ideals. But it is scarcely likely that beginners will see daylight through problems that the great editors for generations have considered with the concentration of single-purposed endeavor in thousands of trained brains.

Therefore, please let me assure you that you will be doing more for yourself and the 'Express' by trying to carry out courageously and seriously the special tasks assigned you than in trying to tackle the broader problems of the industry.

"I will try you on local assignments. Contrary to your hopes—or your fear, maybe; it doesn't matter—your work will not be in the upper circle in which you gravitate in your social life. My experience has been that when you want news you must go to people who have it, but you must send people who are foreign to it. You could write a better story tonight on a police court case than you could on a charity ball. We develop experts, but we don't take them on. Our society editor could probably get a lot of high-toned news out of you, but you couldn't get it out of yourself. The very fact that it IS your natural walk would cloud your vision as to what is and what is not news within it.

"This, as you know, is a morning paper. We go to press at two o'clock every morning except Sunday, when we go in an hour earlier. You will seldom be asked to work until press time, but you will seldom be off before midnight. Our reporters show up at two in the afternoon and have one day a week off. Let's look over the list—your day off will be—Friday.

"It's a little late, but we'll start you in to-day—at once. Let's see what's open on my schedule. Ah!

"Here's a story in one of the P. M. papers. It has just a brief and hurried report of a Mrs. Wagenhalter running over a sidewalk in her new electric car; she crashed through the window of a phonograph store and got all cut up—and please don't say she was trying to break records with her auto! Now, she was taken to a private hospital, nearby.

"Mrs. Wagenhalter is separated from her husband, Simon Wagenhalter, a wealthy manufacturer of toothpicks. I recognized the names and sent up to our 'morgue,' and here are the clippings about the separation. That gives the story a bit of human interest beyond the details of the accident itself. Go ahead."

Jocelyn took the several clippings and stood, irresolutely.

"J—just what am I to do?" she asked.

Hackett did not throw anything. He gulped and, as patiently and kindly as he could, said:

"Go to the hospital; see how she's getting along; go to her home; get a new picture of her; see her husband; stop in at the police station and see whether she's charged with reckless driving, or forcible entry, or what; if so, when's the trial, and where? Find out whether she's disfigured and how, where she was going when it happened, if the car was insured, if the store was insured—and any other interesting details."

Jocelyn closed her hand on the clippings and went out in a trance.

The store was nearest, so she went there first and had no trouble getting information as a reporter. At the hospital she was told that Mrs. Wagenhalter had been taken home by her husband; he had come there as soon as he read of his wife's mishap, and, though they had been separated, he took her to his own house. In fact, took her against the orders of the physician and with the aid of the police, whom he called when the hospital refused to let her be moved.

Jocelyn found the address of the Wagenhalter home in the directory and rang the bell. A servant let her in as far as the vestibule and said no news was being given out—Mr. Wagenhalter had nothing to say.

"Can I have a new picture of Mrs. Wagenhalter?" asked the tyro.

"Surest thing you know. Would you like the family jew'ls, too?"

"But, my city editor told me to get one."

"Yeh? Well, suppose he told you to lay an egg?"

"You can have my number, but I swear I can't get yourn," said the officer, as Jocelyn walked off.

Jocelyn knew no more that she could do. She walked down the street until she met a uniformed policeman. She remembered that she had read newspaper stories in which policemen always helped newspaper folk. She addressed him and told him of her mission and how she had been turned down at the Wagenhalter house.

"Well, what can I do, lady?" asked the cop.

"I don't know. Could you not go back there with me and tell them they must give me a picture?"

"Do I look crazy, or are you showin' me a good time?"

"Then you won't help me?"

"How the—what could I do for you, lady? I got no 'thority to bust in privit houses an' make 'em turn up pickchures for reporters. Where'd you get that kind o' idee?"

"Very well," said Jocelyn. "I shall take your number."

"You can have my number. But I swear I can't get yourn," answered the officer as Jocelyn walked off.

It was almost ten o'clock when Jocelyn reached the office, empty-handed. Instead of reporting to the desk she sat down, and, by hand, wrote as follows:

"We have often had occasion to point out the incivility of our police. Another instance occurred to-day, when Officer 2217 refused to assist a member of the 'Express' staff to procure a photograph of Mrs. Simon Wagenhalter, who had been taken home by her husband after she was sent to Dr. Hiller's private hospital following an accident when her electric car crashed into Michaels' Phonograph Exchange, damaging it severely, although the store had no insurance. Mrs. Wagenhalter was not arrested, and it could not be ascertained at the police station whether she would be or not, or where she was going, or whether or not she is disfigured for life. A servant at the Wagenhalter home refused with scant courtesy to discuss these and other details."

This she laid on Hackett's desk. He read it, ran his fingers through his hair, bawled out a copy boy, jammed a fistful of galley proofs on a tall spike, and said, not daring to look up:

"My dear Miss Hanleigh; never use 'we' in a news story; never tell what we can't get; policemen don't have to dig up pictures for us; and there's a lot more I'll tell you tomorrow about this—haven't time now. And you must write on a typewriter, and you must see me when you come in before you write your story, so I can consult with you as to what to write, and how much; and, oh, so many other things. Meanwhile, I note you say her husband took her home?"

"Yes, sir. The hospital wouldn't let him, so he got the police to get her out."

"Gee—that's great. Separated, but when his wife was hurt he rushed to her, demanded the right to take her into his own home, was refused by the surgeon, called the police—say, that's worth a couple of sticks—meaning about 600 words. Write it. Get in the colloquy between the husband and the physician, etc. I'll have one of the boys write a lead to it after calling up the station and getting some details about that squabble. We'll have to go without the picture to-day—I'll send out tomorrow and get one."

"Oh, you won't get one, I'm sure. The servant said so."

"There are eight hundred and seventy-four ways of getting pictures, and I'll teach you every one of them if you stay here long enough," said Hackett. "Now knock out what you have on the hospital and police end; and don't forget the quotes—the dialogue between the surgeon and the husband. Mark your copy 'Add Wagenhalter'—I'll send it along 'Lead to Kum.'

Jocelyn found a vacant typewriter seat. She knew how to operate a machine, that is part of every high school curriculum these days. She started bravely, but remembered that she hadn't been there when the physician and the husband had conversed, and, therefore, could not report their colloquy. She went back to Hackett and so told him. Hackett fired the copy boy this time and tore the proofs off the spike and threw them into a wire waste basket big enough to net a whale.

"I know you weren't there, Miss Hanleigh. We can't have reporters at every bedside in town waiting for arguments so they'll be on the ground to overhear what's going on. You should have gotten that at the hospital when you were asking questions. If you didn't, do the best you can. I don't like to deliberately fake anything. But you know how the husband felt, now the doctor felt, what they were wrangling over; well, that gives you a pretty decent idea of what they said....Write it."

Jocelyn started again:

"'Darling! I don't care what you have done or what you have been,' sobbed the husband over the wounded wife, 'I'm going to take you home with me!'

"'No!' cried the physician, 'She must not be moved!'

"'Piffle!' answered the husband. 'She is my wife and she is coming to my home!'

"'I shall not permit it!' insisted the physician.

"'You must be mighty hard up for patients in your old hospital!' cried the husband.

"'Oh, I don't know!' retorted the physician.

"'I've heard some malodorous stories about private hospitals!' shouted the husband, now quite angry. 'You cannot hold a patient without her own consent!'

"'Is that so, Mr. Smart? Well, I won't let you take this woman out! Now what are you going to do about it, I'd very much like to know!' said the physician.

"'I'll very soon show you!' said the infuriated husband.

"He ran out and called the police, who arrived at the hospital, entered with a stretcher and carried out the husband's instructions."

Jocelyn, with a smile of assurance, laid this on Hackett's desk, on top of the verbatim report of a sensational murder trial and the discussion by the city engineer of the newest subway plan. She stood over his shoulder, waiting for him to read it. (That, by the way, is bad manners, and J. Bernard Hanleigh's daughter would have been startled to know that she had a lot about even etiquette, the one thing she thought she knew well, to learn).

Hackett read the two sheets through, without looking up.

"H'm," he said, "I wish you'd come in an hour earlier to-morrow, Miss Hanleigh. There's a great deal I want to explain to you."

"Why—surely. I shall be glad to come. But—is it because I—didn't I do my work correctly?"

"Well, yes and no. It's too late this evening to start in to teach you the newspaper business. I don't want to be harsh or to give you a bad night. But you have a long, long distance to travel."

"Is that a kind way of saying that I am hopeless?"

"Not at all. The surprising part of it is that, though you have made more boners than any new reporter I ever broke in on a first job, there are glints of talent. Your imagination is quite feminine and picturesquely naive, but still it is imagination—and most people are born dead in that respect.

"No, we'll make a reporter of you. It will take heartaches and backaches, headaches and patience, but you'll make it. And when you do, read Mark Twain's 'Life on the Mississippi' and what he says about what a pilot had to learn and how he had to keep on learning it all over again every trip. And you'll see that that's child's play to what a good newspaper reporter has to know and do. Good night, Miss Hanleigh."

"MY OWN" ARRIVES AT TRACK BUT ZEV WAS ANNOUNCED TO START

Skin Malady Broke Out on Sinclair Horse But Veterinarians Declare Zev Fit.

ODDS ON PAPYRUS.

NEW YORK, October 20 (Canadian Press). — Zev, the Rancocas Stables' brown son of The Finn-Miss Kearney, will match strides with Papyrus, the English Derby winner, for international three-year-old supremacy and stakes of $100,000 at Belmont Park to-day in a race that promises to take rank among the greatest classics of all time.

Zev will go to the post despite the eleventh hour development of a skin malady which it seemed yesterday would force the withdrawal of the colt and the substitution of Rear-Admiral Cary T. Grayson's My Own, which was shipped to Belmont Park, prepared to race, if called upon.

But the Race Committee of the Jockey Club, after examining Zev and receiving the report of a veterinary, said the Rancocas star was fit, and announced the original entry would oppose the British champion, and thus ended speculation.

Though the Jockey Club committee's decision, made public by Major August Belmont, had the effect of restoring to some extent the waning confidence in Zev, general belief prevailed that, regardless of the seriousness of his malady, Zev would go to the barrier under a handicap.

Odds on Papyrus.

And as a result, betting odds, which declined to even money yesterday, after a spectacular final workout by Papyrus, swung sharply last night toward the British horse, which was expected to go to the barrier this afternoon at 4 o'clock a favourite, probably at odds of 6 to 5.

The exact condition of Zev remained somewhat of a mystery last night.

There have been reports for some time that the Kentucky Derby winner was not in the best of condition, but the first intimation that anything was seriously amiss came, according to Major Belmont's statement, when Harry F. Sinclair, the millionarire owner of the horse, advised the Jockey Club's committee that Zev had developed a skin malady which threatened the fitness of the colt.

It was this information that prompted the committee to send a hurry call last night for the shipment of My Own to Belmont Park to be ready to take Zev's place, if necessary, but first public word of the Rancocas star's condition came yesterday morning when members of the committee headed by Major Belmont, inspected the colt.

The skin ailment was diagnosed by veterinarians as something akin to "hives," large blotches appearing on the horse's shoulders, head, and legs. An epidemic of the malady, it seemed, had spread to several barns at Belmont Park overnight, and Zev was among the first to show signs of it.

Fast Half-Mile.

But while frankly concerned over the condition, Major Belmont and his associates seemed convinced that it had not yet affected the running power of Zev, which flashed impressive speed in a half-mile gallop in 47 3-5 seconds.

A favourable veterinarian's report later clinched this opinion, and influenced the committee to stand by its first choice.

There still seemed a chance, however, that overnight developments might lead to substitution of My Own if Zev's malady becomes more serious.

Admiral Grayson's colt arrived at Belmont Park late yesterday afternoon after an eight-hour trip by special train from Laurel, Md., and was pronounced in excellent racing condition.

Zev will be gone over thoroughly by trainer and veterinarian this morning, when it will be possible to determine more fully the effects of his malady.

The Jockey Club, under its agreement with Ben Irish, owner of Papyrus, has the right to make a substitution at the last minute, and My Own, the first substitute, will be held ready until race time.

Expect Great Crowd.

Zev's condition and the sensational turn it has given to developments were the chief topics on the eve of the international classic, which is expected to attract a notable throng of close to 100,000 turf followers to the picturesque scene of the match. The gate receipts, it was indicated, may reach $500,000, thus setting a new record in thoroughbred racing annals in the United States.

Prospects of inclement weather and a resultant heavy track last night gave another topic for speculation, though it did not dampen the ardour of turf enthusiasts.

The condition of the track however, probably will not affect the relative chances of either Zev or Papyrus, as both are acknowledged to be good "mudders." Zev, particularly, has shown a liking for heavy going, winning four of his two-year-old races on heavy tracks, while Papyrus, though he has been favoured by good going in most of his races, won the Duke of York Stakes this season in the mud.

SALIENT FACTS OF TODAY'S RACE

NEW YORK, October 19. — Salient facts concerning the Zev-Papyrus international race on Saturday, follows:

Place: Belmont Park Track.

Time: 4.00 p.m. (The International race will be the fourth on the list of events which gets under way at 2.30 o'clock.)

Distance: One and one-half miles.

Weight: 126 pounds.

Purse: $100,000 ($80,000 and a gold cup to the winner. $20,000 to the loser.)

Contestants: Zev, by The Finn-Miss Kearney, Rancocas Stable's three year old representing the United States; Papyrus, by Tracery-Miss Mattie, Benjamin Irish's three year old representing Great Britain.

Owners: F. Sinclair, of New York, who bought Zev as a yearling, and with another yearling for $12,500; Benj. Irish, who bought Papyrus as a yearling for $17,500.

Trainers: Samuel C. Ilildreth, who for years has led the list of trainers in the United States. Basil Jarvis, one of the most successful of the younger school of English trainers, who has prepared Papyrus for every race in which that horse has entered.

Jockeys: Earl Sande, premier U. S rider, who will ride Zeb; Steve Donoghue, England's leading jockey, five time winner of the English Derby, who will ride Papyrus.

Racing colors: Sinclair, White, green collar and cuffs, white cap; Irish, primrose, purple cross sashes, primrose cap.

My Own, on the other hand, although his breeding stamps him as a mudder, has shown no liking for heavy running.

Track Not Heavy.

Despite yesterday's rain, however, the track at Belmont Park did not seem especially heavy. Due to its sandy texture and excellent drainage it was believed the course, while it might be somewhat heavy, would not be muddy.

Wherever the thoroughbred was the chief topic of discussion last night, opinion in support of Papyrus was reflected. Veteran horsemen, too, who have watched closely the preparatory work of the rivals, seemed convinced that the British champion at least had an even chance of victory, not only because of the eleventh hour ailment to Zev, but also because of the impressive showing of the invader.

One of the most picturesque features of the race to-day will be the matching of racing wits and generalship between Steve Donoghue, premier rider of England, and Earl Sande, leading U.S. jockey, who will have the leg up on Zev. Both are exceptional horsemen and quick-witted pilots, bred in the strategy of the turf.

Handsome Trophy.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press)—The international challenge cup, which will be at stake in the $100,000 international race at Belmont Park, is one of the handsomest trophies ever offered for thoroughbred competition.

The cup is of solid gold, stands about 12 inches high and weighs about 100 ounces. It is a hand-made copy of a cup fashioned in 1707, during the reign of Queen Anne, a period when racing was the most popular and had royal support.

An eagle with outstretched wings, each feather clearly sketched, mounts the trophy, which also bears on one side the arms of the United States. The other side is reserved for a list of winners.

Donated by the jockey club, the cup is designed for perpetual international competition. The jockey club will represent the U.S. in this as well as future competitions, either as defender or challenger.

"MY OWN" IS READY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Admiral T. Grayson's "My Own" which arrived late yesterday at Belmont Park, in response to an emergency call from the Jockey Club, is fit and prepared to run against Papyrus, according to the bay colt's trainer, W. P. Burch.

"My Own" has been Zev's outstanding rival for three-year-old honors this year and was chosen as first alternate to the Rancocas colt when the U.S. candidate for international honors was named.

"My Own" has won all six of his starts this season, his last victory coming in the $10,000 Maryland handicap last Saturday when the son of King James won handily over a strong field and covered the mile and a quarter in 2:02 3-5.

Roper Again Courts Miss Miracle

Princeton, Surprise Eleven of 1922, Faces Hard Year With Doubt

PRINCETON, N.J., Oct. 20.—Alderman Bill Roper of Princeton is in cloistered seclusion these days investigating the scientific theory that lightning never delivers its electrical fury to the same address twice.

A year ago the Princeton football squad riddled by the departure of five outstanding stars, Lourie, Keck, Wittmer, Garrity and Gilroy, was struck by the lightning of a football miracle the effect of which was to lift a team of obvious mediocrities to the dizzy heights of a championship.

This year Roper finds himself in a similar situation with the entire center of his line shot away, the two surviving veteran ends standing as heroic reminders of a glorious past.

On these two ends and a backfield of four seasoned men the Philadelphia political genius must build his new team, a team which is called on to battel Notre Dame, Navy, Harvard and Yale in quick jumps.

The Nassau Tiger rather makes a speciality of picking out the tough one. Last year it was Chicago, Harvard and Yale. This year Notre Dame replaces Stagg's men on the schedule and the midshipmen are added to heighten the flavor.

Nobody expected the Tiger to come through with a clean slate last fall, but he did. Nobody thinks the Tiger can repeat this wall—but he may.

They do things in an interesting if not an orthodox manner at Princeton. Roper has no set system, beyond the development of a winner in a general way. Since the thrilling days of Sammy White and the Poe boys the Tigers have been known as a team of "opportunists," close, eager followers of the ball, men who ar schooled to wait for the "break" and then capitalize it.

Roper has a way of appealing to the individuality of the player as distinguished from the highly systematized mass maneuvers of other coaches. Roper banks heavily on the inspirational spark. It is his theory that the inspired scrub will outplay a stodgy star any day in the week, and twice on Saturday afternoons. To have the best team is not important, to play the best game always is.

The physical aspects of the Tiger while dark are not utterly discouraging. Roper has two fine ends in Stout and Drews. The return of Hutan to tackle is a big help. Hutan did not play last year. Hills, a 200-pounder, will probably go to the other tackle. Howard is a guard with experience. Paschal has the inside track for the other guard position. Caldwell, an all-round man, by and Crum are smashing backs, is filling the center berth acceptably.

The old backfield is back in action, with the tiny Johnny Gorman, audacious hero of the Chicago game last year, still calling signals at quarterback. Captain Snively, Beattie Newable defensive workers and smart players Barring injuries this backfield, as an effective unit, will rank with the best in the game

Ambitious, hopeful second stringers abound in the usual numbers. Forrest, Helmrath, Reynolds and Hemminger are capable reserves for the line. Foster, Ewing, Shackelford, Gibson and Legendre, a brother of the former Princeton star, are lurking in the background wishing nobody ill-luck but hoping a flock of backfield men fall down and bump their beaks.

Died Suddenly.

Mrs. A. Arnott of Toronto died very suddenly on Monday morning. She was visiting her aunt here, Rev. Mrs. Johnston and on coming down stairs to get a drink of water she suddenly expired. The body was taken on the Canadain National Tuesday morning for Toronto where interment took place.

To Hold Bazaar.

On Tuesday evening a business meeting of the Adult Bible Class was held at the home of the president, Mrs. R. L. Crerar. Twelve members were present and a financial report was read, after which a social was arranged for in the form of a bazaar to take place early in December.

The social put on by the Ladies Aid in connection with the Presbyterian church on Monday evening was a decided success. The duets by the McKinnon sisters, Jean and Helen, were in themselves worth the price of admission. After the programme, which consisted of speaking, songs, reading, instruments, etc., the ladies passed sandwiches, cake, pie and coffee around, and a very enjoyable social hour was spent.

OSHAWA CURLING CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

About 25 curlers turned up at the meeting called for Tuesday evening and a general discussion of plans for the coming season took place.

As the new rink has been dropped for this year it was decided to make some very necessary improvements to the present rink, to the extent of possibly $500 or $600.

The curling season promises to be an interesting one and a large number of the younger members and new ones are waiting for the opportunity to "sweep 'em up."

The following officers were elected:

President—C. M. Anderson.
Vice-President—W. E. Clarke.
Secretary—J. A. Thompson.

FIGHTS BANNED IN BALL PARKS

American League Decides the Diamond and Roped Square Don't Coincide.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Baseball and prize fighting do not go together, President B. B. Johnson, of the American League declared here last night, and hereafter fistic encounters will be prohibited in the American League parks. Mr. Johnson said that the league is opposed to the association of the two sports and had taken a stand against the use of its parks for prize fights.

The subject recently was discussed by Mr. Johnson with Colonel Jacob Ruppert, of the world's championship Yankees at whose park the Wilson-Floyd Johnson bout was held, and the colonel who is said to be in accord with the move asked the league executive to withhold action until certain contracts regarding the use of the Yankee Stadium has been fulfilled.

The Wild Cat Of the Pampas

LUIS VINCENTINI

If Senor Luis Firpo is the wild bull of the Pampas we don't know why the fistic world shouldn't accept Luis Vincentini, lightweight champion of South America, as the wild calf of the Pampas. Young Luis is coming to the land of the brave and big gates, to toss a challenge in the immediate vicinity of Benny Leonard. He is 21 years old, has had 17 fights and won all but two. Never has been knocked out or knocked down.

RAIN PRECEDES MINOR LEAGUE

Baltimore and Kansas City Resume Series To-Day.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 19.—With the series between Baltimore of the International and Kansas City of the American Association form the minor league championship standing, 3 games to 1 in favor of the latter team, the fifth game will be played in Baltimore today, weather permitting.

The first four games were played in Kansas City, the final one being played in a sea of mud, caused by the incessant rains.

A steady downpour drenched Oriole Field here nearly all day yesterday but the weather man promises clearing weather today.

Both teams arrived in Baltimore this morning. Manager Dunn expects to use Tommy Thomas, a right-hander, on the pitching peak in the first game, but Rube Parnham, another right hander, may get the call, although he has been driven to cover twice by the Kaws.

In the absence of official announcement, it is expected that either Jimmy Zinn or Ray Caldwell will pitch for the Blues. The game will begin at 2 p.m.

REPLAY MONDAY.

A hundred per cent. attendance of players, accompanied by numerous fans, from Central and Queen Alexandra schools met on Friday evening at the Oval in Alex Kay's soccer trophy game.

After ten minutes' play, rain started and continued for the rest of the play. At half-time Referee George Coleman called the game off owing to the unfavorable weather. No scoring took place.

They will meet again on Friday evening at the Oval.

Brother and Sister First To Hold Two Golf Titles

EDITH CUMMINGS

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—For the first time in the history of golf in America two national titles are held by members of the same family.

In mid-summer Dexter Cummings shooting a brand of golf that would have been hard to match in any kind of tournament, surprised the smart set by stepping out and winning the national intercollegiate championship, defeating among others Rudy Knepper, Iowa star, who had starred at Brookline in the 1922 national amateur.

Last week Edith Cummings, not to be outdone by her younger brother, wrote another suprising chapter to the history of the golfing year by winning the women's national championship and thereby replacing Glenna Collett as the nation's premier woman player.

The long history of the ancient games fails to show that this distinction has even been held by any other golfing family.

Its closest approach was furnished by the Wetherds of England. Joyce was England's woman champion last year. Roger won the men's amateur this year. But the two did not hold their titles simultaneously.

Miss Cummings is a lithe, willowy maiden of 23, with a well balanced game developed to a high point of proficiency.

Her fight for the topmost honor in American golf has been marked by a consistently steady advance. In 1919 she was eliminated by Mrs. W. A. Gavin in the first round. The following year she went to the third round before Alexa Stirling threw her over. Last year, a semi-finalist, she was beaten by Miss Collett, and then only after a par-breaking round.

Mack Banks on Rookie Pitcher for Next Year

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20—Connie Mack is convinced that he has dug up one promising twirler from the army of recruit pitchers that reported to him near the close of the season.

The pitcher on whom Mack banks for considerable help next year is Johnny Burns, late of the Shreveport (La.) team of the Texas League. This team is managed by Ira Thomas, former catcher of the Athletics.

Harry Davis, scout for Mack, was sent to Shreveport to look over a couple of highly recommended players. Burns was not among them. After Davis watched the Shreveport club in action for a week, he secured an option on Burns and passed up the players so highly touted.

In his first big league start, Burns turned back the hard-hitting Detroit Tigers. In his next game, after holding Cleveland in check for eight innings, a belated rally on the part of the Indians beat him by a one-run margin. His third start was a win over the Washington club.

Burns is a stocky right hander. He doesn't seem to have a great deal of speed, but boasts a nice curve and a great change of pace. In addition he seems to have poise, and best of all control. He makes the opposition earn their way on the bases.

Mack figures there is a chance for Burns to win 15 games for the Athletics next season. If he does, Mack's club will have been considerably strengthened in the pitching.

Duelling is regaining popularity in France, where, although it is illegal, it is "winked at" by the police.

WHY WORRY

CAPITOL Entertainment

Centre of Paris is Capital of Crookdom.

By JOHN O'BRIEN.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(United Press).—Montmartre, the "joy" centre of Paris, is the capital of crookdom. Eighty-five per cent. of the persons held by the police after a raid on an all-night cafe are foreigners. About 2 per cent. of them have identification papers. How they remain in France is a mystery.

One of the reasons why they "play" Montmartre is that out of the million or so bank cashiers and other trusted employes who vanish from their home towns each year with more or less of the funds of the depositors, about 999 come to Montmartre to enjoy their newfound liberty and opulence. Therefore, Montmartre is the rendezvous of the world's crooks. Every language known to man is heard there. There are marriage brokers, pickpockets, cocaine sellers, queens of joy, spies or counterspies, international financiers who have diamond mines in the Sahara and gold mines in the Arctic.

In Montmartre there is a school of palmistry. There is an academy of fake insurance. There are professors of every possible method of beating the law. There are studios where pseudo masterpieces are turned out by the thousand. The high chiefs of the white slave traffic have their headquarters there. They are hand in glove with fake doctors, fake bankers, shyster lawyers.

Parisians know Montmartre only when the newspapers tell of one of the exploits of the international bands who dwell in it. But it is the mecca of the tourist.

EVOLUTION AND CREATION

Special Sermon in St. Paul's Church on Sunday Evening on Bible Doctrine of Creation of Man.

The minister of St. Paul's Church will preach Sunday evening on the subject, "Is the Acceptance of the Theory of Evolution Compatible with Christianity?" He will show that this is no mere academic subject but one that concerns the most vital things in Christian experience. If the doctrine of the creation of man by a direct act of God be rejected, other doctrines vitally related must also be rejected. Mr. Pogue will point out the close connection of this subject with the whole scheme of redemption.

KIWANIS CLUB

after dinner was brief but most enjoyable, every member getting rounds of enthusiastic applause, which brought prompt encores. Vocal solos rendered in delightful fashion and splendid voice were given by Mrs. Walter Byers, who sang, "If Winter Comes"; by Mrs. Douglas Grant, "I know a lively garden," and by Verne Morphet, "The Bandolero." Mr. M. B. Chenhall, at the piano was assissted in several accompaniments by Eric Roberts, whose saxaphone solo playing was one of the most enjoyable features of the programme.

With soft, rich effect, Mr. Roberts played the lovely "Barcarolle" from "The Tales of Hoffman," and "Love Sends a little Gift of Roses."

As an encore to Mrs. Grant's vocal solo Mrs. Grant and Verne Morphet sang in fine style "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny."

Mr. J. John convulsed his audience with his "Mary" encore to an impressive and dramatic rendition of "Solitude," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Verne Morphet and Alex Dick, in an unaccompanied "Gallagher and Shean" interlude, brought down the house with their allusions in verse to various Club members' peculiarities, including the Gallagher remedies, Bill Conway's voice, Lloyd Hamilton's head, Joe Wearing's language, Charlie Cooks looks, Herb. Gilgour's buns and Jack McKone's shirt.

The chairman voiced the appreciation of the audience in a hearty vote of thanks to the artists of the evening, and the gathering broke up to allow participants in the coming Kiwanis concert to assemble for practise at the Business College rooms.

SMALL SHIPMENT OF GRAIN MADE FRIDAY

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Oct. 20.—Yesterday was one of the lightest days since the opening of the new crop season, with only 770,000 bushels reported as cleared and only one boat, the United States barge Constitution, loading grain. This is partly due to the heavy weather on the lakes, which has sent some of the boats on the upper lakes to shelter, no less than sixteen vessels being reported as on their way up light for grain and six due with coal.

It is believed here that the new ruling of the Board of Grain Commissioners, that they will accept the filing of rates by shippers as well as by vessel companies, as complying with the Inland Water Freight Rates Act, will overrule all the objections which the United States lake carriers have had to overcome here for Canadian grain.

A pearl discovered in a fresh water mussel in the River Conway, North Wales, is said to form one of the crown jewels.

PLEADS GUILTY CHANGES MIND

And Alleged Auto Theft Narrowly Escapes Sentence by Court at Belleville—Fight Case.

BELLEVILLE, OCT 20.—The fate of Thos. Dacey hung in the balance for a time, and it appeared as though he would be sentenced to one year's imprisonment, by His Honor Judge Wills on an auto theft charge. Counsel for accused C. A. Payne, persisted however, and held that Dacey had pleaded guilty before Police Magistrate Masson, and had been adjudged guilty without first having counsel and learning the facts of law in the matter. Magistrate Masson will be accordingly asked to allow the prisoner to change his plea of guilty to not guilty and C. A. Payne will fight the case.

Hires Car

Dacey hired a car from Hanna and Morgan, former proprietors of Essex garage 18 months ago to drive to Madoc. Instead he drove the car to Ottawa, and negotiations between Belleville and Ottawa police officers resulted in the car being located at the capital. It cost $80 to pay the police costs, repair the car and bring it home.

Dacey says that both his wife and mother notified the car owners where the car was, three days after he hired it.

Dacey was remanded until Magistrate Masson rules on the point of law in question.

TO FACE TRIAL FOR POISONING HUSBAND

Mother of 8 Children Unlawfully Loved Father Of Nine.

ROSTHORN, Sask., Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press).— Mrs. Katryna Traiz and Theodore Oleskiw, charged jointly with murdering the former's husband at Fish Creek, Sask., on October 9th, last, were committed for trial at the preliminary hearing here yesterday.

Mrs. Traiz, mother of eight children, admitted she was in love with Oleskiw, father of nine children. Testifying under the protection of the Canada evidence act when Oleskiw was arranged, Mrs. Traiz described through an interpretor how Oleskiw used to kiss her and tell her they would be married after her husband was gone. She testified that she put gopher poison obtained from Oleskiw in her husband's whiskey.

DREAD ALPS COLLECT HEAVY DEATH TOLL

GENEVA, Oct. 20.—(Associated Press)—The Alps take a steady toll of human life. Every summer mountain climbers come to Switzerland to scale its peaks, and every summer sees a number of tragic fatalities. Many bodies never are recovered, for the devoted mountain climber often goes out alone to find his last resting place deep in an ice crevasse or at the remote base of a precipice. Accidents have been unusually numerous this year.

Recently when a Swiss bank clerk named Goetsch, noted as a good climber, failed to return, searchers saw his body at the floot of a cliff. A rescue party, led by a priest with 450 feet of rope, finally made the descent after 12 hours dangerous work. The found beside the body a note saying "Kindly bury me here."

The little funeral party rolled boulders and blocks of ice so as to forms a mound over the man they placed an ice-axe at his head as a cross, and the priest read the burial service.

McGRAW AND JENNINGS WILL TOUR EUROPE

Plan Trip to France, Germany, England and Ireland.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York Nationals, and Hughey Jennings, his first lieutenant, will leave for Europe within two weeks for a trip that wil take them through France, Germany, England and Ireland.

Jennings had intended to accompany Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees to New Brunswick, Canada, on a hunting trip, but changed at McGraw's invitation.

Though the Giant chieftain is going mainly for pleasure, he may arrange a tour for his team.

FLOWER PERFUMES

A well-known botanist has recently made an investigation of the odors of cut flowers. Out of 4,300 species of flowers cultivated in Europe, he says, only 420 possess an agreeable perfume. Flowers with white or cream colored petals, we are told, are more frequently odoriferous than others.

WILCE USES PSYCHOLOGY TO TRAIN HIS GRID MEN

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—Coach J. W. Wilce, of Ohio State, believes psychology applied during the training season helps his team win. Early in the season he has his office painted in a brilliant red, for the psychological effect, he said. Before the Colgate game placards bearing the inscription: "It's intersectional," appeared on the walls of the dressing room. Now, the single word "Michigan" emblazoned on large signs greets members of the squad at almost every turn—all a part of the Wilce pyschological campaign.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

The turf, its fascinating intrigues, the thousand and one desperate strategies of gamblers and turfmen to win by hook or crook, form part of the plot of the exceptional picture, "Little Johnny Jones," which opens on Monday at the Capitol Theatre, where it will hold forth for two days.

The praise given the picture is plause throughout the showing elsewhere of this famous adaption of the famous George M. Cohan play.

This is the most entertaining of cinema entertainments seen in a blue moon. The reason lies in the fine story itself, but particularly in the comedy acting of Johnny Hines, who, in the starring role, carries off honors by brilliant work, making the wholesome, peppy story even peppier in its screen clothes.

This young comedian has been dubbed the George M. Cohan of screendom. Those who witness his superb performance know why. His work is enjoyable, easily eclipsing other comedy entertainers. He is liked immensely, and we are confident he will win a place in the hearts of all persons who enjoy genuine comedy.

The last four days of next week will see Harold Lloyd in his latest five-reel feature comedy sensation, "Why Worry," at the Capitol. This attraction is considered Lloyd's biggest, funniest and best attraction, surpassing even his last great hit, "Safety Last." "Why Worry" will be shown Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Capitol.

LITTLE JOHNNY JONES CONTEST AT CAPITOL

To celebrate the showing of Johnnie Hines in "Little Johnny Jones," Monday and Tuesday, every boy under 15 whose name is John Jones, will be admitted free at the Capitol when accompanied by a parent.

AT THE ROYAL.

ELINOR GLYN'S "SIX DAYS." AT ROYAL MONDAY, TUESDAY WEDNESDAY

Elinor Glyn is the most picturesque figure writing in English today. Tall and beautiful, gifted socially and intellectually, she combines the poise of a duchess with great natural charm.

The author of "Six Days," "Three Weeks" and other well-known stories, she is the daughter of Douglas Sutherland, an English aristocrat, long settled in Ontario, Canada.

Her girlhood was spent in the leading social centers of Europe and America. Her knowledge of social customs and society is considered second to none among contemporary writers. This is evidenced by the elaborate detail with which her stories are crowded.

Mme. Glyn's distinct individuality adds greatly to her charm. Rupert Hughes, Goldwyn author and director, has pronounced her one of the most charming women he has ever known.

Elinor Glyn's hair, a beautiful shade of auburn, contrasts strangely and splendidly with her sea-green eyes. Her complexion, a delicate white, shaded with pink, is that of an auburn-haired English schoolgirl.

For Elinor Glyn is youth supreme. She represents that vivid quality, that touch of wonder, that seeking after life and the mystery of it, that search after the hidden secrets of the soul, that belongs to youth, and youth alone.

Mme. Glyn is an excellent dancer and a great social favorite. She accomplishes a tremendous amount of work, having an almost unlimited capacity and endurance.

She began her career as a writer with the publication of "The Visits of Elizabeth." This book went into many editions and established her at once among the most popular writers. Other books came from her pen, among them the world-famous and much-discussed novel "Three Weeks." This book created a storm of approval and disapproval. It became at once, and has still remained, one of the most widely-talked-of books in the English language.

"Six Days" is an original screen story by Miss Glyn. The story deals with the aftermath of the Great War. The principal dramatic action takes place in six days. Hence its name.

Seeing its vivid possibilities as a gripping screen story of modern love, it was purchased by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. They immediately engaged such well-known players as Corinne Griffith, Frank Mayo, Claude King, Myrtle Stedman and Maude George to appear in it.

Charles Brabin, the husband of Theda Bara, was chosen to direct it. During the filming of "Six Days," Theda Bara was an interested spectator. It is said that she made many helpful suggestions. "Six Days" will appear at the Royal theatre on Monday.

TWO SHOWS TONIGHT AT ROYAL 7 and 9 p.m.

There is no disputing the fact "Squibs" has captured Peterboro and the Royal Theatre is not large enough to accommodate the crowds to see this English comedy success. Two complete performances will be given tonight at 7 and 9 p.m. in order to give everyone an opportunity.

MOVING FREIGHT BY WATERWAYS.

Recent improvements on inland waterways, with other projected, assure greater use of barge lines. In a recent tow of the Mississippi River Barge Line 16,000 tons of freight were moved at the lowest per ton mile cost ever achieved. Enough freight was carried in eight barges to load two ocean-going freight ships.

GASOLINE TAKES ANOTHER DECLINE

Drop Has Not Been Recorded in Peterboro.

Despatches from Detroit say that practically all independent oil companies of that city are to-day selling gasoline at 12.8 cents a gallon retail, two cents lower than Thursday.

Officials of the Standard Oil and Sinclair Companies are awaiting authorisation from their Chicago offices, but they, too, are expected to meet the drop.

The price cut was made merely to stabilise conditions and to establish a standard price, an official said. He expected the Standard and Sinclair Companies to meet the drop soon.

Two kinds of gasoline are sold in Peterborough, the higher priced of which, White Rose, costs 32 cents a gallon. This, as described in yesterday's Examiner, is 12 cents higher than in Aylmer, and 4 cents higher than in Hafilton.

Premier gasoline can be obtained here at 30 cents a gallon, which is only 10 cents higher than in Aylmer and 2 cents higher than in Hamilton.

BANDITS RAID THEATRE JUST BEFORE FINAL

Held Up The Employees And Scooped Up The Available Cash—Montreal Picture House.

ROBBERS ARMED

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—(Special).—Armed bandits raided the treasury office of the Allen Theatre, one of the largest picture houses in the city, just before the close of the last performance last night. The bandits who had seats in the balcony, left about 10.25, proceeded to the third floor, where the cashier's office is situated, donning their masks on the way. Producing revolvers, they ordered the cashier and another occupant of the office to throw up their hands.

They were interrupted in their work by the entrance to the cashier's office of an usher, who was promptly added to the list of victims. Scooping bills and change from the desk, shoving the garnered money to their pockets, and threatening to blow their heads off if hands were lowered, the gunmen backed away to the hall and disappeared. They carried off with them between $400 and $500.

The hold-up was perpetrated with the theatre crowded for the last performance of the night. A score of persons probably sat near the gunmen in the balcony during the evening, patrons rubbing shoulders with the two armed men who sat through the performance waiting the maturing of their plans to get possession of the day's receipts.

The gunmen left by a third floor fire exit to the lane which affords connection with University Street and with Cathcart Street, and in a minute were lost in the crowds on St. Catharine Street. Not a soul in the theatre knew what had happened and it was only this morning that a statement was given out.

Bernard Markson, who was charged with publishing false news likely to injure public interest, and who was heard before Magistrate O. A. Langley on March 27 last, will appear before the Honorable Mr. Justice Kelly and a jury to-morrow.

In statements said to have been written by Markson and forwarded for publication to "The Worker," the workers of Peterboro are described as slaves in "The Happy Hunting Ground for Capitalists," and several firms in the city were singled out for special attention. The expressions in "The Worker," described as the official paper of the Workers' Party of Canada, form the grounds of the action against Markson.

Italian Duke And Author In a Duel Over Blow Struck

PARIS, October 22 (Canadian Press). — In a duel fought this morning over a blow struck in a theatre ticket tax dispute, Duke Lansea de Camastra, an Italian nobleman, was wounded by a thrust from the sword of Jacques Richepin, author, and husband, of Cora Laparcerie, actress theatre manager.

The Duke's forearm was penetrated about an inch and a half by his opponent's blade during the second phase of their passage at arms.

The dispute arose at the Cora Laparcerie Theatre, when the doorman tried to collect Government tax on a free ticket presented by the Duke.

Richepin endeavoured to explain matters but the Duke became offended, and is said to have applied the epithet "Blackguard" to the poet.

Richepin responded with a slap on the ducal cheek.

SEPARATISTS IN GERMANY DECLARE RHENISH REPUBLIC AND DISPLAY REPUBLICAN FLAGS IN MANY TOWNS

Carrying Red, White and Green Ensigns, Armed Forces Seize Important Centres Without Opposition From Federal Forces — Herr Matthes Reported to Have Formed a Provisional Government Shortly to Be Installed at Dusseldorf.

LEADERS NOT HUNTING FOR TROUBLE

DUSSELDORF, Oct. 22. — —(Special.)— Separatists have proclaimed the Rhenish Republic in Treves, Baden, Munichen and Gladbak, disarming the local police, according to advices here to-day.

No resistance was met anywhere.

The Rhenish separatists have occupied Grossgeran, Russelsheim and Startlenburg, according to a message received at noon from Aix La Chapelle.

The Rhineland separatist leader, Herr Matthes, reported from Duren to have formed a Provisional Government shortly to be installed here, has gone to Aix-La-Chapelle to co-operate with the separatists, Deckers and Metzen.

Control Public Buildings.

Separatists were in control of all public buildings at Mayence to-day.

Proclamations were posted throughout the city announcing establishment of a Rhineland Republic.

The separatist movement, long engineered by a strong party under the leadership of Dr. Dorten, was proceeding with little opposition.

The "putsch" came as a complete surprise, Separatist forces quietly occupying the public buildings at 3 a.m.

Separatist troops clashed with the police in front of the City Hall at 4.30 a.m. Two men were wounded. The Separatists withdrew to the outskirts of the city.

Life Is Normal.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Aix La Chapelle is tranquil and life is proceeding normally, the correspondence of the Daily Mail telegraphed. The principal buildings are flying the red, green and white ensign of the Rhenish Republic. Armed Republican forces are marching through the streets without uniforms, except for red, white and green armlets.

A message from Duren says: Herr Matthes, one of the Rhineland separatist leaders, has formed a provisional government which wil be installed here.

Matthes said he would not hunt for trouble.

The separatist movement will spread throughout the Rhineland, he ascertained.

Would Recognize Treaty.

Leo Deckers, sixty-year-old manufacturer, who is one of the leaders of the Separatist coup at Aix La Chapelle, informed a Belgian correspondent that the Separatists would recognize the Treaty of Versailles and were ready to assume their share of the reparations. He added that Coblenz would be the capital of the new Republic.

Bavaria to Secede.

London reports that the Bavarian Premier, Dr. Von Knilling, has declared that Bavaria cannot remain united with Germany, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Berlin this afternoon. Reuter's Berlin correspondent, says telegrams from the German capital, are subject to censorship.

HOPE IT'S PREMATURE.

BERLIN, October 22 (Canadian Press). —A blow against which the German Republic has been steeling itself fell on Sunday. Citizens of the Rhineland arose put on green, red, and white armbands, armed themselves and declared a separate Republic.

Aix-la-Chapelle, Mayence, Duren, and other important cities of the buffer country between France and Germany were seized by the Separatists.

The French and Belgians occupying the strip of territory in which the uprising ocurred did not interfere.

The one hope of the Stresemann Government, ill-equipped to meet the revolt and harassed by trouble in Bavaria and economic difficulties, was that the Separatist revolt was premature.

It was understood at first that Herr Smeets and Dr. Dorten, who all along have been recognised leaders of the Rhineland Republican movement, had not authorised yesterday's proclamation.

At Aix-la-Chapelle, the most important of the Rhineland cities seized, the proclamations which were posed about the city were signed by Leo Deckers and Dr. Guthardt, more or less Independent Separatist agitators.

Everyone had known that the plans of the organised Rhinelanders had been to have the Republic proclaimed next Saturday, not yesterday.

The Government getting much of its information from French sources, in the occupied areas, could only cling to the hope that this embryonic uprising might divide the Separatists against themselves. It remained to be seen whether Smeets and Dorten would fall in line.

So far, comparative calm apparently has marked the progress of the Separatist revolt.

French sources reported an unimportant clash of troops and Separatists at Mayence at dawn to-day, after which the revolters were reported to have withdrawn temporarily to the outskirts.

Accomplish Purpose To-night.

Rhineland Separatists, having successfully proclaimed a Republic in Aix-la-Chapelle, are now planning to make their regime effective throughout virtually the entire zone's occupied by France and Belgium, says a Dusseldorf despatch. They hope to accomplish their purpose before night, if possible.

Joseph Matthes, Senaratist leader, is setting up general headquarters to-day at noon at Dueren, from which place he will direct the occupation of the public buildings by his followers.

MAY NOT LEGALLY POISON ANIMALS

Cats And Dogs Must Be Respected—A Druggist Commits Offence Who Sells Poison.

Poisoning cats and dogs is an offense under the Criminal Code of Canada punishable by a fine of $100 Inspector James Reid said to-day, following a complaint from a citizen that a valuable cat had been destroyed. It is a few years since it was necessary to bring a charge of this nature in Peterboro'.

At that time a woman was fined, and if the offenses are repeated it will be necessary to prosecute more citizens.

It is pointed out by Chief S. Newhall that it is an offense for a druggist to sell poison if demanded for "poisoning animals."

"It is all right if the person says he wants it to kill his own cat or dog the Chief said, "but if he wants it to lay out promiscuously to kill his neighbours' animals then the druggist who supplies him is guilty of an offense."

GERMAN REVOLT SPREADING FAST

Rhenish Prussia Falls in Line With Republican Movement.

COBLENZ, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The Separatist movement in Rhineland is spreading. At Russelsheim, in Rhenish Prussia, Separatists have taken possession of public services without incident, and the same is reported from Mayen, in the district of Coblenz, and Bernonstei, near Treves.

The town of Dueren, where Joseph Matthes, Separatist leader, has installed himself, adhered to the movement at two o'clock this afternoon. The movement also seems to be extending to certain villages around Noescht, in the district of Wiesbaden.

TRIAL TO BE DELAYED.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—(Special).—The trials of the Home Bank directors are not likely to be proceeded with until January. They must appear in Police Court weekly meanwhile.

FRANCE DID NOT FOSTER REPUBLIC

Inspired Journal Declares Rhineland Republic is Result Germany's Mad Course.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—(United Press)—France is not responsible for the establishment of the Rhineland Republic, Pertinax, usually regarded as the journalistic mouthpiece of the government said in a signed editorial to-day.

"France regards the matter as the inevitable consequence of Germany's mad course in following out passive resistance to the Franco-Belgian occupation of the Ruhr.

"It was this resistance that caused the gradual breakup of the power of the Central Government in Berlin.

"France will treat with the new state on its merits.

"The Rhenish Republic must assume its full share of reparations."

Dispatches from various points indicated proclamation of the separatist Republic would be completed throughout the Rhineland to-day.

More Proclamations

Following issuance of the proclamation at Mayence and occupation of public buildings there, similar news was expected hourly from Dusseldorf and Coblenz, taking in practically the entire occupied zone.

"All the separatist parties of the Rhineland have only one aim—separation from Prussia, Herr Smeets leader of the Mayence separatists, said in an interview with the correspondent of Le Journal.

The Rhenish Republic can exiht only on a basis of absolute autonomy Smeets asserted. "It must be willing to assume its full share of reparations."

Smeets said he was ignorant of the proclamation of a Rhineland Republic at Aix-La-Chappelle but wishes the movement entire success.

Referring to differences between the three separatist parties, Smeets declared, "I believe we will all be in full accord on the details of establishing the separatist state very soon."

STEAMER SINKING CALLS FOR HELP

Has Nine Passengers On Board, Including Woman and Infant.

BOSTON, Oct. 22. — (Canadian Press.)—The United Fruit Company steamer, San Gil, reported sinking south-west of Jamaica, is believed to have had on board nine passengers, including two women and an infant. Two ohers who sailed on the steamer from this port were bound for Havana and are supposed to have left the vessel there.

A message, received by Independent Wireless Telegraph Company Station at East Hampton, N.Y., said: "Weather heavy, San Gil pounding to pieces, passengers taking to boat. Hurry, help." Fifteen minutes later another call was received from the San Gil, "Help, quick."

The radio station at East Hampton immediately started broadcasting the help call to ships at sea. Answers were received from S. S. Portola and from S. S. Pastore.

The latter vessel answered that she was on her way to the rescue under forced steam.

The steamer Sanbles is expected to arrive for the rescue of the United Fruit liner San Gil, within an hour, according to radio advice received here.

Advices here reported the San Gil pounding heavily on a reef off Providence Island, and her passengers taking to lifeboats. The steamer Pastors is also rushing to the scene.

Local advices are to the effect that the San Gil has a large passenger list.

TO CONSTRUCT RAIL VIADUCT

But C. N. R. and C. P. R. Ask Meeting of Toronto Representatives to Consider Modifications.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press). — The Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Railways acknowledge the binding effect of the order of 1913, calling for the construction of a viaduct along Toronto's waterfront, but owing to changed conditions, believe that certain modifications should be made, and ask that a meeting of representatives of the City Council, Harbor Board and Board of Trade be held during the week of November 12 to consider plans which the railway engineers have been instructed to draft.

This in effect is the announcement of Sir Henry Thornton and E. W. Beatty, presidents of the respective systems, contained in a letter to Mayor Maguire and R. Home Smith, of the Harbor Board, to-day.

(Copyright by Canadian Press).

October 22, 1692. — The name of Canada's youngest heroine, Madeline, the fourteen-year-old daughter of the Seigneur of Vercheres, is associated with this historic date in the early annals of this country. Little Madeline won deathless fame by defending the fort in the absence of her parents against a determined attack by the Iroquois Indians.

Her garrison at the moment consisted of two soldiers, two boys and an old man. This small defence force was successfully led by the dauntless child Madeline, whose clever manoeuvring and ruses caused the Indians to suppose that a large force was within the walls.

During a whole week the beseigers were held off. Then relief came to the garrison and the red men were driven away.

Trafficking With Convicts Charged Against a Guard

KINGSTON, October 22 (Special to The Examiner). — Government detectives have placed a guerd at the Portsmouth Penitentiary under arrest on a charge of trafficking with convicts.

The name of the guard is being withheld until the case comes before Magistrate Farrell at a special session of the Police Court to be held this afternoon.

It is understood that the guard has only been on the Penitentiary staff a few weeks, and the case has nothing to do with the recent escape of the four convicts.

BIG INCREASE IN INSURANCE IN LATE YEARS

Rotarian W. R. Widdess Quotes Figures to Show Vast Strides Made By Business.

THE BEST POLICY

The great development of the insurance business both in Canada and in the United States in the last four years was emphasized by Rotarian W. R. Widdess in the course of a most interesting address on his classification before the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon at the Empress to-day.

Rotarian Widdess in beginning said that he appreciated the honour of representing the life insurance business in the Peterboro Rotary Club.

The business written by the various companies in Canada and the United States up to this time shows an increase over last year of between 15 and 20 per cent, and this will likely be the biggest year in the history of life insurance in this country" declared the speaker, and added that life insurance being one of the financial institutions to enjoy increased production is evidence that there is money in the country and that the people are on the whole generally employed.

In Canada alone in 1922 the life insurance business in force was $3,500,000,000. The figures showed $103,290,932 in force in Canada in 1881, $463,769,634 in 1901 and $2,934,843,848 in 1921. Results such as these would have been impossible had it not been for the new fields opened up and the new uses to which life insurance policies have been applied. Business firms and corporations are beginning to see that it is poor business on their part not to protect the brain of the business.

Men with estates which would be taxed by the Government for succession duties in the event of their death all using life insurance policies to provide the ready money required at that time. Insurance is also being used for bequest purposes.

Another factor that had led to increased business the speaker pointed out, was the trained agency force as compared with that of year ago and the practical elimination of the part time man.

Rotarian Widdess in speaking of the need of life insurance quoted statistics to show that out of every 100 male adults, 9 leave estates which when invested at 6 per cent. will provide a revenue of $50 per month or more, 27 leave estates which similarly invested will produce an average of $20 per month and 64 leave little or nothing, most of them nothing.

Again if 100 average men of the age of 25 healthy, vigorous and self-supporting are taken it is found that at 55 years twenty will have died, one became rich, three become comfortably off, forty-six will be still working for their living without having saved anything and thirty will be more or less dependent upon their children or upon charity.

In conclusion Rotarian Widdess strongly recommended planning for a life programme of insurance, declaring that the whole life policy was the best policy to buy for men of any age. If started early enough it will answer the purpose of saving in early years, protection during middle life and a cash payment in old age. He advised his hearers to look upon the money put into their policies as a saving and not to quit saving at the age of 40 or 45 years usually the easiest time at which to pay premiums.

Ratarian Dr. A. W. McPherson reporting on the work of the Crippled Children's Committee announced that the Rotary-Annes under the direction of Mrs. Fred L. Roy, had their organization completed for the canvass of the city which had been divided into twenty-seven districts, each of which would have a group headed by a captain to look after it. Some of the canvassing had already commenced and the whole work

CELEBRATED HIS SILVER JUBILEE OF PRIESTHOOD

Anniversary at Sacred Heart Church of Rev. J. J. O'Brien's Ordination 25 Years Ago.

TOKENS OF ESTEEM

With the people he has shepherded during the last ten years, Rev. John J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, celebrated yesterday the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. At his previously expressed request for the special prayers of his parishioners in union with his own, large congregations attending the early masses received holy communion, and the church was crowded again at the High Mass at 10.30 a.m. which Rev. Father O'Brien himself sang, assisted by Rev. Father Power, curate of the Church of the Immaculate Conception as deacon, and Rev. Father Butler, curate of the Church of the Sacred Heart, as subdeacon.

At the conclusion of the High Mass, as the celebrant was about to descend from the altar, the congregation unfolded a little climax which they had secretly prepared as a material and tangible tribute superadded to the spiritual and devotional exercises with which Father O'Brien had celebrated his silver jubilee.

Representing the parishioners, Mr. S. S. Shaughnessy read a handsomely bound address to Father O'Brien, and Mr. Albert Ryan presented him with a bank note for a substantial sum. Palpably surprised and moved by these tokens of esteem and affection, the jubilarian returned his gratitude to the parishioners in words that broke several times under the surge of emotions that welled up from fleeting memories of a quarter century in the service of God back through his college years to boyhood. Father O'Brien acknowledged a heavy debt not only to those with whom he had worked during his present pastorate, but to others who in other times and places had helped and guided him through difficulties.

Other features of the pastor's jubilee will be a concert this afternoon given by the children of the Sacred Heart School, to be repeated for adults on Friday evening, and a high mass on Wednesday at 10 a.m., at which the clergy of the diocese will join with Father O'Brien in his thanksgiving and in the celebration of his notable anniversary.

The sermon at the High Mass on Sunday was preached by the Right Reverend Monsignor Thomas O'Donnell, of Toronto, president of the Catholic Church Extension League of Canada. He spoke on a text from the book of Kings: "And the Lord called Samuel, and Samuel answered and said, Here am I." Mons. O'Donnell, who was a college and seminary companion of Father O'Brien's, centered his discourse upon the vocation of the priesthood and the work of the priest.

EVOLUTION THEORY AND CHRISTIANITY

Able Discourse on Live Topic by Rev. R. Pogue —The Dignity of Man's Creation.

In a sermon preached by the Minister of St. Paul's Church last Sabbath evening, he dealt with the results for faith of the giving up of the Bible doctrine of Creation and the acceptance in its stead of the theory of Evolution.

He said in part: What is the Bible doctrine of Creation? It is briefly this: That the first man was brought into existence by a direct act of divine creation. In Genesis 1:27 we read: "And God created man in His own image; in the image of God created He him; male and female created he them." The word create in the Hebrew, means to bring into existence an entity which did not exist before. As Professor Keyser says commenting on the words in Genesis "By a clear exegisis of the Biblical language we are driven to the conclusion that the writer meant to teach that the progenitors of the Genus Homo were given their being by a direct act of divine creation." In fact nobody questions that interpretation of the words of Genesis. Those who reject the Bible doctrine of creation, as well as those who hold to it agree in this that there can be no question as to what the Bible teaches. The Bible teaches the creation of man, not by any slow evolutionary process, but by a direct act of God.

The rejection of the Bible doctrine of the creation of man means the acceptance of the scientific theory—for it is only a theory—of the evolutionary origin of man. In a book which has just been published on the "Evolution of Man," written by some six scientists one of them professor of Biology in the Christian University of Princeton, there is not a single reference to a supernatural agency, or that a supernatural agency was needed in the creation of man. Professor Keyser who reviews the book says: "If the authors believe in a personal God, or any other kind of a God, they give no sign. In the literal—though not the profane—sense of the term it is a godless book."

Mr. Pogue here pointed out what was implied in the rejection of the Bible doctrine of creation. He spoke of four things.

Ape is Rejected

The doctrine of the dignity of man is rejected. Let scientists say what they may about the beauty of the theory of evolution most of us still prefer to trace our ancestory to a different source than the ape. In the book to which I have just referred the writers have no hesitation in tracing man's ancestry to the ape. Professor Ferris says: Because of the structural similarities he (man) belongs to the order of primates, together with the lemurs monkeys and apes." Again: "It is pretty well agreed that the anthropoid apes and man came from a common ancestor, and he in turn from some primitive bread-nosed ape." Over against that theory I place the Bible account of man's origin: "God said let us make man in our image" . . . . . "God created man in His own image; male and female created He them." The whole story in Genesis implies that the work which came from the hands of the Creator was not a perfect baboon but a perfect man.

The serious side to the acceptance of this doctrine of evolution is that it robs a man of his sense of dignity. If a man believes that he was made in the image of God he will walk with his head in the air; he will aspire and pray and seek to live as a son of God. But once he accepts the doctrine of his animal ancestry, he will be content to live as an animal, he will not be shocked by the deep grounded tendencies of his nature to savage acts, especially as he believes he has inherited these tendencies from hundreds of thousands of savage human ancestors. Let our young men at college be taught and let them believe that they are made in the image of an ape, rather than in the image of God, and we must not be surprised or shocked when they graduate if they go forth as earthly minded materialists, to live like the muck-rake man in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, with their eyes on the ground, and with no ideals higher than the earth born plane of their own theory of their origin and destiny. In a recent editorial on the "Break Down of Modern Education," the writer says, "The aim of modern education is efficiency irrespective of morality or religion. In our zeal for efficiency in the soul life is forgotten, and our students are not being trained in these great fundomentals that make for sound citizenship and clean living. Modern education substitutes for God dead materialism and chance evolution. A belief in his reign is eliminated. Personal responsibility for actions is lowered. Modern education teaches that the home life, bound and constrained by the marriage vow, is but the result of custom with no foundation in religious or moral laws. Often free-love-ism is set up as an ideal before our students in institutions of higher learning. With such teaching there comes a trail of aetheism, unbelief, skepticism, crime djvorce, broken homes, debilitated characters, and "brain storm" actions of which America is reaping the fruits just as all reaped the fruits of German materialistic education in the world war."

Theory rejects Bible.

The acceptance of the theory of evolution, it was shown, means the rejection also of the Bible doctrine of man's religious nature, the Bible doctrine of sin, and the Bible doctrine of redemption. On this latter the speaker said: "If a man has not sinned he has no need of a Saviour. But if sin be a reality it follows that God must intervene in some way for his salvation. The Bible tells us that this intervention took place in the coming of Jesus Christ, God's Son, to be the life of the World. The person of Christ and His presence in the world cannot be explained by any theory of evolution. Such theories utterly fail to account for Him. And they fail equal ly to account for Christianity. What is Christianity? It is the Divine religion of redemption. The history of the Christian church shows it to be such. Christianity began with a divine act—The act of Christ giving Himself in sacrifice for the life of the world. History shows that all who accept:d that act entered into a Christian experience, an experience in which they felt and knew that their sins were forgiven, and the guilt of sin was lifted from the conscience. The history of the Christian church shows that that experience was associated with another act of God, namely, the gift of His Spirit. Men got power to live a new life in Christ through the Spirit. They claimed that they had an experience of conversion, an experience of fellowship with Christ, an experience of a victorious life. All that is the normal Christian experience wherever the Christian religion has been preached and accepted. But such an experience involves "A continuous process of divine intervention." Christianity claims to be, and is attested by Christian experience to be a continuous moral miracle. The Bible claims that if a man will comply with certain conditions he shall know certain definite results in his life, results which involve the interposition of the Supernatural. No wall that is meaningless to the evolutionist. He can find for these truths of Christian experience absolutely no place in the evolutionary theory. That theory also rules out divine intervention altogether. It makes no place for the incoming of divine life, for the new birthbirth, for the indwelling Spirit, or for fellowship with Christ, which are the very essence of Christianity.

Gets Two Years In a Reformatary For Attempting Suicide

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 22. — (Canadian Press).—A sentence of from one to two years in the Ontario Reformatory was handed out by Magistrate Gundy today to William Cicorky, 29 years old, Windsor, who attempted to end his life several days ago by shooting himself with a revolver.

The motive for his act was jealousy because Mrs. Sofia Hocula, with whom he lived, had transferred her affections to another man.

A PERFECT BODY IN SIX MONTHS

(By Niels Buhk.)

With careful, constant application to the exercises that I have outlined, to the exercises that I have outlined, you can develop in six months as near a perfect body as is possible for the average person to have.

You can use it then for sport, or as the foundation for perfection in any particular athletic field.

Men generally turn to athletics, while girls go in more for those things which express grace and beauty.

For the men I especially recommend, running ,which develops the legs and wind; throwing, which develops the arms and chest; handball, chiefly for speed and co-ordination; and tennis, for grace and co-ordination.

For the girls, I give many exercises similar to the old Greek choruses—movements to music. The one I have illustrated is very simple.

Kneeling on the left knee, the right leg is forward at an angle. The two arms are straight out in front. Then slowly and gracefully bend forward, keeping the arms outstretched, and sink gradually on the left leg, extending the right leg straight forward. Return to the original position.

Women like this sort of thing. It permits them to express the latent love of beauty that is in every woman.

THE REST OF FAITH.

Oh, where can rest be found, for the weary, anxious mind?

This is the expressed or unexpressed cry of the human heart; it is written on the faces of almost all we meet.

There is one answer, ONLY one to this cry: "Come unto Me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shaH find rest to your soul."

I sometimes wonder, are we all crazy, so-called Christians though some of us may be, why don't we believe the One who said this? Is He not such a one as can be fully trusted? Why not then in the name of common sense, ACCEPT this blessed invitation, and rest our souls on Him, and be able to show to the world a peace that the world cannot give. "My peace I give unto you," said the Master, "not as the world giveth, give I unto you. let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Do we need an example of one who trusted, and who rested in Christ, amid suffering and affliction of no ordinary kind, let us take a look at the Apostle Paul. His faith was triumphant all the time, neither prison, nor stripes, nor stoning, nor anyone, nor anything, could daunt his courage and faith, for he had heard a voice and seen a vision, which carried him triumphant through all.

Of all the multitudes, which God delivered from the bondage of Egypt, only two entered the promised land. The rest died in the wilderness because of unbelief, because they did not believe it possible to surmount the difficulties in the road. Let us beware lest there be IN US the same evil heart as the Bible calls it of unbelief that is shutting us out of many blessings that are ours; if we believe and seek to be learners of Him, who was meek and lowly in heart, not self willed, but wiling to be taught, not thinking ourselves sufficient for all things, for we have to become as little children to enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

HUNGER STRIKE CALLED FRAUD FOOD IS FOUND

President Cosgrave Says Strikers Had Brown Bread in Pockets When Searched.

STRIKE SPREADING.

DUBLIN, Oct. 21. — "Fraud" was President Cosgrave's characterization of the Mount Joy hunger strike in a speech he delivered here to-day. When the strikers were searched, he said, Brown bread and food pastiles were found in their pockets.

Austin Stack started his hunger strike forty-eight hours after the others, President Cosgrave declared and de Valera had not yet begun. They were like the Duke of Plazatoro, who commanded his army from the rear.

Won't be Released

Ernest Blythe, minister of finance at the same meeting announced that the prisoners would not be released and added that they would not die.

A labor meeting was held simultaneously, at which James Larkin was the principal speaker. The unconditional release of the prisoners was demanded.

The hunger strike is spreading. The prisoners in the Gormanstown camp at Meath have started in on a fast in protest against the government. A Republican headquarters it could not be definitely learned tonight whether De Valera was yet on hunger strike but it was stated that all the leaders had been removed from Mount Joy to Kilmainham prison.

Will Die First

A letter which was sent to all the members of the recent ard fheis by P. J. Rutledge, de Valera's deputy president, who is "on the run." was accompanied by a copy of the pledge to be taken by all republican prisoners, vowing that they would take neither food nor drink until liberated even though they died.

BAVARIA'S DICTATOR SEQUESTERS FEDERAL TROOPS AS HOSTAGES

Berlin's Suspension of Their Commander Jountermanded By His Appointment By Dr. Von Kahr — Open Conflict of Authority.

APPEAL FOR LOYALTY

BERLIN, Oct. 21. — (German.)—An official communique published last night said that Dr. Gessler, military dictator, had suspended Gen von Lossow, commander of the Reichswehr troops in Bavaria and will place him on the retired list. Major General Baron Kress von Kressenstein has been placed provisionally in command of the seventh army division.

12,000 Kidnapped.

MUNICH, Bavaria, Oct. 21. —Dr. von Kahr, military dictator of Bavaria, last night theoretically kidnapped 12,000 federal troops garrisoned at various points in Bavaria and will hold them at ransom until such time as a satisfactory accord with Berlin can be reached.

This was the substance of a proclamation issued by the Bavaroan dictator in reply to President Ebert's suspension of Gen. von Lossow, commander of the Reichswehr, who was charged with insubordination and infraction of army discipline. By way of injecting added venom into his coup, Dr. von Kahr has appointed von Lossow commander-in-chief of the Bavarian Reichswehr contingents, thus openly challenging the authority invested in General Baron Kress von Kressenstein, whom the Reich president has installed as federal military governor for Bavaria, succeeding von Lossow.

CONTRASTS TROOPS.

Von Kahr's proclamation set forth that in the interests of the maintenance of law and order in Bavaria, and for the protection of her sovereignty, the Bavarian government would assume trusteeship authority over the federal troops garrisoned in Bavaria until such time as a satisfactory understanding is reached with the Berlin government on controversial issues.

It designates Von Lossow as military commander-in-chief of all the federal troops in Bavaria.

APPOINTS VON LOSSOW.

MUNICH, Bavaria, October 21. — In a proclamation to the Bavarian people issued to-day, Dr. Von Kahr, military dictator of Bavaria, declares that Minister of defence Gessler, tried by threats against Bavaria, to compel General Von Lossow, commander of the Reichswehr in Bavaria, to resign, and that Gessler had replied to the protest of the Bavarian government with an order for the immediate dismissal of General von Lossow.

"The Bavarian government and the state commissioner," says the proclamation, "know themselves to be in accord with all nationally-minded Germans if they reject this. Bavaria considers it her holy duty in this hour to be the strong-hold of theratened Germandom. The government therefore has entrusted General von Lossow with command of the Bavarian section of the Reichswehr.

"Bavarians and Germans: Remain true to the lofty task of restoring internal freedom to the German Fatherland."

BERLIN'S APPEAL.

BERLIN, October 21. — The government to-day issued a proclamation to the German people, warning them against what is termed Bavaria's open breach of the constitution. The proclamation declares that Bavaria has thought fit to bring about internal disputes in the Reich, despite the intolerable distress in the Rhineland and the Ruhr, and that the question is whether military discipline is to prevail.

After emphasizing the anxiety of the central government to avoid a rupture with Bavaria, the manifesto repudiates what it describes as an attempt by some persons to represent the Bavarian government's action as part of a struggle by the Nationalists and Christians against the Marxian internationalistic attitude.

ONLY UNITY LEFT.

"The action of the Bavarian government at a time when the Imperial government requires the forces of the whole of the people in order to hold out against the French annihilatory policy," is strongly condemned by the proclamation, and an appeal is made to all Germans to combine in the struggle "for the only thing that remains to the German people.—the German Reich and German Unity."

General Von Zeckt, the commander-in-chief of the Reichswehr, today isued a statement to the Reichswehr, describing the Bavarian government's action as an attack on the constitution. He declares that anybody obeying the Bavarian government's decree breaks his oath to the Reich and is guilty of military disobedience.

LOYALTY DEMANDED.

"I formally call upon the seventh Bavarian Division of the Reichswehr," says the statement, "to remain loyal to their oath to the Reich and to unconditionally obey the orders of their highest military commander. I regard the loyalty of all other sections of the army as assured."

SEYMOUR WOMEN HAD GATHERING

Interesting Programme By MemBers of The Women's Institute.

CAMPBELLFORD, October 22. —The Seymour West Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Roy Fleming on Thursday afternoon, 18th October. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Vanvolkenburg ,and opened by the singing of the Institute ode, followed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, adopted and signed.

The Seymour West W. I. offered four prizes this year to the pupils getting the most number of prizes, and it was moved by Mrs. Gordon Shearer and Mrs. Charles Longmuir that the prize money be given to the teachers to be spent for the benefit of the schools.

The secretary read a letter received from the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, acknowledging the receipt of a box of fruit which the Institute had sent.

Delegates were also appointed to attend the convention to be held in Toronto on 19th, 20th, and 21st November. Mrs, George Vanvolkenburg and Mrs. Roy Fleming were the delegates, after which there was a programme given. The first number was "The Maple Leaf." A reading was given by Mary Stevenson, entitled "The Me First Spirit." A duet by Mrs. Shearer and Mrs. Tom Brown, "There's a Mother Always Waiting You at Home" was enjoyable. A splendid paper was given by Mrs. Howard Clark on "Feeding Poultry for Market," followed by a paper on "Fattening Poultry for Market," by Mrs. Chas. Longmuir. A solo by Mrs. Doupe, entitled "Killarney," after which was a demonstration of cookie making.

A social half-hour was spent, and the meeting closed by the singing of "God Save the King." Lunch was served by the hostess. The number present was 35.

Prince of Wales Planning Journey to South Africa

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Already one of the most travelled young men in the world, the Prince of Wales has plans for still more voyages to lands beyond the sea where flies the Union Jack. He had hardly disembarked this week from the ship bringing him home from his Canadian travels when he was again rounding out a programme for another long trip, this time to South Africa, the only big dominion of the Empire he has not yet seen.

It is expected that the prince will pay a formal visit to this state some time next spring. A few weeks ago the colonial secretary informed the Union government that the prince was looking forward to a visit to South Africa "at his earliest opportunity."

The prince already has travelled more miles, both on land and sea, than any member of a Britisht royal family, past or present, with the sole exception of his father, who as a naval officer in his younger days, made numerous long voyages.

The prince arrived in London last night. He was received at Waterloo station by a small circle of friends to whom he remarked: "It has been a wonderful trip. I thoroughly enjoyed it, but I am glad to reach home."

WINTER WEAVES MANTLE OF SNOW IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

SUDBURY, Oct. 21.—King winter has started to cast his mantle early over Northern Ontario. In district around Sudbury town over inch of snow fell in early hours of this morning but disappeared soon as daylight. The same condition prevailed for fifty miles north and west. Along the Sault Branch of C. P.R. snow fell Saturday, but had practically disappeared to-day.

There was snowfall yesterday along main line of C.P.R. in Chapleau, White River district, the latter reporting eleven inches but there was not as heavy fall at Chapleau. North, however, along the Canadian National the snowfall was unusually heavy for this time of the year. The Canadian National Divisional offices at Capreol to-night reported no snow along Toronto division south and east of Foleyet, but Horne-Payne, where a regular old fashioned blizzard was reported last night, to-day bulletined over two feet of snow, but it had stopped falling. Snowplows were out on Canadian National, but all trains were running on scheduled time up to 8 o'clock to-night.

Weather to-day over most of this district has been clear and cold indications are a heavy frost to-night.

Coal Supply Not on

Northern Ontario has not yet secured its winter supply of coal, except for railroad purposes and early winter is not being generally appreciated. Canadian National has two hundred thousand tons of coal at Capreol, where last year they had only sixty thousand this giving an intimation of heavy freight traffic National lines expect to carry this winter.

RELEASE FLOUR FOR BERLINERS

Emergency Supply For the Winter Will Be Put on the Market Now.

BERLIN, Oct. 21. —In view of the seriousness of the situation generally and continued reports from various points of food riots the government has decided to release immediately the comparatively small reserve supplies of flour which had been stored and originally intended for emergency use during the Winter.

Officials express the hope that the release of the flour will have a tendency to relieve the conditions brought about when the government abandoned the subsidies to the bakers, which for years had kept down the price of bread. The bakers maintain, however, that there is not enough reserve flour in storage to materially relieve the situation, as far as they are concerned. Many bakers in Berlin and other cities have announced that they are unable longer to finance their business but that they will keep their ovens hot on certain days for customers who bring their dough for baking.

The price of a loaf of bread tomorrow in Berlin will be two billion five hundred million marks. The smashing of bakery windows late Saturday evening was reported not only in the Berlin workingmen's home district but in other residential parts of the city. During the night numerous shoe shops and other stores were robbed. The police announced to-day that extra men would begin to-night to patrol the streets to prevent wholesale robberies.

BLINDING SNOW BEACHED VESSEL

Lake Freighter Is Driven Ashore—Crew Saved by Heroic Coastguards.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Oct. 22 — (Canadian Press). — Pounding her way through heavy seas that swept across Lake Superior on Saturday, the big steel freighter Samuel Mather crashed on a rocky reef off Keweenaw Point. A blinding snowstorm was raging and it is believed the skipper lost his bearings and missed the passage marked out by navigation aids. With such force did the vessel strike that she went on almost half her length. Signals sent out by wireless brought coastguards from Eagle Harbor, who, in face of what seemed certain death, launched their boat and brought back the crew, landing them here late on Sunday afternoon. The wind subsided yesterday, and it is not believed the vessel is in any immediate danger. The Mather, one of the largest carriers on the Great Lakes, was bound up and was without cargo.

PREMIERS HAVE NO POLICY YET

The Imperial Conference Likely to Express Support of Parent Cabinet.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—(By Associated Press).—Although the Imperial conference has been in session here for two weeks it has not yet evolved a definite policy toward the reparation issue and the government's "watch and wait" attitude remains unchanged. The disposition of the cabinet seems to be to let France and Germany fight out the Ruhr issue between themselves, the British government meanwhile avoiding any measures that might offend French susceptibilities.

Premier Poincare's refusal to negotiate with Chancellor Stresemann in return for the cessation of the passive resistance in the Ruhr has brought expressions of disappointment and dissatisfaction in official circles in Great Britain, where it is asserted that the French premier had given the German chancellor a definite pledge to open pourparers for a solution of the Ruhr enabroglio, once the passive resistance was abandoned.

Apparently the decisive developments in Germany have led to the formulation of new plan whereby the British government could take an active hand in solving the reparation dilemma. The opinion in official circles is that the visit to London of Great Britains overseas premiers has served only to convince those states men of the inherent difficulties and almost hopelessness of some of the problems confronting the home government.

The belief is expressed that in the end the imperial conference will produce nothing more than platitudinous expressions of support for the present policy of the parent cabinet. Even the much-discussd plan put forward by Premier Smuts of South Africa, from which the public at home and abroad apparently expected so much, is now believed in responsible quarter to possess a tangible, workable formula.

RHINELAND REPUBLIC PURELY LOCAL AFFAIR IN BERLIN'S OPINION

Public Buildings Seized and Provisional Government Posts Proclamations — In French Zone of Occupation.

LAUNCHED IN AIX.

AIX - LA - CHAPPELLE, Prussia, October 22 (Canadian Press). — A Rhineland Republic was proclaimed here yesterday.

Rhinelanders occupied the public buildings at four o'clock yesterday morning without opposition from the Security Police.

They purpose immediately to begin an extension of their control thoughout the Belgian area.

The city was calm yesterday, presenting its usual Sunday appearance.

The public buildings occupied by the Separatists displayed the colours of the Rhineland Republic—green, white and red.

Peace, Work, and Bread.

Two proclamations were placarded. The first of these said:

"To the people of the Rhineland:

"The hour of liberty has struck. Berlin has plunged us in distress and misery. We come to our own assistance.

"We proclaim to-day a Rhineland Republic, free and independent. We wish to live in peace and friendship with our neighbours, and to work in an effective manner with them for the reconstruction of Europe.

"Workers, every man to his post! Immediate care will be taken to assure peace, work, and bread.

"(Signed)

"The Provisional Government: Leo Deckers and Dr. Guthardt."

Will Crush Resistance.

The second proclamation read as follows:

"The Rhineland Republic is an accomplished fact. Any resistance will be crushed pitilessly. Pillagers and disturbers of public order will be punished with the severest of penalties.

"We shall apply all our care to the questions of food supply and work and will preserve order and peace."

This proclamation was signed in the same way as the first.

No other Separatist attempt has yet been reported from the other portions of the occupied territory. It is reported here that Dusseldorf is tranquil.

BERLIN'S OTHER TROUBLES.

BERLIN, October 22 (Canadian Press). — The proclamation of a Rhineland Republic at Aix-la-Chappelle is regarded in official circles in Berlin as a purely local affair, engineered by Separatists, with the support of the Franco-Belgian authorities.

It is considered as not likely to spread to other Rhineland and Ruhr towns.

The Cabinet met yesterday afternoon, but the question under discussion was primarily the Bavarian problem, of which some solution is considered urgent.

WILL NOT INTERFERE.

PARIS, October 22 (Canadian Press). — The proclamation of a Rhineland Republic in Aix-la-Chappelle has not changed the attitude of the French Government with regard to its policy of non-interference in the affairs of the Rhineland Separatists, according to information obtained in official circles here yesterday.

It was pointed out in these circles that the French Governmen was not directly interested in yesterday morning's coup d'etat, as Aix-la-Chappelle is in the Belgian zone of occupation.

It was added, however, that should cities situated in the territory occupied by the French follow the suit of the Aix-la-Chappelle Separatists, the French troops would maintain a policy of absolute neutrality, except in the case of lives or safety of the French troops and citizens or persons of other nationalities employed directly or indirectly by the occupation authorities or who are rendering services to them should be threatened.

Then General Degoutte, the French commander, would be instructed to take such measures as are necessary for their protection.

CARRIED KITCHEN UNDER HIS JACKET

Bulgarian Wanderer Had Groceries and Cooking Utensils Hanging From Collar Stud.

HAMILTON, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press). — Identified as a man who has been acting peculiarly in the neighborhood of Stony Creek and Red Hill, John Cress, Bulgarian, was arrested in that vicinity yesterday afternoon. The causes of his arrest are his eccentric mode of living and the unique efficiency with which he has mastered domestic and culinary emergencies. When arrested John was wearing two overcoats. The supposed hump on his back was nothing less than a goodly-sized iron saucepan, which John deftly carried by the loop of a string attached to the handle of the pan and to the stud button on the back of the neckband of his shirt. In other pockets John had yeast and flour. In one of the two baskets he carried was bread of almost malleable consistency. Pinned on the inside of one of John's coats was part of a side of bacon. In the other basket John carried a cup or two and a few sundries which every good housewife requires.

John said he worked for a farmer near Guelph until about one month ago, when he quit and received $10. He still had $8.70 upon him when arrested.

About 30,000,000 wooden boxes are required annually to pack the citrous fruit crops in Florida and California.

FAMILY MOTOR PARTY VICTIMS OF 'ROAD HOG'

Three Killed and Two Injured When Car Forced to Edge Topples Into Ditch.

GOING TO MOTHER'S.

WINDSOR, Ont. Oct. 21. — Three persons, a man, woman and child, were killed early to-day when an auto in which they were riding crashed over an embankment and turned up-side down on the Sans Sousi road near Belle River, two other occupants of the car being injured.

The dead:

Clarence A. Moeller, 42-year-old 9048 Bruss street, Detroit, Superintendent of Labor for the National Motor Company;

Mrs. Marjorie Appleton, 20 years old;

Fern Lucile Appleton 21 months-old, daughter of Mrs. Appleton.

The injured:

Mrs. Clarence Moeller, 39-years old possible internal injuries;

Harlan Appleton, 29 years old, arms paralyzed.

The accident occurred while the party, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Moeller and Appleton, his wife and infant daughter, were en route from Detroit to spent Sunday in Chatham at the home of Appleton's mother.

Blinded by Glare

According to the story told by Mrs. Moeller and Appleton, they were about a mile and a half out of Belle River on the road to London when Moeller who was driving, turned out to avoid a car coming in the opposite direction. Blinded by the glare of the lights of the approaching car, which was crowding him to the edge of the road he turned out too far and his car toppled over into the deep ditch along the road side.

Mrs. Moeller, after working for more than an hour, succeeded in extricating herself from beneath the wreck.

Watch the prettier teeth that come when you combat the film

Here is a test which has brought to millions a new conception of clean teeth. Wherever you look you see the results. Teeth glisten as they never did before.

If you don't know this method, you should find it out. You owe that to yourself.

Film is dingy

You feel on your teeth a viscous film. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it. So much of it clings and stays, becomes discolored, and then forms dingy coats. That is how teeth lose their beauty.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Under old methods, these film-caused troubles became almost universal.

So dental science sought and found two effective film combatants. One disintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods by many careful tests. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Now careful people of some 50 nations employ it, largely by dental advice.

Other new effects

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. Also its starch digestant. Those are Nature's agents for combating acid and starch deposits. Every use of Pepsodent gives them manifold power.

So this creation has brought to millions new beauty, new cleanliness, new protection.

It will delight

Pepsodent will bring to you a delightful revelation. The results are quick and apparent.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

Then you will realize why you and your family should ever use this method. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

THE HARD-WORKING PRINCE.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, after a brief "holiday" in Canada—a holiday which a good many individuals and a few newspapers did their best to spoil—is once more caught up in the toils of his official duties as heir to the throne.

There are few days off for the smiling Prince.

Arriving home on Friday, the cables announce that he is off to Edinburgh on Wednesday to unveil a memorial to the Royal Scots Fusiliers, and afterwards will start on a three days' tour of North Wales.

Official visits, one public function after another, addresses of welcome, crowds everywhere, day after day, week after week the Prince "carries on."

The wonder is that he is able to smile at all.

The Canadian people hope that his visit to Canada has been both enjoyable and beneficial, and that he will come back again soon, as Lord Renfrew or anything else he choses to call himself so long as he comes.

They realize the burden he is carrying, and next time perhaps will even more loyally than on this occasion respect the Prince's desire to travel incognito.

CANCEL THE CHARTERS.

The new race track in operation at Niagara Falls was not established because the people of that city or district wanted it—there would not be enough patronage from residents of the section to make it worth while operating a track.

It has been located where it is simply in the hope of attracting a horde of race track gamblers from across the line—men who have not opportunities enough at home to indulge in a flyer and who are expected to welcome the chance to gamble to their heart's content.

That another race track is necessary to encourage the breeding of high-class horses is the sheerest nonsense.

The promoters of the Niagara Falls track care nothing for horses except in as much as they afford an excuse for betting.

They would just as soon race sheep or cows so long as the betting machines could flourish.

The charter to the new organization should be cancelled, and if, as is stated, there are other charters of the same kind in existence the Dominion Government should see to it that they cannot be operated in Ontario, which has already more race tracks than are needed.

PROTECTING THE BANKS.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson's declaration that people who attempt to undermine the reputation of Canada's financial institutions will be dealt with by the authorities, will perhaps do no harm.

However, bank runs as a rule are not the result of a deliberate attempt on somebody's part to make trouble for or destroy the credit of any particular bank.

They usually start very innocently.

A foreigner is refused payment on a cheque after banking hours or because of some technicality or other, and he rushes to some of his fellow-countrymen with the news, convinced that the bank is about to fail.

They decide to withdraw their deposits, the rumor reaches other depositors who likewise resolve to secure their savings, and before anybody realizes what has happened there is a line of clients demanding their money, and the run is on.

In the light of the wreck of the Home Bank many people are ready to believe any rumour they hear, and while that frame of mind is in evidence the conditions are always ripe for trouble.

The banks have the solution in their own hands.

More effective use of advertising in telling the people the important details of their business would make bank runs very improbable, and would be more likely to protect the banks than the Premier's threats of punishment for those who spread malicious rumours.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

In its latest bulletin just received by the Examiner the Citizens' Research Institute asks some questions that bear directly upon the subject frequently referred to in these columns, the failure of the majority of citizens to realize their responsibility as such.

How much do you actually know about the government of your city?

What part do you actually take in the government of your city?

These are the institute's pertinent queries, and every citizen of Peterborough should regard them as directed straight at them.

For, as is pointed out by this particularly timely bulletin, the taxpayers and citizens of a community are the stockholders of the municipal corporation.

Whether they realize it or not—and they should realize it by the size of their tax bills—their liability is not limited to a definite amount of subscribed stock as in limited liability companies, nor to twice the amount of such stock as in banks.

The limit is the extent of their total taxable resources in the city.

They can avoid liability only by disposing of their property and leaving town, and even then when getting rid of their property they are indirectly affected as the sale value of property is naturally affected by the burden of taxation.

Under these circumstances and in view of present economic conditions, it is surely desirable that stockholders in municipal corporations, or, in other words, the taxpayers should make it their duty to see that public expenditures, capital and current are not such as to reduce the value of private assets.

The first step is for citizens to take an active and practical interest in municipal affairs and in the selection of their municipal government.

Only through such interest can there be any hope of a right-about-face movement in municipal methods.

ST. LAWRENCE NAVIGATION.

It is indicated by press despatches from London that Hon. George Graham made a protest at the Imperial Conference against the high rates charged by marine insurance men on Canadian ships and cargoes using the St. Lawrence route, says the Ottawa Journal. This insurance business is practically controlled in London, and Mr. Graham's protest may convey to some the idea that the British Government can do something in the matter. We do not see how it very well could, and we think Canada has the remedy in her own hands. Mr. Graham subgested this when he intimated that possibly the Canadian Government might take over that species of insurance business itself.

The Journal has been making this suggestion every now and then for many years past. We can see no sufficient reason why the Dominion Government should not try the experiment of offering insurance to ships and cargoes using the St. Lawrence route. The insurance proposition in that regard is very simple. Either the rates charged by the English insurance underwriters are too high or they are not. If they are too high, the Canadian Government could do a sufficiently safe business by charging less. If the rates are not too high, we in Canada ought not to be making a kick about them.

We think it would be quite good business for the Dominion Government to offer insurance by the St. Lawrence route at the same rates as are obtainable by ships and cargoes from Europe to New York. Even though the rate to New York is considerably lower than the rate by the St. Lawrence route, any loss by shipwreck to the Dominion Government over and above the receipts from insurance premiums could not at the worst be very great, while unquestionably a great incentive would be given to traffic via the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

IS WEST WORTH WHILE?

Mr. A. S. Bennett, a native of Eastern Canada, but who has lived in the West for the past twenty years, adopts the above query as the title of a book he has just published dealing with the "need for co-operative action by the East and the West in the interests of national progress." It is the aim of the author to shake the country out of its complacency; he paints a depressing picture of present conditions and roundly condemns the supineness of the authorities, suggesting certain measures for the amelioration of the position. Whether one believes or not in Mr. Bennett's remedies, there will be general agreement with him as to the necessity for a contented and prosperous West, and the need of a sympathetic understanding of its problems. Anyone who sets out to enlighten us about those problems does a national service, and for this reason Mr. Bennett's treatise is welcome.

The main argument underlying the book is that Canada's difficulties are to be solved, not so much by political action as by economic means. This being so, he is anxious to bring about closer co-operation between Eastern and Western interests—to establish "economic conferences," for the purpose of tackling in a practical manner and in harmonious co-operation the various problems affecting the common interests of both the East and West. Mr. Bennett has no faith in immigration promotion schemes, holding that the newcomers cannot be retained until such time as improvements are effected. He shows, from immigration statistics, that in the twenty years from 1901 to 1921 Canada received from all sources 3,577,311 immigrants, whereas the census figures show the increase in Canada's population during that period to be only 3,417,026—160,285 less than the number of immigrants coming in. Since 1921, he claims, the situation has grown even worse—"Western Canada lost a whole army of the very finest settlers that any land could have to the United States." But agricultural conditions in the Western States of America are by no means ideal, according to all reports, and it must be remembered, too, that there is a continual influx of United States farmers to the rich lands of the Canadian West. The migration across the international border is reciprocal, and not quite so one-sided as may appear from this pamphlet. However, the fact that Canada is losing so many of its immigrants is not one to be viewed with equanimity. Having got them here, we should certainly do everything possible to keep them in the country. Conditions must be made not only sufficiently attractive to invite them, but also to inspire in them a desire to make Canada their permanent home.

There is substance in Mr. Bennett's complaint that Canada is a sort of "hopper to feed the population and development demands of the United States." There is no doubt that the Dominion does serve as a back door entrance to many. But what constructive suggestions has Mr. Bennett to offer whereby this undesirable condition may be improved, and the grievances of the West removed? "The foremost agricultural needs are more branch line transportation facilities, cheaper freights, cheaper operating expenses and cheaper supplies." "Intelligent, energetic, co-operative methods" are relied upon rather than Legislative action, to bring about the needed reforms—co-operation in production, co-operation in distribution, co-operation in marketing. National prosperity depends upon the well-being of the West, and Canada's home market should be more assiduously cultivated; the West needs to understand the East, and the East needs a better understanding of the West. "The economic outlook of Canada is a thing of mutual concern. Despite what radicals and extremists generally may say, the agricultural interests of the West and the business interests of the country at large—East and West—are absolutely interdependent."—Hamilton Spectator.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 21.—(Dominion Live Stock Branch.)—Receipts, 539 cattle and calves, 40 hogs and 75 sheep and lambs.

Trading on the cattle market today was light in volume and prices were in line with yesterday's close. The general run of killing classes was in poor demand with prospects of a 25 cent drop by Monday.

The hog market opened with a weaker tone, packers bidding $8.00 for thick smooths, a decline of 25 cents from yesterday's close.

A few good killing lambs made $10.25 and handy weight sheep $6.50.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Oct. 21.—Trade in spot cash grain was quiet on Saturday with the tone of the market steady. A fair amount of business was done in flour. The millfeed market was fairly active and rolled oats were steady with a fair demand. All grades of eggs ruled steady. Total receipts for the season to date have been 37,137 cases more than in the same period last year. There was no important change in the butter situation. Total receipts from May 1 to date have been 141,032 packages less than in the corresponding period of 1922. A fair business was done in cheese. Total receipts from May first to date have been 99,819 boxes in excess of the same period of 1922.

MONTREAL, Oct. 21.— Trading in unlisted securties on the local stock Saturday was:

25 C I Alcohols 20 1-4.
130 Mont Tram Pow 18 1-2.
25 St. Maurice Power 58 1-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Wheat scored a modertae advance in price today, helped more or less by news that Canadian inland water freight regulations which United States vessel owners objected to had been modified. The market closed firm, 5-8 to 1c. net higher, with December 105 3-8 to 105 1-2 and May 110 3-8. Corn finished 1-8 and 1-4 to 5-8 lower. Oats unchanged to 1-8c. off, and provisions at two to 20c. advance.

Changes which were understood as enabling United States' vessels to co-operate in handling Canadian wheat on the great lakes tended to lift wheat prices here inasmuch as the effect would be to diminish likelihood of Canadian outlets to the east becoming clogged and heavily increased shipments south to the United States resulting despite the tariff barrier of thirty cents a bushel. Instead of an expected advance in vessel rates, charges on Canadian grain from Lake Superior to Buffalo dropped two cents to-day, and the Winnipeg wheat market was firmer as a consequence of buying on the part of shippers. Partly owing to the action of the Winnipeg market, millers were reported as buying wheat at Minneapolis and traders here who had been sellers made haste to take a reverse position.

Bullish sentiment here was somewhat encouraged also by reports that the movemen: of domestic spring wheat to country elevators and to the leading terminals was small as compared with a year ago, and that arrivals of winter wheat were also of modest proportions. In addition there was late gossip that important purchasing of flour had taken place at Minneapolis.

Favorable weather eased the corn market and oats as well.

Provisions were firmer in line with hog values.

PRINCE OF WALES KEPT HIS INCOGNITO TO END

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 20. — (Canadian Pres).—Prince of Wales, traveling as Lord Renfrew landed this afternoon from the liner Empress of France which arrived from Quebec. Prince, his skin bronzed by Canadian sunshine, looked to be in the best of health, he proceeded to London in an ordinary train compartment.

There was no official reception as royal traveller insisted on maintaining his incognitio as Lord Renfrew until his actual arrival at his London residence.

LEST WE FORGET!

Full many a blunder and wretched mistake
The wisest and wariest mortals may make;
But however prone to mistakes we may be,
There is one, at least, from which we shall be free.

'Tis the folly of feeling that we're young and hale still,
Even though we have passed the peak of life's hill;
For there always is some one who seems to just find
It their duty and pleasure us oft to remind.

Wheat and Chaff

These are days when the investing public are being called on to sift, as they have never sifted before, the wheat from the chaff in the market for mining shares.

If of weakness or weariness we should complain,
We soon will be soothed by this most cheering strain:
(But just what it does mean is far beyond me)
Well, you're not as young, dear, as you used to be!

Now, why do they take so much trouble to tell
Us something we all know, and know but too well;
It is one with the comfort that tortured Job's ears—
Well, you know, you are getting along now in years!

O, for some secure place, it matters not where,
Where one's age may be his own private affair,
And this sorry solace no one ever hears—
Well, you know, you are getting along in years!

PROMINENT MAN DEAD.

The Mortgage fell due— but John went to College

THOUGH John Thompson Junior had passed Senior Matriculation "exam," his heart was heavy. He had just heard that the mortgage fell due on his father's house in six weeks.

He went to his father and said, "Dad, I've decided to give up going to University. It's too much for you to carry both the expense of paying off the mortgage and paying my university bills."

Dad smiled. He was proud of his son's spirit, but he said, "When you were a baby, John, I insured your education, by taking out a $5,000 Child's Endowment policy with the North American Life Company. This tidy sum is now ready and your education is absolutely taken care of."

The look of gratitude on John's face was sufficient reward for his father—the latter glowed with pride in his own forethought.

If you have children whose future you feel you should safeguard, we strongly recommend this policy for you.

EARTHQUAKES KEEP THEIR SECRETS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (United Press).—Earthquakes, those mighty cataclysmic convulsions, one of which has just leveled the populous cities of Japan, have carefully guarded their secrets from human investigators and man, proud of his many conquests over Nature through mastery of her laws, still trembles in relative ignorance of their true nature, a survey of government scientific circles reveals.

Years of painstaking study have failed to produce a formula whereby their coming can be predicted, as can the disturbances of the atmosphere which produce our weather changes. There exist as a result of decades of scientific labor only a few theories, none of which has any majority support, and all of which are subjects of bitter controversy.

Yet, year after year, mountains are leveled, cities are razed, islands appear and disappear in mid-ocean, vast tidal waves sweep the oceans from earthquake centers, volcanoes break loose after sudden earth jars—and no scientist can say how or why.

A Little Victory

The sole point won by man in his battle with earth tremors is the ability to record their happenings from any point of the globe by means of the seismograph. With this instrument the tensity, duration, and approximate distance of a quake may be determined.

A few superficial facts about the occurrence of earthquakes have, however, been recorded, none of which mitigates the truth of the statement that little is known of their true nature.

The word "earthquake" itself tells the story. It is no more or less than a quaking of the earth, of a part of it. Insofar as man experiences it, it is the coming to the surface of waves in the earth.

Science has built certain hypotheses to account for the origin of these waves, but no man has ever seen an earthquake start and probably never will.

The most generally accepted hypotheses of the origin of quakes attribute their commencement to (1) breaks, (2) blows, and (3) explosions.

Like a Bending Stick

The break type of quake is probably the most common. It is believed that because of slow contraction of shrinking of the earth which may result from the cooling of the outer portion or because of pressure of silt deposited by the ocean, strains are set up below the surface like those in a bending stick.

A blow type of shock is probably less important. A blow might result from the caving-in of a great cavern deep in the bowels of the earth, or by the slipping of one mass of rock over another, with a collision at the end of the slide. Such blows often follow breaks, the two acting together to create one gigantic shock or two successive tremors.

Explosion earthquakes are to be attributed to the detonation of great quantities of gases far beneath the surface. Such convulsions are to be expected in active volcanic regions, if indeed such shocks occur. Even in the neighborhood of volcanoes, however, the majority of shocks are probably due to breaks in the rocks, scientists aver.

When any of these breaks, blows, or explosions occur, the resultant jar is communicated to the surface in waves, of two types, up-and-down and sidewise. They are sometimes accompanied by twisting waves. The combination of all these produce the strange sensation of "jiggling" experienced in all earthquakes.

The point on the surface immediately above the source of the earth jar receives the heaviest blow, from the up-and-down waves. Points surrounding this spot, called the epi-center, receive the shock in lessening intensities.

Produces Mountains

That the earth's crust is subjected to squeezing and pinching is evident from mountain ranges, which are the portion of the crust which is pinched up. If mountains were ever thrust up at all rapidly, the earthquake at the time must have been terrible.

Even now there are certain mountains that, though millions of years old, are still geologically young and are slowly rising. The mountains of Japan fall into this class and it is their "growing pains," so to speak, that cause the almost daily earth shocks in the Japanese islands. Now and then the strains accumulate over a considerable period and the break or slide and collision which finally occurs is violent enough to shake down hills, open wide cracks in the earth and destroy cities.

Scientists are constantly seeking to classify the regions of the earth for liability to earthquakes and some have laid out "earthquake belts." The most prominent of these is located along the Japanese coast south to Singapore and Java. Another runs from the west coast of North America to the southern tip of western South America.

How Seismograph Works

The seismograph, by which the occurrence of earthquakes is learned from a distance, is simply a chart, sensitive to movements of the earth and two needle-pointed steel markers held rigid by suspended weights which resist the earth tremors. As the earth shakes, ever so slightly, the chart is moved and the rigid markers write their story.

By means of a pantograph, the movements communicated to the chart are magnified 130 times. Even then the chart must be given microscopic study. A clock device times the exact moment of the disturbance.

By detailed knowledge of the velocity of travel of earthquake waves, the distance of the earth shock from the instrument is calculated. This is made simple by the double set of waves sent out by a shake. The two sets arrive at the instrument at different times. By computing the difference in the time of arrival, the distance of the center of the shock is determined.

CURRENT BUSHES

Amateurs will derive a great deal of pleasure in propagating their own currant bushes. This is done in the fall of the year at this time by making cuttings. Select the cuttings from the past season's growth, making them from 5 to 8 inches long. The wood should be healthy and ripened for propagating purposes. Make a square cut at the base of the cutting just below a bud, while the top end should be sloping to shed the rain. The cuttings may be handled over winter in two ways. They may be tied in bundles and placed upside down in sand in a cool cellar. The sand should be moist. By reversing the cuttings in the sand they callous better. Another way to handle cuttings is to plant them outside in well drained soil in the fall and leave until spring. The cuttings are set in rows placing a good two-thirds of the wood in the ground. After the first frost cover with a mulch to prevent heaving and damaging to the roots. Care should be taken in planting the cuttings that they are well firmed in the soil. This may be done by making an opening in the ground with a spade and setting the cuttings behind the spade, and firming the soil with the foot, forcing the earth tightly against the plant. When going to the trouble of propagating plants, always select the best varieties for the district. Vigor, quality and yield are the chief points to consider.

THE BLIND

"Do draw up the blind," she said;
Our little sick one.
"I'm tired of my aching head,
And I want the sun.
I'm tired of this same old room
With its shadowy gloom.
And really, it seems unkind
When the other side is so bright,
To keep down that hateful blind
And keep out the light."

So, just for a careful inch
We drew up the blind.
But we saw our little one flinch,
And her brow was lined.

"I'm wrong," she sobbed, "and you're right.
I can't bear the light."
"Lord, pull up the blind!" so we cry.
"Oh, pull up the blind!
Lift the veil from the great dark Why;
Let us look behind.
We are hungering just for a sight.
Please let in the light.
Ah, Lord, Thou art good and kind—
Do pull up the blind!"

Ah, me! But our earth-worn eyes
Would shrink from the blaze.
We are bound by the earthly ties
And the earthly ways.
Could the hidden How, and the Why
Of the heavenly sphere,
Be known by the mortal eye
Or the mortal ear?

Patience, poor soul, for a night,
Then, on the right day—
When at last you can bear the light—
In His own great way,
The Lord of the twilight kind
Will pull up the blind.

Brazil Plans Stringent Bill Restricting the Libities of the Press

By U. G. KEENER

RIO DE JANEIRO (By mail to United Press).—A stringent bill restricting liberties of the press has been passed by the Brazilian Senate and is now under discussion in the Chamber of Deputies, with possibilities favoring early approval of the bill by that house.

The press is nearly unanimous in opposing the project, which would take from it many liberties now enjoyed, but the lawmakers, with the support of the executive power, are on the point of sending the bill to the president of the republic to be signed and made law.

The elements opposing the proposed law thinks that it bears "an eminently political feature and is of a deeply partisan nature" and that free discussion of the project has been hampered since it was started during state of siege when constitutional rights are suspended.

Supporters of the law think that Brazil has been damaged considerably at home and abroad by publication of false or exaggerated news and articles relative to internal conditions of politics, economy, etc., and unwarranted, scathing attacks on members of the government and other prominent Brazilians in politics and finance.

A section of the press, which opposed the late government of Epitacio Pessoa is blamed for the seditious movement of July 5, 1922, which resulted in some eighteen or twenty lives lost and culminated in proclamation of state of siege in the Federal District and the State of Rio de Janeiro. Some think that recurrence of such situations would be prevented by a good press law.

Provides Jail Sentences

Among the most interesting clauses of the project for restraining freedom of the press is one stipulating that offenses against the president of the republic in the exercise of his functions or outside of them, or against the chief of any foreign state or the diplomatic representatives of foreign states in Brazil, when such offense is considered calumnious, is punishable with imprisonment of from three to nine months and fine of from 4,000 to 10,000 miles.

It is also proposed that writers for newspapers or any class of periodical, who uses pseudonyms shall be obliged to have their legal and assumed names legally registered in the district where the organs for which they write are published. An amendment to the bill approved by the senate has been presented in the Chamber of Deputies, which deprives foreign journalists of the right to direct political newspapers.

It appears that the senate bill, with several amendments by the chamber, is certain of enactment into law during the present session of congress.

UNITED STATES DEBTORS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(Canadian Press).—The world war foreign debt commission meeting today at the call of secretary of the Treasury Mellon, its chairman, took up the question of whether the tardy debtors of the United States shall again receive notification that proposals for settlement are desired.

FIXING STATUS OF UNMARRIED MOTHER

By DR. HELENE STOECKER

BERLIN (By mail to United Press).—For twenty years the German League for the Protection of Maternity has striven to improve the position of the unmarried mother with respect to her personal rights and her economic and social conditions. It has worked to protect unmarried mothers and their children from economic and moral dangers and to wipe out the prejudices prevailing against them.

The German constitution promises equal treatment to these unfortunates, but the struggle to translate the constitutional clauses into law has not yet attained its goal.

The aims of the League for the Protection of Maternity, which is affiliated with the International League for Protection of Maternity and Sexual Reform are as follows:

1. Compulsory insurance for mothers.
2. Abolition of legal discrimination against illegitimate children.
3. The reform of maternity in its economic, moral and legal aspects.
4. Abolition of contempt against illegitimate motherhood.
5. Universal respect for the importance of motherhood.

In June, 1918, a great congress was held to improve the legal position of illegitimate children. All welfare organizations, as well as government officials, were represented.

Demands of Congress

The congress demanded that the state and the large communities undertake the care of all illegitimate children. It was claimed that the illegitimate child should have the right to legally enforce acknowledgment of paternity from its father and the father's heirs.

The Norwegian law for children whose parents did not enter matrimony was passed in 1915. It gives the illegitimate child the right of its father's heritage and his name. The child can demand sustenance and education from its father, as well as from its mother. The child lives with its mother. If the mother dies or neglects the child, the guardian may entrust it to the father. The parent under whose care the child is living must maintain it as if it were legitimate; the other parent fulfills his duty by paying a part of the maintenance costs.

Paternity of the Child

The paternity of the child, according to the Norwegian law, must be discovered in every case, it being held that society, as well as the child, has a right to know the social position of both parents. If the courts do not venture to state the fact of paternity, but are convinced of relationship between the parents during the questioned time, the possible father will be held to pay.

But the progress in Germany has been slower. When, from time to time, it is reported that women officials of the posts or telegraphs, or a teacher, have been dismissed because of illegitimate maternity, we file protests against this unconstitutional action, but the ministry replies, quite as in olden times, that the dismissal was ordered for immoral conduct. But who would think of enforcing the same penalty for the illegitimate paternity of male officials?

Even the professional unions of women officials, in declarations of their attitude, have joined in the short-sighted policy of the government, without realizing that they do not serve true morality, but only hyprocisy. Recently, however, in a conference of the household budget of the Reichstag, an article was accepted which decidedly declares that illegitimate maternity of officials is not cause for dismissal. It will be seen, therefore, that our movement is making progress.

The department of justice has issued a decree that in official intercourse every unmarried mother is entitled to be addressed as "Frau."

TELLS OF RUMANIAN POST-WAR GROWTH

Came Out of the World Conflict Double in Size, Says Mr. Syllavotiano.

ON A FIRM FOUNDATION

Unaffected by Bolshevik or Other Neighboring Influences, Head of Commerce Chamber Declares

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Spyridon N. Syllavotiano, President of the Hallenique Chamber of Commerce at Galatz, Rumania, who has been in this country studying conditions, declares that if any country will not succumb to the influence of the Bolsheviki it will be Rumania, for that country has been near enough to Russia to suffer immediate results from Bolshevist activities. Although Rumania has prospered since the war and the products of the country have been good, the financial situation is worse than in many of the other countries, said Mr. Syllavotiano. Her geographic location makes commerce difficult, for she cannot trade with any of her neighbors, and the foreign countries are uncertain for her future because of this location.

"I am so anxious to convince the people in this country that the Rumanian Government is as solid as a rock and that she is not affected by the neighboring influences," said Mr. Syllavotiano, who is at the Hotel Pennsylvania. "Rumania has been since time immemorial the richest of the Balkan States, and has been always considered as one of the main factors of world commerce on account of her extended production and export of wheat, of grain of every variety, of gas, lumber, salt and many other products.

"Having intervened in the World War on the side of her natural great Allies, Rumania came out of this trouble double in size and with new adamants or productive wealth, fertile farming areas, and with increased industry, having already incorporated each annexed region such as Transylvania, Boucovina, Banat and Bessarabia.

Post-War Influences

"However, the post-war times that naturally grew out of the situation tended so that this great and rich country should face hard financial times. The first aim of the country has been to straighten out these financial difficulties. The Government bought the lei which had been distributed by Germany; the rubles in Bessarabia had to be bought and converted into lei. Each step has decreased the value of the lei, although it has made the condition of the country much more stable. Although the Rumanian lei is at this time lower than the Bulgarian lei or the Serbian, we have more wealth and it is only a matter of time before we will be on our feet.

"Today in Rumania we have entered the normal road of reorganization of the country; the straightening out of each financial matter will not be delayed. Of course, we look forward to the straightening out of the problem of the Ruhr, for we feel abroad that if this question were settled the entire European condition will change. We appreciate that the American people cannot have confidence in the future progress of Europe and the individual countries there until there is peace and a positive settlement of war-time problems; but the commercial, industrial and financial circles of America can look forward with safety and confidence to continue their relations with Rumania, which has always been one of the most important consumers and producers of industry and commerce in general.

"Nations constituted of a people like the Rumanians with national consciousness and a love of law and which have been undaunted from a productive point of view cannot but look forward into a broad and promising future with all the blessings of nature.

Bolsheviki Driven Away

"Rumania is certain never to become Bolshevist. With the breaking out of the Russian Revolution which brought the destruction of the great Empire, the Russian Army, which in the capacity of an Ally flooded the Rumanian country, tried to draw the Rumanian peasant soldiers who only lately had returned from the long war to find their homes shattered by the invading enemy. But the plundering spirit of the Bolsheviki did not attract the soul of the Rumanian peasant soldiers. On the contrary it challenged his just national indignation and they drove the Bolshevist army from the frontiers. Since that time the people have been strong against the Bolsheviki and wish only now to apply themselves to their lands and their homes.

"The solid sentiment for the country which now exists in Rumania, is due to the present Minister, G. Bratianou. Several years ago he influenced the Government to give the people lands and his attention has long been centred on the interests of the people.

"But not only are we forging ahead in agriculture. In addition to leading Central Europe in the production of grain, the production of oil is considerable. We are almost restored to our pre-war output, which was about 1,885,000 tons a year. This year has been the biggest for the production of grain in fifty years.

"It has been most gratifying to see the progress of this country. Three things have particularly impressed me: The telephone system, the mail service and the railroads. I do not mention among them the industry of the country, for that is acknowledged to be supreme."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

After sweet corn passes the milk stage it's too hard to serve on the cob but it can be cut off and used in a variety of ways. Longer cooking and careful seasoning is required to make palatable dishes.

As long as there are fresh vegetables quite a saving in the meat bill can be accomplished. If hearty dishes are desired a small amount of meat can be added.

Many af the late vegetables require working up into hearty dishes. Uncertain weather has made them rather imperfect. These blemishes are cut away and the remaining good part used.

Often when potatoes are dug the small ones are considered unworthy of storage. These should be used by the thrifty housewife early in the fall. The potatoes are immature and unripe, much like the early potatoes of summer.

These recipes are suggestions for the use of odds and ends of vegetables. They make nourishing dishes that are both cheap and appetising.

Nubbins of Corn

Five or six nubbins of corn, 2 or 3 ripe tomatoes, teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1-8 teaspoon paprika, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 or 5 pieces of hot buttered toast, 6 thin slices of bacon.

Score the middle of each row of kernels with a sharp knife. Cut a thin slice from the top and scrape out the heart. This leaves the hulls which have grown tough and hard. Scald and peel tomatoes. Cut in quarters. Put tomatoes and corn in a smooth sauce pan and stir until the boiling point is reached. If the corn absorbs the tomato juice add one more tomato Cook, stirring constantly, for 10 or 15 minutes. Add salt, sugar, paprika and butter and cook five minutes longer. Pour over toast arranged on a deep platter. Cover with bacon broiled until crisp and brown.

Scalloped Potatoes

Eight or ten small new potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 onion, 1 sweet green pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 cups milk, cup grated cheese, teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon paprika.

Parboil potatoes in slightly salted water for 10 minutes. Drain and put in a well buttered baking dish. Melt butter, add onion sliced and fry a golden brown. Sift in flour and stir until smooth. Add milk, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point but do not let boil. Add cheese and pepper cut in shreds. Pour over potatoes, season with salt and paprika and bake 30 minutes in a hot oven. Serve in the baking dish.

If you have used part of a head of cabbage in a salad and have the rest left try this scalloped cabbage recipe:

Scalloped Cabbage

Two and one-half cups finely shredded cabbage, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, teaspoon paprika, 1-8 teaspoon mustard, 1 cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 4 tablespoons buttered crumbs.

Mix and sift flour, salt, sugar, paprika and mustard. Mix thoroughly with cabbage. Add milk and mix well. Pour into a well buttered baking dish dot with bits of butter and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderately hot oven for 30 or 40 minutes.

MILLBROOK METHODISTS HAD GOOD ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY

Rev. S. W. Fallis, D.D., of Toronto, Was Special Preacher — A Splendid Musical Programme.

PRESBYTERIANS UNITE

MILLBROOK, Oct. 22.—The anniversary services of the Methodist church, Millbrook, were held on Sunday, October 21st good congregations gathering both morning and evening, the church being filled almost to capacity at night. Rev. S. W. Fallis D.D., of the Methodist Book Rooms, Toronto, was the preacher for the occasion and delivered eloquent and inspiring sermons which furnished a satisfying supply of mental and spiritual food for the minds and souls of his hearers. The choir selections in the morning included the anthem, "Jesus, Lover of my Soul" with obligato by Mrs. G. W. Sayles, and following the sermon a solo "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Mrs. Cawker, of Bowmanville, which was very much enjoyed.

Dr. Fallis read the book of Job for his Scripture lesson explaining that the first chapter presents an ideal picture of family and community life, with God's pride in a good man of whom He was so sure He even permitted Satan to attempt his downfall restraining him only from taking his life itself.

Before beginning his sermon Dr. Fallis gave a few facts regarding his position of "Book Steward" and explained that about one hundred years ago the publishing house in Toronto was started by a few Methodist preachers and that Dr. Egerton Ryerson, famous in church and civil life was the first editor in charge. Two and one-half million dollars worth of property is now held by the church in the Book Rooms, with from 300 to 500 employees, and a weekly pay-roll of from $10,000 to $15,000. One press alone printing in two colors is worth $60,000. There are but 30,000 subscribers to the "Guardian" and a total of 250,000 Methodist homes in Canada and the speaker urged greater loyalty to the church paper printed at an annual loss because of the lack of interest on the part of "our own people."

The text was chosen from Job. 15:11, "Are the consolations of God too small for thee?" Dr. Fallis stating that this is the most modern book in the Bible, not because recently written, but because it deals with problems present in every age and with which every individual soul has to do sooner or later. The story is dramatically told and presents the swifty-recuring suffering, disasters and troubles which befall good people, bringing the pertinent question, "Why?" Especially in the last ten years has this thought obtruded itself and one phase of the answer is suggested in the text.—the consolations of the Lord, is there anything better offered? Troubles are not any different to-day from those of former generations, war, calamity, unrest etc, but thanks to the press telegraph radio, we know more about what is happening the world over and any student of history is aware that, with all its turbulence, the world to-day is infinitely better than at any time in its long history.

There is always a comforter for anyone in trouble and Job had three of them representative of attempts to-day to solve the riddle of events, but as these three were all wrong in their philosophy of life so theory advanced which declares that adversity is an evidence of God's disfavor and prosperity of His approval, is radically false. Shall we be so short sighted as to measure God's love by the material gifts He bestows, taking no account of the eternity which surely follows Adversity is, at times a very serious evil but many a soul has gained a moral blessing out of the troubles and distresses of life which would have been lacking, to their spiritual impoverishment, had only prosperity attended their pathway. Stephen, Paul and many of the heroes of faith mentioned in the Bible, even Jesus Christ, Himself, would have been lacking in the favor of God if the philosophy of Job's friends were true.

God gave Job no explanation of the calamities which were permitted to come upon him, but He revealed Himself so that Job said, "Though He slay me yet will I trust Him," and nothing has ever been said that can supersede the gift of Christ as the Great Comforter. The sole place of comfort is to be perfectly sure of Him and the result will be a point of rest amid all life's perplexities.

In the evening Dr. Fallis gave a splendid discourse on the manner in which the church is fullfilling her threefold mission of preaching, teaching, and healing basing his sermon on the 9th chapter of Matthew, with particular reference to the 35th verse "and Jesus wen about all the cities and villages, teaching . . . . and preaching . . . . and healing." Mrs. Cawker again sang a solo, "The Golden City," to the enjoyment of the congregation the other musical numbers being an anthem, "O Lord, how excellent is Thy Name," and a male quartette "The Harbor Bar,' by Messrs. W. Coombs, G. Duncan F. Alcorn, and W. Tremaine.

The service in Grace Presbyterian church was withdrawn on Sunday evening out of compliment to the anniversary services in a sister church and many of the former's congregation worshipped with the Methodists for that occasion.

TALK ON INDIANS OF THE DOMINION

Charles Cook of Ottawa Holds Interest of Millbrook Audience—News Paragraphs.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 22.—The entertainment given in Grace Presbyterian church by Mr. Charles Cook, of the Indian Department, Ottawa, and soloist in Stewarton Presbyterian church of that city, drew a fair-sized audience who were well pleased with the programme presented. Mr. Cook not only possesses a fine bass voice and is a talented soloist, but has also considerable ability as a reader as well, his rendition of Pauline Johnston's "The Cattle Thief," and his clever pantomime of "A Bachelor Sewing on a Button," being heartily encored, as indeed were all his selections, vocal or spoken.

Mr. Cook's solos included, "The Trumpeter," "The Church Bell," "Gypsy Lads," "The Admiral's Broom," and a hymn, "In the Garden," sung in the Indian dialect. Local talent assisting with the programme were Mrs. G. S .Gervan, whose solo, "O, Danny Boy," brought repeated demands for an encore, and Miss Irene Henshaw, of Garden Hill, a young girl of promising talent, who gave a reading and one or two solos that were well received. Miss Gussie Clarry was the efficient accompanist for the evening, Mr. Cook expressing his pleasure in having one so capable. As a public singer he knew to his cost how much one can suffer from inefficient aid at the piano or organ, but his experience that evening had been agreeably to the contrary. A quartette, "Good Night," by Mr. and Mrs. H .W. Johnston, Mrs. Gervan and Mr. Cook brought an enjoyable programme to a close.

Talk on India.

By special request, Mr. Cook, who is of Indian birth and has been for years connected with the administration of Indian affairs at Ottawa, gave a brief talk on his native people, explaining a number of their customs, some of which he thought might well be adopted by the white people. The origin of several of our geogrpahical names, such as Ontario, Quebec, Ottawa, Canada, etc., is of Huron extraction, though when the original word was spoken by the speaker it bore little semblance to the one since evolved from it, according to the listener's point of view at least.

There are about 100,000 Indians left in Canada and these are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the speaker believed that the Indian Act, covering forty pages, which is intended to meet the needs and affairs of the different tribes from west to east, is sadly in need of change. $3,000,000 per year is expended for the support of the Indians in Canada and Mr. Cook stated that his personal experience showed it to be the means of pauperising his people, leading to laziness, lack of ambition, and otherwise having a pernicious influence. Instead of continuing to hold them as wards of the government he felt the better plan would be to give them the franchise and make them entirely self-supporting. Three thousand of our Indian population went overseas and served faithfully their King and country during the great war.

Some Indians in the Dominion yet live in wigwans, and by hunting and trapping, some are in professional life, some engaged in farming and industrial life, but the speaker urged that the government undertakes too much for them, "coddling them too much and squeezing energy and ambition out of them."

REPUBLICAN MOVEMENT SPREADS IN GERMANY

Believed in Berlin That Separate State Must be Immediately Proclaimed in Rhineland To Check Separatists.

MAYENCE, Germany, Oct. 22. — (Canadian Press)—Rhineland forces entered Mayence at 4.30 o'clock this morning, but met with resistance when they attempted to occupy the City Hall. Two Separatists were wounded in an exchange of shots.

The Governments of Reich and of Prussia are reported to have invited the leaders of the various Rhineland Separatist parties to meet their representatives in the Government Building at Cologne at 11 o'clock this morning to discuss the immediate establishment of a Rhineland State within Germany.

Berlin, it is said here, believes that such a State must be proclaimed immediately in order to stop the spread of the Separatist movement.

Joseph Matthes, Separatist leader, returned hurriedly to Duesseldorf from Wiesbaden this morning, when he learned that a Republic had been set up at Aix La Chapelle. He went immediately to Duern to establish headquarters with the intention of taking charge of the Republican movement and extending it through the Rhineland.

Separatists here doubt whether the Republican movement will succeed elsewhere as easily as it did at Aix.

CONFERENCE CHRISTIAN WORKERS AT MARMORA

Value of the Gospel and the Churches One of the Greatest Assets of the Country — Greater Missionary Endeavor Needed

Thoughtful Addresses.

MARMORA, October 20. — On Wednesday, Oct. 8th, the Christian Workers' Conference opened in the evening with the Rev. Swayne of Ivanhoe, in the chair.

He spoke of Jesus as the village teacher, and drew from that point the lesson of humility, and the lesson that after we have done some studying of the Bible we should in turn become teachers. The chapter also contained Christ's admonition to the disciples, "Take nothing for your journey, save a staff only, no scrip, no bread, no money in your purse." Mr. Swayne took from this verse of Scripture the lesson of Faith.

Mr. Fuller of Bancroft took the chair and called on the Rev. Barrett of Stirling to speak. Mr. Barret asked a series of questions and gave his own idea of how they should be answered. He asked his audience what they considered the most valuable thing in our land. We would perhaps say, our money, our homes, our inventions, but we have a gem within our reach which is so common that we forget its importance, and regard it as a common pebble. The most valuable thing we have is the gospel. What would our land be like if we burned our churches, dismissed the ministers, destroyed our Bible, etc.? People would move away, and the value of property would decrease.

If people would pay for the increase in the value of things on account of the gospel, the church would never have to beg.

Do we appreciate our Christian homes Where we have no Christian unity we have no word "home." In Latin the word "domus," meaning house, was the nearest they came to our ideas of home. Christianity has done so much to aid the position ow women. Do we all realize the nature of forgiven sin? What would be take to sell our hope of eternal life? There isn't enough money in the world to buy it from us, and yet we regard religion as a common pebble rather than as a valuable gem.

Do we realize the value of the privilege of prayer? There is nothing, not even world's to measure up to the value of this. After prayer we have consciousness of peace. This could not be purchased from us. What is all this worth? More than we can pay — then spiritually we are bankrupt? He gives all he has to his creditors. When we get a right conception of the value of religion we see that we can never pay for it, but we should say that God can take all we have to partially pay the debt. We need entire consecration—all must be given to Jesus. A big programme challenges a big effort. Thus the challenge comes to us for ourselves and our possessions. We must make sacrifices but hard tasks are always undertaken. We must do our part by either giving or going to the Christian work, but our young people are not going to fail to meet the challenge of Missions.

Choir of Ministers.

The music for the evening was led by a choir of ministers.

Rev. F. Langford gave the second address of the evening. He took the six departments of the Epworth League and spoke on each. First Christian Fellowship, 2nd Missionary, third Social and Literary, 4th Citizenship, 5th Intermediate, 6th Junior. He recommended textbooks for each department, but warned the leaguers against taking books or other sources of information and reading directly out of them at the meeting. The League will be a dying institution if this is done. "Put more of yourself into your work" was his advice.

In the missionary department work must be well done this year. We are going to have a most severe up-hill pull in the next few years' missionary campaign. We're having deficits in our general accounts for the last two years. We are facing church union and for a year or two will have to work harder than ever before, because some Presbyterian churches are opposed to union, and as a result will fall down on their missions. We must do better on missions next year.

For the citizenship department there is the question of temperance to be worked out. The first Sunday in November is the World's Temperance Sunday and we want to make it an opportunity to impress the question of temperance. There is a danger of having the question of temperance thrust on us again in Mantioba and Alberta, etc.

In conclusion Mr. Langford spoke of how young people are facing different problems than their fathers. They have more education, new inventions in science and machinery, e.g., automobiles, and so they have new power. They have more leisure time as a result of the new scientific inventions.

More Money Spent.

They have more money. This generation spends four or five times as much money as the last generation, People are spending the money whether they really have it or not. We must realize all these facts, but this leisure time, education and money must be used to the best advantage. These can be used to helpp us do big things, but they can also send young people to the bad very easily if used in the wrong way. This is a hard test for young people and so older people must remember that they have more temptation than those of a former generation.

For this reason we need Epworth Leagues. Young people need something majestic and divine to steady them. They will forget the problems and only remember the opportunities if they throw themselves wholly into the task.

Thursday morning Rev. Wight of Tweed, chairman of Madoc district, was chairman. Rev. J. M. Ogden of Flinton addressed the delegates on the subject, "How to have a revival on every circuit this year." He spoke of how the addresses of Wednesday had dealt with the activities of the Church. One of our main objects is to get our churches into action. The four-fold activity is a wise thing in our League.

Sunday School and League give young people a chance to work. What is the motive power of people who belong to a church? In some cases they join a church merely from tradition — because their fathers were members of the church. Others become members because the rest of their set or group are members of the same church.

However, instead, we want the dynamic of personal experience in religion to be our motive.

We must have such a passion in our hearts for the work that missions would develop in our hearts even though there were no missionaries or missions in the world.

Mr. Ogden's address was followed by a discussion of the subject, led by the Rev E. M. Cook, of Bancroft.

Arrangements for a district evangelistic campaign were made by the delegates following this discussion.

A district conference on Young People's Leagues and Sunday Schools was then led by the secretary, Rev. D. R. Clare.

During the lunch hour, Rev. E. M. Cook, of Bancroft, spoke on "Our United Church." He outlined the reasons for the union of the Protestant Churches. Mr. Cook then showed the obstacles which at present were delaying union, but the advantages of having a strong United Church would easily outbalance any difficulties.

At two in the afternoon some of the strangers were taken to Crow Lake and shown our summer resort On their return a large number of cars set out for Deloro Mines and Smelting Works. The managers of the mine were very kind in dividing the delegates into two groups and giving each a guide. The delegates were shown the whole plant, the managers of the different departments taking great pains to describe the operations going and to answer all questions. The delegates besides seeing something very interesting and helpful felt that they had had an enjoyable break in their sessions.

They returned to the church where a tea served to all for 25 cents was held. This was attended by many of the town people as well.

In the evening the music was provided by the local choir. Miss Riddle sang effectively a solo "Gather up the sunbeams and the choir gave a chorus. Rev. J. M. Whyte of Eldorado was the speaker of the evening. His subject was Missions and as Mr. Whyte is on the Methodist Board of Missions he gave much valuable information.

Growth of Missions

From statistics he quoted, Mr. Whyte showed how our Missions had grown since they were founded in Canada one hundred years ago. He spoke of our Indian Missions and on thing he spoke of was the fact that the Indian would never amount to anything until we gave him responsibility.

The Japanese disaster which came just fifty years after we had placed our first mission in Japan, has caused the Board of Missions to send out a special appeal for funds. Mr. Whyte spoke of our work thus and clearly showed how two years. It is necessary that wo do much better this year than last or our mission stations will suffer.

The convention was closed by the pastor of the entertaining church. All the delegates felt that the addresses heard the last few days had been of the highest type possible. Each speaker gave much help to the workers who attended.

UNIONS FORM ALLIANCE.

LONDON, Oct. 22. — (Canadian Press).—A defensive and offensive alliance has been signed between the Association of Locomotive Drivers and Firemen and the Amalgamated Engineering Unions. This step, embracing two important labor organizations, is a symptom of the recent movements among trades unions to link hands.

INCLUDE SUPPLY OF NUTS WINTER

When putting in your stock of foods.

When putting in the winter stock of foods why not include a supply of native nuts?

Nuts are a real food, furnishing protein and fuel calories at a comparatively low cost. They are a concentrated food and require some thought in combining with other foods to make a well-balanced meal.

Too often nuts are served with no thought of their food value and are added to a meal quite rich enough in proteins and fats. The ordinary nuts should take the place of meat, fish or eggs, providing the "piece de resistance," so to speak. If nuts are in the salad, keep in mind their food value while planning the rest of the meal. Don't repeat nuts two or three times in the same meal.

"Fletcherize" the nuts you eat and they will not cause indigestion.

Here are some suggestions as to how to use nuts to make the most or them.

Many an otherwise uninteresting dish is enlivened by the addition of a few nut meats. To this end it pays to keep some shelled nuts always on hand for emergencies. While you might hesitate to serve shredded cabbage to guests, a salad of this same shredded cabbage combined with apples and nuts is not only permissible but desirable.

This nut pudding is simple but so good. The woman on the farm with plenty of cream at her command will specially like this dessert.

Nut Pudding

One-half cup brown sugar, 2 tablespoons milk, ¼ teaspoon soda, 1 tablespoon warm water, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ¾ cup nut meats, ½ cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Add the 2 tablespoons milk to the brown sugar and melt over a slow fire. Stir in soda dissolved in warm water. Stir in milk and butter and add corn starch dissolved in a little milk. Stir and cook until thick and smooth. Add nuts when removing from the fire. Cool and serve with cream whipped and sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

This nut loaf should form the main part of a meal:

Nut Loaf

One and one-half cups coarsely chopped nut meats, 2 cups bread crumbs from soft part of loaf, ¼ cup rich milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon sweet herbs, 1 egg.

Mix nuts, crumbs and seasoning. Moisten with milk and add egg well beaten. Shape in a roll and bake half an hour, basting with 1 tablespoon butter melted in hot water. Serve with tomato or celery sauce.

Chestnuts and peanuts are not of the same food value as other nuts. Chestnuts are very starchy and should be used to replace starchy foods.

Peanuts belong to the legume family, but are very rich in fat. They are an excellent and cheap food.

CAUSED A COMMOTION

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 22.—The ordinarily complacent atmosphere of the City Hall and surroundings was rudely disturbed the other afternoon when a parrot, whose language proclaimed the bird to be of a ripe old age which had seen many harrowing experiences and probably, judging from the fluency of the oaths, some years at sea or as the mascot of a regiment, attracted the attention of some 60 or 70 citizens by his calls from the roof of a building on Queen Street.

The bird was calling out to the crowd below, using language seldom equalled in richness or variety by a seaman or regimental sergeant major. A number of times it turned its head toward the City Hall and cried "Boodler, boodler!" The bird was naturally unable to designate which of the city fathers it was thus maligning, but cries of "Hear, hear" were heard from the amused crowd.

TOURS OF ENGLAND DOMINION ATHLETES

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 22 (Canadian Press).—The United Kingdom will next year entertain another rugby football team from New Zealand, the Antipodean Dominion having come to an agreement with the Rugby Union, the body which controls the amateur fifteen-men game in the Old Country. Twenty-nine players will travel from New Zealand and the team will play in all twenty-five matches against teams of the British Isles. The tour will end not later than Dec. 31, 1924.

Tours of the United Kingdom by teams representing the Dominions began in 1901-2, when a Canadian fifteen made the trip and met with some measure of success. Canada thus initiated a form of Empire sport which has since been imitated by New Zealand, South Africa and Australia. The New Zealanders followed the Canadians in the season of 1905, their tour meeting with unprecedented success. In all their games the "All Blacks" were defeated only once, by Wales.

During the 1906 football year, the Antipodeans were followed by a South African fifteen, the "Springboks," and they duplicated the efforts of the "All Blacks." A remarkable commentary on Imperial relationship was found at that time in the fact that the "Springbok" team contained several players who, only five years before, had been in arms against the British during the Boer War, while one of their most brilliant men was a nephew of General Joubert.

An Australian team came next but since the Australians were professionals, their games were confined to the Northern Union, who have since returned the visit. Shortly after the first Australian tour, the Northern Union teams changed their form of play to that of the Australians, discarding the fifteen-man game and adopting the thirteen-man system of play.

SURPRISINGLY HIGH LEVEL IN ORATORY

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—One of the impressions gained from the Triennial meeting of the Canadian Women's Press Club at Vancouver was the surprisingly high level of oratory. A woman who had attended all kinds of women's conventions said that the press women spoke more fluently and convincingly than any other sex whom she had heard debating.

The press women were proud indeed of one member, Miss Charlotte Whitton, who electrified her audience at a Board of Trade luncheon, winning the tribute from Senator Crowe that he had "never heard a speech to equal it, from man or woman." She received an ovation at its close. "A human dynamo," someone called her. As she stood there with her tweed suit and felt hat, beginning her speech with a funny Scotch story, one scarcely saw the poet in her, but one thrilled to the patriot, as soon as she was "in full spate." An American woman present declared that she "shivered" in sympathy with the impassioned girl, who forgot herself in her great love for Canada and her pride in its people and their achievements.

Who is Charlotte Whitton? She may someday be in Parliament—she ought to be; she may someday be a well-known poet instead of a very modest one in her own esteem. She is versatile enough for anything.

The ex-corresponding secretary of the Canadian Women's Press Club is private secretary to Hon. Thos. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce. Miss Whitton has specialized in social service in all its phases during four years' connection with the Social Service Council of Canada and as editor of the Social Welfare Magazine. Her very latest achievement is the raising of a fund to build a large women's residence at Queen's University, Kingston, which is her Alma Mater.

Recognition by Canadian editors of the work being done by Canadian free-lance writers was a point stressed at the Convention; they have to face the economic situation created by American syndicates. The conclusion seemed to be greater effort by Canadian syndicates or writers to capture this field.

Women trained in schools of journalism and experienced in the field of journalism show a decided preference for the job of reporting on newspapers and serving as editorial assistants on magazines and trade journals, according to the results of a study made of the preferences of the registrants of the Women's National Journalistic Register, Chicago, a non-profit bureau which places women on the staffs of newspapers, trade journals, magazines and advertising agencies.

QUIZ CORNER

Q.—What are the chief features of Manitoba?

A.—Manitoba is the oldest and the most eastern of the Prairie Provinces of Canada. The first agricultural settlement was made under the leadership of Lord Selkirk in 1812 in the Red River Valley, near the site of Winnipeg, but Manitoba assumed little importance as an agricultural possibility until 1878, when the first railway entered her boundaries. Agriculture has been successfully practiced for more than 30 years. Manitoba, as originally created into a province, comprised only 13,500 square miles area. This has been in creased from time to time and is now 253,720 square miles, or about the same as Saskatchewan or Alberta.

CHARLEY OF THE MOVIES

(Maud Robinson Tombs, in the New York Tribune)

With the decree of death pronounced on Charley, the grand old elephant of the movies, condemned by the Humane Society of Los Angeles for being a menace to human life, many reminiscences of that temperamental animal come to the minds of those who saw him work in the films, in which he took a leading part.

Whenever you saw an elephant doing almost human screen work—no matter what the company and what name he was billed under—nine chances out of ten it was Charley, and that to one side of the director hidden where the camera would not reveal him, crouched "Curly" Stecker, his trainer. Charley was never rented without Stecker.

Only once was the experiment tried of a director taking him out on the lot without his master, and then a man who had safely fed Charley peanuts while Stecker stood by figured that the big elephant liked him and that it would be all right. But Charley chased that director three miles and the man's breath almost left his body before he was rescued.

"He was too bright!" mourns Curly Stecker, his one firm friend, who bought him from the Duke Lee Circus and trained him to nearly all his tricks.

Attacked His Trainer

Charley at 183 years old had sentence of death passed on him because he turned on the one friend he had, his master, whom he nearly killed. Three or four splintered ribs were the result and internal injuries that sent Stecker to the hospital, which he recently left, a shattered man. Even then he could not believe that his pet had turned against him. He insisted the elephant, which had lost the use of one eye, mistook him for his brother Carl, since he was wearing Carl's coat.

This is the way the near tragedy happened: Curly was working Charley. With him was his brother Carl.

"When Carl went to Canada," explains Stecker, "I lent him a suit of outdoor clothes. Two days after he returned he came over to watch me work Charley. He had on my suit. For the first time in my life I was working Charley without the rough clothes he knew so well. Charley knew me in those clothes. I had never before appeared before him 'dolled up' in a business suit.

"The whole thing began by Charley's picking up rocks and heaving them at the horses. I told him not to. He paid no attention. Finally, I jumped at him with a sharp command—and he did the rest.

Curly's Excuse

"I figure in that brief moment when I yelled the last time at him he decided that I was my brother and that my brother, standing forty feet away, attired in my clothes, was 'the master.' Fortunately I fell on a rough piece of concrete, and it prevented him from killing me instantly because he couldn't snap my spine, the way I was lying. I lay perfectly still."

Stecker, who had to be propped up day and night at an uncomfortable angle, in which he was in constant pain, wanted to forgive the animal but the Humane Society of Los Angeles thought otherwise. Curly might be attached to the big bull elephant, but the bungalow colony near Universal City, and, indeed, the town of Hollywood nearby, turned pale every time the shrill trumpetings of an angry elephant were heard.

THREE PAVILIONS CANADIAN GOODS

British Empire Exhibition Next Year Will Have a Canadian Representation.

LONDON, Oct. 22 (By Mail to Canadian Press).—Great activity is now associated with the construction of pavilions of the Overseas Dominions for the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley next year.

On the Canadian site it is definitely stated that all the exterior work will be finished by the end of October, and that work on the interior appointments will be well under way by the middle of November. Such rapid work is quite essential; for, when the exhibits begin to arrive, it is not intended that they shall be allowed to remain in waiting for an indefinite time pending arrangements for their reception and placement. Everything will be in readiness down to the last detail, and thus Canada's adoption of electrical aids and devices, and the installation of the most modern labor-saving machinery is well justified.

There will be three pavilions on Canada's site. The largest and central pavilion is that of the Canadian Government, in which will be housed exhibits and records of everything pertaining to Canada's horticultural, agricultural, industrial, sporting, mineral, historical, educational and social life. The size of this building is 415 x 280 x 75 feet.

To the west of this main structure will be a smaller, but harmonizing, pavilion erected by the Canadian National Railways, and having a frontage of 110 feet, with a depth of 90 feet. Here, in this artistic building, the vast resources of the C.N.R. will be arranged and displayed in an attractive manner, and models of the equipment, as well as samples of the products served by the National system, will afford visitors an idea of Canada's boundless enterprises and possibilities.

Included in this pavilion will be a cinematograph, operated by the C.N.R. depicting Canadian life and resources, associated with which will be a programme of lectures.

The third building, covering some six thousand square feet of floor space, is being erected by the Canadian Pacific Railway to the east of the main pavilion. It has a massive, simple entrance, two stories high, deeply recessed with painted and coffered ceiling, richly coloured doors and grilles of Canadian wood, approached by a broad flight of steps flanked on either side by a bronze moose and buffalo. This entrance is the centre of a facade enriched with decorated panels and columns. The strong colour scheme of this entrance is emphasized at night time by a unique lighting effect. On either side of the entrance, columns are grouped to form settings for decorative panels; similar features are provided on each return.

Above the ground floor is a hall capable of seating three hundred persons, where lectures will be delivered, illustrated with films as in the case of the Canadian National.

The interior decoration has been conceived as a rich background against which will be displayed exhibits showing the world-wide activities of the Canadian Pacific—rail, steamships, hotels, colonization, telegraphs, express services, etc.

MURDER CASE OPENS

Each of Two Suspects in Hervish Killing to Be Tried Separately

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 22.—When separate trials for Sylvester McGrath and John Flannery, charged with the murder of Christine Hervish of Wallington on Thanksgiving night, last year, were ordered in the Bergen County Supreme Court here Friday, the trial of McGrath was begun less than an hour after the special panel of fifty talesmen had been called.

The body of Christine Hervish was found near her home on Nov. 24, 1922. She had died from a broken neck, according to an autopsy, after a struggle with her assailants. McGrath was arrested in New York City as he stepped from a telephone booth, from which he had communicated with Jersey City police regarding the case.

Prosecutor Hart, in opening the trial, reviewed the finding of the body, the investigation, and the arrests, stating that he would ask for a verdict of first degree murder without recommendation for mercy.

B. Duncan McClaze testified to photographing the girl's body at the spot where it was found.

MRS. STOKES HEARS CHARGES REPEATED

Returns For Divorce Trial, Pleased With Trip to Missouri Town.

MORE NEGROES TESTIFY

Twi Witnesses Tell of Seeing Her at Home of Wallace—Contradictory Statements Made

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes returned to New York shortly after noon yesterday pleased with her trip to Bunceton and Boonville, Mo., where Isador Shapiro, her lawyer, took the depositions of fourteen persons. All of them, she said, scoffed at the allegations of two of Mr. Stokes's witnesses, Mrs. Alice S. Mills and Miss Katherine Kramer, formerly of Bunceton, that she had visited Edgar T. Wallace and his family in that Missouri town of 900 persons nineteen years ago.

Going directly to the courtroom where her husband's divorce suit is on trial, Mrs. Stokes heard several negro witnesses for Mr. Stokes made contradictory statements under the cross-examination of Samuel Untermyer, her trial counsel.

Joseph A. Thornton, a Cuban, former janitor of 13 East Thirty-fifth Street, said he had seen Mrs. Stokes about the house several times in the Summer of 1914.

"Even though it shall appear that she was in Kentucky that summer, and then went to Denver, where her child was born Sept. 11, will you say you saw Mrs. Stokes at that apartment?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"It looked very much like her," Thornton replied.

"But would you tell the jury it was the woman?"

"It looked very much like her; the features were the same," the witness said.

Previous Descriptions

At this point Mr. Untermyer questioned him sharply about his previous descriptions of the manner in which the woman came to the house. He changed his testimony frequently. Then, as his final question, Mr. Untermyer asked:

"Can you swear she was the woman?"

During the witness's few seconds of hesitancy Mr. Untermyer looked squarely at Max D. Steuer and Daniel F. Nugent, Mr. Stokes's lawyers. He kept his eyes fixed on them until Thornton replied, "No." In his redirect examination of the witness Mr. Steuer charged Mr. Untermyer with "turning around like a detective to see if any one was motioning."

Thornton changed his testimony when Mr. Steuer asked him if Mrs. Stokes was the woman visitor to the Wallace home.

"You didn't lie, did you, when you told the jury that the woman you saw at this trial, whom you saw at the first trial and later at the District Attorney's office, was the same one you saw at 13 East Thirty-fifth street?" Mr. Steuer asked.

"No, sir," shot back the witness.

"Is there any doubt in your mind?"

"No, sir."

"Then," asked Mr. Untermyer, under further questioning, "you want to withdraw your statement to me that Mrs. Stokes was not the woman?"

"Yes, sir."

Agricolz Byers, pantry maid in the tearoom in the basement of the Wallace house, testified under direct examination that during the fall of 1917 and early in 1918 she had seen Mrs. Stokes in bed in Wallace's home.

Hasn't Worked For Five Years

She was not worked in five years, she told Mr. Untermyer, during cross-examination. At one point, when Mr. Untermyer asked where certain letters were, she turned to Justice Mahoney and asked angrily: "Why should I tell him where I keep my letters?" The Court directed her to answer.

She could not recall how many times she had seen Mrs. Stokes in the apartment, but said it was a great many times. Asked if the woman was in bed or not, if she were standing or sitting, if her hair were up or down, if anybody else were there, the witness's reply to all was that she did not remember. When portions of her testimony at the first trial were read and discrepancies noted, she said the court records were wrong.

Anna McIntosh of 148 West 142d Street was the last witness called. She told Mr. Untermyer that since the last trial she had ironed some shirts for Mr. Stokes.

Between 1914 and 1917, the witness said on direct examination, she saw Mrs. Stokes three times. In May, 1914, she testified, she saw the defendant at the Wallace apartment. A large number of men and women were having breakfast, when Miss McIntosh, helping out in the kitchen, peeped through the dining room door "just to see Mrs. Stokes."

Two weeks later she saw Mrs. Stokes, she said, at the home of Ida Adams, an actress, at 130 East Thirty-eighth Street. Another woman, whose name she could not give, also was present. The witness took in a bottle of whisky and one of cvichy and some cigarettes, she testified. The next time she saw Mrs. Stokes, she said, was in 1917, when she was serving as domestic for Wallace. One day, either in January or February, she said, she saw Wallace and Mrs. Stokes standing in the bedroom.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22.—On the reserves of the Squamish Tribe an Indian woman of note has just died, aged 94. "Mrs. Chief Tom" was the daughter of the great Indian chief, the original Chief Capilano of the Capilano reserve, the first Indian to receive and escort Captain George Vancouver into Burrard Inlet on June 14, 1792. The dead woman was very proud of her fathers achievements, and spent all her means in erecting a headstone on his grave in the cemetery of the Indian reserve in North Vancouver.

WORDS DEFINED IN AGRICULTURE

Department at Washington Aims to Bring About Uniformity of Terms.

THRASH IS NOW THRESH

Score or More of Words Improperly Used Already Have Been Listed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—To bring about uniformity of words and terms used in agriculture, a list of twenty or more such words and terms conspicuous by their irregular use, has been prepared and definite spellings and definitions given by the Department of Agriculture at Washington. The list was adopted by the public printer at the recommendation of a Terminology Committee appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture and will go into immediate use.

While the Department through this committee has not attempted to dictate to those outside of the Department what should be the spellings and definitions of these terms and took this step only to establish uniformity in their use within the Department, it is in use within the Department, it is hoped that this lead will be followed elsewhere, since the lack of uniformity is evident not only in the Department but in State publications, farm papers, newspapers, magazines and in the dictionary.

In making the recommendation concerning the use of the words in this list, the Secretary said: "Agriculture is, as you will readily appreciate, a young and rapidly growing science, and as in the case of other sciences the terminology used undergoes processes of differentiation and refinement. In studying this problem the committee found that, as a usual thing, the leading agricultural magazines and periodicals were the first to adopt these changes, followed by the bulletins of the experiment stations and the Department of Agriculture and standard textbooks.

"The dictionaries record useage as they find it and, therefore, in rapidly growing sciences are behind the best usage in these matters. In some cases, apparently, the dictionaries have not had any one especially commissioned to look after the correction of their agricultural terminology. The Committee on Terminology hopes to be able to remedy this situation in future editions."

Terminology Consultations

In arriving at their recommendations the committee consulted agricultural publications of various kinds, including farm papers, bulletins, &c. It also sought the advice of leading agricultural scientists and educators of the country.

This first list on which final action has been taken includes: Brahman (Zebu), to be used in place of Brahma; purebred, to be used instead of pure bred; butterfat, to be used instead of butter-fat or butter fat; census; survey; count, estimate; thresh, to be used instead of thrash; sorghum; kafir, instead of kaffir or kafir corn; milo, instead of milo maize; broomcorn, instead of broom-corn or broom corn; sorgo, instead of cane sorghum, saccharine sorghum or sweet sorghum; potato, the official common name of Solanum tuberosum, to be used instead of white potato, round potato, or Irish potato; sweet potato, the official common name of Ipomoea batatas.

Some of the definitions decided upon by the committee on terminology should attract wide interest, particularly those of the words census, survey, count, estimate and forecast. The definitions of these terms follow:

Census—An official enumeration of persons, property, or things in a given area as of a stated time.

Survey—The gathering of facts relating to particular things in specific areas.

Count—An accurate enumeration of samples, selected to represent the whole.

Estimate—An expression of judgment regarding what is true at any given time as to value, amount, size, or character, based upon partial data, past relationships, calculation, appraisement and general knowledge of the subject under consideration.

Forecast—A statement of what may be expected to happen, based upon present conditions and observations interpreted in the light of previous experience.

Other Definitions

Definitions of the other words in the list are:

Brahman (Zebu)—Strictly speaking, white Zebu bulls, regarded as sacred by the adherents of the religion of Brahma. Proposed by the United States Department of Agriculture to be used as synonymous with Zebu (Bos indicus), the humped cattle of India.

Purebred—Bred from the best of purest blood; of a breed kept pure, for many generations.

Livestock—Domestic animals kept for farm purposes, especially marketable animals such as cattle, horses, hogs, sheep and goats.

Butterfat—A milk fat, the natural fat of cow's milk, chemically a mixture of nine or more glycerides.

Thresh—To beat out or separate, as seeds from straw, chaff or pods.

Sorghum—Botanically, plants of Holcus sorghum L., in the broad sense, and of H. halepensis L., including broomcorn, durra, kafir, milo, sorgo, Sudan grass, Johnson grass, &c.

Kafir—A group of semijuicy-stemmed sorghum varieties grown for grain and forage. Erroneously called "Kaffir or Kaffir corn."

Milo—A group of pithy-stemmed sorghum varieties, grown chiefly for grain. Erroneously called "milo maize." Compare durra and feterita.

Sorgo—A group of sweet juiced varieties grown for syrup and forage. Known also as sorghum, saccharine sorghum, syrup sorghum, and sweet sorghum, and erroneously as "cane" and "sugar cane."

Potato—The plant Solanum tuberosum or one of its esculen tubers, locally known as Irish, white, round or common potato.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS AVERT WAR SILESIA

OTTAWA, Oct 22 (By Canadian Press).—The recent statement made by Hon P C. Larkin High Commissioner for Canada in London that the action of the League of Nations with regard to Upper Silesia had averted war is corroborated by W Gleaves Doyle, European epresentative of the League of Nations Society in Canada in a communication to the headquarters of the society at Ottawa.

The Upper Silesian question, says Mr. Doyle one of first international importance and complicated as it was, proved a matter which the Supreme Council of the Allies was unable to solve. Before it was handed over to the League, he says, the question had created bad feeling between France and England and very nearly led to a rupture of the Entente.

By the treaty of Versailles part of the German province of Upper Silesia, which includes one of the richest industrial centres in Europe with valuable coa and iron fields, had to be ceded to Po and and it became necessary to fix a new boundary. This was done after a plebiscite had been taken, and the result on the map, writes Mr. Doyle, "looked like a case of measles."

Germans in the area numbered 716,000 against 471,000 Poles. Industrial and mining centres voted German, while country districts voted Polish. Thus the plebiscite rather tended to complicate matters, and meanwhile Polish insurrection broke out under Korfanty, a prominent Silesian Pole. French troops in occupation refused to act against the Poles, and the small number of Italian troops offered ineffectual resistance. Speaking in the French Chamber of Deputies in May, 1921, M. Briand said that the frontier proposed by the British and Italian commissioners would give Poland only 40 per cent. of the Polish population, leaving 60 per cent. to Germany; whilst only 11 per cent. of the German voters would become Polish.

At a meeting held in Paris the following August, says Mr. Doyle, it was evident that neither the commissioners nor the Allied Powers could reach an agreement on the question. It was suggested about this time (by Lloyd George, it is believed) that the question should be relegated to the Council of the League of Nations. The League took immediate action. A committee was formed of four members of the Council: a Belgian, a Brazilian, a Chinese, and a Spaniard, assisted by two economic experts, a Czech and a Swiss. Local feeling seemed to rapidly subside once the matter was thus in unbiassed hands, and ten days sufficed in which to agree upon a provisional boundary. The line left 200,000 Poles on the German side and 200,000 Germans on the Polish side. Germans and Poles were then called upon to appoint plenipotentiaries and a Swiss chairman, M. Calounder, ex-President of Switzerland, was joined to form the committee. They sat at Geneva for six months and also traversed Upper Silesia with a view to bringing about tolerable conditions. Sub-committees were appointed to work out local problems.

After much arduous work the members of the committee signed an agreement containing 606 clauses. The cost to the German and Polish nation of the settlement was $5,000 each, and to the League itself, less than maintaining the Allied troops in the area for one week.

In conclusion, Mr. Doyle says that it is not too much to assert that without the existence of the League the disagreements could never have been settled peaceably. The fact that the League constitutes a higher and impartial court made its rulings acceptable to each party concerned.

Interesting Thoughts of Interesting People

SIR PHILIP GIBBS, in World's Work: "I had a great time in the United States on each of my three trips, but, notwithstanding all I have said, I shall never make another lecture tour in that country. The fatigue of it demands the physique of an Arctic explorer combined with that of an African lion-tamer. Nightly I was roasted alive in sleeping-berths. Daily did my head swell to unsual proportions, not in conceit, but in a central heating system which is a terror to Englishmen. Visibly did I wither away as I traveled from city to city, received by deputations of leading citizens on arrival, after a sleep-disturbed night, with the duty ahead of keeping bright and intelligent through a long day's program, saying the right thing to the gracious ladies who entertained me at lunch, the bright thing to the City Club which entertained me at dinner, the true thing to all the questions asked about Europe, England, Lloyd George, Prohibition, Mrs. Asquith, the American flapper, Bolshevism, France, and the biological necessity of war, to business men, professors, journalists, poets, financiers, bishops, society leaders in Kansas City, or Grand Rapids, the President of the Mormon church, the organizers of my lecture that evening, and the unknown visitors who called on me at the hotel all through the day and every day. One can't keep that sort of thing up. It's wearing."

OTTO H. KAHN, financier, in the interview: "There is no such thing as an international banker' in America. You might as well speak of the 'International farmer,' because the farmer sells a certain percentage of this crops to Europe, or of the 'international merchant,' because he imports goods from Europe."

ISABEL LEWIS, in Science and Invention: "Stars, like human beings, have the social instinct. They travel through the universe in groups and clusters, streams and drifts."

DR. ERNEST R. GROVES, head of the socialgical department of Boston University, in the Boston Post: "There is nothing more morbid than the separation of the sexes. Wherever there is separation, you will find a morbid interest. Co-education is the most natural and sane way of education."

THORSTEIN VEBLEN, in The Freeman: "The great American game they say, is Poker. Just why Real Estate should not come in for honorable mention in that war is not to be explained offhand. . . . Even persons who are laymen on both heads will recognize the same family traits in both."

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—Miss Carrie Carmichael, President of the National Council of Women in Canada, will go to Geneva as a representative of Canada for the pending labor conference of the League of Nations. She is well informed and sympathetic with regard to factory legislation.

BRAID TRIMMING.

Openwork embroidery of cire braid is used as trimming on a brown duveiyn dress of the straight sack-like type that is so popular this fall.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Oct. 22.—The Tabernacle Methodist church at Belleville, of which Rev. H. B. Kenny, formerly of Cobourg and later of Campbellford, is pastor, has set itself an ambitious financial objective. It is to try to raise $4,600, and that Thanksgiving Sunday, Nov. 11th be the time for paying subscriptions. This church has a reputation of having responded liberally in the past when necessity called for it, and it is expected that they will achieve their result this time.

Rotary Campaign Now On

The Cobourg Rotary Club has started an attendance campaign, and in order to facilitate this the club has been divided into four teams, each one in charge of a captain, who is assisted by a lieutenant. The object is to stimulate attendance. The campaign is to last four weeks and the three losing teams are to put up a duck supper. Should each of the four teams show an attendance at meetings of one hundred per cent, the President, Dr. E. W. Hayden, is to put up the supper.

A Unique Contest

Miss Alford, a Peterborough lady, by the way, who is the community nurse here, is offering a prize to the child in the kindergarten and primary classes of the public school, who shows the most gain in weight between now and Christmas. It is stated that quite a large percentage of young children are underweight, and it is hoped that this may stimulate interest in this condition of affairs and tend to the physical development of the children.

Dead Carrier Pigeon

A dead carrier pigeon was found at the bottom of the smokestack at the Lakeport Canning factory situated near Colborne, when the engineer, Harry Gerow, was cleaning out the stack. It appeared to have been smothered in the smokestack. It bore the number A. J. 23F. 5187.

Happy Dances

Friday night the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association gave one of their characteristically pleasant and successful dances and euchres at the Armouries here. There was good music for dancing and many availed themselves of the privilege of attending.

Thursday night the Catholic Women's League and Knights of Columbus held an enjoyable euchre in the commodious Knights of Columbus hall, which was very much enjoyed.

Death of Mrs. Fitzhugh

The funeral took place Friday from her late home in Washington, D. C., to the Arlington National cemetery, of Mrs. Fitzhugh, widow of the late General Charles L. Fitzhugh, who predeceased his wife by just a month. General and Mrs. Fitzhugh were among the most highly regarded of American citizens who annually spend a part of the year here. It was their custom to come from their city home early in the spring to their palatial residence, "Ravensworth" on the lake front here, and remain until quite late in the autumn. On September 16, General Fitzhugh, who was a veteran of the American Civil War, where he gained high distinction, died at his home here after several weeks' illness. His remains were placed in a vault here until the family should return to Washington. On Oct. 8 Mrs. Fitzhugh, accompanied by her son, Mr. Carroll Fitzhugh, and his wife, left Cobourg to motor to Washington, arriving there on Wednesday of last week. Almost immediately afterwards she was taken ill and a Nurse, who had been with her much here left at once to help take care of her. On Wednesday morning word was received here that she too had passed away. It is a curious coincidence that her husband's funeral should take place there on October 12 and hers on Friday last.

Military Funeral for Col. Fitzhugh

The funeral of the late General Fitzhugh last Friday took place with full military honors, his remains being laid to rest in that "Westminster" of the United States, where the American nation's dead heroes are buried. Upon arrival of the remains at Washington the body was met by the militia and taken to the receiving vault on the Arlington National Cemetery. In the afternoon interment took place with military honors. The casket was mounted upon a gun carriage, which was draped with the United States flag. The cortege was composed of about one hundred officers and men, a firing squad of United States regular troops, and a band, the latter playing the solemn music of the Dead March. At the grave the regular service of the Anglican church was read, after which the firing squad fired a salute and the trumpeter sounded the "Last Post" over the grave of the deceased general. To-day there was another solemn service there, as the remains of Mrs. Fitzhugh were laid beside her husband.

Daughter of John Shoenberger

The passing of Mrs. Fitzhugh links the present with important happenings of the past in Cobourg and District. Her father, the late John Shoenberger, came to Cobourg from Pittsburg when she was a child, he being one of the capitalists and steelmen who promoted the building of the old Cobourg and Peterborough Railroad, and the promotion of what was then regarded as extensive mines in the Marmora district and northern part of Hastings County. This was a time when great things were hoped for Cobourg and the adjoining district and a time when the town of Cobourg initiated several important enterprises. The Arlington hotel, which has yearly since sheltered large numbers of tourist guests, was built soon after this and also the Cobourg Town Hall.

Successful Mission
Visited Ontario Hospital

Honorable Lincoln Goldie, Provincial Secretary and Honorable Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health and Labor, paid an official visit to the Ontario Hospital at Cobourg and are reported to have found everything in the best of condition, and to have expressed their satisfaction accordingly. Dr. P. McNaughton is the superintendent of the Ontario Hospital.

Supreme Court Sittings

The fall sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario are to open here on Monday, November 5, when some interesting cases are expected to come before Honorable Mr. Justice Kelly.

Married In Toronto

On Wednesday last the marriage took place at the home of the parents of the bride, Ferndale Ave., Toronto, of a former Cobourg boy, Capt. John Victor Sorsoleil, M.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sorsoleil, of Toronto, formerly of Cobourg, to Evelyn Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Howard. Rev. A. H. Brook officiated. The bride who was given away by her father, wore a becoming gown of navy blue and grey flat crepe, with French hat of grey. She carried ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Adeline Howard attended her sister as bridesmaid, wearing blue velvet and carrying pink roses. Mr. Bruce Honewell was best man. After the ceremony Capt. and Mrs. Sorsoleil left for a trip to Bermuda, before taking up residence in Toronto.

Mann—Langley

Mr. George St. Leonard Mann was married in Toronto to Miss Vera Langley of that place. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mann, Cobourg, formerly of Montreal, who have recently returned to Cobourg to make their home.

C. C. I. Will Hold Night Classes

For some years past the Cobourg Collegiate Institute has been holding night classes, which have proved very popular with the public and have been well attended. At a meeting of the Board held on Thursday evening it was decided to commence the night classes about Nov. 5. The following subjects, it is expected, will be taken up: Basketry, dressmaking, millinery, household science, typewriting, stenography, first year bookkeeping, business law, engineering, mechanical drawing, woodworking and card writing. Competent teachers will be in charge of the different departments of work.

Nothing Further Recovered

No further goods from the quantity stolen last week from P. McCallum & Sons store have been recovered up to the present time. The quantity of goods found by Mr. Geo. Jackson a couple of days after the robbery were valued at over $1,000. They were found in good condition amid some bushes on the west side of D'Arcy St., buried beneath some leaves. The end of a scarf that was sticking out gave the hiding place away. A search revealed another lot close by.

Death of Wm. Muirhead

Wm. Muirhead, who formerly resided at Baltimore where he grew to manhood, passed away at the hospital here on Friday. Over twenty-five years ago he went to Saskatchewan, where he resided for some time, returning later to this district. He was an affable, warm-hearted man, who was held in high regard by very many friends.

Pleasant Social Evening

Under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church here, a social evening with enjoyable programme was held in the church parlours last evening. The programme included the play "An Afternoon in a Chinese Hospital," which was greatly enjoyed. Dainty refreshments were served and the evening passed enjoyably. An offering was taken to assist in the work of the W. M. S.

Wants Another Storehouse

Mr. Hicks of Peterborough, has asked the Town Council to allow him to lease a strip of land adjacent to his present storehouse at the Cobourg wharf, in order to facilitate his handling larger quantities of coal. His request was referred to the Harbour Committee who are to report back to the Council. It is understood that Mr. Hicks intends to bring in boats with a large capacity, which makes additional storage room necessary.

Death of Mrs. Walker

Mrs. McCoughey, Vancouver, wife of Mr. S. H. McCoughey, formerly of Cobourg, has been bereaved by the death of her mother, Mrs. Hugh Walker of Port Hope. The funeral was held yesterday from the family residence at Port Hope to the Union cemetery. Mrs. Walker before her marriage was Miss Mary Willcock. Two years ago she and her husband celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Her husband, three daughters and a son survive.

Parents Bereaved

The death occurred on Friday at the family home near the Kingston Crossing, just east of Cobourg, of Edward Connelly, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Connelly, after a short illness. Mr. Connelly is an employee of Canadian National Railways. Three other children survive in the home. With Mr. and Mrs. Connelly much sympathy is felt.

Called to Millbrook

Mrs. John Purser of this town was called to Millbrook a few days ago because of the illness and death of her sister, Mrs. Adelaide K. Graham, widow of the late John Howard Graham. Interment took place at Bethany on Wednesday.

Apple Crop Is Good

The apple crop in this locality is turning out much better than was expected some few weeks ago. The fruit is also cleaner than was expected. The crop of Spies is heavy with size and color good. Starks, Baldwins, Kings and Greenings are also stated to be a good crop. McIntosh Reds are of excellent quality.

Bowling Season Still On

Some of the most enthusiastic of the Cobourg bowlers are still to be seen daily upon the green here. At the present time it is found necessary to keep a broom going to sweep the leaves away, but this only gives opportunity for additional exercise in the open.

The Treasury Enriched

The town treasury is stated to have been enriched by $100 through the appearance of three men in court charged with drunkenness, one day last week. Fines of $50, $25, $20 with costs in each case, were imposed. The joys of life certainly come high these days.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

KITTY-KAT KITTEN LEARNS TO HUNT

Kitty-Kat Kitten was a soft ball of fur. She looked like silk and felt like silk, all but her claws—and they looked and felt like sharp curved needles.

She was very proud of her claws, Kitty-Kat was, because she was just learning how to use them. Her mother, Missez Tabby, had showed her.

Besides, she had sat for hours and watched Thomas Mouser at work.

She had learned how to flatten herself out on the ground like he did, and crawl along on her tummy, without anybody seeing her.

And she had also learned how to climb half way up a tree without falling off. And she had learned to use her eyes, too! One minute they would be like large blue moons, and the next minute they would look like bits of green steel with slits in them, especially if she saw a bird or a mouse.

What she would have done with them had she caught either one, goodness only knows, because she was too little to eat anything but milk.

One day Nancy and Nick and Mister Dodger, the fairyman, were walking through Squealy-Moo Land to see if everybody was sax and sound, when they came across Kitty-Kat Kitten in a stubble field, crouching down between the rows of stiff, yellow stalks and looking like a little gray stone.

Mister Dodger pulled the Twins aside. "Watch!" he whispered. "She's after a field-mouse. And if you look over to the old hickory tree, you'll see Missez Owl watching, too!"

Just then Kitty-Kat Kitten began to move, crawling slowly on her stomach toward the old hickory tree.

Missez Owl sat there staring. She couldn't see very well in the day time, but her four babies weren't big enough yet to hunt for their own lunches and she had to catch their mice for them.

All at once she spied the tiny gray figure right under her.

"Aha!" she thought. "There's one now! An unusually large one. I'll have to be quick."

And she swooped down without a sound. In two seconds Kitty-Kat Kitten (for that's who it was) was being carried up to Missex Owl's nest.

"Miew! Miew!" she called in a tiny frightened voice. "Help!"

Mister Dodger and the Twins were about to climb up and rescue her when there was a flash and Missez Tabby streaked past.

She was up the tree before you could sneeze almost.

And then such a feather scattering and fur-flying as there was for a minute.

But Kitty-Kat Kitten was rescued and brought safely to the ground and the four owl children had no lunch after all.

The strangest part of the whole thing was, that after everything was over, Missez Tabby gave Kitty-Kat Kitten a sound box on the ear.

CLEVER.

In Hawaii the largest item of cost in growing sugar cane is cutting the weeds. A shrewd engineer figured out this system: He makes a thick asphalt-coated paper of cane stalks, spread it over the fields. Sugar cane sprouts, punctures the paper, goes on growing. Weeds can't get through the paper. They die.

"The anti-weed carpet is being hurried into use all over Hawaii," is the report. A big problem, its solution simple. As usual.

SEEING THEMSELVES

That men are as much addicted to looking at their reflections in store windows and mirrors as are women is revealed by observation for an hour at the corner of Hunter and George streets.

The passersby were roughly classified in four groups: Ladies under 18, over 18; men under 18, and over 18.

Fifty-two flappers out of 67 and 28 out of 41 of their elder sisters glanced at their reflections. There is a mirror placed in rear of a window near this corner and nine of the flappers paused for a more intensive inspection of their persons.

Of 43 men who passed the window, 33 were classified as over 18 and 21 of them looked in the window. Of the 10 young men who passed, 9 glanced at their reflected youthfulness.

Mirror Is Ancient

The mirror is the most ancient of all accessories, reflecting the vanity which means so much in daily life. The observations in this city show that here at least it has a universal attraction.

The origin of this apparently necessary adjunct to modern civilization is shrouded in the twilight of mythology. Glass was made by the Egyptians, yet the only mirrors that have come down from them are of metal, very highly polished, and often containing silver or gold.

Glass mirrors coated with tin were found in Italy, dating from the days of Pompey, but just when and where silver backed glass was first employed has never been definitely established.

Whatever its origin it is fully appreciated in public by every section of the community, and comparatively few people pass the opportunity to see themselves as others see them on the street.

HUNTERS ASSURED SUCCESS.

It means much to prospective hunters, whether travelling in a party or alone, to be put in direct touch with the best location for their particular choice of game, and with outfitters and guides at the going-in point, with whom satisfactory arrangements can be made beforehand. A hunting party canot be other than successful under these conditions. The Canadian Pacific Railway offers this service to anyone who contemplates a hunting trip anywhere, either in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, or in the Rockies, for mountain game. Any of its agents will gladly secure this information, or an inquiry addressed to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, will be given immediate attention. Folder "Open Seasons for Hunting in Canada, 1923," will be also forwarded.

KID COLE, IMPERSONATOR

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 22.—Julian Eltinge and all theatrical impersonators beware: You have a rival.

"Kid" Cole, serving a life term in the Nebraska penitentiary for killing an Omaha pawnbroker, recently came within an ace of walking out its doors as one of a group of country people who had just finished touring the institution.

He had dressed himself up in a woman's costume he had designed and made himself in odd moments out of bits of material he had stolen from the upholstery and chair shop in prison, where he worked.

Caught

Cole, in this disguise, had allowed himself to be escorted with the crowd through the larger part of the prison, by a bevy of "hardboiled" guards who never noticed he was not a woman. He had the ill-luck, as the crowd was being filtered out, to come under the eagle eye of Deputy Warden IKavanagh, who recognized him even under his paint and powder and in his feminine rig.

Prison officials give him credit for tremendous cleverness in the preparation of his woman's disguise. It was perfect in every detail, and in nine cases out of ten would have won him his way out.

He had perfected a good-looking hat of cardboard, wire and chair linings; made a wig out of the fine black hair used in the better upholstering jobs; swiped from the store-room of the prison theater a pair of women's black oxfords and, tinted them brown to go with the color scheme he had laid out fashioned a pair of women's stockings out of the sleeves of a discarded brown silk jersey; made a corset of blue satin chair backing and fitted with dozens of eyelets taken from army shoes on the junk pile; carried a brown handbag; made a neat-looking gown out of mercerized brown lining for chairs.

"Clever"

When and where he did the painstaking work necessary the prison officials do not know.

They say it was the cleverest effort in the history of the prison in the way of attempted escapes. Evidently the man had prepared the costume weeks in advance, and selected this date because during state fair week hundreds of country people take the opportunity to visit the state penitentiary. These are conducted through in groups of a hundred by detachments of guards. Cole dressed in a secluded corner, and as the procession passed him, joined it.

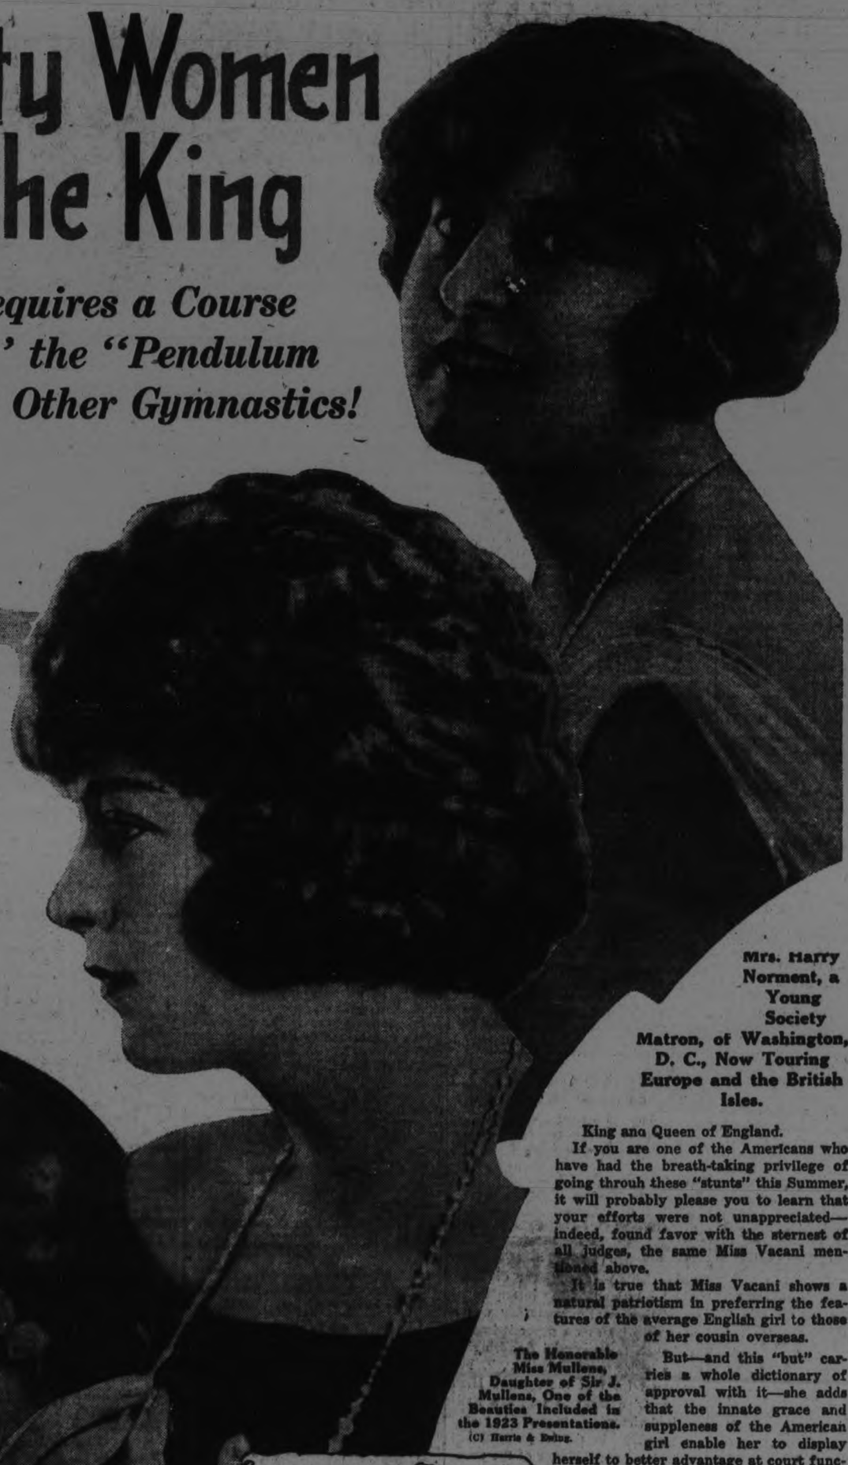
Strange Stunts for Society Women Training to Meet the King

Even a Curtsy Nowadays Requires a Course of "Book Balancing," the "Pendulum Leg Swing," and Other Gymnastics!

In fact, they go through enough exercises to enable the stoutest matron to reduce effectually. For fat's fiercest foe is a "daily dozen," or even a daily half-dozen, when the latter is as relentless and weirdly varied as that prescribed by Miss Vacani!



Mrs. Harry Norment, a Young Society Matron, of Washington, D. C., Now Touring Europe and the British Isles.

HOW would YOU like to—

1. Spend agonizing hours walking up and down in front of a mirror, with a ponderous book balanced on top of your weary head?

2. Spend more hours monotonously swinging your right leg forward and backward, like a human clock-pendulum, to learn to "walk regally?"

3. Repeat the same tedious performance, using the left leg instead of the (probably numb) right one?

4. Bring your legs to the floor (perhaps a hundred times), with the knees bent, in order to learn how to make a "soft curtsy," instead of the "stiff bow" abhorred by Royalty? Doesn't sound very alluring, does it? Nevertheless, these are just a few of the ordeals through which you would have to pass successfully, if you wanted to be presented at the English Court!

WHEN Helen of Troy (then a mere sub-deb) was presented at the court of King Menelaus, of Sparta, the chances are that she found the process simply charming—and charmingly simple.

Homer fails to tell us just what the formula was, but very likely all Helen did was to put on an extra veil or two (or remove a few, according to the humidity); breeze right into the throne room; canter up to the imperial dias, and utter a cordial "Hello, King!"

That was quite in keeping with the Trojan code of manners, which put more emphasis on "being yourself" than on phoney politeness, and on good looks than on good manners.

If Helen had minced up to Menelaus, and simpered at him, and dropped him a modern, formal curtsy, the King, who felt much more at home with a battleaxe than a tea-cup, probably would have regarded her with a dark and dismal suspicion, and would have failed to fall for her wiles.

And Helen would have gone back to Mother, weeping saltily into the folds of her peplum, and told Mother (in choicest Spartan) how Royalty had given her the gate.

Happy Menelaus! And thrice-happy Helen! What a dilemma they would find themselves in to-day, if they were forced to re-enact the scene of the court presentation under twentieth century rules and regulations!

Sparta, to be sure, was a wild and curious country, and many peculiar customs flourished there. But it is doubtful (historians of future days will no doubt say) if Sparta ever produced anything queerer than the current method of putting a lady in training for meeting a King!

Take the English court for a typical example. For there you find a luxurious growth of formal procedure which would have scared poor Helen of Troy out of her wits. Not only is the mere presentation itself an ordeal to sensitive nerves, but the hair-raising array of "stunts" which is considered a necessary preliminary——!

Though quite a few Americans nowadays are "received" by King George and Queen Mary, the details of these receptions remain more or less a mystery. So it may be well to give a slight outline both of the ceremony itself and of the rather freakish "course of sprouts" which, for the ladies concerned, precedes it.

In the first place, only "important citizens" of Great Britain—plus certain hand-picked foreigners, including, of course, Americans — are eligible for the honor. These citizens must have distinguished themselves in art, historical research work or scientific progress. The wives and daughters of these eminent men are likewise eligible.

In addition, a woman who does not bask in the reflected glow of her husband's achievements may be presented—but only in certain circumstances! In brief, she must have accomplished something "on her own" in art, science, or the advancement of world progress.

Just where the hair-line of eligibility divides the "possibles" from the "impossibles"—that is a question of the finest delicacy.

Americans bound for London and anxious to be presented always take with them letters of introduction to their Ambassador. These really constitute their credentials. They should be written by officials of this Government.

The list of names for presentation is limited—of course; otherwise, where would be the fun of the thing? And the rules are—rigorous! First comes the vital matter of dress. A few weeks before the royal reception, the Court Chamberlain posts the regulations for attire at Buckingham Palace.

That's fairly simple, you say to yourself. But you have overlooked the rehearsals in the joy of knowing that you will be correctly gowned. And what rehearsals they are!

If you doubt it, just consult Miss Marguerite Vacani, official dancing instructor at the English Court. Miss Vacani spends strenuous and patient hours, for days at a time, teaching English and American women the essential parts of Court etiquette in preparation for their presentations.

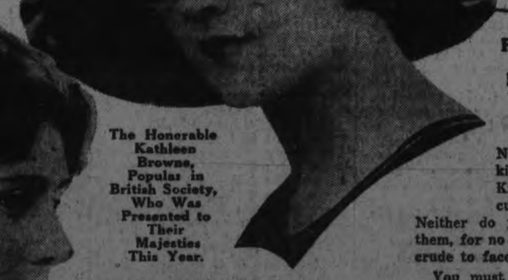
Miss Vacani is authority for the statement that the ladies whom she "trains" spend hours walking in front of mirrors, with heavy books balanced on top of their heads. They swing their right and left legs forward and backward, to learn to "walk regally."

They also swing their feet "in line with their shoulders," and bring the feet down to the floor "with the knees bent forward," in order to make a "soft curtsy," instead of a stiff bow, which is now regarded as bad form in England.

Miss Cynthia Duff-Ainslee, One of London's Recently Acclaimed Social Leaders, Presented This Year.

It is whispered that the "stunts" mentioned above are only "the half of it"—that not all the physical culture poses and poises have leaked out. If the walls of the room in which Miss Vacani puts her pupils through their paces should melt some day, say the gossips, amazing sights would meet the gaze of the astonished passerby. But, whatever these "stunts" may be, rest assured that they are considered necessary before a lady is ready to meet the King.

Miss Millicent Hawkins, Who Is One of the English Society Favorites Presented at Court This Season.



The Honorable Kathleen Browne, Popular in British Society, Who Was Presented to Their Majesties This Year.

The rest is fairly easy. You drive to the Palace at a specified hour; wearing specified clothes, and carrying the highly specified card of invitation. You enter the stately building and are shown to a room, where you wait, wait and WAIT! At last, you are admitted to the audience chamber, where you approach the receiving royal persons.

You walk forward with dignity, curtsy deeply, then turn and walk slowly back.

Practicing the "Soft Curtsy," Which London Prefers to the Stiff Bow of Olden Times.

Nowadays you do not kiss the hands of the King and Queen; this custom has "gone out." Neither do you back away from them, for no longer is it considered crude to face about as you depart.

You must not, however, fail to "speak when spoken to," precisely like a polite child. You say "Sir" to the King, and "Madam" (or even "Ma'am") to the Queen. If a matron, you wear your jewels. If a young, unmarried woman, you wear a light-tinted frock — NEVER jewels!

And, when the delightful agony of your presentation is over, you give a sigh, partly of penetrating pleasure — and partly of self-compassion at the thought of those harrowing hours you spent going through extraordinary "stunts" to meet King and Queen of England.

If you are one of the Americans who have had the breath-taking privilege of going throuh these "stunts" this Summer, it will probably please you to learn that your efforts were not unappreciated—indeed, found favor with the sternest of all judges, the same Miss Vacani mentioned above.

It is true that Miss Vacani shows a natural patriotism in preferring the features of the average English girl to those of her cousin overseas.

The Honorable Miss Mullens, Daughter of Sir J. Mullens, One of the Beauties Included in the 1923 Presentations.
(C) Harris & Ewing.

But—and this "but" carries a whole dictionary of approval with it—she adds that the innate grace and suppleness of the American girl enable her to display herself to better advantage at court functions than the British debutante.

Here are a few of the nice things which Miss Vacani recently found time to tell a correspondent, in the pauses of her instruction to a roomful of beauties, destined for speedy presentation at the Court:

"The United States need not be ashamed of its women who are being presented at Court. They always carry their honors graciously and with dignity.

"All of the Americans whom I have had the pleasure of training were exceedingly eager to learn, and to have details of the complicated procedure at the tips of their fingers.

"They were, indeed, more interested in the details than the English women who were my pupils at the same time."

The joy of receiving compliments like these might well compensate any woman for an eternity of book-balancing. At least that's what London says. And London is reputed to know a good deal about "what's what" in the art of delicate compliments!

ZEV FINISHED STRONG ON MUDDY TRACK SIX LENGTHS IN THE LEAD

Thrilling Race to the Last Quarter With American Horse About One Length Ahead--Margin Decisive

London Not Surprised.

BELMONT PARK, Race Course, New York, Oct. 21.—(Canadian Press). — Coming down the home stretch with a blinding, irresistible burst of speed, Zev, the Rancocas stable's great son of the Finn-Miss Kearney, scored a smashing thoroughbred victory for the United States, Saturday, conquering Papyrus, the English Derby winner, by the decisive margin of six lengths over the mile and a half Belmont Park course.

With Zev's sensational victory went $80,000 of the $100,000 purse for which the classic was fought and the crown of three-year-old champion of the world, at stake for the first time in one of the most colorful spectacles turf history has ever known.

A vast throng of sixty thousand, the largest in eastern track annals, gathered in expectation of a tense duel for thoroughbred laurels.

Over a track that was heavy and soggy from several days of rain, Zev answered pre-race fears that he was not in the best of condition by galloping to convincing, impressive victory over Papyrus. After a rather bad start Zev overtook his rival before the first quarter pole had been reached and thereafter was never headed, despite the game and gallant efforts of the English champion.

Test in Final Quarter.

Over the first mile and a quarter it was a thrilling race, Zev leading by practically a length over that distance, standing off the challenges of Papyrus and apparently running well within himself. Then came the real test, the final quarter, and Zev met it brilliantly, while Papyrus was found wanting.

Straightening out his mount for the finishing drive, Earl Sande gave Zev his head and the colt responded with a terrific burst of speed. Papyrus fell behind rapidly, apparently tired and "all out" under this withering pace, for Zev galloped under the wire full six lengths in the van, amid a thunderous ovation from the throng that had watched the struggle in pulse-gripping suspense.

Zev, always a noted "mud hoss," demonstrated he was completely at home in the heavy going, and tonight it seemed that the story of Papyrus' defeat lay in part at least to the fact that the Derby winner seemed unable to run at his best on the sloppy track.

The Derby winner was shod smoothly, while Zev wore both toe and heel caulks. This, it was said, accounted for the fact that Papyrus seemed to slip at the start, unable to gain firm footing.

Offered No Alibi.

"Papyrus was not at home in the going," declared Steve Donoghue, the great English jockey, who rode the invader, afterward, and this opinion was confirmed by Basil Jarvis, the colt's trainer, but neither put this forward as an alibi for defeat.

The time of the race, 2 minutes 35 2-5 seconds, was not remarkable, but it was good in the face of existing track conditions. The fractional times showed that Zev displayed his greatest speed over the first five furlongs of the race, but by comparison with Papyrus, the Rancocas colt seemed to travel swiftest in the final stages of the encounter. Zev, however, maintained a remarkably smooth, even pace over the whole route, always keeping enough in reserve to withstand the invader's challenges.

Before the horses went to the post Zev was the favorite in the betting circles at 4 to 5, with Papyrus quoted at even money.

Record Winnings.

Zev, by conquering Papyrus, placed himself at the top of the American list of winning horses of all time.

Previous to yesterday Zev had won a total of $174,936, which with the $80,000 he put into the Rancocas stable's coffers as his share of the international purse, brings his total winnings to $254,934. This eclipses by $5,471, in round figures, the winnings of Man o' War before this great Riddle colt, which held the previous American record, was retired to the stud.

Drank Toast to Zev.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Ben. Irish, the owner of Papyrus, took his defeat calmly, when he learned of Zev's victory over the Derby winner, but, with tears in his eyes, when his family sought to sympathize with him, he remarked: "Never mind."

Then he poured out a drink for himself and the newspapermen who interviewed him, asking them to drink a toast to Zev.

The news of Papyrus' defeat caused little surprise at Newmarket, the headquarters of English racing, where the race was looked on more as a speculation than as a sporting event, the view being entertained that Papyrus was only an average Derby winner, while Zev was acknowledged to be an exceptionally fast horse.

Sisler to Manage St. Louis Browns

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—George Sisler former first baseman of the St. Louis Americans, has been signed to manage the Browns, according to an announcement by Business Manager Bill Friel.

Sisler, who was prevented from playing last season because of the impairment of his vision, will assume charge of the teams either as playing or bench manager, this dependent upon the condition of his eyes, Friel states.

No details have as yet been written into the contract.

At present, Sisler has a four year playing contract with the club which he signed in 1921 and which still has another year to run.

Sir Edward Hulton, newspaper proprietor and noted horse owner, discussing the race, said he had always expected it would be a farce.

"No horse has any chance to be in condition or fit to race after he has been standing on his feet and unable to take exercise for a week," he said. "To expect on top of this that he can race under entirely new conditions and show any sort of form is impossible."

Not In Condition.

The man who trained Papyrus for all that colt's important races in England, Mr. Gilpin, still is firmly convinced that the son of Tracery was not right when he faced the barrier at Belmont Park Saturday. Papyrus, he thinks, could easily have beaten Zev, had he been in condition.

"I did not think Papyrus was right when he left England," said Mr. Gilpin today. "And with the additional handicap of the journey across seas and the hard dirt track, I expected the result would be what it was.

"It was unfortunate, but nevertheless interesting, that Papyrus was not right when he ran in the St. Leger, in which he was defeated. Had he been fit for Saturday's race, he easily could have beaten Zev.

"I am sure that nine out of ten of British Derby winners would beat any horse the Americans could put forward."

IRISH VICTORY WAS SURPRISE

English Team Looked the Stronger on Paper--Other Features of Soccer Games

LONDON, Oct. 21. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—The defeat of England by Ireland in the international association match yesterday was a great surprise as on paper it looked as though the powerful English side had a fairly comfortable task, but the good form of the spirited Irish side enabled them to snatch a well-merited victory.

The play in the league matches yesterday gave evidence of the evenness of the clubs. In all the competitions the results generally favored the home sides.

Arsenal's performance was an outstanding feature of the day, For their match at Bolton they dropped Turnbull, their centre forward, who undoubtedly saved them from relegation last season, yet Arsenal won without him and at Bolton of all places where the cupholders have of late shown great form. In going down before the Arsenals by a score of 2 to 1 Bolton Wanderers suffered their first home defeat this season.

The Cardiff City-Preston North-end match was a remarkable case of sides with very different records having an even game. Cardiff was the only unbeaten side in the league, while Preston was the only club that has not won a single match this season. Another unexpected result was Manchester City's win at Blackburn where the Rovers who have scored more goals than any other team in the premier division failed to score yesterday.

Curiously enough the majority of those teams who had prominent players engaged in the international match at Belfast did well in the absence of their stars though reverses might have been excusable. Liverpool for instance showed something like their old form. The champions scored four goals against Nottingham Forest though they were without their best forward, Chambers, who was playing on the international team.

Clapton Orient provided the surprise of the second division by soundly trouncing the league leaders, South Shields, whose victorious career was checked. Blackpool's swamping of Coventry was a remarkable performance.

CORNWALL DEFEATED.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Ottawa seconds defeated Cornwall here Saturday in a Quebec Rugby Union fixture by a score of 14 to 6. The teams are members of the Western Section of the O.R.F.U. and the defeat sends the Cornwall twelve to the bottom of the league, while the seconds retain third place.

JUNIOR RUGBY SHOW PROMISE IN FIRST GAME

Defeated the Lindsay Collegiates in Exhibition Match By 47 to 6—The Visitors Tried Hard.

MEET TIGERS NEXT.

Peterboro's Junior O.R.F.U. squad made their first appearance as a team on Saturday afternoon when they smothered Lindsay Collegiate Institute team in an exhibition game at Riverside Park by 47 points to 6. The homesters had the edge in weight and experience, especially on the back division and the splendid extension runs, and all round ability of the Peterboro rear guard enabled them to pile up a big score. The Lindsay youngsters never stopped trying and did some nice line plunging at times but their tackling was weak in the open field and they were unable to stop the ends runs of the Petes who repeatedly skirted their line for big gains.

The Petes shaped up as a very promising team and they should get the support of the public in their O.R.F.U. campaign. They have a trip to Hamilton before them to clash with the Junior Tigers and it is hoped the fans will show some interest in their attempt to put Peterboro on the O.R.F.U. map.

All the back division were good. Sheehy's speed and tacking ability; Mullholland's good kicking, passing and running; Browne's long runs through broken fields and Ward's aggressiveness and fleetness of foot all were big factors in the victory while Jack Turner starred at quarter, handling the plays well and doing some great running on his own account. The wing line lacks the experience of the rear guards but they are willing and will improve. Scotty McPherson of baseball and hockey fame is taking to football with a relish and he was always prominent on Saturday. Griffin did some great line plunging and Holland and Ashmore, and the rest of the crew were in there trying all the time.

Lindsay have a "green" team this year but they have some very promising material and deserve credit for the manner in which they stuck to their guns on Saturday. Percy the little half back is the star of the crew. He is a sure catch, a fast and tricky runner and in spite of his lack of build can hit the line hard. Hall did some fair kicking. On the wing line the big middle wing stood out. He plunged for good sized gains frequently, smashed over for Lindsay's only touchdown and although called on often was going strong at the finish.

Fast Scoring.

Peterboro jumped into the lead in the first mintue of play. A couple of extension runs carried the ball far into Lindsay territory and then Mulholland skirting the visitors' left wing passed neatly to Sheehy who scored a try which Mulholland failed to convert. Peterboro 5, Lindsay C. I. 0.

A fumble by Sheehy gave Lindsay Possession in the Petes' territory but a long pass and two bucks failed to gain yards and the Petes recovered on their own 40 yard line. On the next play Turner broke away for a long run passing to McPherson who was downed on Lindsay's twenty yard line. A couple of line plays gained for the Petes and then Griffin smashed through for a try which was neatly converted by Turner. Peterboro 11, Lindsay 0.

The Petes continued to press. An onside kick went round Lindsay's right end, passing to Turner who galloped 40 yards being downed five yards out. Quarter time found the ball a yard out from the Lindsay line and when the teams changed ends, a neatly place onside kick gave Sheehy a chance to score another try which he did not convert. Peterboro 16. Lindsay 0.

Extension runs carried the play rapidly back into Lindsay territory after the kick off following this try and Griffin plunging through the visitors line 30 yards out dodged through the secondary defence and scored another touchdown which was not converted. Peterboro 21, Lindsay 0.

Browne took the kick off and made a beautiful run for a 45 yard gain. Mulholland promptly kicked to the dead line for a point. Peterboro 22, Lindsay 0.

A long dash by Sheehy put the Lindsay line in danger again and Mulholland bucked over for another try which Sheehy converted. Peterboro 28, Lindsay 0.

Lindsay got their only points at this stage. The kick off went to McIntosh who made a forward pass when tackled and Lindsay were given possession at the Petes twenty-five yard line. The visitors promptly bucked their way for a try Logan plunging for ten yards on the final play and carrying the ball over. Bafour converted. Peterboro 28, Lindsay 6.

Just before half time the Petes added another point when Mulholland kicked over the line and Ward forced a rouge.

Second Half.

Lindsay showed a marked improvement in the third period. They devoted all their attention to line plunging and with Percy and Logan doing the bulk of the ball carrying they marched steadily down the field until a try seemed certain. However, the Petes defence stiffened in the shadow of their own goal posts and they finally recovered the ball when Lindsay failed to gain yards. The play was soon forced into Lindsay territory again by a long run by Mulholland and Sheehy and the Petes tried an on side kick which rolled to the dead line for a point. Peterboro 30, Lindsay 6.

Turners' 40 yard run in the next few minutes put the Petes in position to score again and Sheehy went round the end for a nice touchdown which Turner failed to convert. Peterboro 35, Lindsay 6.

The Petes were always on the aggressive in the last period. Early in the session Sheehy rounded Lindsay's left end for a good gain and at the goal line passed to Holland who carried the ball over. Peterboro 40, Lindsay 6.

Shorty after Mulholland kicked over the Lindsay line and following up his own kick forced a rouge. Peterboro 41, Lindsay 6.

The Petes did more kicking in this period, Mulholland and Ward doing some fine punting and the visitors were always on the defence. The last points of the day were scored on a fumbled punt behind the Lindsay line, Ward dropping the ball for a touchdown which Turner converted. Final score—Peterboro 47, Lindsay 6.

PRINCETON EASY FOR NOTRE DAME

Expected Happened in All the Eastern American Rugby Games.

NEW YORK, October 22 (Canadian Press). — A long established precedent was broken on Saturday when not a single upset developed in the long list of week-end eastern college gridiron engagements.

Noteworthy among the happenings of the day in football were Notre Dame's slaughtering of Princeton, 25 to 2; Cornell's one-sided win over Colgate 34 to 7; Harvard's difficult 6 to 0 victory over Holy Cross; Army's remarkable comeback, 28 to 6, against Auburn; Penn State's 21 to 3 swamping of the Navy; Dartmouth's 27 to 2 revenge upon Vermont; and West Virginia's high scoring display in rolling up 81 points on Marshall.

In the week-end gridiron contests in the south the only unexpected result was the defeat of Vanderbilt by Texas, 16 to 0. Auburn lost to the Army 28 to 6; Tennessee lost to Georgia, 17 to 0; the Mississippi Aggies won from Mississippi University 13 to 7; Centre defeated Oglethorpe 29 to 0; Alabama defeat Sewanee, 7 to 0; and Florida won from Rollins College, 28 to 0.

In the Missouri Valley contests, Kansas made a great showing against Nebraska, the game ending in a scoreless tie. Oklahoma overwhelmingly defeated Washington University 62 to 7. Iowa State and the Kansas Aggies tied their score 7 to 7.

Four western conference football teams emerged from Saturday's gridiron contests with their records unscathed, while two other teams which had been regarded as big Ten championship contenders were practically eliminated.

Results.

Wisconsin 52, Indiana 0.
Chicago 13, North-Western 0.
Illinois 9, Iowa 6.
Michigan 23, Ohio State 0.

Soldiers Took Mike to Ring

This shows Mike McTigue, the light heavyweight champion, as he came to the ring escorted by the Military, to do battle against Young Stribling, 18-year-old Macon school boy, at Columbus, Ga., last week. The champion claims that he was intimidated and fought against his wishes, having previously hurt his right hand. The bout had a turbulent finish with Harry Ertle, the champion's hand-picked referee, rendering three separate decisions—draw, win for Stribling, draw again.

CHICK EVANS LOST IN STOCK MARKET

Liabilities of the Famous Golfer Will Total $275,000

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The liabilities of Charles "Chick" Evans, Jr., who said he would file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in federal court here to-morrow, will total $275,000. His assets amount to about $50,000. The losses, Evans said, were due to speculation in the grain and stock markets.

Evans' major debts, as tabulated to-night by his attorneys, totalled $262,671.33. There are approximately $13,000 in numerous small obligations yet to be listed.

The announcement last night that Evans was broke was a revelation to golf fans but an answer, many said, as to why his game had fallen below the masterful ability of "Evans golf." He admitted his speculations not only lost him a fortune but also, due to the tremendous mental strain, detracted from his game.

In addition to this loss of $225,000, Evans, in less than two years, has lost another $160,000, making his total loss from speculation about $385,000.

NO DECISION IN MONTREAL GAME

Argos Converted Try in Last Five Minutes With Spectacular Rally.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Five minutes before the final whistle with the score 14 to 8 against them, the Argonaut rugby squad started one of the most spectacular rallies ever seen on a local gridiron and by dint of irresistible line plunging and the successful execution of an on-side kick scored a 14 to 11 tie in their game with the M.A.A.A. players at the Westmount gridiron Saturday afternoon. It was the second time this season that Argos have played a drawn game—as far as is known, a record performance in the interprovincial union—and a result the Double Blue still holds the top position in the Big Four race.

Five thousand M.A.A.A. supporters yelled encouragement to the Winged Wheel squad which in those last moments gave way under the determined rush of the heavy smashing Argo plungers, while the small coterie of followers of the champions went wild with delight as they saw what seemed defeat turn towards a drawn struggle. Six successive times the visitors gained on first downs, despite the fresh players sent in by Coach Nicholson to check the pilgrimage towards the local goal line and then 15 yards out they were held and were forced to kick.

Munro sent an on-side punt just to the north side of the western goal posts and Joe Stirrett leaped into the air as the ball came down gathering it in tightly and went to the ground with it. Dunc Munro had an easy chance to add the major point, which would tie the game.

He carefully studied the angle before attempting to convert and then sent a perfectly placed revolving ball square between the posts. In the meantime there was a general hubbub in the vicinity of the M.A.A.A. goal line where the local players were questioning the decision of Umpire Dave McCann, the Winged Wheelers claiming that Stirrett who was at middle wing when Munro made the on-side kick, was off-side on the play and the score should not count. To the claims of the local players and the crowd in the stands opposite the point where the kick had been sent away the official failed to yield, and the argument was dropped to be resumed with added vehemence in the dressing rooms after the final whistle.

WILLS MATCHED.

NEWARK, N.J., Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, has been matched to box Jack Thompson of Jopling, Mo., here on Nov. 5, it was announced last night by the National Sportsmen's Association. They will box 12 rounds, no decision.

VARSITY LOST IN CLOSE GAME

Queen's Machine Better Drilled and Backs Were Faultless.

VARSITY STADIUM, October 22. — Varsity was beaten 9 to 3 by the brilliant Queen's team here on Saturday, but they were far from disgraced. The Blue squad put up a stubborn defensive battle, and held the Tri-colour to 6 points in the first period.

In the second period they held them scoreless.

In the third period the best the Queen's could do was two rouges, and they added their ninth point on a rouge in the final period.

Varsity got their 3 points on a field goal from 35 yards out by Plaxton.

Queen's looked a better team all around than Varsity on the day's play, and most people thought that they should have won by a larger score. But they did not, and that is a source of great satisfaction to the beaten Toronto team.

The Batstone-Leadley combination was irresistable on Saturday. "Red" and "Pep" caught faultlessly, both kicked well, while their combination runs were lengthy, spectacular, and effective. Even at that, Queen's great superiority lay in the wing line play.

Their line was better drilled. Their interference was wonderfully well executed and gave Batstone and Leadley great chances to perform their stunts. When it came to line plunging the Queen's line players were far ahead of the best Varsity could offer.

Worked Like Machine.

Queen's had the best-looking plays too. They worked like clockwork all day. Individually, of course, Batstone and Leadley stood out, but that they could so dominate Queen's play was due to the protection their great line gave them.

Every man on the Queen's team is a star, and they made no mistakes.

Warren Snyder did the bulk of the work for Varsity, and he got great support from Pequegnat.

Trimble did not show at all well in running. Plaxton's was far from weak. Bartlett, Campbell, and Weaber contributed some good tackling.

Taking it on the whole, the general consensus of opinion is that on the play Varsity was lucky that the score was not twice as heavy on the Queen's side of the scoreboard.

Seventeen thousand people saw the game, and most of them went away with th idea that Queen's is about good enough for another Dominion title. They are finished workers.

ANOTHER VARSITY LOSS

HAMILTON, Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Hamilton Rowing Club continued its march to victory in the Senior O.R.F.U. Saturday by defeating University of Toronto in a one-sided game by a score of 9 to 2. The brand of football played could not be called good on the part of either team, though Rowing Club made the better showing. There was considerable fumbling by both back divisions which was costly, and kicks were blocked on both side, though the Rowing Club line was stronger and gave much better protection to their backs. Rowing Club did not play the brand of football that defeated the Parkdale Canoe Club a week ago, and will have to better Saturdays' play to keep the lead. About 1,500 saw the game, and the management was quite well pleased with the support in face of the Tiger-Ottawa struggle at the H.A.A.A. grounds.

SCOTS AND VETS IN DRAWN GAME

Over 400 People Witnessed City Soccer Championship on Saturday.

In favorable weather there would be well over four hundred spectators at the G. W. V. A. versus Thistle Soccer championship game on Saturday afternoon at the Nicholls Oval. Both teams had out their best line up, which resulted in one goal each.

THE GAME.

Dyer kicked off with the breeze slightly against his side, and the first flutter was caused when Monks travelled down the wing, centred into goal for Rae to make clever clearance. Even exchanges were the next order of play until Melville beat Hurle, then Blowers, and at opportune moment centred to Williams.

Williams Opened Scoring.

He trapped the ball quickly and landed it into the net within 15 minutes. Vets then attacked with vim and forced a corner kick off Anderson, for no better gain the Scots retaliating for a fruitless flag-kick. Dyer swung the ball out to Sharman, who was checked by Jackson. The half back placed the ball to Hutton on the right wing to evade Blowers. He lifted the ball across for Vets' goalie to tip it over the cross-bar for a fruitless corner.

A foul against Dawson caused the Scots some worry around their goal, which was cleared by Anderson. Burrows travelled into Scots' area, crossed to Bestard when well placed but he sent his parting shot skyhigh.

Scots' Goalie Injured.

Monks was the next marksman. Rae cleared, Wade returned to Chambers; Mackay scoring, then Hurle, sending in long drive, Scots' goalie clutched the ball as Vets' inside right man committed illegal tactics against him, and ball going into goal which was not counted. After some attention from trainer, he recovered.

The Scots besieged the Vets for three unproductive corner kicks, and one grand drive by Richmond was lacking a few inches of the mark. Two dashing raids by Sharman and Dyer did not bring any success. Following a free kick against Hurle Dawson worked his way close upon goal. Wade tackled but Dawson got the ball to finish poorly. Half time was announced after the goal kick. Thistles ; Vets 0.

HALF TIME.

A half that was barren of any tangible success should not require much description, as an occasional goal-scoring incident is the thing that whets the reader's interest. Although the wind was in favor of the Vets in this second moiety, they made the Scots' defence hustle, but a foul against Burrows relieved the pressure.

Wade's Beautiful Goal.

From a throw in, Hurle let Dyer lift the ball across to Wade. Without hesitation, he sent a 20 yard left-foot drive into the far corner of the net for the equalizer. Scots then attacked through Richmond and Hutton, the latter being adjudged offsides. A. Sharman raid ended in putting past. Mid-field play resulted in Melville giving away a free-kick. Wade shot the ball into goal; Dawson checked, then Monks was awarded a corner kick which made Mackay make a clever clearance when all Vets' forwards were upon him. Wade at half-back, had a better grip of Scots' forwards this half and was conspicuous by his clever play. McMillan of Thistles, playing likewise he shot the ball across to Hutton, who gave a startling display of quick tackling, beat Hurle, then Blowers, crossed to Richmond but his hard shot was stopped by Crowe, latter kicking clear. Dawson returned to Williams for inside left to finish poorly, when in good position. A nice piece of play by Chambers and Monks resulted in Mackay coming out of goal to kick clear.

Mackay Sound in Goal.

Wade shot back to Monks, the outside right lashed the ball across the field to Dyer, Anderson checked him but Vets' man got the best of the argument to compel Mackay to tip the ball round the upright for an unsuccessful corner. At the other end Burgess had hard lines with a shot which only brought a corner. Dawson and Richmond in turn had creditable attempts to find the "bull," the centre's being a fine try. Following a free kick against Richmond, the Vets' forwards went down in a heap around Scots' goal where a scrimmage ensued and finished with Dyer lifting over the bar. The last ten minutes' play was of a dilatory nature with both teams taking it for granted that it meant another game. The final whisle sounded a draw. Vets ; Thistle 1.

Goal scorers: Thistles, Williams; Vets, Wade.

Vets: Griffin, goal; Crowe and Blowers, full backs; Burrows, Wade and Hurle, half backs; Monks, Chambers, Dyer, Bestard and Sharman, forwards.

Thistle: MacKay, goal; Anderson and Rae, full backs; Jackson, McMillan and Dawson, half backs; Melville, Hutton, Richmond, Williams, and Burgess, forwards.

REACHED SPEED OF 122 MILES AN HOUR

Fengler of Kansas City Won National Motor Championship.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Harlan Fengler won the 250 mile national championship motor race on Kansas City speedway here yesterday afternoon.

He roared around the wooden bowl at an average of 113.2 miles and hour.

Jim R. Murphy was second and Eddie Hearne finished third. Jerry Wonderlich's mount crossed the finish line fourth, piloted by Harry Hartz, who drove the last fifty miles. Wonderlich was forced out by illness. Bennet Hill came in fifth.

Fengler, a home boy, drove Kansas City car and won $9,000 in prize money.

Fengler drove his own race from the first and worked his car for every bit of speed he could get out of it. Fourteen cars were entered and nine finished.

Cooper and Milton, team mates, shot into the lead in the first few laps with Murphy and several others pressing them hard. Crashing around the board oval at the rate of 122 miles per hour in the first ten laps the cars set a pace which early eliminated all but the speediest cars from the running.

Cooper was forced out early in the race with lubrication trouble and the lead remained with Milton until the 18th lap with Murphy pressing all the time. At the 18th lap Milton's lubrication system failed and Murphy shot into the lead only to be immediately passed by Fengler. The race gives Hearne leading contender for the national racing championship, 1,40 points for a season's total of 1,502. Murphy by finishing second, won 260 points and now has a total of 1,330 points.

BROCKVILLE LOSE TO NEW EDINBURGH

Free-For-All Fight Held Up Game For 15 Minutes.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.— (Candain Press)—Staging a remarkable finish, and overcoming an eleven point lead in the seocnd half here Saturday in a Quebec rugby union contest by 14 to 12. The game was a thrilling exhibition from start to finish, and the result leaves these two team tide for the leadership of the western section of the O.R.F.U.

The game was featured by the sensational running of McLean who performed at flying wing for the visitors. He scored the first touchdown after a sixty yard run, having recovered his own kick which dropped short. In the second period he scored another touchdown, running forty-five yards on a play around the end.

It looked as if he had another in the third period, but a trip spoiled his chances and he was knocked out in the fall. A free-for-all fight followed in which the spectators became embroiled, and the game was stopped for fifteen minutes while the field was cleared.

Brockville wilted badly in the third period and the Burgh's came with a vengeance to secure a forced rouge and then battered their way to two touch-downs and a single point in the final period. It was a fighting finish and the big crowd was in a tumult when the deciding score was made.

COLUMBIA CHOSEN FOR TRAWLER RACE

None of the Three U. S. Contestants Finished Test Race.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 22.—(Canadian Press)—The new schooner Columbia will represent the United States fishing fleet in the North Atlantic in the annual race for the international fishermen's cup to be run this month off Halifax, N.S. as a result of the elimination race off this port to decide upon a challenger. The Henry Ford of Gloucester, unsuccessful challenger of last year, and the Elizabeth Howard of New York after rounding the third mark in yesterday's contest left the course and made for Gloucester leaving the Columbia a winner by default.

None of the three contestants finished the race within the time limit of five and one half hours for the 31 mile course but the Columbia had gained such a commanding lead —amounting to 18 minutes—that the American race committee meet and voted to certify the Columbia as the United States challenger.

The Columbia will sail today for Halifax.

The new schooner, built this season and which never before had an opportunity of showing her mettle, ran away from her competitors, yesterday. In the 19 miles which the vessels were able to race in the time of five and one-half hours, the Columbia's time was nearly 19 minutes faster.

The weather was what had been known as the "Ford's chance", light airs. In the windward work, known to be the speciality of the Blue Nose, the Columbia made her greatest gains.

Golf Knows No Age Limit

TOP—MRS. RONALD BARLOW
BOTTOM—MAUREEN ORCUTT.

Not the least of the charms of golf is the standing invitation to players of all ages.

In the recent play for the women's national championship mere slips of girls battled on even terms with gray-haired elders.

One formidable player, an annual contender for the title, Mrs. Caleb Fox, in the 60s, and a grandmother of 10, was unable to play on account of a broken toe.

Youngest in the field was little Maureen Orcutt, a 16-year-old star of the east.

Oldest, with Mrs. Fox out, was Mrs. Ronald Barlow of Philadelphia a heroine of a score of major tournaments.

CHAPTER LXXII.

The Truth

Each sentence beat on Sheridan's ears as with a tap from a hammer. The force of the situation swept over him like the rush of a wave, and almost carried him off his feet.

"You damned scoundrel!" he flung at Nazlo.

The latter smiled. "That's just the expression I'd apply to you, if I hadn't got the whip hand of my temper, Mr. Sheridan. You're the villian of this piece! You take a young girl under age, just out of a convent, on board you yacht. You— —"

"In the devil's name, what are you talking about?" It came to Sheridan's mind that Nazlo was insane. But those words, "just out of a convent," struck him sharply. The convent that Juliet so often harped upon!

"Ah, this whole business—yours, not mine!—is in the devil's name'." the other caught him up. "I believe you can be arrested for kidnapping."

"Are you a madman?" the question came from Miles' bewilderment.

"No, I'm neither mad, nor bad," said Nazlo, keeping his coolness, and not changing colour, though Sheridan was pale with the grey-brown pallor of a darkly tanned face. "I want to marry Miss Desmond, who's travelling with you under the name of Juliet Divine."

He had Miles at a deadly disadvantage. He hit below the belt. Sheridan was half stunned. All desire to fight had died in him. There was something sinister to be found out, and he had to get at it.

"The lady you speak of is Miss Divine," he insisted. "And I'm going to marry her myself."

Nazlo laughed a short, ugly laugh. "I daresay you want to marry her. But you wouldn't if you didn't know what a different proposition she is from Juliet Divine, and you can't marry her, for the reason that your wife has given up the idea of divorce. I've seen Mrs. Sheridan, and discussed things with her, after an exchange of letters. I know what I'm talking about. You're bound. I'm free."

"If my wife won't divorce me, I— — there are other ways." The words spoke themselves.

"Don't be afraid," Nazlo said, "to speak before me. I've deduced the whole story of your trip, anyhow the part where your wife is concerned. Ostensibly you started with a companion to give Mrs. Sheridan a pretext for divorce. That would have been a fair game, if you'd had Juliet Divine or one of her sort, but taking this young girl—great heavens, I can't talk of it calmly! The one bit of good in the black business is this: you've put yourself beyond the pale. Your wife's flirtations—she swears they're no worse, and you can prove nothing—why, they're as grains of sand beside Mont Blanc, compared with your sin. If Mrs. Sheridan won't free you—and she won't—you can't free yourself."

"I wonder I don't kill you!" Miles said, with a sudden coolness. He felt frozen.

"You'd find it difficult, with two witnesses close by."

"It would be a pleasure to go to the chair for you," Sheridan heard himself say.

"I've got an automatic on me, I warn you," exclaimed Nazlo, with the first sign of nervousness. "But cut this drivel. We're not school boys. I repeat: I can marry Miss Desmond, if she'll have me—and I think she will when she knows what she's up against —whereas you can't. You'd ruin her. I can save her."

"Why do you persist in calling her Miss Desmond—as you did at Monte Carlo?" Sheridan asked, calm now, as he seemed to hear a faint echo of th name "Desmond," sounding far off in his mind.

"I call her that because it's her name, as you know well."

"I don't know. Because you tell me this, do you think— —"

"What I think is, that you're bluffing, Mr. Sheridan. I'd do the same in your place—if I could be in such a place! You can't have been deceived for long about the girl, even if she was planned off on you at first as the person you wanted for this job. Once you met her, you'd have seen— —"

"I never saw Miss Divine. to my knowledge, till after she came on board the yacht."

"Miss Divine never came on board your yacht. Why, I know this child—this convent child! I met Miss Desmond at her father's house. She's ten years younger than Juliet Divine, and innocent of the world as a kitten."

* * *

Scoundrel the man might be, but there was a ring of truth in his voice. A hundred memories rushed over Miles; the look of virginal youth about the girl which had struck him so incongruously at first; all her sweet ways of a child; her chatter of the nuns and the convent; her talk of religion that night of the storm; her seeming horror when he had insulted her with his rough kiss; Harky's bewilderment, and defence of the girl after a time of respectable stand-offishness; the old woman's belief that "the poor little thing hadn't a cent." And that indignant refusal of ten thousand dollars. All these ways of an ingenue which Phillips had warned him would be displayed to snare him.

Had he been a blind fool? But how could he have guessed?—Was it true? Could Phillips himself have been bamboozled? Wasn't this tirade an attempt at blackmail from Nazlo? Why should an innocent girl named Desmond have come for a yachting cruise alone with him, in the place of Juliet Divine? Desmond—Desmond! Had he some forgotten association with that name?

Bewildered, Sheridan asked himself these questions; yet the inner self that was his real self, and in the most intimate secrets of his soul knew suddenly and surely that the girl he loved was not Juliet Divine. He could have groaned aloud, shamed by past thoughts of her, past deeds towards her. It atoned not at all that in spite of reason he'd asked her to marry him, for had he not done it as a high favour, from a knight to a beggar-maid, admiring his own chivalry? How could she have forgiven and loved him?——

He ought to have guessed, in spite of Phillips warnings. He ought to have known. It was horrible to have truth thrown at him, like a bone to a dog, by Nazlo. His spirit rushed back through the golden silence of the desert, and flung itself at the girl's feet.

CELEBRATED HIS

one occasion, being surrounded by an assemblage of his courtiers and admirers, was asked what he considered the happiest day of his career, and his simple reply was, "The day upon which I made my first communion."

We venture to conjecture, if the same question were propounded to you, Reverend Father, you would unhesitatingly answer that such an event for you was the memorable day of your ordination in the year 1898, when you renounced the things of this material world to become a servant of God in the church militant.

How earnestly you have fulfilled this sacred mission in the different parishes assigned to your care, but especially in this parish of the Sacred Heart, speaks volumes for the zeal, faithfulness and devotion you have displayed in the exercise of your blessed vocation.

It is in commemoration of this event that we are assembled this morning to tender you, Reverend Father, our sincerest congratulations upon the attainment of your twenty-fifth year in the holy priesthood, to request you to accept this small token of our loyalty and esteem, and to humbly implore our dear Lord and His Blessed Mother to grant you the grance of a long and fruitful life in the service of God, that when the term of your stewardship shall have expired your reward will be all the more meritorious.

Signed on behalf of the parishioners: P. Milloy, Fred Guerin, P. Garvey, E. Laplante, John Grady, L. D. Letellier, Jos. Fitzgerald, M. Y. Crowley, J. O'Connor, C. Giardino.

Father O'Brien's Reply.

"My dear brethren, I am so completely overwhelmed by your evidences of love and loyalty that I can't find words to express the feelings that fill my heart to-day," Father O'Brien said in reply.

"I thank you for the beautiful sentiments expressed in your address —I thank you for your present, regardless of whether it is great or small. As Monsignor O'Donnell so well said, your gift of gold or silver cannot compare with the love of your hearts, only in so far as it is an expression of your love and loyalty to the priests whom the authority of the Catholic Church has placed here to guide the destinies of your spiritual life, and as a pilot to guide you safely into the harbor of eternal bliss."

Father O'Brien thanked his former college chum and fellow seminarian Monsignor O'Donnell for taking the time from his important duties to be present and preach the sermon of this anniversary. Father O'Brien also conveyed his gratitude to the choir for their special music, and complimented them with the remark "Am the risk of talking in church I had to turn to the Deacon and say, "Isn't that magnificent music?"

Segement of the Regent Theatre, ac-

"I ask myself after twenty-five years in the holy priesthood, how did I ever come to the altar of God? It was simply a mystery of God's goodness; and above all I wish to thank Almighty God for the mystery of His power and grace which He has manifested in my case. He led me by the hand. I was a poor boy. I had no means of my own in the world, but God had given me a great yearning, 'Oh, if only one day I could stand at God's altar.' But that was not for me, I thought. I could only admire those who had that privilege.

"However God gave me good, self-sacrificing parents. My dear father, whom I hope is looking down on us to-day, worked his life out for me. I had a chance of thanking him on his death bed. I was there to give him absolution, and I blessed him as a son and a priest. My dear mother is with me to-day. I owe so much to her. I shall never be able to make return for all that she has done for me. I ask God to give her the reward I canot give, and if there is a place in heaven for priests' mothers (as I believe there is) I pray that she will be associated with them before the throne of God.

"I owe so much to dear Monsignor Casey. When I was a boy of nine he spent his evenings teaching me the Latin to serve mass. I used to kneel before the altar and say—'Oh, God, give me the grace to be a priest like Father Casey.'

"Bishop O'Conor was like a father to me, and at last accepted me for ministry in his diocese. Also I am indebted to Bishop Scollard under whom I spent six years in New Ontario as a young priest, and who on this occasion wrote me a beautiful letter; to our good Bishop, who had the confidence in me to make me pastor of the church that was his first love, his first, and only, parish."

So I ask myself why have I received all these favors and I cannot understand it. What can I ever give to God for all these things He has given me. Have I made use of all the favors God has given me directly Himself and through the assistance of friends. Will I ever be able to repay all them? Has one soul been lost during those twenty-five years through my fault? I nope not I am not conscious of one.

I have received nothing but kindness from the people of this parish You have built well on the foundation laid here by Bishop O'Brien. Your unity among yourselves, your spirit of loyalty and your respect for the authority of the Church, have made a success of this parish. Anything I have done was simply because I worked with you. But let us say with the Psalmist "Not to us Lord, not to us, but to Thy name be the glory." I thank the priests who have labored with me so faithfully and well. May God give us the grace and the strength to serve Him faithfully as long as He leaves the work in our hands and in His own good day may He find us worthy to be admitted to His kingdom there to glorify him for ever."

Filled in the Evening

Last evening, the church was filled with a large congregation of people, gathered once more to do honor to their beloved pastor. Rev. J. McAuley of Ennismore was the speaker of the evening preaching an eloquent sermon on the priesthood, outlining its duties and powers and responsibilities.

"The world looks only to the natural and attaches little importance to the power of the priesthood, but we know that the Christian priesthood is superior in its powers," said the reverend speaker, going on to explain the call to the priesthood which comes to the young man and the preparation which precedes his ordination. "The sacrifice of Calgary was the crowning act of Our Lord's life and the sacrifice of the Mass is the most august act that the priest can perform. Only those who are called by God and fitted and prepared for years, only the innocent of hand and clean of heart are worthy of its consummation."

The reverend speaker reminded his audience of the sacrifices and responsibilities that had marked the career of Rev. Father O'Brien during his twenty-five years in the priesthood, and spoke of the faithfulness and scrupulous exactitude and conscientiousness displayed by their pastor in the performances of his duties, and of the clearness and directness with which he preached the Gospel, excelling in his expositions of the Scriptures. "You have all seen only a part of his ministry, however. I know well of the inner life that, through the long years of our association, has never been marred by a single unpleasant incident. In your pastor, you have a loving and kind shepherd of souls, who forgets you neither day or night."

Following the sermon a presentation from the children of the parish was made by several of the schoolboys, headed by Master Roy Deanard who read in clear voice a brief but well-worded address from the children to their pastor, and presented him with a spiritual bouquet and a handsome silver tea service and tray.

Rev. Father O'Brien thanked the children sincerely for their gifts, and admonished them with regard to their duty in seeking their true vocation in life, boys and girls alike, expressing the wish that many among the school-children of the Sacred Heart parish would some day turn to the priesthood and the convent as the goals of their future lives.

A choir of white-robed and white-veiled little girls and a group of little boys rendered some delightful music before and after the sermon and presentation.

Assistant priests for Vesper services last evening were Rev. P. McGuire, and Rev. P. Butler. Clergymen in the sanctuary were Right Rev. Monsignor McColl, Rev J. McAuley of Ennismore and Rev. J. Finn.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"SIX DAYS," ELINOR GLYN'S ROMANCE OF TWO CONTINENTS, ROYAL TODAY.

The Glyn Chronological Titles

Elinor Glyn's chronological titles always mean something. Readers of "Three Weeks" and "One Day" will attest that. Now, what about "Six Days?" Elinor Glyn wrote "Six Days" as an original screen story for Goldwyn therefore the first chance the public will have to learn what happened in "Six Days" will be when the picture flashes on the screen.

Charles J. Brabin, the man who made "Driven," and the husband and former director of Theda Bara, is the director of "Six Days." Corinne Griffith is the charming girl heroine. Frank Mayo is the artist she loves but is forbidden to wed.

Tourists in France, the couple stroll through the battlefields of the late war, and are trapped in a dugout when a forgotten hand-grenade explodes. They spend six days together in the dugout before they find a way to escape. Those are the "Six Days" of the title.

Fortunately a priest was their battlefield guide, and was trapped with them. He married them. Unfortunately another accident kills the priest, and the couple get separated in making their escape, and the girl's mother doesn't believe the marriage story and insists on her marrying another man. But see the picture and learn the fascinating story.

AT THE REGENT.

"BUCKING THE BARRIER," FOX PICTURE COMING

A story of the Far North with Dustin Farnum in the leading role, is promised local picture enthusiasts for the next three days, by the management of the Repent Theatre, according to the announcement to-day.

The William Fox star, whose popularity has reached such vast proportions in this city, has in "Bucking the Barrier" the role of a Klondike miner, to whom life had brought many tribulations. Through the machinations of an inexplicable fate, the robust northerner is driven to despondency, and finally blindness. How the love of a noble-hearted woman rescued him, forms the remarkable story, which is from the gifted pen of George Goodchild, the noted magazine fictionist.

There are many well known names in the excellent cast that Director Colin Campbell selected for Farnum's support, among them is Arline Pretty, the talented leading lady.

The love trend of the theme is enhanced even beyond the vision of the author of the story by the splendid performance of this Fox player. It is an unusual treat to watch these two romantic actors on the screen.

She thought she was ready to marry someone else — but she changed her mind!

AT THE CAPITOL.

Johnny Hines, called the George M. Cohan of the screen, has the starring role in "Little Johnny Jones," which will be the feature attraction of the week at Capitol Theatre today and Tuesday. This comedian of shadowland is credited with possessing an assortment of pep and laughter that is the envy of his rivals and the delight of his audiences. By his ability to gallop through a picture and squeeze his personality into every inch of it, he has rapidly forged to the forefront of screen personalities.

"Little Johnny Jones" is a Warner Brothers classic of the screen, adapted from the famous play of the same name written by George M. Cohan, and the vehicle in which that stage personality won his spurs and made himself a Broadway figure once for all.

It is a drama of the turf, the story of the American jockey, Johnny Jones, out to win the Derby race and a sweetheart, and of a gambler who enlists the services of gangsters to foil the lad in both ambitions. Robert Anstead, gambler and horseman, puts his flair for crookedness against the pluck and daring of the jockey, who is accused of agreeing to throw away the race, and produces documents to prove it. When this plot fails, the gambler contrives to have acid thrown into Johnny's eyes as he forges past to victory at the last stretch. But this, too, fails in the end.

Johnny Hines has the part of the jockey, with the following supporting cast: Windham Standing, Margaret Seddon, Robert Prior, Molly Malone, George Webb, Mervyn LeRoy, "Fat" Carr, Pauline French, and Brownie, the Wonder Dog. Arthur Rosson directed the production.

ARE YOU A LITTLE JOHNNY JONES?

During the showing on Monday and Tuesday of Johnny Hines in George M. Cohan's famous racing play, Little Johnny Jones, at the Capital, the management announce that every boy under 15 whose name is John Jones will be admitted free when accompanied by his parents.

HAROLD LLOYD COMING TO CAPITOL WEDNESDAY

Harold Lloyd, the screen's greatest comedian, will be seen at the Capitol Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday in his latest and greatest feature comedy success, "Why Worry." In this picture Lloyd excells himself and those who have seen it report it to the his best picture.

A DEVIL'S ISLAND JACKAL

(By JOHN O'BRIEN)

PARIS (By mail to United Press).—Isidor Hespel, the "Jackal of Devil's Island," the French penal colony where Dreyfus spent the long years of his unjust imprisonment, liked his fellow convicts to such an extent that he solicited and obtained the post of executioner.

"For me," he explained, "it is a post of honor. I am here because I am an outlaw. So are my pals. If it happens that one of them is condemned to death is it not more fitting that he should be guillotined by a friend rather than by somebody like Deibler (the official French executioner), who doesn't even know his victims?"

Hespel got twenty years for trying to kill the colonel of his regiment in Algeria. On account of his good behaviour and education he became a "trusty" after five years in the colony and gradually moved up in the scale until he came to regard himself more as an official of the penal establishment rather than one of its inmates.

Enemies nicknamed him "The Jackal." He was proud of the title. Then one day he fell from grace. He suspected that one of the other "trusties," jealous of his success, tried to poison him by putting arsenic in his soup.

"He put poison in my soup," said Hespel to the judge. "So I put a knife into his ribs."

Extenuating circumstances were, however, lacking, in the view of the court and Hespel was sentenced to death. There was no executioner.

"As I said before," remarked "The Jackal" to his cell guardian, "there can be nothing more annoying to a condemned man than to have to trust himself in the last extremity to a total stranger. Moreover, I have no confidence in any executioner other than myself. Go to the governor and ask him from me that, at least, I be permitted to erect the guillotine for myself."

His request was granted. His closest pal pulled the lever which frees the heavy knife of the guillotine, after Hespel had calmly stretched himself on the board beneath.

SUPERSTITION

All rats left the ship Abner Coburn before she sailed from Seattle to the Alaskan fishing grounds. An old-time sailor would have said the ship was doomed. But the Abner Coburn made her trip north and returned to Seattle safely. That's the way with most superstitions when we put them to the test.

However, superstition is based on precedent—on the law of averages—and it does no harm to keep one eye open. The idea about it being unlucky to walk under a ladder probably originated with a painter dropping his can of paint on a pedestrian.

POLIC CHIEF KEEKS BOYS OUT OF COURT

What has become a regular weekly function in the Saturday evening session of the police court, when Chief Newhall receives young boys against whom complaints have been laid. Every Saturday between 7 and 11 there are from eighteen to thirty boys admonished by the Chief.

Last Saturday there were 25, guilty of rowdyism, stealing from gardens, trampling across private property, stealing from stores, and all the various harmful mischief that falls to the hand of a boy.

Through the Chief's private sessions the boys escape a public appearance in police court and the laying of a criminal charge. They are lectured, and reparation is quietly obtained for the damage they have done.

Financial News and Views

Canadian Stock Exchange —And Mines— | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.— (United Press.)— Wall street has gone beyond the stage where it borrows trouble over Germany's internal dissentions. Hence no disturbance resulted in the general list from the move to establish a Rhineland Republic. About the principal topic in the financial community was speculation about the return of constructive leadership. Rumours continued insistent that J. L. Livermore was about to issue a bullish statement and one report said important financial interests had formed a group under Livermore's leadership to exploit the oversold condition of the market.

There has been a good deal of joking over Livermore's statement when he returned from abroad that certain stocks had reached the resistance points, but now he is reported long of stocks like Gulf States Steel, Studebaker, Can and Baldwin.

Wall street has been so desirous of seeking strong hands to take hold of the market on the side of the advance that it needed only talk that such development was in prospect to stimulate the general list.

New highs on the present rally were reached early by Studebaker, Can and other industrial leaders, while the whole market displayed a confident tone.

Following the activity shown on the side of rising prices in the early dealings trading slowed down, but the initial advances were maintained and a number of stocks gained additional ground before 11 a.m., under the lead of American Can, which reached a new high on the recovery at 94.

A number of houses reported a brisk demand for stocks for investment account.

United States' Steel is expected to show a further increase in shareholders of record in the current quarter. While American Can has been under professional pressure for several months, there has been a large increase in the number of shareholders since the early part of the year.

The same can be said of American Telephone and Telegraph, Atchinson, Pennsylvania, New York Central and other old line stocks.

Opening prices included:

A Thought

PREMIER SMUTS VIEWS ON DOMINION STATUS

Parental Control of Great Britain Would Make Dissolution of Empire Possible.

IS AT CONFERENCE

LONDON, Oct. 22 (By Mail to Canadian Press).—The Cape Town correspondent of the Times contributes the following interesting article on Premier Smuts' Imperial Conference views:

South Africa, through General Smuts' is likely to take a very prominent part in the Imperial Conference. The Prime Minister of the Union has given a great amount of thought to the meaning, the consequences, and the practical working methods of Dominion status; and it is as the missionary of ideas which he and most thinking South Africans believe to be vital to the future agreement and co-operation of the partner States of the Commonwealth that he goes to the Conference.

This does not mean that he will press—or that South Africans will wish him to press—for anything like a written definition in a constitutional document of the relations between Great Britain and the Dominions. On the contrary, he has a real respect for the long-standing British practice of allowing such constitutional developments to work themselves out, with constant adjustment of details to changing circumstances, and without any attempt to force either theory or practice into a code of written formulas.

But the truth is that the whole theory of the relations of the Dominion to Great Britain in all questions of common foreign policy has come to a point where a measure of definition—though not necessarily written definition—and, at the least, mutual understanding of conflicting points of view are indispensable. If the Conference can achieve this, it will have done a great deal. On the one hand, the great majority of thinking opinion in South Africa backs General Smuts in standing for the fullest liberty for the free and confident development of Dominion status.

On this theory the Dominions are partner states of the Empire. They are not subordinate in any way to the senior partner, Great Britain. It is convenient that the senior partner should act for them all in dealings with other States; but they expect to be consulted from time to time; and not to be committed, without their advice being asked, to departures involving new interpretations or applications of the recognized principles of British foreign policy.

The other theory is that the gradual lessening of control must be opposed with cries of alarm and acceded to only with the most grudging and reluctant assent.

Dominion Status

General Smuts goes to the Conference to insist that Dominion status must be recognized as a reality, and that there must be no attempt to go back on it. He and his followers in South Africa believe that the one thing which can make dissolution of the Empire possible—even inevitable—is any attempt to insist upon the "parental control" of Great Britain.

It will be interesting to see how the Dominion representatives range themselves on this issue, which will underlie all the discussions of the Conference, even if it is never specifically raised. But there can be no doubt whatever about the general trend of Dominion opinion on this issue. There are doubts, there is even considerable anxiety, about the practical application of the doctrine of Dominion status at the moment. These doubts and this anxiety are natural. But as to the principle of Dominion status itself there can be no question. That is General Smuts' position, and he has the support of enlightened opinion in South Africa without distinction of racial origin.

A word here about the influence of local politics on General Smuts' views on Imperial matters. Observers in Great Britain may be tempted to discount his championship of the new international standing of the Dominions. They may reflect that in South Africa he is faced by a formidable Republican opposition and may believe that his insistence on the rights of the Dominion is influenced—unconsciously, perhaps, but still influenced—by his anxiety to conciliate that opposition. It is a natural impression; all the more because the same idea may be current about the Prime Minister of Canada, whose opinions on this question are close to those of General Smuts.

But, so far as General Smuts is concerned—naturally, I can say nothing about Mr. Mackenzie King—there is little truth in this impression, which is treacherous because it may lessen the influence of General Smuts' opinions and beliefs with the Conference itself and with the British public. General Smuts is supported on this issue by the great majority of South Africans of English descent. If he were Australian I am convinced that his opinions would be the same. There is in all the Dominions a profound wish to remain in the closest co-operation with Great Britain on all questions of foreign policy.

An Article of Faith

Dominion ideals in world affairs are identical with British ideals. But there is, too, in all the Dominions, a passionate belief in the future greatness of their countries. Full responsibility for their own actions in international affairs is a part of that greatness. It cannot be assumed as yet in any far-reaching sense; but there is almost universal agreement that the time will come when it can and will be assumed. The doctrin of Dominion status was no mere device of self-flattery concocted by Sir Robert Borden and General Botha and General Smuts at Versailles. It was the authentic voice of the faith of the Dominion peoples in their own destiny, expressing itself in speech for the first time. And that first articulation of this creed of self-dedication can never be unsaid again.

The vision of the people of South Africa is of their own leadership in the development of the continent of Africa. Few of us have any clear understanding of that vision; but General Smuts has it, and when he speaks of it, as he often speaks of it, to the people of South Africa, they recognize the vision as their own, though they still see it dimly and far off. So with Canada and Australia. No statesman will ever in the future lead those peoples for long unless the very foundations of his influence is an ardent conviction of the greatness that destiny has in store for them.

All this may seem to be very dogmatic and far too confident about the views of other Dominion peoples to come from a South African. But the first essential for the Conference is that the people in England should recognize that in this matter there is a point of view common to Canada, Australia and South Africa—it is not so characteristic of New Zealand. South Africans know that General Smuts is the ablest and most experienced spokesman of that point of view; and it is of the first importance that British statesmen and people should understand that it looks forward to the day when the Dominions will be great and powerful nations.

Difficulties

Even General Smuts' enemies in South Africa are with him on this matter of Dominion status. Their only quarrel with him about it is that he does not push it far enough for them. The great virtue of his practical Britain and the Dominions is that they are all based on the assumption of continuous common action in international affairs between all the States of the British Crown.

Of course, there are practical difficulties. But British institutions bristle with practical difficulties. After all, the present position of the Dominions are Britain as to matters of foreign policy is pretty analogous to that of any British Cabinet. In the Cabinet the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs conducts all the routine work of foreign policy. So does the British Ministry vis-a-vis the Ministries of the Dominions. Other members of the British Cabinet are consulted about foreign policy only when principles are involved, or decisions have to be taken affecting the larger interests of the nation. That is almost exactly the system which prevails among the States of the Empire.

If only common discussion among the Prime Ministers could be more frequent and more speedy, the system would work perfectly well. There is really little reluctance in South Africa to accept the proper share of responsibility for common decisions. If it was certain that such decisions would be taken only with the consent of all the partner States, responsibility would be a commonplace which none would question. Quicker and better means of consultation between the Prime Ministers of the Empire would clinch the analogy between the normal British Cabinet and the common action in international affairs of all the Prime Ministers of the Empire. Wireless and air transport may yet reduce the practical difficulties of the existing system to very minor proportions; and it will not be surprising if General Smuts insists again, as he did at the last Conference, that the most pressing problem of the Empire is a revolutionary improvement in means of communication.

Society

Mr. F. R. J. MacPherson left on Sunday morning for Toledo, Ohio, where his son Joseph, is seriously ill.

On Saturday afternoon, at her residence, 297 Elias Avenue, Mrs. C. H. Fulford (nee Jean Macfarlane) held her first reception since her marriage, when she was at home to about a hundred and fifty of her friends, from four to six o'clock. Mrs. Fulford was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. C. D. Macfarlane and Mrs. H. Fulford of Port Hope. Assistants in the living room, which was prettily arranged with yellow 'mams, marigolds and cedar, were the Misses Jean Wilgar, Marion Webber and Helen Macfarlane. In the tea room, tastefully decorated with pink 'mums and Japanese ivy, Mrs. E. Maybee presided at the dainty table, arranged with a centre basket of pink roses, and sible half-blown buds in silver vases. Mrs. Harold Young cut the ices. Tea room assistants were the Misses Helen Bulmer, Enid Sanderson, Ruby Derry and Lele McClelland. During the afternoon instrumental music was rendered by the Misses Jean Bryce and Edna Connor.

Mrs. P. J. Doris was hostess on Saturday evening at a kitchen shower in honour of Miss Beatrice Picard, whose marriage takes place this week. The house was prettily decorated with flowers and during the course of the evening a mock marriage ceremony as performed with little Frances Primeau and small Harold Hamilton acting as bride and bridegroom, with Romeo McGrath as the officiating clergyman. Later, a decorated waggon containing many pretty gifts was wheeled in, and the pleasant evening closed with the service of dainty refreshments.

Mrs. W. H. Meredith, who has been visiting friends in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for the past five weeks, has returned home.

Misses Margaret Fraser and Irene Collins left to-day for Georgetown.

Rev. R. C. Blagrave is conducting the mission in Norwood this week in connection with the general preaching mission being held during these two months in every Anglican parish in the Diocese of Toronto.

Mrs. F. G. Langtry, of Carleton Place, Ontario, is a visitor to Peterborough, the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. G. Mann, Dublin Street.

Mr. H. J. Neil, of 607 George street, left for New York yesterday morning to attend the funeral of his father, the late John J. Neil, who passed away suddenly on Friday last.

JULES FALK TO BE HEARD HERE

Will Give a Recital in the Opera House Monday.

In the course of his career Jules Falk, the noted violinist, has played before the principal rulers of Europe. The late King Edward, before whom Falk played by "royal command," while still in his early teens, he regards as one of the most interesting; so democratic in every way that Falk cites an instance at Marienbad, where after his usual promenade on the "corso" the King hailed a hack and asked to be driven back to the Hotel Weimar. The horse looked to be on the verge of starvation, the traces of the harness were mended with old pieces of rope, in fact, there was little of the original equipment left; the hack needed but the blow of an axe to put it in a heap. Apparently the King rather liked the situation, and as the hack slowly proceeded on its way finally reaching the Hotel Weimar, the driver, recognising for the first time his Royal "fare," threw up his hands and, almost falling from his seat, blurted out, "Can I believe my own eyes?"

Vanette van Sweringen, soprano, will be associated with Falk in a recital here on the evening of 29th October, at the Grand Opera House.

The recital is given under the auspices of the Rotary Club.

BIG INCREASE

would be rushed through rapidly. Rotarian McPherson informed the meeting that the services of Dr. Robertson of the Sick Children's Hospital had been promised in connection with the inspection of the children, once the desired information had been secured.

President McElderry called attention to the Inter-city meeting to be held in Toronto, on Friday evening and expressed the hope that there will be a goodly representation from Peterboro. Rotarian Jack Seels was appointed to arrange for the Peterboro delegation.

The members were urged to get behind the big Rotary concert which will be held a week from to-night.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Mrs. William Fredenburg, who died October 21st, 1921.

The Saviour thought it best to take

To dwell among the blest.
Just two years ago to-day,
Your loving Lord calls you away,
Where you always longed to go,
From a world of sin and woe.

A patient, loving mother, too;
She always was so kind to all,
Ready to answer any call.

GERMAN RIOTS IN RHINELAND MANY KILLED

Communists Progress With Efforts to Establish a Separate Government—Police Helpless.

STRIKES PROCLAIMED

DUSSELDORF, Oct. 23. — (United Press.)—Herr Talbot, prominent Rhineland industrialist, has accepted the presidency of the "Rhineland Republic," according to despatches from Aix La Chapelle.

Separatist authorities have arrested the Chief of Police of Aix-La-Chapelle, which is being used as the temporary capitol of the Republic.

Intense excitement is sweeping the Rhine valley as the movement spreads.

The most significant phase of the complex situation is the apparent support given the Aix-La-Chapelle movement by the older separatist body.

Joseph Smeets, Separatist leader, has declared that he hopes the Aix-La-Chapelle leaders will co-operate with his organiaztion, adding that all Rhine Separatist parties have the one aim of quitting the German State.

Smeets declares that any Rhine Republic must be based on willingness to pay reparations.

This view is also held by the Aix-La-Chapelle party, according to word reaching this city.

Josef Mattes, leader of the second Separatist party in the Rhineland, has gone to Aix-La-Chapelle to co-operate with Leo Deckers and Dr. Ketzen, who carried out the coup there.

Separatist Republics have been proclaimed at Trier, Badems and Muenchen-Gladbach. Police offered no resistance and were disarmed.

BERLIN, October 23rd. — United Press. — Despatches to the Central News from Hamburg, report that Communists early to-day stormed the police stations, and captured three of them. Other stations were reported holding out against the attacks, which continued.

This was the first important industrial and shipping centre in Germany where communist uprisings were reported to have commenced in connection with the present chaotic situation.

Two hundred separatist troops have attacked Wiesbaden and disarmed the police, occupying all the public buildings, it was reported at Mayence to-day.

The Separatists repulsed a sharp attack of counter-manifestants. Several men were wounded.

Dr. Dorten, one of the chief separatists, has departed for Coblenz, where he is expected to proclaim the Rhine Republic immediately.

Several villages in the Coblenz bridgehead area have been occupied.

Messages from Duren forecast that the boundaries of the Separatist state would include all German teritory on the left bank of the Rhine, and an area extending some thirty three miles on the right bank, beginning at the Baden frontier.

Aix-la-Chapelle despatches said that the Rhineland Republic continued to extend its way with little bloodshed. Aix-la-Chapell is quiet, but it is feared that clashes are imminent. The capture of Bonn is expected momentarily.

Strikes have been proclaimed in

NEW REVOLUTION REPORTED GREECE

General Gonatas Informs King That Situation is Under Control.

ATHENS, Oct. 23. — (United Press).—Colonel Plastiras, leader of the Revolutionary Party (the Government), to-day, issued a statement declaring that General Metaxas, is the instigator of the counter revolt which started yesterday.

"The revolt has been disposed," Plastiras said.

Plastiras said the promptness of the Revolutionary Government in imposing Martial Law apparently had crushed the revolt, which now has been localized to Nauplia and Corinth where two mutinous battalions are still holding out.

General Gonatas today visited the King, informing him the Government has the situation completely in hand.

DARES FLAMES, SAVE HUSBAND

Bride Helps Rescue Man Pinned Under Wrecked Auto—Motorist Sought

DETROIT, Oct. 23.— Her head reeling from the blows of flying glass and the shock of being hurled from a moving motor car to the Gratiot avenue roadside, Anna Osnowski, 20 years old the bride of John Osnowski 955 Howard street pulled herself to her feet and made a desperate effort to drag her husband from beneath the tangle of wreckage that held him

The overturned car that had pinned Osnowski had caught fire. Gasoline flames were leaping across his body, and threatening to cause an explosion of the gasolin tank. Mrs. Osnowski ignoring painful burns on her wrists and arms, struggled to lift the machine alone. Her cries for help attracted the attention of two motorists who stopped and assisted in the rescue of her husband.

The Onsnowskis were married in Chicago a week ago. Following the wedding they drove to Richmond, Mich. to visit the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Enflori Osnowski, and were driving to Detroit, via Mt. Clemens, to settle their new homt, when a 11.45 p.m. the accident happened. Another car going toward Mt. Clemens swerved about 500 feet beyond Seven-Mile road, and struck their machine.

Osnowskis car plunged into the ditch and rolled over, catching Osnowski beneath it and throwing his bride a dozen feet from the pavement. The other car stopped, and the driver strolled back and sat down by the roadside for a moment, Mrs. Osnowski told the police. Then, when he say that others were coming to aid her he leaped into his machine and disappeared.

The Detroit police took Mr. and Mrs. Osnowski to Receiving Hospital. It was found there that he was suffering from many serious burns and that he had been injured internally.

Osnowski later was transferred to St. Mary's Hospital where his condition is reported critical. Mrs. Osnowski's arms were bandaged, and she spent the remainder of the night at his bedside.

At noon today the police had not uncovered any clue to the identity of the other driver. x

British Steamer Westmoreland is Feared to Have Been Lost.

NEWPORT NEWS, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— S. O. S. calls purporting to come from the British steamer Westmoreland were picked up here last night by the Danish steamer Phoenix, according to Captain Gai of the Phoenix, who came ashore here to-day. The Westmoreland was reported to be 14 miles east of Five Fatham Bank Lightship off the Delaware breakwater.

The first message was picked up at sven o'clock and a few minutes later another was intercepted saying the seas were overwhelming and that lifeboats on the ship had been smashed. A later message asked that the crew be saved. The wireless operator of the Phoenix got into touch with the Westmoreland, but succeeded in getting only a letter "S." A heavy gale is blowing off the coast here.

The Westmoreland sailed from Newport News October 13 for Boston and is believed to have sailed from Boston this week from southern ports.

BIG PROFIT FOR FUEL JOBBERS REPORTS SHOW

Commission Reports that Wholesalers' Earnings Run 200 Per Cent. Above Pre-War Margins

ENQUIRY STARTED

WASHINGTON, October 23. — Wholesalers in the coal industry during recent years have been taking profits at a rate of more than 200 per cent. over their pre-war margins the Coal Commission reported to-day, while the retail coal dealers, despite the increasing costs, have been taking less.

The Commission's study resulted in its recommendation to President Coolidge and Congress that the Federal government be empowered to regulate fuel distribution in times of shortage, but that the retail handling of coal be left chiefly for local treatment.

Although the commission ceased its work on September 22nd, the text of its report on coal distribution became available in complete form for the first time. The conclusions advanced were unanimously adopted by its membership, including the chairman, John Hays Hammond, Thomas R. Marshall, Clark Howell, Dr. George Otis Smith, Edward T. Devine and Charles P. Neill.

"The commission's study indicates that there are altogether too many wholesalers," the report said, "but that notwithstanding this fact the wholesale trade had made large profits in most of the ten year period from 1913 to 1922 inclusive, and excessive profits in the panic years of 1917 and 1920. The year 1922 generally showed more moderate and even small earnings on account of the curtailment of the tonnage by strike.

"The Commission's study also indicates that in time of shortage the pyramiding of wholesale margins through the speculative activity of wholesalers results in the enhancement of prices without furnishing the public an equivalent in distribution service.

Use 1913 as Base for Study.

"Recurring periods of coal shortage, with wild wholesale speculation point to the need of a public service viewpoint respecting the entire coal traed, backed by legislation providing for strict regulatory powers on the part of the Federal government over the entire production and distribution interstate of coal. The exercise of such regulation is especially needed in times of shortage and wildly fluctuating prices.

"When real competition for the purchasers' tonage exists, such competition is probably the cheapest and most efficient regulator of wholesale margins, but in times of shortage it fails entirely. It may therefore be desirable to set up skeleton regulative machinery which shall be put in operation when, and only when, in the judgment of the president, an emergency exists."

Taking 1913 as a base, the commission found that the average wholesaler who distributed coal without physically handling the shipments, made a profit of 3.6 cents a ton handled and made an annual return on total capital invested in his business of 19 per cent. In 1920 the 333 wholesalers in the United States whose books the commission examined, tok a profit of 15 cents a ton, and made 55.2 per cent. on the capital invested in their business. The year 1920, however, was the "banner year" in the business, the report said, adding that the figures were smaller in other years.

The chief addition to coal prices the commission found, resulted from the handling about of coal shipments during shortages from one wholesaler to another, with two, three and sometimes four, wholesale profits taken en route. Its inquiry resulted in the tracing out of a large number of such operations, particularly involving anthracite shipped to New England during the winter of 1922-23, after the coal strike.

Dummy Concerns Revealed.

"It resulted in the uncovering of hidden margins taken by dummy concerns or closely affiliated wholesalers, mine owners or individuals," the commission said. "In a considerable number of cases, wholesalers whose names were at first not reported, have been recovered somewhere between the mines and the retailer. Specific examples of this hidden profit taking and ways in which such profits were taken are described.

"The maximum number of wholesalers intervening between the mine and the retailer as found to be four."

The American Wholesale Coal Association, the commission also declared, had advocated an unfair profit standard.

"From this showing it would appear that with margins of 8 per cent. on coal," the report went on, "which figure is advocated by the American Wholesale Coal Association, the entire wholesale trade, and particularly the wholesalers handling anthracite, would make exorbitant profits. Such a margin would neither be necessary nor desirable.

WILL CONTROL OF C.G.E. PASS OVER TO U.S.A.

That This Question Is To Come Up at General Meeting Directors Do Not Deny.

PARENT CO. WILLING

TORONTO, October 23 (Canadian Press). — A. E. Dyment, president of the Canadian General Electric Company, this morning admitted that the directors of that company, at their meeting here to-morrow, would consider an offer made by the General Electric Company, of the United States, for the purchase of the Canadian concern.

If the terms meet the approval of the Canadian board to-morrow, there will be a special meeting of the United States board on Friday to further ratify the deal.

Details of the transaction are not yet available for publication.

Extensive plants of the Canadian concern are in operation at Toronto, Peterborough, and other Canadian points.

It is understood that amalgamation, if made, will not adversely affect these Canadian industries.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—The regular monthly meeting of directors of Canadian General Electric, called for Wednesday next, promises to be of considerably more importance than usual, for the question of passage of control into United States' hands is almost certain to come up for discussion.

That this question will come up is not denied by directors of the company who, however, refuse to discuss the matter at all. President A. E. Dyment simply remarked that he was not in a position to say anything, negatively or affirmatively, at the present time. The regular routine matters would be considered and any other business which might come before the board.

There has been very steady buying of Canadian General Electric for many months past. It started with a movement which carried the stock right out of line with its then earnings. This was thought on the street at first to be only a speculative movement, but the price held up much to the disappointment of short sellers. At that time negotiations were pending, for one of the most conservative houses on the street expressed the opinion that while the stock was undoubtedly too high from standpoint of operations, it should not be sold short under any circumstances.

Various means for returning control to the parent company in the States were discussed. At one time it was suggested that the Schenectedy concern should take over the Canadian company and give bonds for the outstanding stock, and at another that the Canadian stock should be taken over and either given a guaranteed minimum dividend by the American company or else exchanged into stock of General Electric U.S.

The deal was almost consummated early in the year, but an obstacle then appeared in the form of the heavy English interest in the Canadian company which considers that the Canadian company's Empire right on the parent company's patents were too valuable to sell. It is to get these rights back again, in view of the heavy Hydro-Electric development here, that the U.S. concern is anxious to acquire the Canadian.

The English interests hold substantial blocks of both preferred and common and the street is under the impression that an agreement was signed shortly after the change in presidency which gave preferred holders very wide powers for the waiving of an earlier agreement under which common dividend would have to be discontinued if working capital fell below a given point.

It is now said that the parent company has been buying control of the Canadian company in the open market, both here and in England, and that it is now a sufficiently heavy holder to lay its plans again before the Canadian board.

WE MUST MAKE A SUCCESS OF C.N.R.

Otherwise Dominion May Go Bankrupt, Declares Sir Henry Thornton.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—"We must make a success of the Canadian National Railways. If the Dominion is not to go bankrupt we cannot go on forever having a fifty million dollar deficit every year," declared Sir Henry Thornton, chief executive of the C. N. R., yesterday, at a luncheon tendered him in the new Masonic Hall.

Sir Henry was very enthusiastic regarding the future of the C.N.R. system. "With a refusal to meet a defeat I believe we will make the Canadian National Railways not only self-supporting, but also a thing of influence in Canada," was his prediction.

"Many years ago," he said, "the Government of the day decided that it was essential to the interests of the people of Canada to take over certain large railway companies. As I look back upon that event I think I can say with truth that there was nothing else for the Government to do. Whether the Government acted wisely or not, the fact remains that the people of Canada have a national railway system and we have got to see it through one way or another."

AUTOIST FINED $25 AND COSTS

Charge of Reckless Driving Against Geo. Evans Sustained by Magistrate O. A. Langley.

George Evans, 709 George Street, charged with reckless driving, was fined $25 and costs, totalling $36.15, by Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning, or in default of payment one week imprisonment.

The case was heard yesterday, and evidence showed that on August 31 Evans drove an automobile on Smith Street which struck a buggy in which Miss Sadie Brown, Otonabee, with her brothers, was returning from the nurses' graduation exercises at Nicholls Hospital. Miss Brown was injured and the buggy badly smashed.

Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton prosecuted and T. A. O'Brien appeared for George Evans.

Peter Moffatt was one of the principal witnesses, the collision taking place outside his house on Smith Street. He heard the crash, he said, and went out to investigate. The car was facing west, with the front wheels near the centre of the road and the wheels turned as though the driver were trying to avoid the buggy.

Mr. Moffatt found the horse lying on the road with its head facing north. The buggy was in front of the car, and had evidently been on the south side of the road, the witness said.

Evans' companion on the night of the accident said he was intoxicated and could not say whether Evans was in the same condition or not. Evans was driving, he said. Harold Lowes said Evans was not intoxicated at 11.15 when he met him in the Maple Leaf Hotel.

Miss Sadie Brown, the young lady who was injured, testified that she smelled liquor when Evans lifted her from the wreckage of the buggy.

On the completion of the case for the prosecution, Mr. O'Brien moved for dismissal without introducing evidence for the defence.

Argument of Counsel.

Mr. Hatton said the collision cannot be called a pure accident. "The collision was caused solely by reckless driving on the part of the accused," he said. "The cause is the fact that the accused was driving on the wrong side of the road. That in itself, unless he can show some good and valid reason such as unsafety on the other side of the road is evidence of reckless driving. Miss Brown's evidence that Evans was intoxicated has not been contradicted. One may be intoxicated and still able to drive a car, up to a certain point. But we know that a man who has liquor, or who has lately had liquor, is more or less not normal. He is liable to be reckless."

In connection with Mr. O'Brien's argument, Magistrate Langley remarked on the disadvantage at which the driver of an automobile is placed in the absence of lights on horse-drawn vehicles and bicycles. Mr. O'Brien pointed out that evidence showed Evans to have been driving on the centre of the road rather than upon the south side. Other evidence pointed to the buggy being also on the centre of the road, out of the territory where it was protected by law.

Magistrate Langley reserved judgment until to-day.

Only known diamond mines in North Aemrica are located in Pike country, Arkansas.

PETERBOROUGH POWER RATES ON FAIR BASIS

Charges to Consumers of Electric Energy Compare Equitably With Tariffs in Other Places.

LOWER THAN SOME

Peterborough compares favourably with surrounding municipalities and with cities of the same population throughout the Province in the price to the consumer of electric power and light.

For domestic lighting the net cost per kw. hr. in Peterborough in 1922 was 2.8 cents compared with 4 cents in Kingston and 6.4 cents in Lakefield.

The number of domestic consumers in Peterborough in 1922 was 4,814, an increase of 2,122 from 1914, and the average monthly bill was $1.20. In Kingston the consumers number 3,493, with an average monthly bill of $1.45. In Lakefield, consumers number 183 and the average account totals $1.30. In London, with a total of 13,993 consumers, the average monthly bill is 25 cents higher than in Peterborough, although the net cost is 1 cent lower.

Power Rates Lower.

In power rates Peterborough is lowest of the municipalities named in connection with the domestic cost. The number of consumers here in 1922 was 127, an increase of 34 since 1914, and the average cost per horse-power in 1922 was $16.46. In Kingston, with 131 consumers, the average cost is $19.74; London has 490 consumers with an average cost of $22.66; Kitchener with 212 consumers has an average cost of $18.78 ;and Lakefield, cited for comparison with the larger centres, has 2 consumers with an average cost of $33.76.

Peak Load Higher Here.

Peterborough had a peak load in 1920 of 3,950 horse-power; in 1921 of 4,886 horse-power, and in 1922 of 4,306 horse-power, compared with the next highest on the Central Ontario and Trent system, Oshawa, with a peak load in 1922 of 3,850.

In 1920 Oshawa had a peak load of 3,307 horsepower. During this period Peterborough's peak load increased zy 579.8 horse-power, second only to Belleville, which had an increase of 681.1 horse-power.

Street Lighting.

This city in 1922 paid 4 cents more per head of population than Toronto for street lighting; 18 cents less than Kingston, 5 cents less than Kitchener, 11 cents more than London, and 5 cents more than Hamilton. The figures are:

Peterborough, population 21,439, number of lamps 1,127, total cost, $15,825.69; cost per capita, 73 cents.

Toronto, population 522,942, number of lambs 44,945, cost per capita 69 cents.

Kingston, whose population of 22,234 most nearly approaches Peterborough's, has 451 lamps, the majority of them arc lamps, which cost $20,367.05, or 91 cents per capita.

Kitchener, also near Peterborough's population, has 22,717 citizens, 1,880 lamps, annual cost $17,754.20, or 78 cents er capita.

Here on Trial

BERNARD MARKSON,
Whose trial on a charge of publishing false information, will be heard at the Assizes now in progress here.

FAKE MEDICAL EXPOSE GROWS

More Startling Developments Expected at Expose Bogus Education.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 23.—Revelations of an even more startling nature are expected in the expose of a fake medical diploma ring, the operations of which already have been traced through St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago. Two men have been arrested here, one a physician and the other a retired educator. Two physician's have been taken into custody in Kansas City, Mo., and three others are being sought in Chicago.

Pay the money, get a medical school certificate, and then practice seemed to be the rule, according to what has been revealed thus far, with the men behind the ring in providing these bogus certificates raking in golden shekels.

Prof. William P. Sachs, former dean of the National University of Arts and Sciences, which no longer is in existence, and former Missouri State examiner of schools, one of the men under arrest, has admitted frauds extending back over a period of 10 years.

Prof. Sachs told authorities here that he believed 15,000 physicians are practicing in the United States under bogus licenses obtained through "rings" operating in various parts of the country.

Sachs says he has a list of approximately 100 of these physicians, which he says he will turn over to the authorities.

Governor Orders Check.

The expose has resulted in Governor Arthur M. Hyde ordering a check on physicians licensed to practice in the State against the diplomas issued by reputable medical schools recognized by the board of health, in order to determine to what extent the practice was carried on in this State.

The men under arrest are Prof. Sachs and Dr. Robert Adcox, retired physician, St. Louis. Dr. D. H. Alexander, dean of the Kansas City College of Medicine, and Dr. Ralph Voigt, Kansas City.

Pick up orders have been issued for Dr. Peter J. Konczynski, Dr. Anne Herschey and P. C. Hughes, of Chicago. The first is a chiropractor, the second an osteonath, and the third an insurance agent.

In a raid on the home of Prof. Sachs, five seals, bearing the imprints of the Department of Public Schools of the State of Missouri, Board of Education, Washington County, Mo., National University of Arts and Sciences, St. Louis, and two of the Walther College, St. Louis, were confiscated.

Bogus Students.

In order that the "doctor," after given his bogus high school certificate and diploma, might obtain a state license to practice, the clique, it has been revealed, maintained a "class of graduates" from which one was selected to take the examination in the name of the would-be doctor. The license, when issued, then was turned over to the "prospect."

Headquarters of the clique is said to have been maintained in the offices of Dr. Voigt in Kansas City.

Howard Sidener, county attorney, has announced that the Federal Government will be asked to collaborate with the State officials in the showing up and prosecution of the clique members.

ASSIZES OPEN WITH A LIGHT DOCKET HERE

Only One Criminal Case And Four Civil Actions Before Justice Kelly.

THE MARKSON CASE

The fall Assizes opened here this afternoon with Mr. Justice Kelly presiding. Three out of the four civil actions on the list were disposed of in the preliminaries.

Members of the Bar present on the entry of Mr. Justice Kelly were George W. Hatton, Crown Attorney; J. O'Brien, G. N. Gordon, K. C.; A. E. Dixon; F. Kerr; J. G. ODonoghue K.C.; and O. A. Langley, K.C.

F. Kerr, K.C. acting for the defendant in the case of Windover vs Kitchen, informed the Court that the action had been settled out of court.

This was the only civil case set down for trial by jury. J. A. Humphries of Campbellford, was counsel for the plaintiff but did not appear.

Frank Greenbank not appearing, Thompson Braden was called to serve and was chosen as foreman.

In his charge to the Grand Jury the presiding judge outlined the charge of spreading false news preferred against Bernard Markson. This case, he said, is one of rather unusual character in that we have not had many in this class in Canada. However, it is a very old offence in England, having been dealt with there centuries ago under the same name, spreading false news.

The chage is laid under a section of the criminal code which defines the offence as indictable and subject to punishment as for another crime.

Any person is guilty who wilfully and knowingly publishes any false news or tale whereby injury is, or is liable to be, occasioned to any public interest.

The charge is a matter of public concern, and is presented to you on the theory that this man has wilfully published news of the kind complained of. Any matter that would stir up dissention or discontent may be included as well. It is a matter of public concern that discontent should not be stirred up.

His Lordship warned the Grand Jury that what might be a very serious matter of public concern under one set of circumstances, might not be under another, citing the conditions of war time. "The unrest," he said, "that was brought about by the war has not altogether subsided. The public mind might be more affected now than in the old days of peace before 1914."

Saying that the accused, at the preliminary hearing, did not admit all the article entitled, "Happy Hunting Grounds for Capitalists," his Lordship said a letter would be submitted which it is claimed the accused sent to the paper for publication. "It contains a great deal of what he wrote for this article, although there are some variations."

"The Crown charges that the publication of the letter and the circulation of the paper brought the accused within the section of the code referred to."

BIG DEMAND FOR TICKETS

No concert attraction in Peterborough for some time has had the same demand for seats as the Rotary Club Concert to be held in the Grand Opera House, Monday night, next. It will be the musical treat of the season. The artists Jules Falk violinist and Miss Vanette Van Sweringen, soprano, are very high class and pleasing performers. BIG PROFIT FOR

Its presence in the trade would not only be a public injustice, but would still further stimulate the already over-developed wholesale trade. What is already needed is stability in the industry so that the normal tonnage and demand real competition can operate."

Turing to the retailer, the commission remarked that criticism of the prices there was frequent, sometimes well founded, but very often based on "lack of knowledge that causes are beyond control of the retailer." Better public understanding and local treatment of the problems were advocated.

Average rates of retail profits on coal since 1918, the commission said, have been "generally moderate and much less than those of wholesalers." Net profits on a ton handled, and profits on investment for retailers were said to have shown a "tendency to decrease" since 1913.

GERMAN RIOTS

Vulkan, Jansen and Scholinski dockyards in Hamburg, a correspondent asserts.

The city authorities are distributing food to the starving working people.

The Separatist movement in Rhineland is extending steadily with almost no bloodshed, says a Berlin despatch to the Exchange Telegraph.

The green, white and red flag of the Secessionists now flies over Wiesbaden, Erkelenz and Blensberga, while the capture of Bonn is expected momentarily.

Still Hold Fort.

Coblenz and Mayence are still in possession of the Loyalists, and the municipal officials continue to function at Aix La Chapelle, where quiet prevails.

A correspondent says an attempt to extend the movement to Treves failed.

The French have given the Mayor of Mayence a free hand to deal with the Separatists.

A Berlin message to London this afternoon says: A telegram from Aix La Chapelle says the police succeeded this morning in expelling the Republicans from the town and regaining complete mastery of the situation. It is not known if any casualties occurred.

The Rhineland Separatists are reported here to have occupied Bonn at one o'clock this morning. It is uncertain whether they retained possession of the town, as the latest information around noon to-day was that the Republicans had clashed with the police and that the city authorities had finally called upon the French troops to restore order.

The German police were said to be still patrolling the town, but whether under Separatist or Loyalist direction was not clear.

If the German Separatist movement extends to Cologne, which is the bridgehead of the British Rhineland army, Great Britain will preserve an attitude of reserve, but will take every measure to maintain order, prevent bloodshed and ensure the continuance of present local government, it was stated here to-day.

Colors Hoisted.

The colors of the Rhineland Republic were hoisted during the night on the German Government Buildings at Wiesbaden by a band of the followers of Dr. Hans A. Dorten, leader of the previous Rhineland Republic movement, whose home is in Wiesbaden. A special despatch from that city states that the Wiesbaden police were disarmed and locked up in their barracks. The crowd which gathered in front of the Government headquarters was fired on by Secessionists, which wounded ten persons, the message adds. A general strike was proclaimed by trades unions.

Separatists also have possession of the Government Buildings in Bonn.

A Belgian official news agency telegram from Duisburg to-day states that a republic was proclaimed there and the public buildings occupied by Separatists early this morning.

Clashed with Police

Dispatches from Bonin today said Separatists forces arrived there at 2 a.m. and stormed the City Hall, only to be repulsed by the police.

Police fired despite orders of the French military, dispatches said the disturbanc, was continuing, according to latesst dispatches.

French troops were rushing up with tanks to stop the fighting.

Late dispatches indicated that the Separatist Movement in the Rhineland had taken a more serious turn than was firs; anticipated.

The cabinet was sitting continuous-ly most of the night.

Ten persons were reported wounded in a clash between Separatist and crowd around the city hall in Coblenz when th, Separatists attempted to take over the city administration.

Dispatches from Eschweiller said Separatists had successfully occupied the city and taken over the public buildings there.

Workers in many Hamburg shipyards quit to day and plundered food shops attacking police stations.

Fierce fighting occurred at three stations and a number of persons were wounded. All food stores were compelled to raise their prices.

Reports from various points in Rhineland this afternoon indicate the Separatists have been generally defeated especially at Aix-la-Chapelle, Muenchen Gladbach and Bonn. At Aix-la-Chapelle, they were severely beaten by the Trades Unionists and then ejected from the public building which they had been holding since midnight, Saturday.

Passion Play of Oberammergau was seen by 318,040, during its last performance.

BERLIN HEDGED ABOUT WITH REBELLION HAS APPLIED TO NATION

Charges Bavaria Before Federal Council With Violation of the Republican Constitution Adopted at Weimar.

SECESSION SERIOUS.

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—With Dr. Von Kahr, the military dictator, and Gen. Von Lossow, commander in chief of the Bavarian Reichswehr, completely masters of the situation in Bavaria, the German government for the moment has been forced by the Munich insurgents on the defensive. Its only temporary recourse has been an appeal to the nation and an indictment of Bavaria on the ground that Bavaria is violating paragraph 48 of the Republican constitution.

Political leaders confidentially express the opinion that the Berlin authorities have lost out in the juridical contest with the Munich autocrtas, in that the latter have so well defended their contention that the whole issue will now be referred to the federal council for interpretation.

Session Wednesday.

This will occur at a special executive session next Wednesday and the outcome of the debate, involving an interpretation of the Weimar Constitution may be predicted as presaging a further victory for Bavaria, in that her delegates will present her case and in all probability will decline to have her version dissipated.

The Berlin government issued a communique late to-night, taking issue with Dr. Von Kahr on his construction of paragraph 48 of the constitution. In the present situation it has no other weapons or methods for obtaining redress, its authority within the borders of Bavaria being wholly superceded by that state's political and military dictatorhsip.

General Von Lossow's conduct is branded in even the Conservative organs as extraordinary and a complete contradiction of the traditions of the German army. "Such conduct would not be tolerated for a single moment in any other army in the world," says the conservative Hamburger Nachrichten.

Private advices from Munich report the situation there as quiet. They say the populace outwardly is supporting Dr. Von Kahr, while General Von Lossow is completely in control of the Bavarian division.

More Serious Problems.

Believing that the conflict between the Munich and Berlin governments will be adjudicated without precipitating serious internal convulsions, Chancellor Stresemann and his cabinet to-day canvassed the situation in the Ruhr ,the Rhineland and Saxony, all of which suggest far graver complications than the rupture with the Munich government. In both Saxony and the Ruhr basin the food and social conditions continue to grow worse at a pace which the Berlin government apparently is unable to counteract with relief measures, while the secessional movement in the Rhineland, also finds the central government a helpless onlooker.

The coups of the secessionists at Aix-la-Chapelle and at other Rhenish points, and Bavaria's rebellion against the central government have gravely complicated the prestige of the Reich in the Ruhr, in the opinion expressed in official quarters today, the belief prevailing that the unfortunate synchronizing of the two eruptions has had a lamentable effect upon the morale of the Ruhr people.

May Oppose Von Kahr.

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—Reports from Munich to-day were not such as to encourage hope of early conciliation between the Bavarian and Central Governments. Nevertheless there are signs of a growing movement in the important popular party opposed to the policy of the Bavarian military dictator, Von Kahr.

The Bavarian government, having received the oath of allegiance today from the seventh Reichsweir division has forbidden the publication of a proclamation addressed to the Bavarian troops which the Berlin government intended distributing in the form of pamphlets by means of an airplane.

Pay Cheques were Lying in Street

Saskatoon, Sask., October 22.—The alleged theft of 250 of Saskatoon semi-monthly pay cheques, from Paymaster L. J. Walsh, petered out to-day when a citizen telephoned the city hall that he had found the supposedly stolen cheques lying in the street. The cheques were for a total of $14,000, and were being delivered to various civic employees Saturday, when Walsh suddenly missed the bundle from under his arm.

ITALIANS TRY NEW DODGE TO ENTER AMERICA

Armed With Credentials, Alleged to Be Fraudulent, For Canada—Remain in New York.

HELD FOR ENQUIRY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.— (Canadian Press.) — The arrival of the steamship Colombo from Italy today with 225 "farm laborers" carrying credentials which they fondly hoped might enable them to pass through Ellis Island, tagged for Canadian farms served to intensify a problem with which the U. S. and Canadian immigration officails here have been grappling for the past three weeks.

Just at the time when the advent of cold weather and the ending of the summer farm activities brought about a scarcity of agricultural jobs in the Dominion, the Ellis Island officials were surprised by a sudden influx of farm laborers destined for Canadian points. Within the past three weeks over a thousand Italians cultural employment awaiting them in Canada, arrived at this port. Evbearing what purported to be documentary evidence that they had agriery Italian ship has brought its quota and almost every day there have been additions to the long list of cases to be dealt with by the officials at the island. Since September 1 the Canadian office at the island has had to deal with over 2,000 of these cases.

The Canadian immigration regulations provide for the admission of bona fide farm laborers who can show that they have "reasonable assurance" of employment in Canada. Every one of the immigrants now pouring in from Italy is provided with an affidavit declaring there is a place open for him on some Canadian farm. In view of the fact that the unfavorable season makes the prospect of agricultural employment extremely doubtful, the Canadian immigration officials here do not regard these affidavits as furnishing the "reasonable assurance" required by the regulations and the majority of the applicants for admission are being held pending investigation of their claims by the immigration authorties in Canada. As a result it has been necessary to set aside special detention quarters for these immigrants. For several weeks these Canadian-bound Italians were held at Ellis Island, but their numbers became so great that the routine of the U.S. immigration authorities was hampered, the space being required for immigrants passing through to the United States. Henry H. Curran, U. S. Commissioner of Immigration in charge of the island, then arranged to fit up quarters for them on Hoffman Island, one of a group of small islands at the quarantine station near the entrance to the harbor. To-night there were nearly 300 held at Hoffman Island awaiting the final decision of the Ottawa authorities.

Element of Fraud.

Investigtaion has shown that many of the affidavits carried by these immigrants have been obtained fraudulently. Officials here regard the sudden invasion from Italy as a systematic attempt to evade the regulations. In some cases the men are going to Canada but have no real farm jobs in prospect.

In many other cases the immigrant has no intention of going to Canada at all .And that is where the interest of the U.S. officials comes in.

"Many of the affidavits which these men carry have been secured by fraud," Mr. Curran said in explaining the situation to the Canadian Press to-day. "In some cases it has been found that the farmers signed them through misrepresentation and in other cases farmers whose names they bear have declared they never signed them. Many of these men have no intention of going to Canada at all.

Stay in New York.

"It is merely a dodge to beat the quota law. Many of those that have been passed are now in the United States. They drop off the train before they reach the border and all trace of them is lost. Some of them, I believe, drop off at 125th Street and remain right here in New York. In other cases they go to border points in Canada and after a few days slip quietly over the line into

LIBERALS HOLD FOUR SEATS IN QUEBEC HOUSE

Taschereau Candidates All Elected in Scattered By-Elections—No Change.

OLIVER IN BROME.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.— (Canadian Press:)—Four official Liberals, representatives of the Taschereau government in Quebec, were elected in by-elections to-day in Abitibi, Yamaska, Brome and Richmond.

The successful candidates were: C. J. Oliver in Brome, S. E. Desmarais, in Richmond, Hector Authier, in Abitibi and David Laperiere in Yamaska.

Newspaper Man Elected.

Abitibi County was created at the last session of the legislature. It is entirely a colonization region, the largest in the province and millions of dollars have been spent in its development in the past ten years. At the general elections last February Hon. J. E. Perrault, Minister of Colonization, Mines and Fisheries, was the candidate in addition to running in Arthabaska. He was elected in both counties and resigned as member from Abitibi. In the present contest the Liberal candidate is Hector Authier, proprietor of a weekly newspaper at Amos, the county seat, and a former crown lands agent. He is a former Montreal newspaper man. Mr. Authier was opposed by two other Liberals, Leonidas Boisevart and F. K. Gauthier.

Yamaska County was rendered vacant by reason of the elevation of Edourard Cullette to the Legislative Council. The Conservative candidate was Henri Niquet, farmer.

The election in Richmond County was due to the death of Georges Denault ,the Liberal candidate elected in the last election who died two days after his eletcion from pneumonia contracted during the campaign. The Conservative candidate was J. H. Cote, notary of Asbestos.

Succeeds Brother.

In Brome, the election was brought on by the death of the late member William R. Oliver, who died during the Mansonville typhoid epidemic. His brother Callin Oliver, of Mansonville, a merchant and farmer, the liberal candidate, was opposed by J. N. Gavignon, retired merchant of Knowlton.

The last members in the four seats were all Liberals. As a result of the voting to-day the position of the parties in the Quebec Provincial Legislature remains the same as it was after February elections, that is Liberal government 64, and Opposition 21.

Close in Yamaska.

Complete returns from the polling to-day will not likely be in the hands of the returning officers for several days. Enough was known to-night to indicate that only in Yamaska was the contest anyway close. Here the Liberal candidate, Mr. Laperiere looked as if his majority would be in the neighborhood of 80 as against the 200 odd his predecessor secured at the general election in a three-cornered fight.

In Richmond the Liberal has a majority of probably 400, an increase of Mr. Denault's plurality. Here Richmond town, which gave the Conservative candidate in the general election 276 majority to-day turned around and gave the Liberal candidate a majority of sixty. Mr. Oliver's advantage in Brome was conceded to be 700 or more, an increase of 400 over the majority of his deceased brother. In Abitibi Mr. Authier is conceded at least 500 majority in a three-cornered contest. Mr. Perrault was elected by over 2,000 majority.

RHINELAND REPUBLIC HAS NOT ENCOUNTERED OPPOSITION FROM BERLIN BUT SOME BLOOD SHED

Ten Wounded in Coblenz By Prussian Police — Population Indifferent, Believing No Regime Could Be Worse Than the Present.

ONLY POLICE ARMED.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The movement initiated in the Rhineland on Sunday for a republic is spreading, but only slowly according to latest despatches received here and generally speaking among the smaller towns. The news however, is full of repetitions and often contradictory and fails to give the impression to observers in Paris that the Rhineland has answered the call made to it with anything like unanimity although there is no record of any properly directed opposition to the movement from Berlin or elsewhere.

The executive committee of the "Free Rhineland Party' has assumed the leadership of the revolution and installed headquarters at Duren which is in the French zone, Leo Deckers and Dr. Guthardt have become commissioners for the Aix-la-Chappelle district and are following directions given to them by Joseph Matthes, the Separatist leader. Matthes has addressed a letter to the inter-allied high commission announcing the constitution of the provisional government which intends to enter into negotiations with the occupation authorities immediately.

Duren at the Capital

Duren was chosen as the provisional capital because it is the junction of several important railroads. The general staff is installed in a little villa in the Tivolistrasse. Many automobiles are stationed in the garden in front of the villa and motor cycles rush up and away incessantly giving the usually quiet a feverish aspect to which it is unacustomed.

The mayor of Duren explained that he acted in accordance with instructions from Berlin to the Rhineland municipalities ordering them not to recognize the legality of the movement but to remain in office.

Joseph Matthes went by automobile to Aix-la-Chappelle this afternoon where he found conditions quiet normal. The officials had not appeared for duty in the morning; so the Republicans posted an appeal to them to return announcing that the Separatist troops would be withdrawn from the public buildings as soon as order was assured. The cafes and picture houses were crowded today, but many shops were closed, the Separatists say because the merchants did not know the rate of exhange. It is expected that the newspapers will reappear to-morrow

Towns Join Movement

The Coblenz correspondent of the Havas Agency confirms the occupation by the Separatists of Russelsheim, Bernoastel Mayen, Duren and Badems and adds that Sarrburg and Pruem in the Treves area, and Linz in the Coblenz district have also gone over to the movement .

Muenchen-Gladbach, he reports, was occupied like the other places, without opposition and proclamations were posted in Crefuld, Montjoie and Erkelenz. No movement has been manifest in Treves, Coblenz or Bonn he declares.

These advices differ in some respects from dispatches received through Germany, declaring that the Separatists had little success at Fuenchen-Gladbach but on the contrary were successfhl at Bonn.

No Resistance

The correspondent of the Temps at Aix-la-Chappelle says the authorities there are not offering the least resistance but on the contrary have tendered their services to Leo Deckers and Dr. Guthardt the leaders of the movement. The completeness of the agreement and the peacefulness of the change, in which the only bloodshed was the killing of a man caught tearing down the proclamation of the provisional government, at first gave rise to the belief that the Berlin government was behind the movement, hoping thus to control it later says the correspondent but his opinion has been abandoned.

He describes the Rhinelanders as completely depressed and suffering under numerous decrees from Berlin which have paralyzed the economic life of the district "and have ended in killing in them that which made them vibrate to an appeal from the German Fatherland.

"They seemed to have reached the point of believing that no regime could be worse than the present," he writes. "The population appears indifferent but not hostile to the new regime, which may improve their lot."

Allies Neutral

The correspondent does not venture an opinion on the importance of Sunday's events. It must be remembered, he points out, that these Rhinelander guards are unarmed. The clubs they carry only detract from their peaceful appearance, he says, whereas the municipal police, the only German force in the Rhineland are armed. He believes the attitude of these local police will decide how things will turn, as the Allied troops and civil occupation authoritites are remaining neutral in the affair which is passing entirely between the Germans.

Deckers and Cuthardt are quoted as declaring "We wish to found a state like Belgium was before the war, which would prevent war. We expect difficulties notably in the British zone, owing to the non-impartial attitude of the occupying powers but the will of fifteen million inhabitants cannot be resisted.

"Matthes Smeets and Dorten are not connected with our movement but we are willing to co-operate with them. Their shuffling policy could only compromise the success of our movement.

BRITISH MAY NOT TOLERATE SEPARATION IN THEIR AREA

Disaffection of the Rhinel and Enters French Zone of Occupation—Several Towns Go Over Without Serious Resistance.

Brussels, October 22. — The Rhineland movement has entered the French zone of occupation, Separatists to-day taking over Muenchen-Gladbach, where the opposition was not serious, and also Berncastel and Treves. Erkelenz, near Aix-la-Chapelle, where the movement originated yesterday, was occupied without resistance.

Reports from Cologne lead to the belief in Belgian circles that the British will not tolerate the entry of the Separatists into their zone of occupation. The British are said to be unwilling to treat with any other than the Central government at Berlin.

It is confirmed that the proclamation of the Rhineland Republic was hastened by the apprehension of the Separatist leaders that Berlin had decided to favor the proclamation at Cologne of an autonomous Rhineland which would be obedient to the Central authorities.

C. H. HAMBLY WON LENNOX RIDING

Ferguson Says Victory Yesterday Endorsation Of His Government.

NAPANEE, October 23. Canadian Press. — The Liberal tenure of this riding was brief, C. H. Hambly, the standard bearer of the Conservative party, recapturing the Tory stronghold of Lennox yesterday, by a majority of 590 as compared with the Liberal lead of 117 won by the late Dr. Vrooman, at general elections in June last.

The Conservative candidate led over C. Woods in every sub-division with the exception of Amherst Island. His majority in this town was 89.

"The Government feels," said Premier Ferguson last night, when the result was known, "that this is an endorsation of the course we have pursued up to the present time. It is very gratifying because of the issue which was put plainly before the people not only by myself but other ministers. It gave the people an oportunity to pronounce upon the government's actions in the three or four months it has been in office."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 23 1923.

REV. FATHER J. J. O'BRIEN.

Citizens of Peterborough generally, regardless of their religious belief, will join with his parishioners in congratulating Rev. Father John J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination into the priesthood.

Rev. Father O'Brien has consistently shown himself to be not only a good priest but a good citizen.

His twenty-five years of service have been spent for the most part in the district at Lakefield, and for the last ten years at the Church of the Sacred Heart, the people of the county have had every opportunity to judge of his worth and his good qdalities.

He has ever been ready to assist those who were in distress, and in all things has conducted himself in a manner to win the regard not only of his parishioners, but of the citizens of Peterborough as a whole.

General congratulations will be extended to him upon arriving at his silver jubilee.

AN IMPORTANT SURVEY.

In connection with the campaign inaugurated by the Peterborough Rotary Club for the relief of the crippled children of the city and suburbs a canvass conducted by the wives of the Rotarians, assisted by the wives of members of the Kiwanis Clubs, is being made for the purpose of securing the preliminary information upon which the campaign will necessarily have to be based.

The city has been divided into districts, and every family in Peterborough will be visited.

On behalf of the canvassers, the Examiner bespeaks a courteous welcome for the ladies who have undertaken the work, and hopes that the desired information will be readily forthcoming.

Only by the cordial co-operation of the citizens can the survey be a complete success, as it is essential to the smooth working out of this splendid plan that the Rotary Club should be in possession as soon as possible of full information as to the number of crippled children in Peterborough.

It is the hope of the organization that eventually everything that can be done for such children, both in improving their physical condition and in providing ways and means for their education and training, will be carried out.

The first step, naturally, is to obtain all the facts in regard to those who are in need of such assistance, and therefore the preliminary survey now in operation is of the greatest importance.

A PLEA FOR THE BUFFALO.

The announcement some time ago that 2,000 buffalo at present in the Wainright National Park were to be slaughtered by Indians with bows and arrows for the benefit of a motion picture comany, caused considerable indignation.

It is now, however, declared that, although the Government considers it necessary because of the overcrowded condition of the National Park to reduce the herd by the killing of 2,000 buffalo, there is no intention of having them massacred as described.

That explanation is good so far as it goes, but many Examiner readers will agree with the Toronto man who denounces the slaughter of the surplus buffalo as folly.

"These buffalo," he points out, "should be taken to the Peace River country and turned loose to increase and multiply. There are millions of acres between Hudson Bay and the Mackenzie River valley where timber is sparse and where there is plenty of wild grass, and the buffalo could pasture and live through the winter with their warm coats, just as the great herds of caribou do. They would soon increase to great herds and ultimately be a source of food supply."

The suggestion contains possibilities that should be investigated before the death warrant of the buffalo is finally pronounced by the Government.

It sounds feasible, and if it proves so might be a much better plan than the first one proposed.

MUNICIPAL MISTAKES.

Reasons why a municipality requires even more skilled and careful guidance than a private corporation are set forthby the Ctizen's Research Institute whose findings along this line should be of interest to citizens of Peterborough.

For instance a municipality borrows wth comparative ease, the lender reflecting that no matter how money may be wasted, the municipality, through its taxing power still has that seemingly inexhaustible reserve—patient and indifferent citizens feom which to draw additional funds.

The municipal corporation has only to impose more taxes to meet deficits.

It pays no cash dividends and thus loses a practical incentive, important in private business for keeping down costs of operation.

And the Board of Directors of a Municipal Corporation may change rapidly in personnel making continuity of policy practically impossible.

These are all points that should be considered with the municipal elections only a little over two months away.

So, too, is the list of municipal mistakes pointed out by the same authority. Peterborough people would do well to check them over closely to see how many of them can be charged to the local civic administration.

1. Failing to plan work and expenditure more than one year in advance.

2. Making plans for the year's work and expenditures only after a large part of the year has passed, thereby rendering retrenchment difficult and increasing interest charges on temporary floating debt.

3. Inefficient administration of sinking funds through unsatisfactory investments, illegal or unsound appropriation, or failure to keep up to a sound actuarial standard.

4. Charging current expenditures against borrowed capital funds.

5. Pretending in the civic estimates that the expenditures will be less than everyone knows they will be.

6. Pretending in the estimates that the revenue, other than taxation, will be larger than it is reasonable to expect.

7. Spending up to the limit of the theoretical tax levy, rather than keeping within the limit of the taxes actually received.

8. Making no provision in the estimates for uncollectable taxes.

9. Multiplying independent civic departments.

10. Over-estimating the life of improvements.

11. Lax tax collection methods.

12. Putting a premium on extensive local improvements programmes by unduly increasing the city's share of the cost.

13. Developing large outside areas before inside areas are given complete facilities.

14. Making special concessions to industries by subscribing to stock, guaranteeing bonds, exempting from taxation, granting fixed assessments, supplying light, heat and power at uneconomic rates, etc.

15. Embarking on undertakings without adequate study.

16. Pretending that enterprises are self-sustaining when adequate provision has not been made for all costs of operation, including depreciation and taxes.

THE JURY DISAGREED.

"I am not surprised at any verdict a jury brings in nowadays." Words to that effect constituted the pungent criticism of the crown prosecutor in the murder trial just concluded in London, says the London Advertiser.

The verdict did come as a surprise—that states the case mildly. The charge of Mr. Justice Wright to the jury was very clear and very definite. He reviewed the evidence of men who swore they had seen the crime committed. Eyewitnesses to a murder are not often available, as a shooting is generally done in a secret place with no one around.

The movements of the accused were traced from the time they left London. The presiding judge could put his finger on the exact line which states that all parties who come together for the carrying out of an unlawful act are equally guilty in the eyes of the law, regardless of which one does the shooting.

There is sound reason for such a claim. Four men go to rob a bank. They arm themselves with revolvers so that they may be able to intimidate or, if necessary, shoot any person who interferes with the carrying out of their unlawful purpose. No one person is named to do the shooting; that will depend on the exigencies of the case as they develop before, during or after the robbery. They are all prepared to do it. The fact that any particular one does it is only an incident in the eyes of the law.

The jury hearing the evidence at the Court House here had every opportunity to do so under conditions that were fair. They had before them a score of people from the village of Melbourne, all of whom had something of importance to add to the sum total of the evidence submitted. They had two eyewitnesses who swore they saw the shooting being done, and they identified the person who fired the shot. Others told of the capture of the bandits; expert evidence was offered about the cause of death of Russell Campbell; a leaden bullet extracted from his body was named as the cause of death, and it fitted into the gun taken from one of the prisoners. The crown could not have had better material with which to work, nor could the material have been handled in a better manner than that accomplished by Crown Prosecutor Rigney.

It is not for this paper to say what the verdic' should have been, concludes the Advertiser. It is a fact that there is a very general and keen disappointment over the failure of the jury to come to a decision that would be in keeping with the evidence as produced in court.

THE NATION'S BREAD BASKET.

As harvesting operations near completion in the western provinces, the facts with regard to volume of wheat production for 1923 become more clearly defined, says the Ottawa Journal. At the moment, however, quantity is subordinate to quality, and in regard information is neither complete nor convincing. There would appear to have been considerable damage from rust which has more to do with lowering the grade than anything else. The southern districts of Manitoba have suffered most in that regard, and in some sections the average yield has been reduced to as low as five bushels to the acre. The northern districts hav fared better, both as to volume and grade, and will average 16 bushels to the acre.

Saskatchewan, which had the largest acreage under wheat, shows an average of about 25 bushels to the acre. Under normal conditions as to market price that would be highly satisfactory; but grain growers are still in contact with the inflation produced by the war for many things they have to buy. This naturally leads to discouragement although there is no power on earth able to bring about immediate relief. They are sufferers from economic conditions utterly beyond control. Were it not for the high cost of living the abundant crop in Saskatchewan this year would carry with it exceptional prosperity to the province.

Alberta is in a specially favorable position with 125,000,000 bushels of wheat to sell, as compared with 66,465,000 last year. The bulk of the crop will grade No. 1 and No. 2. In many districts the yield has run over 30 bushels to the acre, and few will fall below 25. This high measure of production will go a long way toward countervailing inflated commodity prices, since the cost of producton is reduced in proportion to the number of bushels per acre.

Canada is now disposing of her annual wheat crop in the form of flour on a larger scale than before the war. Prior to 1915 the average exports were 3,832,000 barrels; the present average is 7,885,000. This increase of 107 per cent. is gratifying from every point of view. Our millers have learned how to mix the various grades so as to produce the finest quality of baker's flour, and it is at the same time obvious that the country is getting the benefit from exporting a higher proportion of finished product. In that connection it is observed that the United States is steadily increasing her purchases of Canadan flour, and all authorities are now agreed tht the time is not far distant when our neighbors will have passed the point where they will have any surplus of either wheat or flour for export to Europe. When that time comes they will be compelled by considerations of self-interest to remove the hostile American tariff which now stands in the way of freer trade between the two countries.

ENCOURAGES EMIGRANTS.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 23—(Associated Press)—The new government is about to adopt a policy of taking over private estates under compulsion, if necessary, to facilitate the establishment of temporary training farms for emigrants. New arrivals will be allotted holdings of this land, and the immigration of boys to Australia is to be particularly encouraged.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 23.—There was a better clean-up of cattle at the Union Stock Yards last week than had been hoped. The tail end of the week absorbed a good part of Thursday's carry over, and only 350 head were held till yesterday.

Yesterday morning's receipts were 5,798 cattle, 611 calves, 1,727 hogs, and 4,906 sheep and lambs. With the billed through of 236, the total cattle offerings were about 6,000 head or well on to 1,000 less than last Monday.

There was a full proportion of what is termed the usual rubbish among the offering and a larger number of heavy steers for import purposes.

Only five loads of Western cattle were landed for yesterday. One load of plain 900-pound steers among these sold at 4 cents a pound. Good 800-pound native stockers sold from 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 cents a pound. Butchers' cows were steady, with poor mediums at 3 cents, and choice fat ones up to 6 cents. Baby beeves sold from 8 to 10 1-4 cents a pound.

Butchers complained again of the shortage of real good beef cattle of handy and medium weights. Yesterday morning's sales show the market steady to stronger, compared with last week.

Heavy shipments of calves from Montreal has disturbed this market, but mainly in the grassers. There is an easier feeling, but George Montgomery sold calves yesterday morning which were not extra choice at 11 cents a pound, so that, according to this price, are reasonably steady.

There was a good sized run of lambs, but sellers started asking a dollar a hundredweight higher. None moved until nearly eleven o'clock, when a load sold at 11 1-4 cents, and this was unchanged from Thursday last. Breeding ewes sold by the load at 7 cents a pound. Packers later took 500 lambs at 11 1-2 cents a pound.

A light run of hogs made for a strong feeling, but packers could not be induced to change their quotation from $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b., with 50 cents added for the fed and watered. It is not believed that the country is over-burdened with hogs, and the opinion is for any new change in prices to be in an upward direction.

One salesman said trades were being made at prices easily 25 cents a cwt. above the quotations, and one outside buyer was inclined to believe that the f.o.b. price would strengthen up to $8.25 a cwt.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, October 23 (Canadian Press). — Ideal weather for conditioning the corn crop led to a decided setback yesterday in the price of that cereal, and had a bearish effect on wheat, but gossip about the prospective amendment of the Capper Tincher Bill tended somewhat to rally the wheat market at the last.

The finish in wheat was unsettled at th same as Saturday's close to 3-8c down, with corn 1 to 3 cents lower, oats 1-4c to 5-8c off, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 12 cents advance.

With the corn market weak from the outset, wheat bulls were at a disadvantage, although the wheat market showed a little firmness during the first few minutes. The initial appearance of strength in wheat was ascribed to the fact that wheat shipments from North America were large, and that Liverpool quotations were higher. Unsettled conditions in Germany however and an increase of the United States visible supply were adverse factors, as was a bearish estimate of the Argentine crop.

Besides, France was said to have concluded arrangements with Russia for a large supply, and despatches at hand announced the lifting of Russian taxes on export grain.

As the day drew to an end, assertions which were current that President Coolidge was to investigate the merits of an amendment to the Capper Tincher Bill attracted notice in bullside of the wheat market. Bulls also put some stress on further talk about foreign credit plans in wheat exports from the United States.

In the corn market the fine weather was generally looked upon as the forerunner of big receipts. Demand for nearby deliveries was much less in evidence than has recently been the case. Oats declined with corn.

Provisions showed the effect of lower quotations on hogs, but later responded to continued good demands for meats.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, October 23 (Canadian Press). — Receipts, 5,190 cattle and calves, 720 hogs and 215 sheep and lambs.

There were exceptionally large offerings on the cattle market yesterday and trading was slow and dreary, with hardly enough business transacted to establish a price basis. Buyers are holding off, with indications of lower prices before the close of the day.

Sheep and lambs were in good demand at strong prices. Bulk of good killing lambs made $10.00, to $10.50; heavyweight sheep, $6.00 to $7.25.

The hog market was again unsettled, bidding opening at $8.00 for thick smooths, with a few sales at $8.25.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, October 23 (Canadian Press). — The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was slow yesterday. There were no new developments in the our market.

Trade in millfeed showed a steady demand and a fair business continued to be done in rolled oats.

There was no change in the condition of the baled hay market. A steady feeling prevailed in the egg market. The market for potatoes remains rather quiet.

An easier feeling prevailed in the butter market, and prices ruled fractionally lower. The tone of the market was easier for cheese.

HEAVY CHEESE EXPORT.

Week's Shipments Ahead of Last Year—Butter and Eggs Decline.

MONTREAL, October 23 (Canadian Press). — The movement of cheese from Montreal for export account was the largest of any previous of the season to date, and in consequence the trade in this respect was 82,639 boxes, which showed an increase of 24,381 boxes, as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 54,476 boxes with the same week last year, while the total receipts from 1st May to date have been 93,877 boxes in excess of the same period for 1922.

The export trade in butter last week was much quieter, the shipments being only 5064 packages as against 13,340 packages for the previous week, showing a decrease of 8,276 packages, and a decrease of 4,242 with the same week last year. The total exports for the season to date have been 70,010 packages as compared with 314,180 packages for the same period last year, showing a decrease of 244,170 packages.

The shipments of eggs last week to the British market were only 10,365 cases, which showed a decrease of 7,962 cases as compared with the previous week, and a decrease of 13,246 cases with the same week last year, while the total shipments for the season to date have been 33,258 cases smaller than the same period of 1922.

RHINELAND

"We are prepared to execute our reparation obligations under the Rhineland inhabitants but trust that the Allies will faciliate our task in return for the security they will at last attain."

Treves and Coblenz

Further places reached by the Separatist movement in the Rhineland, according to the Matin, are Treves, where the Dorten and Matthes organizations seized control without resistance; Coblenz where the burgomaster agreed to the demand of Dorten's party representative that the Rhineland flag be hoisted over the public buildings and Baden where the flag was also flown.

Rioting occurred at Mayence, says the corresponden, when people arriving from outside the city committed serious excesses under the pretext that they were connected with the Separaiss.

A despatch to Le Matin from Coblenz says that Burgomaster Russell of Coblenz assured Herr Zeiler, leader of the Rhineland local guard, that the Prussian police would be disarm and that there would be no bloodshed through the Separatist movement.

Ten Wounded

But, the despatch adds, when eighty Rhinelanders without arms, went to the City Hall at 12:30 o'clock today they were confronted by counter-manifestants who open fire with revolvers, seriously wounding ten of the Separatists. The Separatists declare they recognized police men in plain clothes among attacking party.

The "Blue" police intervened later under the pretext of restoring order, but blood already had been shed, the population of the city was more or less terrorized.

Successful Harvest Dinner.

A fowl supper held on Thursday night under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of St. Andrews' Church, Burnbrae, was the most successful held for many years. The church was beautifully decorated with plants and flowers for the occasion. The night being ideal, the people turned out in such numbers, coming from points as far as Foxboro and Belleville, that for a time the ladies despaired of being able to handle the situation.

From six o'clock until 9.30 there was a steady stream of people to and from the tables, which were not only beautifully decorated, but amply furnished with good things. The ladies, anticipating a large gathering, provided abundanec of chicken, so that after over 700 people had dined there were still some left.

The programmen began about 9.30 in the auditorium of the church, and was of a very delightful nature The church was filled to its utmost capacity, chairs filled the aisles and many were compelled to stand during the programme.

There were five ministers present in addition to the chairman, Rev. J. J. Black, who called the meeting to order and invited htis ministerial brethern to places reserved for them on the platform. CANNOT GET DRUNK ON MICHAEL'S WINE

Charge Against Millbrook Hotel-keeper of B.O.T.A. Was Dismissed.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 22.—(Special to the Examiner)—Before Police Magistrate, W. A. F. Campbell, Port Hope, George Raper, a hotel keeper at Millbrook, was charged with selling liquor to some young men of Cavan and Millbrook, in contravention to the Ontario Temperance Act.

He was tried this morning at Millbrook and a number of witnesses gave evidence as to purchasing from him St. Michael's wine—the effect of which was to make one of the party extremely sick, as he claimed that he had drunk the wine after he had eaten a large quantity of salted peanuts.

The young men were all of the age of twenty-one or under, and it was their first experience in drinking proprietary medicine, to a considerable extent.

Acting Crown Attorney Cochrane, of Cobourg, prosecuted, with Inspector George Goodrich, who laid the information. Mr. Cochrane very vigorously examined the witnesses, and alleged that there was considerable untruthfulness in the testimony.

However, the weight of evidence was, that St. Michael's wine did not cause intoxication to any of the persons who drank it; and Police Magistrate Campbell decided that, as there was no evidence that it was an intoxicant, he would require to dismiss the case against Mr. Raper.

This case has created a great deal of excitement, on account of the story going about the village, of considerable drinking taking place; and Inspector Goodrich was informed, through an anonymous letter of the condition; and he is attempting to stamp out the intemperance which is said to exist.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., of Peterborough, appeared for the defendant, and did not put him in the witness box, as he claimed that no evidence was given of the intoxicating nature of the drink; and further that conviction could not be made, under the Ontario Temperance Act. With this argument, Police Magistrate Campbell said he agreed, and promptly dismissed the case.

BRYANT CASE RESUMED.

Judge, However, Postpones Sentence to Give Accused an Opportunity to Prepare Appeal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.— When the case against Norris P .Bryant, stock broker, charged with having converted to his own use fifty shares of Canadian Cottons belonging to J. H. Turner, was resumed before Judge Cusson yesterday, W .K. McKeown, K.C., for the defence, stated that he had decided to accept the responsibility of not offering any evidence for the defence, but to stand upon the evidence of the Crown witnesses, which, as he stated, was insufficient to sustain a conviction, for the reasons urged in support of his motion for non-suit, denied last week.

Judge Cusson ,however, ruled that a conviction should be registered against Bryant, and declared the accused guilty. As, however, his Lordship was of the opinion that the case was a fit one for appeal he was inclined to grant a motion of the defence to take the case before the court of appeal and would therefore postpone sentence to October 31, so as to give the accused an opportunity to prepare his appeal, which Mr. McKeown asserted would be launched forthwith.

Phillipe Brais appeared for the Crown.

WARKWORTH GIRL INJURED IN ACCIDENT NEAR CAMPBELLFORD

Automobile Crashed Into Telephone Post When Rim of Wheel Was Cast —Writ Issued For False Arrest.

"MOONSHINE" FOUND.

(By Staff Reporter)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 23 — The Campbellford Cheese Board met yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber with only six factories represented out of a possible total of seventeen.

Robert Inness occupied the chair and G. A. Kingston, the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting on October 13th when 355 boxes of cheese were boarded at a price of 20 1-2. At yesterday's meeting, when only these buyers were present George Ivey, T. H. Thompson and J. Cook, 252 boxes of cheese were boarded.

George Ivey opened the bid at 19 cents J. Cook raised it to 19 1-16, and George Ivey fell into line at that price with no further bids, J. Cook took the products of the following factories; Brae 55; Kimberley 35; Trent Valley 30; a total of 120 boxes; and George Ivey took the balance 132 boxes; New Model 21; W. Seymour 75; Woodlands 36, a total of 132 boxes, all white cheese.

A report of prices paid on Belleville board at last week's meeting when 19 1-4 was paid for white cheese and 20 1-2 for colored led some of the makers to protest against the Campbellford Board.

"Those who are staying with the board are losing money," "those who who stepped out of the board are beating us all to pieces we are being sacrificed for the other fellow, and the men who remained loyal to the board should get the best price," were some of the remarks made.

It was decided to hold the next regular meeting of the Board on the 3rd of November at 4.30 p.m. It was also announced that a district dairy meeting would be held in Warkworth on December 18th.

George Van Volkenburg present at yesterday's meeting, was appointed delegate from the Board to the meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairy Association to be held in Kingston in January.

Police Court News

Yesterday morning, William Graves of Campbellford faced a fine of $200 and costs in the Police Court for a breach of the O.T.A. Up to last night, the fine had not been paid and Mr. Graves faced the prospect of spending some time in Cobourg jail, while his wife and six small children waited for him at home. On Saturday night, Alfred Clark of Campbellford was arrested in an intoxicated condition. His memory of where he purchased the cause of his inebriated state served him well enough to let him off with a payment of costs of $15, and the service of a summons on William Graves, whose place, when searched yielded a find of three bottles of moonshine

Mr. Graves came to Campbellford from Haliburton, just one week ago, and Chief of Police Duncalfe was informed of a similar charge awaiting him at his late place of residence

Allege False Arrest

A case of false arrest at Campbellford resulted this morning in the Chief of Police receiving a letter from Messrs. Gordon & O'Brien of Peterboro, recording an action for $2,000 damages for "malicious prosecution and false arrest," laid by Frank McDonald, a Hydro Electric Company's employee at Campbellford, who was arrested on Thursday last on a charge of being implicated in the case involving the finding of a still on a farm property near Hastings. Chief C. Duncalfe received a wire on Tuesday from Provincial Constable Couzens, who is taking Provincial Constable Boyd's place at Cobourg, to arrest McDonald, and did so under protest, warning the Provincial officer that McDonald was innocent of the charge, in his opinion. McDonald removed from Hastings to Campbellford in August last.

Automobile Accident

Last evening, four young people motoring from Warkworth came to grief just outside the corporation limits, near the home of William Jordan, on the Hastings road. A young man named Nelson, son of Wilbert Nelson of Warkworth, was driving his car into Campbellford with another young man and two lady companions one Miss Curtis, a daughter of C. H. Curtis of Warkworth and Miss Walker of Warkworth

They noticed a grey horse and rig standing at the roadside and swerved to the right to avoid it. One of the rims of the car flew off and the machine collided with a telegraph pole, smashing the right front wheel, the fender, the hood and the windshield. Miss Curtis was badly stunned and cut about the face by the flying glass. Her right knee was bruised also ,and her injuries required the attention of Dr. Richardson.

However, it is an ill wind that blows nobody good .D. W. Douglas, of Campbellford, commissioned to bring the wrecked car into their garage, made the sale of a new automobile to Mr. Nelson and took over the remains of the accident as part payment.

At the School.

Fine weather has helped on the progress of the new school work. Yesterday the last of the two steel beams was being placed in position, the second boiler was being installed ,and the electricians had started working on the interior of the structure. The electrical contract has been sub-let to Messrs. Forsyth and Company of Toronto, the plumbing, heating and ventilating contract to Messrs. Mason and Hawkrigg, of Campbellford, and the lathing and plastering to E. J. Currie of Toronto. The building will be ready for the plasterers in a fortnight's time, and a week will see the bricking completed and the roof on. The sewer connection, all but the main feed, is in place.

Chautauqua Meeting.

A meeting of the men who are supervising the bringing of the Redpath Chautauqua to Campbellford on November 1st, 2nd and 3rd, was held last Friday evening. It was decided to hold the entertainments in the curling rink, and to charge $1.75 for the course tickets. Single event tickets will be charged for at $3.50, and school children will be accommodated for the six events at a price of $1. The price guaranteed to the Chautauqua people is $490. The Beemerside, the junior chapter of Campbellford, will look after the sale of tickets, and receive excess profits, if any, from the holding of the course.

An idea advanced for the use of the Memorial fund which Campbellford is interested in, is the erection of a building suitable for the holding of entertainments, as the cutting off of the former community hall by turning it into a movie palace has resulted in an inconvenient condition of affairs in the pleasant little town.

To-night a Masonic banquet is being held in Campbellford and a tea meeting takes place at Stanwood. On Thursday evening of this week, the Boy Scouts hold their first meeting of the season, for the purpose of arranging a suitable programme for the winter season.

LONDON RESIDENTS WANT MORE ACTION

Ask For a Special Court To Try Murrell And Williams.

LONDON, October 23 (Canadian Press). —Representations have been made by the County Crown Attorney-General of Ontario for a special Court to again try Sydney Murrell and Slim Williams on the charge of murdering Russell Campbell at Melbourne, the jury last week at the Assizes having failed to agree.

The people of Melbourne have been chagrined, it is said, by the fact that Ernest Norton and William Murrell, two more men wanted in connection with the killing of Campbell, have not been apprehended, and arrangements were being made to hold a mass meeting this week to pass resolutions and forward them to the Attorney-General on the subject, when it became known that the Crown Attorney had already been moving along the lines the residents of Middlesex desire.

It was intended asking for a special Court to try Sydney Murrell and Williams again rather than wait for the next Assizes in January, for more effective action in the pursuit of William Murrell and Norton, for the appointment of a Crown prosecutor who would be familiar with the case and district, and for a proper search for the clothing of Russell Campbell when he was shot, and also for the bullet that was taken from the victim's body.

United States Vessel Owners Agree to Shippers Filing Contracts Before Loading.

FOR GRAIN TRADE.

WINNIPEG, October 23 (Canadian Press). — The following wire has been received by Leslie Boyd, chairman of the Canadian Grain Commission, from Cleveland, Ohio, following yesterday's meeting of the United States shipowners in connection with the Canadian grain movement;

"Mr. Rathbone's circular notice to vessel managers of 19th October has been received. Has to-day been considered by the majority of the United States managers, who have authorised me to send you the following message: Your notice that you are prepared to accept as compliance with Section 3 of the Inland Water Freight Rates Act of 1923, either (a) the filing with the Board of Tariffs by vessel owners or (b) the filing by shippers before loading, of copies of charter or contract for space the vessel owners here represented will decline to file such tariffs. We can have no objection to the filing by the shippers before loading, of copies of charter or contracts for space, as this so far as the vessel is concerned restores and preserves our right of contract and places no obligation on the ship; it would, of course, not affect the reasonableness of the rates because we assume that before the shipper definitely closes his contract with the vessel he has due approval of the Government.

"With this understanding we see no objection to United States vessels taking Canadian grain as in previous years. Please confirm.

"(Signed) W. H. McGean, Chairman, Vessel Owners' Committee."

ELEVATORS FILLING.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., October 23 (Canadian Press). — Following the lull in grain shipments due to bad weather on the lakes, the week-end shipments jumped to over 5,000,000 bushels carried out in twenty-eight bottoms, including a number of United States ships.

The W. Grant Morden took out the record cargo for the two days, with 452,000 bushels of wheat in her hold.

While this quantity of grain went out, receipts are keeping up to the limit, and the Canadian Pacific Railway will unload the record number of cars that the company has ever delivered to the elevators, it being expected that nearly 1,500 will be unloaded, the highest number on record so far being 1,401.

Some of the elevators reported at the end of the week that they were becoming filled up.

EX-MEMBERS OF IMPERIALS MAY GET A HEARING

Plan Received From The Imperial Ministry Of Pensions.

BENEFIT MEN HERE

OTTAWA, October 23. — Canadian Press. — A definition of the arrangements under which ex-members of the Imperial forces resident in the Dominions may be considered for pensions or treatment, is set forth in a statement received yesterday by the Dominion Command G.W.V.A. from the Imperial Ministry of Pensions. This definition has been issued as a result of direct representations to the Ministry during the recent session of the British Empire Service League in London, R. B. Maxwell, past-Dominion president of the G.W.V.A. acted on behalf of Canadian Veterans. The procedure is set forth as follows:

Re-Survey Boards. — Officers in Canada and all ranks in Australia and Newfoundland are boarded by the Dominions pension authorities in time to allow the Ministry of pensions to make a new award of pension (at the rate recommended by the Dominion) without break in payment. If there is delay in payment which is not due to the pensioner's own fault, Australia and New Zealand renew retired pay or pension provisionally, subject to confirmation by the Minister. In the case of officers in Canada, if the board report does not arrive in sufficient time the Ministry authorities retired pay so as to ensure continuation of payment. All ranks in South Africa and other ranks in Canada have their disabilities assessed and pensions renewed by the Dominions pension authorities, subject to confirmation by the Ministry. The arrangements made with each dominion ensure that there shall be no break in the payment.

Treatment and Treatment Allowances. All the principal Dominions arrange treatment for disabilities accepted by the Ministry as due to or still agravated by service in the great war, the forms of treatment (i.e., in-patient, out-patient, etc.) being the same as that provided for members of their own forces. Treatment allowances at Imperial rates are payable under the usual conditions. Both treatment and the payment of allowances can begin immediately without prior reference to this country. The Dominions being fully instructed as to the condition of eligibility under imperial regulations and the payments to be made.

First Entitlement Class. — In all Dominions applicants are boarded by the Dominion pension authorities, and the claim (with the Dominion recommendations on it) is submitted to the Ministry of pensions, for decision. In-patient treatment is provided, if urgently needed, pending the settlement of entitlement, but neither pension nor allowance can be paid until the decision of the Ministry is received. If the decision is favorable, payment is made with arrears.

LESS WORK FOR POLICE OF CITY

The Provincial Police Will Look After O.T.A. Prosecutions.

TORONTO, October 23 (Canadian Press). — A move indicative that the separation of the O. T. A. enforcement and criminal investigation is near at hand was made yesterday when the city police were instructed not to make any further prosecutions against standard hotels in Toronto for breaches of the O. T. A.

From now on, if there are any complaints, the city police will forward them to Chief Inspector Ayearst of the License Department.

Directions to the city police came following another conference at the office of the Attorney-General, attended by members of the Board of License Commissioners, Inspector Ayearst ,and Commissioner of Provincial Police General V. A. S. Williams.

Officers on criminal investigation throughout the Province are known to favour the separation of O. T. A. enforcement from the routine criminal work.

NEEDY SUFFERERS RECEIVE INSULIN

First Month's Trial Show Good Results in Distribution.

TORONTO, October 23 (Canadian Press.) — One hundred and sixty-one needy sufferers from diabetes benefited by the Provincial Government's policy of free distribution of insulin during the first month's trial.

Insulin to the extent of 114,000 units was dispensed by 15 laboratories in Ontario, and the cost to the Province amounted to $2,281.

These facts are incorporated in a report covering the operation of the Government's recently adopted polity for the month of September.

The report was handed to the Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health, yesterday afternoon.

Some Families Are Never Ill

UNFORTUNATE are the children whose parents fully realize the seriousness of constipation. Hospital records prove that 75 per cent of all disease originates in bowel obstruction, or constipation. Young children cry because of it; school children are hampered in their studies; grown people are made 25 per cent less efficient; elderly people's blood pressure increases 28 per cent. Clara M. Smith, Big Valley, Alberta, recommends Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin for all, and especially for children and old folks; Mrs. Bettles, 8 Napanee St., Toronto, keeps it always in the house for family use.

Largest Selling Laxative

Every up-to-date family medicine chest should contain a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin, a compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and palatable aromatics, a prescription written 30 years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who practiced medicine 47 years. You can buy a bottle in any store where medicines are sold, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

We guarantee that if you will give Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin to a child or for a few nights to an adult it will relieve any case of constipation no matter how chronic, or your money will be refunded.

10 Million Bottles a Year

Use it once and you will never again take coal-tar drugs in candy form, calomel or salts. Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a vegetable laxative free from opiates and narcotics. It can be safely given to infants, yet it effectively moves the bowels of adults. It acts gently: does not cramp or gripe. Keep it in the house and use it for any indication of bowel obstruction such as constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, dyspepsia, pimples and like skin eruptions. James Lyons, Minister of Lands and Forests, advocated the building of a highway from Sault Ste. Marie to Winnipeg at a largely attended luncheon of the Canadian Club yesterday. He said the road could be built from Fort William to Winnipeg without much difficulty. The only difficult portion would be from Port Arthur to the Soo. He hoped to have engineers shortly at work on a survey round the north shore of Lake Superior to make one of the finest scenic highways in the world.

THIRD RESPITE FOR MURDERER

Counsel Will Argue Certain Technicalities in the Trial.

MONTREAL, October 22. — A third respite has been granted for Wilfrid St. Onge, who was condemned to hang on Friday of this week, for the murder of an old cobbler, Nestor Gavrilovitch, of this city. The capital sentence was set originally for June 10 last; it was postponed to October 26 and now it is further removed to January 15th next. These stays of execution have been granted in order that the counsel for the defence may argue on certain technicalities in the process of the trial.

The crime was committed on the night of April 1, 1922, and two men were charged, Emile Trudeau and Wilfrid St. Onge. The case came up in the court of King's Bench last November when the charge against Trudeau was abandoned and there was disagreement of the jury at the trial of St. Onge.

The latter was again tried at the March term this year and found guilty. The prisoner is 2 years of age.

this country. In the past few weeks all these cases have been carefully investigated and we are receiving splendid co-operation from the Canadian authorities in preventing this evasion of the U.S. law."

At the Canadian office it was declared that the claims of every applicant for admission to Canada were being given a very rigid examination and every effort was being made to prevent fraudlent entry. In every case where there is doubt as to the bona fide nature of an applicant's papers, he is held until his case can be thoroughly investigated by the immigration officials in Canada. It has been found necessary to reject 45 per cent. of the cases that have come before the Canadian officers since Sept. 1. Those that are at all doubtful are held for investigation and final decision by Ottawa and where it is found the applicant is not a bona fide farm laborer with a real job awaiting him in Canada he is deported. On Saturday, 45 who failed to gain admission to the Dominion started back for Italy on the steamship Conde Verdi. On Friday the steamship Dante Alleghiere sailed with sixty-five who had been rejected.

Inviting Trouble.

"Those who are attempting to enter Canada in defiance of our regulations as well as those who are hoping to find a loop-hole for entry into the United States through this office are merely putting themselves to a lot of trouble and expense for nothing," one of the officials of the Canadian office declared. "We are putting every case through the acid test and will not hesitate to deport every man found to be misrepresenting his claims to admission While a few who were not honestly entitled to admission may have slipped through some weeks ago before the big rush came, since we became aware of this little scheme we have not passed a single case without assuring ourselves by a thorough investigation that no fraud is contemplated. Those who hope to pass through this office by means of fraudulent papers might just as well stay at home and save their time and ours."

The government, under Colonel Gonatas, is taking measures to put down the revolt, and claims to have the situation in hand.

Canadian Stock Exchange ——And Mines—— | New York Stock Exchang —— and Curb Prices - —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. — (United Press).—The spread of the Separatist movement in the Rhineland and internal disorders in Greece were ignored by the stock market, which all the year has taken the attitude that the prime consideration was the domestic business situation. The news affecting trade conditions was mostly favorable, but prices in the general list at the opening continued under the influence of the slight technical set-back, which marked the previous session. Some further re-actions took place in U.S. Rubber, American Locomotive, Studebaker, Baldwin and Dupont. These losses, however, were confined to fractional areas and the market showed a steady undertone.

Woolworth reached a new 1923 high at 276. Davison Chemical's new high on the movement was a feature. Studebaker rallied fractionally in response to President Erkine's statement to Dow Jones that the third quarter output exceeded 40,000 cars, against 43,680 in the record quarter.

FEAR POWER SHORTAGE IN ONTARIO PROVINCE INSIDE NEXT FIVE YEARS

Sir Adam Beck Points Out Demand For Electrical Energy Growing Greater Than the Supply—Situation Must Be Met.

GENERATE BY STEAM

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—(Special).—Stressing the very great danger of the demand for electrical power in Ontario becoming greater than the supply, a demand which, according to present indications, might easily make itself felt inside the next five years, Sir Adam Beck told the Examiner to-day that the Hydro Commission has plans under consideration, calling for the construction of steam plants for the generation of electricity and the production of the by-products in those parts of the Province where the need seems imminent.

A Serious Thing.

"A power scarcity in Ontario would be a very serious thing," he declared. "It is true that at the present time no such scarcity exists, but if the demand continues to increase the way it has been doing of late, Hydro facilities will not be sufficient to meet it. There must be some supplementary source of power. It will be too late to wait until the actual need arises; now is the proper time to get ready.

Resort to Steam.

"After careful investigation I have come to the conclusion that steam generated electricity must be called into use."

Sir Adam pointed out that with the generation of power by steam certain by-products of a valuable nature, such as gas, coke and coal substitutes of various kinds, and other coal-tar products, would be made available. He said that he has been particularly impressed with the possibilities of using steam as the result of a recent trip of inspection which he has made to the Ford plant at Detroit.

At the present time the Ford Company has a plant under construction for the generation of electricity by steam. The company is said to be a pioneer in this field. The plant is being installed by New York engineers. It is the intention of the Hydro Commission to watch carefully the results accomplished by this plant, and to base their own scheme on the experiment which the Ford people are undertaking. The Ford plant will have a generating maximum of 15,000 horse power. Sir Adam intimated that when the provincial plants are constructed they will have a capacity of no less than 1,000 horse power.

A Big Proposition.

Questioned regarding the probability of government cooperation Sir Adam declared that he did not anticipate any trouble from this direction.

"It is too big a question to quibble over," he said. "There must be complete cooperation provincially, dominionally, and even internationally in order to cope with the power situation which is bound to arise in the not far distant future.

He said that he supposed that the Commission would be criticised for contemplating entering this new field of work. "I suppose we will be asked why we do not go in for the production of automobiles," he said laughingly. "But this is a very serious question," he went on, "and I know that the Government will give it every consideration."

In reply to a question as to where he thought it would eventually be necessary to establish such plants, Sir Adam stated that he could not say definitely, but the names of Windsor, Toronto, and Port Stanley were held out as possibilities. He was unable to say how cheaply power could be produced in that way, but he thought that the disposal of the by-products would help out materially.

He pointed out that it would take only about a year to get a plant of this sort in operation, whereas the installation of Hydro plants as contemplated in the St. Lawrence region and elsewhere would probably take five years or more.

"And what will we do if the demand for power exceeds the supply in the meantime?" Sir Adam asked.

NO STATEMENTS AS TO ITALIAN IMMIGRANTS

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — Canadian Press. — No statement is yet forthcoming from the Department of Immigration in regard to the arrival at New York of 225 Canada-bound Italian immigrants who hoped to pass through Ellis Island as "farm laborers."

The conditions described in the despatch are understood to be under investigation by the officials of the Department in New York, and it is said that a statement will be given out when reports are received from them.

FORECASTS BRITISH GENERAL ELECTION

Resulting on Premier's Proposal For Change in Britain's Fiscal System

LONDON, October 23. — Canadian Press Cable by George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent. — What will Premier Baldwin say on Thursday to the chiefs of his party? This is a query over which political circles here are agog with speculation for it is felt generally that what he has to tell them is likely to have a vital bearing on the British fiscal relations with the Dominions, and the course of the Imperial conference.

The Daily Express to-day forecasts that Premier Baldwin at the Conservative conference at Plymouth will declare for a change in the British fiscal system sufficiently drastic to entail a general election. His proposals are predicted as follows:

All round protection of home industries by means of scientific tariff, no tax on imported wheat or meat, with preference to the Dominions; revenue derived from a scientific tariff would be devoted to subsidizing shipping freights from Australia and New Zealand; giving a bounty on corn production; subsidizing cotton growing within the Empire and the shipment of this raw cotton to Great Britain.

The Express adds that the "Conservative party and those who guide its councils are by no means unanimous as to the wisdom of taking a renewed plunge into the deep waters of protection."

CULLING THE STOCK

By the use of the trapnest the flock may be accurately culled so that only those birds which have given a profitable production need be retained; but for the vast majority of farmers and poultry keepers this method is not practicable in that trapnesting takes more time than they are able to devote to it. Therefore it becomes necessary for those who do not use trapnests to use the less certain, but still practicable, method of culling by visual evidence.

The heavy-laying hens will be sprightly and active in appearance, will have a clean-cut head, lean face and prominent eyes, a large moist vent and a full abdomen which will be soft and pliable. After she has laid heavily for a time, if she is of the yellow-skinned variety, the color will have faded from her vent, eye-ring, beak and shanks, and her plumage will look the worse for wear, the feathers of the tail in all probability being badly broken from rubbing against the sides of the nest box.

It is safe to cull all birds that show decidedly weak constitutions; those that show great age; and those that are coarse in the head, thick in the skin and show heavy internal deposits of fat. This last condition is evidenced by a full hard abdomen. Besides these indications there are others—the opposite of what is expected in a good layer—that, taken collectively, are fairly sure.

A dry puckered vent, or a dry shrivelled comb, indicate that the hen is not laying at the time; rich yellow legs and beak usually indicate either that the hen has laid very few eggs or that she has taken a sufficiently long rest to allow the color time to return; smooth lustrous plumage indicates that there has probably been no great drain on the system and unbroken plumage indicates that she has probably not spent much time in the nest.

While it takes experience to cull accurately where close culling is desired, the wise poultry keeper will not hesitate to make a start, as the rank wasters may be readily recognized even by the inexperienced. With increased experience close culling may be practised.

IDLE

Germany, two months behind with statistics, reports that in May she had more unemployed than at any time since the armistice The jobless included 420,000 members of labor unions.

This is a lot more serious for the world than anything that could happen to Germany financially. The chances of steaming reparations out of Germany depend on keeping the Germans at work. And radicalism grows in unemployment like a weed in rich garden soil. In addition to the 420,000 totally unemployed, nearly four times as many were working only part time.

REV. CANON VERNON ELOQUENT DIVINE

Conducted Mission For One Week at Millbrook.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 23.—Rev. Canon Vernon, of Toronto, who conducted a week's Mission in the parish of Millbrook and Cavan and held services in St. Thomas church on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings last week with early communion each morning at 8 o'clock, has urged the watchword, "He calleth thee" during the Mission, and has delivered deeply spiritual discourses, heart-searching in their plainly spoken teaching.

The congregation was depleted in numbers by the unfavorable weather on Friday evening, but for those who did attend Canon Vernon's message on "The Reality of the Saviour in the Light of the Cross," was a source of enlightenment and blessing. Pilate's question to the angry, turbulent Jews, "What shall I do with Jesus which is called Christ?" has gone down through the ages and its answer means a personal choice for each individual soul. Jesus once asked His followers, "What think ye of Christ?" with the intent of establishing their personal conviction of His Messiahship. Right thinking is necessary to right action and right belief has a very definite relation to character and is the first step toward a right life.

Reality of God

The reality of God is an incontrovertible fact, His power and majesty are infinite, and His loveliness and beauty of transcendant quality—He is the Altogether Lovely One, Who is Love. Sin and suffering, and misconception, and sorrow, and death are stern realities which make it absolutely necessary that God should reveal Himself and His unchanging love in Nature, through the prophets ("holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost"), and in other ways, though these do not give a perfect revelation but rather a gradual and progressive leading up to something brighter and better. "Hath in these last days spoken to us by His Son," the writer to Hebrews tells us, and the only perfect revelation is in the Man, Christ Jesus, the "only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

He knew real temptation, hence His complete understanding of our case; hunger, thirst, loneliness, misunderstanding, appeal to ambition and possessions—all these thrust their sharpest darts striving to bring about His fall. He had to make choice whether of the world's best, or whether His royal robe should be the mocking purple, His crown of thorns, His throne a cross, and the adulation accorded Him, mocking, cruel scourging, and buffeting. In Him human nature was inseparably united with the Godhead and we believe in the reality of Christ for at least three reasons. First "never man spake like this Man," "He spoke as on having authority," and the vital difference between Christianity and the other three great religions of the world, Buddhism, Confucianism and Mohammedanism, lies in the fact that not one of these is centred in a Person, while the essence of our faith is not the Bible, nor the church, but Jesus Christ, for "Christianity is Christ."

A Sinless Character

Again we note His sinless character: "Which of you convinceth Me of sin?" was His challenge such as none other has ever dared throw out. Much discussion arises over the Virgin Birth but belief in that revealed fact is steadfast if we reason from the end to the beginning gaining our faith in it as an actual fact because of His virgin (stainless, spotless) life—the logical outcome of a miraculous, Virgin Birth.

Lastly from personal experience we confidently assert the reality of our Saviour "we know in whom we have believed," so like Thomas we fall down in adoration and exclaim, "My Lord, and my God." So we come back to the question, "What shall I do with Christ?" The reality of sin makes the need of a Saviour imperative, and the cross is not only the revelation of love but of what sin really is. It is not merely a "defect of the blood," "an outworking of heredity," its appeal is set forth in the early chapters of Genesis —"and when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof." The desire of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, mark its manner of approach and progress. We see, think, want to take and the essence of sin is its exercise of the human will choosing evil instead of good. Even little sins not only soil the Christians' character but make sad havoc of his piety. In the light of the cross we see it in its real colors for "Christ, Who knew no sin, was made sin for us" and this awful fact is revealed in His despairing of intensest agony, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?". The blackness of our sins veiled the Father's face from the suffering Saviour, and to remove that cloud Christ died that at the foot of His cross we might find forgiveness and peace.

Just as I am without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come, I come.

A Special Address

The Mission was concluded on Sunday evening, when Rev. Canon Vernon spoke on "The Reality of the Holy Spirit." A special address was given to the combined Sunday Schools of the parish who gathered at St. Thomas' church at 3 p.m., and at the conclusion of that service the Woman's Auxiliary were privileged to listen to an excellent talk on the social service work of the church. The A.P.Y.A., the Woman's Auxiliary, and the choir members made the early morning celebration of the Lord's Supper their corporate Communion, a good representation from each of these organizations being in attendance.

Richard Hall & Son Limited

The Quill Pen

The quill pen has fought its last battle against the steel and fountain pen—and lost. Philip Cooper of London, whose company used to ship as many as three million quill pens at a time to the Indian government, announces that they've quit making quills.

The Southwark County Court in England has been the last stronghold of quill pens. The court clung to them as a matter of sentiment, a link with the olden days. But even this court recently discontinued quills and adopted fountain pens.

Such quill pens as will be made in the future will be the decorative kind that are parked in a jar of birdshot on milady's writing desk.

Philip Cooper gives "no market" as the chief reason for going out of the quill manufacturing business. Another reason is that he no longer can find a workman who knows the art of making them.

The craftsmanship involved in making quills was intricate and required a skill found in few trades. The art was handed down from father to son. As with beating out gold leaf, it was said that a quill pen maker was born, not made.

The quill pen served many generations to whom it was the leading instrument of making records and writing letters. Its passing is symbolic of the fate of all man-made devices. The new and improved inevitably becomes the antiquated and obsolete.

The fountain pen is "handier," but experts claim that the best grade of quill pen—made from a wild goose of Hudson Bay—is the finest instrument for writing in the world. These top-notch quills sold in hundred-lots for about 13 cents apiece—in the old days when 13 cents was considerable money.

Wonder what will eventually put the fountain pen out of business.

Recommends Vicks For Baby's Colds

Nova Scotia Mother Swears by Vaporizing Salve.

Some children seem to take one cold after another—never have a chance to build up any strength. This is apt to make them puny and delicate—just sets them back for months.

Every day more and more mothers are finding that they can best break up a cold with Vicks VapoRub, the externally applied vaporizing salve. While it acts like a liniment or plaster, it is also inhaled as a vapor, and so gets into the throat and lungs immediately. The cold is often broken up over night.

Vicks is prompt, too, in croup and equally good for skin hurts and itchings.

Mrs. Sherman Black of 3 Silver St., Amherst, Nova Scotia, writes: "I tried Vicks VapoRub on my thirteen-months' old baby, who had bronchitis. It relieved his breathing when he was choked. Vicks was also good for my other little boy who had the croup. I advise anyone who has a cold of any kind to use Vicks. I think it is the very best remedy I have ever tried, and I have tried many, for bronchitis. I even sent to England to get medicine, but none is as satisfactory as Vicks."

At all drug stores 50c a jar. For a free test size package, write Vick Chemical Co., 344 St. Paul St., W., Montreal, P. Q.

Though Vicks is new in Canada it has a remarkable sale in the States. Over 17 million jars used yearly.

WHAT EUROPE MEANS TO AMERICA'S FARMS

"Europe is a market we can't do without and the American farmer is ready to help steady Europe if there is a practicable way of doing it, because a steady Europe means a stable market," asserts Charles Merz in "Our World" for October, in a striking article on "What Europe Means to the American Farmer." His statements are backed up by quotations from such authorities as Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture; Senator Capper of Kansas, Senator Brookhart of Iowa, Alexander Legge, President of the International Harvester Company; E. T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture; Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and J. W. Shorthill, Secretary of the Farmers' National Grain Dealers Association. Mr. Merz writes:

"There are two pictures of the farmer.

"He has turned his back, in one of them, upon the whole scene in Europe. Arms folded. From the tilt of his hat you can see 'America is good enough for me—I don't want to hear about your newfangled continent. Don't interrupt me while I think.'

"That is one picture. In the other there's a megaphone. It is pointed straight at Europe. This same farmer has it at his lips, 'Hey! how about it?' he is shouting. 'What's the matter over there? Why don't you buy some wheat?"

"Put a few years back on the calendar, and the first picture looks about the way it ought to look. Europe, in the first days after the war's end, seemed a good place to forget. It was the irony of the situation that while the farmers cared least for all things European, they needed Europe most.

"For the farmers, after all, are the greatest people in the country when it comes to foreign trade—however little they may think about it between seasons. Compare the farms and factories. The latter can do fairly well at home: only three per cent of their total production must seek markets overseas. But for the farms it is another story. Even before the war fifteen per cent of all that the farms produced was shipped abroad—and chiefly to the ports of Europe. That fifteen per cent was the surplus over our domestic needs. And frequently it happened that the surplus set the price for the entire crop.

"Only this difference did the war make: the bump was harder when it came. With Russia, Rumania and Bulgaria out of the running—three great producers of wheat and oats and corn—the farmer in America began to sow more grain. We had 46 million acres in wheat before the war; the figure jumped to 60. We had 101 millions sown in corn; we raised it to 116. Eight million more in oats; that acreage nearly doubled.

"Small wonder that the farms were badly hit by what followed. Our own Government threw overboard the Grain Corporation, raised the discount rate of the Federal Reserve. Meantime Europe bought less grain. Shipments dropped—have been moving down a peg each year since war days; 758 million dollars' worth of cereals for Europe in 1921; 515 million last year. A quarter of a billion dollars' difference.

"No one denies that the American farmer has been forced to take a heavy loss, in the collapse of Europe as a market. The only difference of opinion is about what will happen next. Two schools of prophets disagree. One foresees hard times. The other plucks up courage. But neither has the slightest doubt about the central factors in the situation.

"Europe is a necessary market for our surplus farm production.

"Arthur Capper, Senator from Kansas and Leader of the Farm Bloc, says, 'For more than two years Europe's disturbed state has been increasingly felt on this side of the Atlantic. Something must be done to restore Europe's purchasing power; something must be done to make a market for American products. A revival of export demand would be of immense and immediate value to the Agricultural West. Now Europe starves and our surplus products rot, while an adequate foreign demand would aid materially in the recovery of farming, the great national business.'

"Smith W. Brookhart, Senator from Iowa, says, 'The thing that demands immediate attention in an extra session of Congress is the agricultural situation. A good crop is coming all over Europe, including Russia. I saw nearly two thousand miles of it, and the Russians have planted, notwithstanding the propaganda in America that they refuse to plant. The farmers of America need to know these facts above all others. For many years the farmers have received less money for their big crops than for their little ones. They did the extra harvesting and handling, and paid the extra freight for shipping—and took less return for it all. They are in the same situation now, made worse by their post-war deflation and aggravated by railroad inflation.'"

THE LATE PREMIER KATO OF JAPAN TO AMERICA

A Message Received a Few Days Before His Death

It seems to me that magazines like "Our World" which strive to inform the American public accurately and fairly in foreign matters, are performing a service not only to your people but to those of foreign nations as well. There is too much ignorant and biased writing, even in countries like the United States where the Press stands upon a high plane.

Fortunately, it is the hard facts of international situations that usually and ultimately tell; and in the case of the Far East the facts, especially in recent years, have given unquestionable evidence and need little comment. The understandings reached at Washington show the good-will of the nations concerned and demonstrate the earnest spirit that lies back of them—a spirit that is necessary for the long duration of such understandings. The Powers are in consultation and cooperation in China—whereas, in former years, the present plight of that great nation might have given cause for anxiety. These are important factors indicating clearly the peaceful road of which we are proceeding.

The development of trade between the United States and Japan progresses steadily. Your country is the greatest customer of ours; and we purchase annually more of your goods than all the rest of the Far East together.

We have seen the spirit of fairness and humanity that existd among the best of your people and we trust that you also see those virtues in the majority of us. (Signed) T. Kato.

TIRED PLANNING DINNERS

THE MENU

Cream of Celery Soup
Toasted Crackers
Veal Birds
Twice Baked Potatoes
Cauliflower au Gratin
Endive Salad Rolls
Sliced Peaches with Cream
Nut Cookies
Coffee

May I help you plan your dinner for tomorrow? Sometimes after weeks of planning a woman feels she wouldn't mind cooking the dinner if she didn't have to decide what to cook.

There is usually an abundance of fruit and vegetables early in the fall, so that part's easy. And just a suggestion about the fruit. The time is coming when made desserts of dried fruits are going to be necessary, so while it's possible serve the fruit "au naturel." Add a simple cake or cookies of some sort if you want to, but plain sliced peaches and cream leave little to be desired. The last of the melons or grapes might add the finishing touch to any dinner.

Or the salad may be of fruit, and cheese and crackers might finish the dinner.

Note the menu I have devised here. The meat, potatoes and cauliflower are all cooked in the oven. This conserves fuel on a gas stove and makes good use of the heated oven in a coal range. In the course of a year these small items are worth while.

Cream of Celery Soup

One head of celery, 2 small onions, 2 sprigs parsley, 4 tablespoons rice, 1 teaspoon salt, teaspoon pepper, 2 cups milk, 1 quart water, 1 tablespoon butter.

Chop celery, leaves and stalks. Mince onions and parsley. Melt butter in kettle, add onions and cook five minutes. Add celery, parsley and rice, cover with water and simmer an hour. Rub through puree strainer and add milk heated to the boiling point. Season with salt and pepper and serve topped with whipped cream if desired.

Veal Birds

Two slices veal steak cut -inch thick, 1 cups bread crumbs, cup nut meats, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 egg, hot water, teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, flour.

Trim steak and cut in small oval shaped pieces. Mix bread crumbs and nuts with melted butter. Add egg, unbeaten, and mix well. Add water to make moist enough to hold mixture together. Season with salt and pepper. Put some of the stuffing in the center of each piece of meat, pull edges together and pin with toothpicks. Roll in flour and bake in a moderate oven 45 minutes, basting frequently with one tablespoon butter melted in one-half cup water.

Make a cream gravy with the liquor in the pan.

Cauliflower au Gratin

One head cauliflower, 1 cups milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-3 cup coarse stale bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Remove outer green leaves from cauliflower. Put in a pan of cold salted water for an hour. Drain and cook uncovered in boiling salted water for 30 minutes. Save one-half cup of the water in which the cauliflower was cooked. Drain from water and separate into sprigs. Put in buttered baking dish and cover with sauce made by melting butter, stirring in flour and slowly adding milk and cauliflower water. Stir constantly. When smooth add cheese. Cover with bread crumbs which have been mixed with the melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven until brown and serve at once.

Endive Salad

Wash and crisp endive. Chill and dry.

Cut three slices of bacon into tiny pieces and try out fat. Remove from fire and stir in two tablespoons vinegar. Beat until well blended and pour over endive. Serve at once.

A THOUGHT

Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.—Ps. 122:7.

I am a man of peace. God knows how I love peace; but I hope I shall never be such a coward as to mistake oppression for peace.—Kossuth.

MOTHER OF TWIN BOYS

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Inflammation and Great Weakness

West St. John, N. B.—"I was in a general run-down condition following the birth of my twin boys. I had a great deal of inflammation, with pains and weakness. Finally my doctor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He said that your medicine would be the only thing to build me up. I am sure he is right, for I am feeling much better and am gaining in weight, having gone down to ninety-three pounds. I was in bed for over a month, but am up again now. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to my friends and give you permission to use my letter."—Mrs. Elmer A. Ritchie, 82 Rodney St., West St. John, N. B.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and C. M. Williamson
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Miles Sheridan, to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce is taking a yacht trip, supposedly with

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl, known as the Million Dollar Doll. In reality, however, he is not with the Doll but

Teresa Desmond (Terry), Juliet's unbelievably innocent half-sister, whom the Doll sent to masquerade as herself. Ever since a kindness Miles did her in childhood, Terry had made him her Dream Prince, and they are now madly in love with each other, although he believes her to be the notorious Juliet Divine.

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian, formerly the lover of Miles' wife, has deserted her for

Rose Callahan, a somewhat ordinary young heiress, now traveling in Europe with her father.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, frantic at Paul's desertion finds herself in danger of losing her husband also and goes to Algiers where Miles' yacht is lying.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, meeting Miles and the "Doll" recognizes Terry Desmond whom he knew and loved in New York. He it is who warns Betty that her husband's companion is not a show-girl, but a convent maid.

Miles, enjoying a brief sojourn at Bousaada with Terry, and his faithful old servant Mrs. Harkness as chaperone, receives a wire that his wife is in Algiers, demanding to see him. On his way there he is overtaken by Nazlo who informs him that the "Doll" is really Terry Desmond.

CHAPTER LXXIII

Miles Acts on Impulse

"You have to admit that you do know," Nazlo's hard voice crashed into Miles' thoughts.

Miles stared at him with such anguish in his eyes that the truth flashed upon Nazlo as truth had flashed upon Sheridan. He saw through a dazzle of blinding light that Miles Sheridan had not known the girl's identity.

To him the other seemed a fool, and to the Shoe King a fool was some degrees below a knave. Yet Nazlo was human, and a faint twinge of pity surprised him—contemptuous pity.

"I admit now," Miles said. "I must have been a fool not to know. I believe what you tell me. But I wish to God I hadn't heard it from you, of all people. For you to accuse me is—like the pot calling the kettle black—isn't it? She—Miss Desmond, you call her—shrank from you at Monte Carlo. You must have noticed that. I asked her a question. She wouldn't say much—but she answered. I—though I didn't know what she was, as you did, I showed her more respect than she had from you. Part of our business arrangement was—that I should keep away from Miss Divine, except in public."

"Yet you came near enough, to ask her to marry you—unless you did that in public?"

"Circumstances arose—unexpectedly."

"Circumstances always arise. They did with me. Miss Desmond gave me no time to say I'd marry her if she'd have me. She misunderstood the situation."

"I've heard you had a wife."

"I had. She's dead."

Nazlo did not add the date of his bereavement.

"I'm free," he went on. "You're not, and can't be while your wife's on earth—where she's likely to stay as long as you do. Now you know why I'm following Miss Desmond, and why I'm going to her today."

"You shall not go" Miles exclaimed.

Nazlo laughed. "Why not?"

"She doesn't want to see you."

"She can say so, after I've arrived, and written her a note. When she understands, I think she'll look on me as the big chance to—as the French say—'ranger' herself. Anyhow you've no right to decide for the girl, and deny her what you can't give."

Strange how many thoughts can rush through a man's brain while another might count One—Two—Three Miles would not admit that he was caught in a net which couldn't be broken, or torn, or cut. Yet he knew that, if Nazlo had spoken the truth about Betty, and about the girl, he was hopelessly bound. Because he'd flaunted Juliet Divine in the face of the world to free Betty the law would forbid him to free himself from her, unless she sued for divorce.

Even the breaking of his promise to Mrs. Parmalee wouldn't help him as things were—according to Eustace Nazlo. The girl he loved could never be his wife, and he loved her too well for any other arrangement though she might love him enough to consent.

"You have the right to go to Bousaada," he admitted harshly. "But I have the right to get there before you, if I can. I'll see my wife later, if she's in Algiers. You shall not find Miss—the woman I love—alone if I can help it."

As he spoke he turned on his heel, and walked with long strides to his automobile. The chauffeur had finished work some minutes ago and strolled over to the small red car with his mate from the Algiers' garage.

Nazlo wheeled round at the same instant. "Race me for Bousaada, then" he yelled.

Again his was the advantage. He was within a dozen yards of his own car, Sheridan had three times the distance to cover. Nazlo's car was headed for Bousaada, Sheridan's for Algiers, and the road wasn't made for the quick turn of an automobile, especially a large one. Nazlo's chauffeur was close to his motor, and had not stopped his engine. Sheridan's car had to be started as well as turned, and by a man who would take more than sixty seconds to reach it.

A shout of "Partons—vite" from his employer sent the driver of the red auto with a bound to his place. Nazlo sprang up beside him, and the little car darted away over sandy cuts, stones, and hummocks of the grass, with spasmodic leaps. There was no speed limit here in the desert except that set by the roughness of the wild way, or the sudden mixing up with a string of loaded camels

By the time Sheridan's motor had started, refused, started again, backed, manoeuvred, backed once more, and successfully turned, the small red car had half a mile's start.

There was no room in Miles' thoughts of what might happen because of his delay in seeing Betty. If things concerning her were as bad as they could be, at least they couldn't be worse And he must get back to the girl.

He must tell his side of the story before Nazlo had thrown the wrong light on it all. He must know why Juliet Dvine had sent her cruising with him—why she'd consented to come. Above all he must somehow get her forgiveness, even if he couldn't beg for it with words.

If he had not turned back to Bousaada then—if he had gone on instead to Algiers, the whole future might have been different for him, for Terry Desmond, and for others. But Fate rules these decisions, not idle Chance.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

MISTER DODGER'S POEM

And as luck would have it, they caught a whale.

Mister Dodger wrote this poem and read it to Nancy and Nick in His corn-shock house in Squealy-Moo
Land;

Said the guinea-pig to the guinea-hen,
"I haven't been away in I don't know when."
Said the guinea-hen to the guinea-pig,
"Why, that's just because you are not very big.
So you get your coat and I'll get my hat,
And we'll both go and see where the king lives at."

So off they went in a ten-cent bus,
With plenty of feathers but without any fuss,
A big guinea-piece made out of gold
Was the only money they had, I'm told;
They rode and they rode but were two days late,
And they missed the express so went by freight.

They shipped on a boat o'er the briny deep,
Guinea-pig got sick and he cried, "Peep, peep!"
But Missez Hen found a great big book,
And she said as she read with a long, deep look,
"Here's a place called Guinea, right on the sea, Piggy-Wig, that's the place for you and me."

So she put on her hat, and the pig got his coat,
And they jumped o'er the side of the great big boat.
And as luck would have it, they caught a whale,
And they hoisted a muslin sheet for a sail,
And they landed in Guinea in time for tea,
But alas, there was nothing to drink but sea!

"Oh, me, oh, my!" called the pig to a parrot,
"I'd dearly love a yellow carrot."
"While I," said the hen in a hungry voice,
"'Twixt corn and oats would have no choice."
But the parrot laughed till he couldn't see,
And all he said was, "My, oh me!"

The two friends stood on the sandy shore,
And they looked for a boat till their eyes got sore,
But nothing came but a blue balloon,
So they climbed in that and were home by noon.
Mrs. Guinea Hen sighed as she hung up her hat,
"Piggy, dear, what's the difference where the king lives at!"

"Oh, dear!" laughed Nancy, "That's a funny piece!"
"I always was a poet," said Mister Dodger with pride. "I think I should have been a writer instead of a fairy!"

HIGHWAYS IN TRANSITORY STAGES BRING IN TRAIN MANY PROBLEMS

Road Builder Suggests Standardization in Regulations Governing Us—To Wipe Out Many Abuses—Uniform Penalty is Being Urged.

Highway-building on a scale sufficient to care for modern traffic conditions is necessarily only an infant industry. Most highway systems on the continent are still in their transitory stages from "just roads" to proper highways, and with the progress of their construction there are associated almost innumerable problems. Many of these are technical matters with which the lay user of the highways is little concerned, except in so far as they bear on the road tax rate; but there are also many matters affecting highway construction and use which have a general interest. Recently Thomas J. Wasser, formerly Highway Engineer for the State of New Jersey, compiled a paper for the American Road Builders' Association in which he outlined many of the abuses of highways both in the building and later use. These he followed with suggestions for standardizing rules of highway use which have been drawn up with a view of protecting the user of the highway both in his actual use of it and in his share of the cost which he contributes through taxation. His report follows:

Abuse Before Completion

Often the greatest abuse that comes to our highways occurs prior to completion. Failure to finance wisely, faulty judgment as to type and width of pavement and choice of location to suit certain interests are common abuses of the highway before it is built. In detail some of the items are:

(1) Making the term of bonds longer than the life of a pavement.

(2) Failure on the part of the engineer to provide a design and type of construction to meet the requirements of modern traffic.

(3) Faulty construction on the part of the contractor for personal profit

(4) Inefficient inspection due to lack of knowledge, and to insufficient salary being paid to attract capable men.

(5) Acceptance of inferior work.

(6) Permitting inferior material to be substituted for that specified when delays are brought about by conditions beyond the control of the contractor.

(7) Sacrificing quality for speed.

(8) Failure to provide for a satisfactory, well marked and maintained detour during the period the highway is under construction.

(9) Designing and building bridges for a live load less than that for which motor vehicles are licensed and narrower than the graded width of the highway.

(10) Failure to provide for the elimination of railroad grade crossings.

(11) Designing underpasses with a head room less than 14 feet in the clear.

(12) The tendency of contractors to bid too low. This fault has had more to do with the performance of inferior work than any one other cause, and inexperienced contractors just entering highway construction are chiefly responsible, yet the bonding companies will go on their surety just the same as they will for experienced contractors.

(13) Use of inferior material. Competition in manufacturing or producing material used in connection is such that inferior material is frequently put in competition with satisfactory material, and by under-selling is used in the work. In many cases where inferior material has been rejected by engineers and officials they have been charged with favoring some particular material or product for reasons other than its merits.

Must Correct Abuses

All of these abuses should be corrected at once, and the industry protected by the soundest kind of financing, engineering design, faithful construction and efficient inspection.

Abuse of the highways after completion is generally caused by a small percentage of users. Such abuse frequently results in accidents, causing injury and loss of life and destruction of property. Law enforcement alone will not overcome these conditions or decrease the number of traffic accidents. The problem requires: First, adequate traffic planning, and second, proper enforcement of regulation according to the plan.

In order to enable those whose duty it may become to work out an equitable and uniform plan to prevent the abuse of the highways, the writer recommends:

(1) That the minimum width of all main highways be not less than 30 ft. and (a) That this graded width be kept clear of all encroachments, and (b) That all traffic rules be made uniform.

(2) That a system of marking one-way streets be adopted, which will be uniform as to type and location of the markers.

(3) That it is desirable to standardize all directionary and cautionary signs, as to color and marking, and that posting signs other than directionary and cautionary on the right of way be made unlawful, and subject to a fine for each offense.

(4) That the erection of signs on property abutting on the highway at curves, railroad crossings and intersections be discontinued, where such signs would obstruct the view of those using the highway.

Standardize Color Signals

(5) That it is desirable to standardize colors to be used for degree of danger where illuminated signs are used; for instance, red at a railroad crossing or dead ends of highways, green for highway intersections, and amber for grades and curves.

(6) That a uniform traffic regulation be adopted for intersecting highways to be in effect in the absence of traffic officers.

(7) That a uniform maximum height, width and length of vehicle be adopted.

(8) That a uniform gross weight of vehicle and load for each class of commercial motor vehicle be established.

(9) That all gas filling stations be located on property abutting on the highways and not on the right of way; and that all gas filling stations shall display a visible tag on each pump certifying as to the accuracy of said measuring device.

(10) That parking of vehicles on both sides of a highway opposite each other, where a minimum distance of 20 feet between the vehicles is not provided be considered a nuisance, and be made punishable by a fine.

(11) That the erection of all booths and stands for the sale of goods within the right of way, and displaying farm produce in containers within the right of way be prohibited, and that the use of vehicles for retailing wares along the highway where such practice would cause persons to congregate on the paved portion be also prohibited.

Faulty Vehicle Penalties

(12) That a uniform penalty for operating a defective motor vehicle on the highway should be provided. It is not the purpose of this paper, nor is the writer qualified to discuss automobile design; however, there is a common defect, particularly in trucks, the correction of which would eliminate one source of danger. Tail lamps frequently fail to function, due to the wires having been damaged by abrasion or exposure to splashing water. It would seem to be an easy matter for the designer to provide protection for these wires. Other defects that the writer has in mind are broken or improperly adjusted brakes and badly worn tires.

(13) That legislation be enacted to provide against motorists running past barricades on roads under construction, and destroying unfinished work.

(14) That sidewalks be provided for the use of pedestrians along the highway adjacent to built-up communities.

(15) That pedestrians using the highways in the open country shall walk to the left, and that operators of all vehicles drive to the right.

(16) That when one-piece shipments that exceed the maximum weight allowed by law are made, they shall be shipped on specially built vehicles so designed as to distribute the load in a manner consistent with legal requirements, and only after obtaining permission from an authorized source.

(17) That motor vehicle taxation or license fees should not be any greater than that required to provide the sum necessary for maintenance of the highways.

Prevent Overloads

(18) That overloaded trucks being operated on the highways, when apprehended, be seized and held for a period of not less than five days, stored at the owner's risk and expense, and, in addition, the owner fined, in accordance with a penalty fixed for that offense.

(19) That hauling companies, who contract for shipments by the ton when caught overloading their vehicles should have their license revoked, in addition to any other penalty.

(20) That all operators of motor vehicles should be licensed, and that they be prohibited from operating a vehicle for more than twelve consecutive hours followed by eight hours' rest.

(21) That, in addition to any uniform motor vehicle law previously recommended, all applicants for drivers' license or renewal of same be required to submit a physician's certificate bearing date not more than one month back of the date of application. Certificate should be accepted only from designated physicians, and should certify that the applicant is in fit mental and physical condition to operate a motor vehicle.

(22) That the owners of all motor vehicles must carry liability insurance for each vehicle operated.

(23) That all vehicles, both motor and horse-drawn, be equipped with a clearance light visible from front and rear. This light should be of a shape other than round, located on the extreme left side of the vehicle or load if over width, and showing green in front and red in rear.

PRINCE REMAINS HUMAN AND CAPTIVATES WORLD

Party and Race Differences Are Forgotten in Admiration of Prince of Wales, Lloyd George Says.

CREDIT HIS PARENTS

Of the many glowing tributes that have been paid to the Prince of Wales perhaps none is so fitting or so nearly adequate as that made by Mr. Lloyd George in his last speech as Prime Minister. It must be recalled that, on the evening of his speech, the political crisis which ended Mr. Lloyd George's career as premier had reached its climax and the great statesman well knew what a period of turmoil lay before the country. With this in his mind, he said: "There may be differences between parties, there may be differences in parties, there may be mists, but upon one thing there is no division, there is no difference of opinion between any section or fraction or party—that is our admiration, our attachment and our affection for the Prince of Wales."

What is the secret of the Prince's success? What is it makes dense crowds of all sorts and conditions of people assemble wherever there is a chance of catching even a fleeting glimpse of him? Not in this country alone has popular enthusiasm excelled itself in welcoming him, but it must be remembered that our farmers from the prairies of Canada, sturdy men from the lonely sheep stations of Australia, keen business men of the United States, Japanese, Esquimaux, Red Indians, Fijians, Polynesians, Hindoos, Mohammedans and Parsees have put all other preoccupations aside and, in many instances travelling great distances have jostled with strange crowds in order to look upon this son of a British king.

There have been princes before; princes, too, who have travelled, and who have endeavored, according to their lights, to carry out what they conceived to be their duty, but none has so completely captivated the world as has the present Prince of Wales.

The explanation of his success is, after all, remarkably simple. That he is handsome and affable, and, born to a less exalted station in life, would have achieved some social success, is undeniable. These, no doubt, are gifts which have, to some extent, made easy the way to success, but even with these he might have been unexceptional had another quality been lacking. His achievement lies in the fact that, beset by every temptation to become pompous, haughty, affected, remote and snobbish, he has avoided these pitfalls and has remained simple, but sophisticated, dignified but unaffected, disciplined but, above all, human. For this achievement, of course, his royal parents are entitled to great credit; the wisdom and courage shown in their training of the Prince is largely responsible for the fact that their eldest son is "unspoilt" by success.

The credit due to their Majesties can hardly be overestimated. They took a bold course in his education, breaking away from the theories which had existed since the childhood of Queen Victoria. The Georgian courts were such that the Duchess of Kent resolved that the Princess Victoria should be brought up in the strictest seclusion. She saw little of the work-a-day world, which perhaps was a pity; but that misfortune was amply compensated by her segregation from the loose life of the Court. The result was that, on her accession, she brought an atmosphere of purity and honesty into places that had known, for years, nothing but vitiation. The change was wonderful and the people soon recommended to respect an institution they had begun to despise.

The Victoria system of training was thus proved successful and it continued in all its severity until the childhood of the present Prince of Wales, when drastic changes were made. Contact with the people, hitherto regarded as undesirable, was established. Where King Edward's tutors had been instructed to place barriers the young Prince's teachers were ordered to encourage freedom. Easy intercourse and rational behavior replaced repression and artificial dignity. The Prince's parents were conscious that the times had changed and they changed the code of training to meet them, with the results we see today.

Wherever the Prince goes the pomp and pageantry attaching to a royal reception seem to recede into the background, leaving the Prince standing, as it were, among the people as one of themselves, sharing their joys and misfortunes and linking the humblest directly with the throne.

His personality reflects itself in his public and private utterances. Never has there been anything stilted or flamboyant in his speeches. He seeks no studied effects, but expresses homely thoughts in a homely way. Of this one may give a single striking example.

Statesmen, scientists, leaders of religion have described their ideals in varied language. The Prince, however, when a certain occasion demanded that he should say something of the attitude of the State toward the humblest of the community, declares that we should endeavor to ensure "that every child brought into the world is given a sporting chance." No doubt the rhetoricians would have expressed it differently, but nothing could have reached the hearts of the people so directly as the Prince's simple phrases or have summed up their own feelings so exactly.

Similarly, when surrounded by the flower of the medical profession, grave and forbidding of demeanor, he was not lost for an appropriate sentence, and many an austere face was wrinkled in mirth when he remarked that there were no doctors in the Garden of Eden because Eve knew the familiar prescription, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." Yet again, shortly after the war, he found the most juste when he told an assembly of captains of industry that "an empire worth dying for is worth living and working for." Men who react to deeds rather than words found that this sentiment burned its way into their minds.

One sees the same result wherever he speaks. He can address school-boys without a trace of dullness, and always achieving a happy result.

Yet, in these speeches, one gets a glimpse of the self-discipline which the Prince imposes on his own nature. In a less exalted station the Prince would never have been a willing speaker. He is naturally nervous, and, even now, with an abundance of experience, he still twists his tie with lively fingers, and moves his hands in a timid fashion until he is carried away by the flood of his argument and sees that he has pleased or satisfied his audience. It is obvious that he has said to himself in early life "I hate speaking but, as a Prince, I must speak. I shall, therefore, make myself speak, and speak well."

A soldier who has come in contact with His Royal Highness, once summed up the secret of his success in a very simple way. Said the Tommy: "He didn't always offer you a cigarette; sometimes he would ask you for one." In this judgment we find that happy touch of nature which the Prince invariably shows. Condescending generosity is easy, but that is not the Prince's idea of friendliness. He is as willing and as ready to share your pleasures, as he is anxious you should share his. Constantly, wherever he has gone, he has been voted "a good mixer."

During his tour in Japan a contrast was offered between the Prince's natural dignity and the artificial majesty of the East. Japan may be very Western in many things, but her conception of Royalty is still mediaeval. When the Prince visited Tokio, for example, his procession with Prince Hitohoto through the street was not witnessed from any upper windows, because the Japanese Prince Regent is termed "the Son of Heaven" and no earthly being is permitted to look down on him. The people are not permitted to cheer; their attitude must be one of silent homage.

There was a great difference, however, when the Prince visited a British Golf Club, close to Tokio. The Prince Regent, too, was invited, and here European customs prevailed. The Royal visitors were invited to take a cocktail, and the Prince, raising his glass and looking towards the "Son of Heaven" gave him a homely "cheerio!" much to the delight of the Europeans present.

Here, as in many other places, he justified the judgment of an Australian newspaper which said of his visit to Sydney: "He smiled away the difference which Australians believed lay between royalty and commonality."

This judgment is almost identical with that of a New York journal which, after his visit to the States, revealed the secret of his success by declaring, "It's the smile of him, the unaffected modest bearing of him—and that surest of all poses, the recognition of duty to be done triumphing over a youngster's natural unease and embarrassment."

Among certain people who imagine themselves gifted with prescience, it was fashionable during the late war to talk of the British throne as a doomed institution which, in the upheaval which follows every great war, would surely pass away. Lord Kitchener, however, with his remarkably clear vision, had no pateince with the croakers, and Lord Esther records that he said: "With King George and the Prince of Wales the monarchy will be stronger than ever," adding, however, that there would be days of darkness and that Britain would be poor.

This remark is notable because, at the time Kitchener uttered it, the Prince was little more than a raw youth of ill-defined characteristics. Kitchener, however, knew him. They had fought a little battle together over the question of the Prince being permitted to go to the front. Kitchener had taken the measure of his great possibilities. It must have been a source of comfort to this burdened Samson, who was soon to meet death in the icy waters off our northern shores, to know that the King whom he delighted to serve and whose intimate friendship he was privileged to enjoy, would, under Providence, be succeeded by one equally capable of upholding the high traditions of the British Crown.

Subsequent events have abundantly proved the accuracy of Kitchener's forecast. With the cloudy dawn of the new era which followed the war came the Prince of Wales as we know him today; a young man who knows at first hand what the nation has suffered, who knows its ideals and aspirations, and who has an abiding sympathy with, and an ardent desire to serve, the common people of the realm.

"People, not things," is a favorite expression of the Prince. In his tours in the country he has always made it clear that he is better pleased when he is seeing and meeting people than when inspecting institutions or planting trees. Even in other lands, the same desire to know and serve the people has been manifested. His remark at Hong Kong, when he was asked to consent to the erection of a statue of himself, is typical: "I should much prefer," he said, "that some very good thing be done for the community of Hong Kong in my name."

To none does he deny his interest. The touching anecdote of his stooping over the bed of a man hideously disfigured by the war and kissing him, is too well-known to need repetition. He has shaken hands with asylum inmates, and the unhappy occupants of padded cells have been visited by him. His sensitive nature has more than once yielded under the sights of suffering and distress he has seen, but he has never shirked the depressing side of life, being over anxious to share, so far as he can, the sorrows as well as the joys, of his father's subjects.

It is small wonder, therefore, that in a decade that has witnessed the fall of many monarchs, and the weakening of others, the British throne stands more firmly than ever it did.

This happy position has not been without its effect on the Continent. In France, Belgium and Italy, he is known and well-liked. During the war, he met thousands of soldiers, statesmen and civilians of those countries, and he has visited both France and Belgium since the Armistice. High hopes are entertained in the Chancelleries of Europe that he will develop that happy faculty, exercised so wonderfully by his grandfather, for making friendships that reinforce the peaceful efforts of statesmen.

In the present "jumpy" state of Europe, which seems likely to continue for some time to come, the soothing influence of another "Edward the Peacemaker" would be an inestimable boon, and it is not too much to hope that, under the maturing hand of Time, the Prince of Wales, with his large heart and his aloofness from the petty things in politics, may be the means of creating new bonds of peace and international goodwill.

It would be interesting to know that opinions of the Prince held by the deposed kings and exiled princelings who once thought that the British Royal Family were making a rod for their own backs by permitting their children to consort with "common" people, and by reducing to a minimum the pompous stage effects which the German royal mind deemed indispensable to their prestige. It is too much to expect that they have learnt a lesson, but perhaps in moments of retrospection, they deplore the hasty and insolent things they said of King George and his view of a monarch's duty and a prince's training.

The difference between the German Royal mind and the British may be best illustrated by an anecdote. Shortly after the Prince of Wales had taken up his duties at the Front, in pursuit of his policy of learning as much as possible, he visited a certain gun position. As it happened, he was wearing a pair of light buff breeches and a pair of canary-colored putties such as were very fashionable among young officers at that time. A gunner who had learned of his identity turned to his mate and said: "Do you know who that is?" The second man gazed at the Prince for a time and then remarked drily: "I dunno. But judging by his legs he should be able to chirp well." An intimate friend of the Prince who was present ventured, later, to tell His Royal Highness of the incident. The Prince roared with laughter, and, taking the story into his own repertoire, told it against himself on several occasions; indeed, for a long time, he considered it his best anecdote and may still do so.

What would have been the fate of a German soldier who had ventured to make such a remark about the Crown Prince, and what would have happened to the venturesome person who repeated it to the swaggering super-Prussian?

One anecdote breeds another, and space forbids the relation of more than one of the long series with which the Prince can entertain his company for hours. Not a few of them concern his marriage, and the many "brides" which gossip and the Press have found for him. Here, however, we must pass from the gay to the more serious aspect of that subject.

Much good-humored advice has been offered to the Prince on the question of marriage, and His Royal Highness accepts it in the spirit in which it is tendered. Nevertheless, he is not a little sensitive on the subject. Well-meaning people should realize the profound importance of the decision he must make, and ask themselves whether it is natural that a young man so earnest in his sense of duty should take, as it were, a flying jump at, not merely matrimony, but at the responsible task of deciding who shall be the next Queen of the Realm. Surely, it is a problem before which the wisest is entitled to pause.

The record of the Prince is such that, putting aside idle curiosity, the public is well content to have him choose his bride in his own time, confident that his decision will be more than right—it will be the only right one.

Should all the changes of recent years, through the sorrows, the anxieties, the poverty and depression, both personal and national, which this post-war period has brought in such abundance, one of the brightest rays of comfort, one of the most certain assurances that Britain's future will be as great as her past, has been the possession of such a Prince as Edward of Wales.

To a world that was in danger of lapsing into acute selfishness, he has nobly exemplified the meaning of his motto, "I serve." There, in two words, we have the secret of his success.

RICH SPOILS

(By LYLE C. WILSON)

LONDON, Oct. 23 (United Press).—Saint, sinner or Croesus would be tempted by an offer of the greatest fortune in the world.

That is the offer lying behind a recent announcement that a new diving and salvage apparatus has been devised which will allow most of the sunken treasure ships which dot the floor of the ocean to be raised or robbed of their rich cargoes.

There are now two methods of removing the cargoes of sunken ships. The ship itself may be raised bodily by means of lighters and powerful derricks or divers may go over the side of floating vessels and plunder the undersea cargo piecemeal.

The former method is strictly limited to the shallow water. Divers first run cables, sometimes as many as a dozen, under the hulk. The above surface ends of the cable are fastened to lighters and when all is in readiness the lighters are pumped dry. In tidal water this takes place at low tide. When the tide flows the lighters rise with it lifting their object up the exact height of the tide, as well as the few feet they themselves rise on being pumped clear of water.

Tugs then tow the entire mass of floating and sunken vessels to a selected spot for beaching and the job is finished.

Small vessels only can be raised this way. The estimated limit for such operations is an underwater weight of 1,800 tons.

To reach cargoes at more than a few feet under water it is necessary to send men down under the surface of the sea to buck the elements, deep-sea monsters and often darkness.

It is dangerous, sometimes richly paid, calling. With every increase in technic and apparatus the diver becomes so much the more a potentia harvester of fabulous wealth.

One of the chief divers of the British navy explained his calling.

"A man," he declared, "must be physically fit in every way before being taught diving. Whenever possible he is examined by a doctor every morning.

"After twelve weeks' preliminary instruction he is submerged under three or four fathoms of open water as a starter. As his experience increases he is given more responsible work at greater depths until he reaches the maximum depth in training, about twenty-five fathoms.

"The length of time a diver can remain below depends on the depth at which he is working. The greater the depth the shorter the time he can remain there.

"This is because a diver breathing compressed air becomes so saturated with nitrogen that if he were to come suddenly to the surface from a great pressure he might lose his life, or become seriously ill from 'caisson' disease.

"A diver working in twenty-five fathoms should not remain below longer than twenty minutes. Even then it will require another thirty minutes to bring him gradually to the surface while his body is throwing off temporarily absorbed nitrogen.

"There is an eerie feeling sometimes when one is alone on the sea floor. No solitary traveler in the desert or the Australian bush has any conception of the utter sense of loneliness that at times comes over the diver in great depths, if he has time to meditate on his environment.

"Apart from the danger of 'caisson' disease, there is always the risk of becoming entangled in wreckage. After the diver leaves the surface he never knows what awaits him at the bottom. In tropical waters there is an ever-present danger from sharks.

"A diver is equipped with a sharp, two-edged knife, which is his sole means of defense against under-water monsters. An octopus is more dangerous than the nervous shark. The latter is easily frightened.

"Unlike the shark, the octopus goes for anything it sees moving. It attempts to throw one of its feelers, with a long row of suckers, around you, atn immediately encircle you with its other tentacles and bind your arms helplessly at your sides."

The perils casually outlined in the foregoing interview are the daily lot of divers. Such perils hinder diving to retrieve sunken treasure.

As these perils are minimized by science and invention the scope of the diver's work is enlarged.

Needless to say, every square foot of the hitherto virgin sea bottom made accessible to divers means that the recovery of the treasure of argosies and battle fleets destroyed and sunk during the centuries of history is that much nearer.

Inventors believe that period of recovery is approaching.

HON. T. A. LOW DECLARED YESTERDAY CANADA WAS FACING A CLEAR ISSUE

WINNIPEG, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Canada to-day is facing one clear issue, and that is, to undertake as a united people the work of construction which must follow the havoc of destruction, declared Hon. T. A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce, during an interview here yesterday.

In spite of the unfounded slurs of those who, for ulterior purposes, would sacrifice their country's credit, Mr. Low said that Canada to-day was giving proof that her heart and strength were sound and that, far from being on the verge of failure and bankruptcy, she was really on the way to a splendid recovery.

In the darkness of a New York movie theater, Robert Pastra rose to leave. His seat was halfway to the orchestra, but his first move was observed by the patrons standing four deep in the rear.

Pastra woke up in Bellevue Hospital. He tells the surgeons that he had barely risen and stepped into the dark aisle when eight big women, in competition for the vacated seat, crashed into him simultaneously. They walked over him, trampled his breath out, and fractured his left leg. He has a confused recollection of one woman winning the battle, seven retreating wrathfully up the aisle.

75 PER CENT. OF MAN'S ILLS HAVE THEIR ORIGIN IN STOMACH, SAYS EXPERT, OFTEN AFFECT KIDNEYS, BLOOD AND NERVES

HEALTH EXPERT FIGHTS DISEASE WITH SIMPLE HERBS, BARKS AND LEAVES.

MANY PEOPLE TESTIFY

"A good digestion and a strong, healthy stomach are absolutely indispensable to health and comfort," says noted health teacher, demonstrating the marvelous medicinal properties that exist in Dreco. "The slightest derangement of the stomach interferes more or less with all the succeeding processes of digestion. Stomach trouble in its various forms produces a never-ending trend of physical diseases of the liver, kidneys, blood and bowels; brings on severe headaches, nervous ailments and heart afflictions. It makes the patient irritable and melancholy; spoils the appetite and undermines the strongest constitution.

In diseases of the stomach some of the following symptoms are usually present: Bad breath, sick headache, giddiness, disturbed sleep, bitter taste in the mouth, loss of hope, courage and energy, fullness and gas in the stomach, constipation, diarrhoea or piles.

The proper medicine for such conditions is not harsh mineral drugs and chemicals. Not only science, but sound common sense point instead to those good old-fashioned remedies of vegetable kingdom—herbs, barks, roots and leaves such as grandmother herself used to brew and use in the days when doctors were few and hard to reach and before new-fangled drugs and diseases became the fashion.

Right in this section there is going on a wonderful sale of an old-fashioned medicine—just pure, plain liquid extract carefully and skillfully compounded from the roots, herbs, barks and leaves of the woods and fields. A highly efficient stomach medicine that contains also good things for the nerves, blood, kidneys and bowels.

Thousands lack sufficient vital force and don't know why. They think they need a tonic, a vacation or a change of scenery, but they don't. Ten to one the underlying source of all the trouble lies in the stomach or vital organs affected by it and a six days' test of Dreco ought to prove it in almost any case.

Mrs. Mary L. Simmons was sick and all run down, finds herself "a new woman" in the best sense of the word.

An invalid woman is always a sad sight—sadder even than that of an invalid man, because of her greater capacity for suffering.

Stomach trouble, headaches, fits of depression and headaches compel her to think or work with half her brain, while the other half throbs as if it would go to pieces. There are no more striking examples of the great practical value of Dreco, the wonderful herbal medicine, than are heard from the lips of women who have been made well.

Its ability to relieve those ills that seem to be peculiarly the misfortune of women is overwhelmingly proven by innumerable testimonials.

Stomach Troubles Relieved.

"My liver must have been in pretty bad condition, for my system was full of bile and my head would swim so at times that I felt like I was going to topple over," said Mrs. Dora Peterson, whose home is at 210 W. Frank street, Kalamazoo, Mich.

"I had severe pains in my stomach and everything I ate laid there like so much lead. I was filled with gas and my bowels wouldn't move unless urged by strong laxatives. Dreco was quick to overcome the constipation and rouse my lazy liver, working out the excess bile. My stomach began digesting my food and stopped the gas forming and eased the cramps. I never have a dizzy spell now."

"My stomach gave a lot of trouble. I was bilious and had frequent dizzy spells," said Mr. Joseph Heck, whose home is at 811 W. Oak street, South Bend, Ind.

"Since taking Dreco I can run up and down stairs and never get short of breath, have no more fainting spells and never get dizzy; stomach is in fine condition and I eat three good meals a day without having any pain or distress. I sleep sound all night and get up feeling good. My liver has been thoroughly worked off and that has made me feel like a new man."

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, by J. E. Birks, Campbellford, and by a good druggist everywhere

BOOTLEGGER'S GOLD LOSES ALL ITS GLITTER

Sacrifices Wife, Child and Business Only To Go Broke Through New York Competition

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—This is an interview with a bootlegger, or, as he calls himself, "liquor dealer." He has been in the business almost ever since national prohibition, having been forehanded enough to pick up a number of bargains before the country went dry and having possessed capital enough to hold his goods until prices rose to a point where he realized, in many instances, a profit of 1,000 per cent.

He is a retailer and some of New York's biggest business men have been his steady customers; men well known in sporting circles are off his books, and professional men of the highest standing—including a throat specialist whose minimum fee is $1,000 for an operation—have bought from him in the past. His earnings have averaged $500 a day, but now he is looking for a job at $50 a week.

There are hundreds like him in various cities of the country—but his story is illuminative of the non-enforcement of the prohibition law, as conditions he describes here exist elsewhere as well.

Formerly Store Owner

"I was the owner of a fairly large delicatessen store," said Billy, as he is known to his clients, "but the hours were long and the work hard for both my wife and myself. We opened at seven in the morning and closed at ten at night and sometimes later. We were happy and contented, however, as our bank balance was growing steadily and we were looking forward to a time when we could retire.

"Then came national prohibition. I studied the matter over and saw a chance to make a killing. We were expecting an addition to our family and we had a chance to sell the store at a good figure. My wife consented to the sale and I put the entire proceeds in booze. This was against my attorney's advice as he held that New York would never go dry. He was right—New York never has been dry and the fact that it isn't dry has brought me to a position where I'm looking for a steady job as a store manager, not as an owner.

"But I disregarded that advice just as I disregarded the protests of my wife. After prohibition had been in effect three months I was able to laugh at both of them. For the stuff that cost me an average of a dollar a bottle, I was offered five.

He Held On

"That didn't seem like enough so I held on. At the end of six months, whisky was selling at from $10 to $12 a bottle and was pretty bad stuff.

"The baby had come and I needed money so I sold a few cases a bottle at a time. I had no difficulty in selling it. The first man who took a bottle wanted 10 cases immediately and I sold it to him at $120 a case. He sent me other customers and it wasn't long until I had sold all I had stored. My profits, above interest on my investment, storage, cost of delivery and some presents I made to friends, were about $25,000.

"Up to that time I hadn't decided on bootlegging as a business: But the profits convinced me that I was making a mistake so I set about getting another stock. That was not difficult. Forged withdrawal permits were plentiful and while the stuff cost me $75 or $80 a case instead of the $12 I paid before prohibition, I could obtain from $100 to $120. When the Government began to tighten up on withdrawals there was ship and border liquor. Those were the good days of the business.

"One night I had a visitor. I knew him slightly and thought he was bootlegging. But he wasn't. He was collecting. He had the goods on me and I paid—$1,000 cash for the privilege of continuing in business. But I didn't care. It was coming Christmas time and prices were high and the buyers were taking anything that had a label on it. Up to that time, I had been selling straight stuff—the clear McCoy.

"That thousand donation cut the profits, so I followed the example of others and used the hose. The cut stuff sold at $90 a case and from one case for which I paid $75, I made four. Right after Christmas business fell off and prices dropped. But still it was a good thing and my bank balance increased.

"But that kind of money doesn't stick. I had to pay regular assessments all along the line. I won't go into detail but there were many places I couldn't enter unless I had fixed things. In the old days of the delicatessen store, I was working too hard to see the bright lights. But in this new business, the principal trade was when old Broadway was gleaming. I met new people. My expenses mounted up. The first thing I knew my bank book showed withdrawals.

Keen Competition

"Liquor became easier and easier to get. Also competition increased. Some of my old customers dropped off. They said they had eased up on drinking but I knew the cause though many of them were nearly sick of the stuff they were getting. I was being cut-throated. So I dropped prices also and that came out of my pocket. But my expenses kept on increasing. Then I was knocked off and that made a hole in the roll. Also it stamped me as a bootlegger. My wife took the baby and left.

"The finish came quickly. The town was filled with booze. I took a trip out to Chicago and found the same thing there. I stopped in Detroit but none of that for mine. Then I came back here and went over my old list. I made some sales but at profits of only $5 a case. Then I took to making my own Scotch—it's easy enough—and my own gin. The Scotch tasted like Scotch and had a kick in it but it never saw Scotland. The gin was in Gordon bottles but I made it in the bathroom in my apartment. For a while I made money.

"But now I'm through. The reason? Competition. In New York city you can carry booze about openly and sell it just as openly.

Too Many Bootleggers

"Bootleggers are falling over one another. Booze selling is a competitive business just as selling cigars is competitive. There are certain fixed costs that must be met if you handle regular goods and even if you make your own gin. Others can make gin also and if you don't want to kill people, you have to be content with a few dollars on every case.

"At first I was against amending the prohibition law. The stiffer it was, the better my business. But now because of its non-enforcement I'm out of business. In the last year, I've lost or spent practically every dollar I had in the world. I'm a bum. I could tell all about not double crossing—you expect that in this game—but triple and quadruple crossing. Booze, graft, killing and demoralization go hand in hand.

"If—"

"I've been arrested five times. I have a police record. My wife is suing me for divorce. She has the goods. My health is bad. I've worked hard. The other day a policeman met me and offered me 12 bottles of Scotch direct from Montreal. They cost $4.40 a bottle in Montreal. He offered them to me at $8. I had to buy them though I sold the case for $60 after a lot of hard work.

"If I had remained in the delicatessen business and our earnings had held to their old average, I would have had $25,000 in addition to the value of the business. Even more. The man who bought me out is doing four times the business I used to do because the neighborhood is more thickly settled and the location is the best in the whole district. Also I would have had my wife and little daughter.

"I'm cutting it out. I will be 43 years old in January. I'm looking for a job as manager of a store or restaurant. I know either business. My store used to be the cleanest and brightest on the block. People liked to trade there.

"There is but one thing to do—remember I'm talking from the inside. Either repeal the prohibition law or enforce it: I've been forced out of business because it isn't enforced but I'm not kicking about that. What I think is wrong is making such a joke out of the Constitution that a bootlegger can't make a living. Others who are willing to take the chances for reduced profits will carry on after I'm through so there will be no benefit to the nation.

"If the law is enforced, that will end poisonings—or at least reduce them—hi-jacking, corruption and many other evils that are ruining the country. I'd hate to tell you how many boys and girls buy from me. I'd hate to have the list of my customers become public. I'd hate also to tell the inside of some parts of the so-called enforcement. But whenever I got knocked off, which as I have said, was five times, I knew it was only a part of the bluff and let it go at that.

"It's a fine joke, isn't it, in a dry country to be made to quit selling liquor because you can't stand competition!

"If there is a job at $50 a week open, I want to know of it."

PAYS A TRIBUTE TO G. H. FERGUSON

The Greatest Prime Minister Ontario Ever Had.

TORONTO, October 23, Canadian Press. — Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, and Hon. Sir Henry Drayton, M.P., adressed last night's meeting of the Ward Seven Conservative Association.

After paying a high tribute to Premier Ferguson, whom he described as the greatest prime minister this province ever had, Dr. Godfrey devoted a considerable portion of his adress to a review of the great services rendered mankind by the medical profession. In this connection he referred to the duties of his office in the government and observed that the gospel of health came first — the "Grits get sick as well as the Tories."

"My part in this government will be to give you more health and less law," declared the doctor.

Sir Henry Drayton expressed a wish that a new germ might be discovered to do away with the sleeping sickness, and that it would be applied to the government at Ottawa.

RUSSIA'S CHURCHES UNDER THE RED TERROR

Charles R. Crane, former American Minister to China, describes vividly in his article "How Russia Looked to Me," in the October "Our World," how the priests and churches of Russia have suffered.

"Of course, all the way through Siberia and Russia I saw many of the priests. There is nothing in all Russia that the Bolsheviki hate as they hate the Russian Orthodox church. From the beginning, they have exerted all possible efforts to wreck it and to ruin it. They took from it all they could possibly take. They attacked the church in every kind of way, maligning it in their newspapers, when the church was permittzd no publications in which to respond. They closed that wonderful school, where for many years Russian church singing was taught.

"They did all they could to break down the morale of the priest and to undermine their influence. They killed many priests and thirty bishops and two Metropolitans. At least once a month some of the specially appointed officers of the government came into the house of every priest and every bishop, between three and six o'clock in the morning. They took anything they wanted, as all church property was nationalized.

"The government could not stop church services, but it could and did prevent communication between churches. It did not allow money to be sent between churches. Permission was given to send money through the People's Bank, but when it was put there it, of course, never got any further. The committee did not allow the Patriarch to go out of his garden. I was permitted to visit him, but everything that I said had to be reported.

"In every important church in Russia, however, a little group was organized to keep the church together. They supplied the priests and bishops with food and other necessities; they organized brotherhoods to take care of the outside of the church and sisterhoods to take care of the inside. It was significant that even the intellectuals were going back to the church."

HUNTING IN ONTARIO

With autumn come the desire of the hunter to go somewhere in Ontario where the hunting is good. The majority of hunters have depended on their friends to tell them where they can find deer and moose but from year to year, there are men who for the first time are able to leave their business and depart for the North country and in this connection any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly furnish information regarding location, etc. North and west of the French and Mattawa rivers, the deer and moose season is from October 25 to November 30, while to the south and west of these rivers the season is from November 5 to November 30 inclusive. Many points along the Canadian Pacific are among the finest for hunting in the province and wherever possible, every assistance will be rendered prospective hunters.

AT DRUGGISTS ONLY

Folks Back Home

Sketches By J. H. Striebel

By Robert Quillen

Will Hoyt

Will Hoyt has a small grocery store, a kindly disposition, and two small boys. The store affords him a living; the kindly disposition makes him popular; and the two small boys cause him to lose a great deal of trade.

The boys are forever under-foot at the store, and Will is forever yelling at them to keep out of the candy or stop making so much noise; but while he yells very loudly and seems in a great rage, he never punishes the boys and they feel entirely safe.

They are not very good boys. Will keeps them well dressed, and they feel a little superior to other boys of the town. This feeling of superiority makes them rather overbearing at times, and they have many fights. As a rule they come off victorious, for they help one another; but at times they get soundly thrashed. At such times they go weeping and sniffling to the store with the tale of their woes and Will flies into a rage and goes at once to the father of the boys who thrashed his and makes complaint.

He never has admitted that his boys are at fault in any particular, and it is probable that he is incapable of supposing them at fault.

The neighbors feel sorry for Will, but more and more of them are patronizing his competitor across the street.

Famous Guys

ABRAHAM was a Hebrew and the father of a race, but at present he interests us chiefly because he was the original isolationist. When the boys who worked for him and the boys who worked for one of his distinguished relatives got into a row concerning grazing rights, Abraham sent for his kinsman and said to him, in effect: "This is a large world and there appears to be grass everywhere. There is no profit in fighting about it. You take your crowd and go one way and I'll take my crowd and go another, and thus we shall avoid another roughhouse."

The point is that Abraham did the logical and expedient thing, and the man who will employ hard sense upon one occasion very likely will employ it upon another. He was an isolationist because the world was full of unusual parking space.

If he lived to-day in a crowded world, it is reasonable to suppose that he would say to his kinsman: "We can't go our individual ways, for there is no place to go. Since necessity requires us to crowd upon one another, it is essential that we devise some scheme to avoid friction, else these fool servants of ours will neglect their jobs to quarrel and wish a deficit on us."

The habit of bolstering causes with the opinions of men long dead does the dead ones a great injustice. For opinion is made by circumstance, and the wise boys do the wise thing to-day, though all the world did the opposite last week.

Aunt Het

"Mary Doyle is a sweet and gentle woman, but she talks too much about baking ever since she found out she could beat me making lemon pies."

THE GIRL AND THE BUTCHER BOY

THE GIRL WINS THE FIRST ROUND

"'He walked right on without ever looking back and attended preaching at the Methodist church.'"

The romance of the girl across the street and the butcher boy, now happily man and wife, appeared to be endangered by storm clouds last Sunday morning, but a little tact cleared the sky and brought the girl a well-earned victory. The girl came over Monday morning to tell us about it.

"You see," said she, "my folks are all Baptists and Hiram's folks are all Methodists, and Saturday night Mamma said if we had any children she wanted them raised in the Baptist faith. Hiram didn't say anything then, but after we went to bed he said he wasn't going to be bossed by anybody, and even though he had attended the Baptist church while courting me, we'd both go to the Methodist church next morning and always thereafter, or he'd go alone. We talked about it until awful late, and we didn't kiss one another good night.

"Then on Sunday morning Hiram was quiet and solemn, and when we got to the Baptist church and I turned in as usual, he walked right on without ever looking back and attended preaching at the Methodist church. I never was so hurt in my life.

"Mamma was awful mad about it and wanted to give Hiram a piece of her mind, but I wouldn't let her, because I knew it would just make him more stubborn. I cried all day about it, and Hiram was just as cold and polite and gloomy as could be and wouldn't so much as touch me. When night came I was so blue and discouraged I didn't know what to do, and I made up my mind I was going to be happy with Hiram no matter what I had to give up. And so I went and made him put down his book and sat on his lap and told him I'd join the Mormon church if he wanted me to and life was too short to quarrel about such things as that. He was awfully sweet about it, and we've been wonderfully happy ever since."

When the Baptist preacher dismissed prayer meeting Wednesday night, he said: "There will be a baptism after the regular service Sunday evening. A good brother from one of our sister churches is going to unite with us."

Oh, well; the dear creatures can't boss us, for we must save our manly pride. But once they learn to lead us gently, they may take us where they will.

Willis Willis

Little Willie Willis used one of his mother's lace curtains as a seine Monday afternoon and caught forty-two minnows in the shadows of Holland creek. He told his chum later that he padded his pants, so it didn't hurt much.

EVERY GERMAN HOUSEWIFE A PANTRY FINANCIER

In the October "Our World," Kate Miethe, a German woman, discusses the effect of the depreciated mark on the average German household. The German Hausfrau has had to change every one of her carefully worked out ideas of household management. Of the situation in which the German woman finds herself, Kate Miethe writes:

"She is now facing an entirely novel situation. The conception of the fixed value and purchasing power of money, once the basic principle of her domestic activities, has disappeared. One German mark, once the price of eighteen eggs, a pound of meat or a pound of cheese, has ceased to be one mark. It is now worth less than half a pfennig. The price of foodstuffs such as milk used to fluctuate by one pfennig or two; now it is quoted only in marks. If one quart of milk cost 20 marks yesterday, it may cost 30 tomorrow. Prices change in less than twenty-four hours.

"The conservative mentality of the German woman is facing a difficult and probably insoluble question. The very basis of her activities: the possibility of a normal and regular calculation of her household expenditure, has been taken away from her and all her duties and plans are now governed by that mysterious expression: "rate of exchange." The dollar has become the economic barometer, the inseparable daily guide of the German wife and mother. Formerly a total stranger in the domain of politics and world finance, she now seizes her newspaper every day with masculine haste and studies the exchange rates of the different foreign currencies. Not money, but only merchandise has comparatively stable value. The money laid aside from the husband's income is worth less every day. The storing up of goods is the only security of the Hausfrau. This is why the bourse, that dominating institution of present-day Europe, has entered the German family home. The German woman is driven from one shop to another for fear that the prices of the needs of her family may rise tomorrow. Moreover, great numbers of foreign visitors are coming to Germany and most of them are out shopping all day. The German housewife cannot compete with them.

"The price of a pair of shoe soles is twelve times higher than the former price of a pair of shoes. The clothes of babies and children who have grown out of them circulate among the remotest relatives and friends of the family. Every pair of out-grown children's boots is carefully put aside until the children of friends reach the age where they can wear them. Baby clothing passes through four or five hands and is sent from one place to another like a precious object. Mothers of greater wealth buy at the birth of their child all garments it may need during the next ten years or so and store them away carefully.

"Competent sociologists advocate a reorganization of household management which amounts to a kind of "socialization' of the households. They propose to render household management cheaper and easier by establishing so-called 'common kitchens' on similar lines to those established before the war. The common kitchen would be run for, and from funds contributed by, the tenants of each big apartment house and would relieve the women of a great part of their present burden. But this idea does not appeal to the spirit of the German woman. Its realization would appear to her as a violation of her ideals and principles. Thus, all her hope is now concentrated upon the betterment of the general conditions of her country. With an ardent political interest which, like politics in general, used to be entirely unknown to her, she now reads and follows the reports about negotiations of a possible loan to Germany which might again give her money a stable value. In keeping with her instincts, she is in search of a possibility of concentrating her attention entirely upon her family once more."

NUMBER OF TOWNS CLAIM COLUMBUS

One Gazes in Marvel At The Many Houses in Which Discover Was Born.

GENOA, Oct. 23.—"In the name of God Almighty, there was a man from Genoa, a dealer in illustrated books, called Christophe de Colon, a man of much mind, but of little learning."

No wonder, that like Homer all cities would claim the great Adventurer, writes Edna H. Howell, in the Louisville Courier-Journal. I have travelled up and down the Riviera and gazed with marvel at the houses in which Christopher Colombo was born —at Varazze, Vado, and Albenga, and at Basti in Corsica! His greatness is such that perhaps it is possible that he was born in so many houses and in such far distant cities! Corsica claimed him, and France claimed him on the plea that at the time of the discovery of America, Louis XI., was paramount lord of Genoa. Even Britian in a "Treatise Maritime and of Commerce," by Charles Mally, printed in 1532, laid claim to him, for Mally writes of a "discontented native of this isle, the famous Columbus, born in England, but resident in Genoa."

Columbus' father, Domenico, called himself a Genoese, in four deeds executed at Savona. The documents are in the notarial archives of Genoa. And Columbus in a deed, February, 1498, states in so many words, that he was born at Genoa. Copy of the fragment of his will at Genoa in the archives of the Palace of San Giorgio, the old and beautiful palace which has withstood the centuries, that served as a bank for our ancestors, the Crusaders, who borrowed heavily from it, and that the kings of France, Sardinia and Austria sacked and robbed, time after time again.

His father was a wool weaver, "Colombo," or the dove, as he was called, from the shuttle of the loom which flew to and fro as a dove. Since the days of the first Crusades looms were in every vicolo and alley of Genoa, to supply the frayed garments of the Crusaders, who, coming down from the long northern journey, embarked at Genoa. His son, at 14, tired of the shuttle, for its rattle disturbed his life's dream, so he ran away to sea.

Indomitable Spirit

The Genoese was a man, according to Goethe's standard: "A man worth while is the man who keeps on when every other man would stop." We have the pathetic magnificent sketch of Columbus furnished by Franzio of Monte Alboddo: "He followed for a long time the most serene King and Queen of Spain wherever they went, begging of them to aid him in fitting out some vessels. He offered to find toward the west islands bordering on India. For a long time the King and Queen and all the noblemen of Spain amused themselves with the project. Finally after seven years and great exertions they yielded to his wish and equipped for him one caracte ship and two caravels, with which he sailed from the coast of Spain about the first days of September, 1492, thus beginning his voyage.

What a bore the Court of Spain must have found in the son of the Genoese wool weaver and a very merry subject for their jests, which doubtless he bore with infinite patience and apathetic shrugs at their swaggering humor—if he was a true Genoese.

The Portuguese Luiz de Barros, eat-moustached and black eyed, was exceedingly envious for he remarked that "Columbus was a deceitful man, boastful of his abilities and extremely given to fancies and imaginations with his Island of Cyango!" That day the Queen had smiled upon Columbus, or the King offered him a pinch of snuff from his jewelled snuffbox. Perhaps greater than the discovery of the Indies was their discovery of a man!

De Barros fades into oblivion. How he must have wept with mingled contrition and remorse. But the wool weaver's son, as Columbus describes himself in his letter to the Bank of San Giorgoi, is he to whom "the Lord has given the greatest grace that after David has been bestowed on any one."

Contrary to Scripture

St. Augustin wrote: "But they do not see if the earth were round it would not follow the part directly opposite is not covered with water. Besides supposing it not be so, what necessity is there that it should be inhabited, since the Scriptures in the first place, the fulfilled prophecies which attest the truth thereof, for the past, cannot be suspected of telling tales; and in the second place, it is really too absurd to say that men could ever cross such an immense ocean to implant in those parts a sprig of the family of the first man." Yet a few years later, and the first maps published at Rome called the New World Terra Sanctae Crucis, "The Land of the Holy Cross." And Pope Leo X., read to his sister and to the Cardinals, until late in the night, Anglerius' "Oceania." Anglerius, a gifted young reporter, with his first big interview, wrote "Decades," information gleaned from first hand from his intimate friend, Columbus, when he witnessed his first return from the new world.

The Genoese claim that their city was founded by Janus, grandson of a well known navigator of some repute—Noah—who made her the Mistress of the Seas, once "The City of a Thousand Towers and Twice a Hundred Churches." Undoubtedly the voyages of the Chinese, who established relations with America in the fifth century, the Basques and Northmen's voyages in the seventh century and the Venetian brothers, Zeni, whose log book Columbus is charged with having consulted, were all familiar to Columbus. The charts of the great Florentine astronomer Toscaneilli, must have passed into his hands when he assisted his brother, a maker of charts. The story of the egg is as old as Italy itself. Brunelleschi, the architect of the Duomo of Florence, was fond of this story.

Columbus takes the old popular illustration and makes the egg stand on end! While Justinian declares "Columbus in our times, by his energy, explored in a few months a greater extent of land and sea than almost all the rest of mankind ever did in all ages past"—which was certainly "going some," as they say in the discovered land!

It is said that the public is far more interested in what breakfast food a great man eats than how he achieved greatness. There is no fragment of a document concerning such, and the world may never know if Columbus had macaroni and cheese for his breakfast or coffee and waffles. But there is a letter of an adoring parent to his son, who writes: "Thy father, who loves thee more than he loves himself." He married a Portuguese lady of Italian origin, the Donna Felipa Muni de Perestrello, and he signed himself, S. A. S., El Almirante, or XPO Ferens.

Feted On Return

There is an old story of how the Spanish ladies all presented their daughters on his return, and one can imagine what a lion he must have been

His grandson describes him as tall, with light hair, and gray eyes, and with high cheek bones, and a long freckled face. Franzio of Monte Afboddo, says: "He was a man ruddy and of lofty and noble stature, of a great mind and with elongated visage." His mother was Susana Fontarossa.

Evidently he had little superstition, for in those days Friday was quite the proper day for sailors to draw anchor, for his first voyage began and ended on Friday; land was discovered, and he re-entered port at Palos on a Friday.

His brother had been to Portugal and while in Lisbon designed charts of ports and shores for the use of mariners. From him Columbus acquired his knowledge of gulfs and islands. He was scarcely received the first elements of education in his childhood applied himself to the study of navigation after he had reached his twenties. He became very expert in sketching, and at one time earned his bread, being a "master in making cardes and sketches." In the City Hall of Genoa there is a drawing attributed to the hand of the Admiral. It represents Columbus in a nautical chariot, and triumphing over Envy and Hate. Above his head soar Hope, Fame and Glory.

As our old school primers of blessed memory related—when they had sailed and sailed and sailed, and land was not seen, when the sailors would mutiny and Columbus tried to convince them that they were within hailing distance of Japan, shooting stars were their only encouragement. At the last moment, when the crew were prepared to rush and shift the tacks and sails of the Nina, a sailor—Rodrigo de Triana—sullen, discouraged, unwashed, perched himself on the topgallant mast. And then—the portentious moment—suddenly called out: "Tierra, tierra, tierra"

It must have been all perfect and beyond description, the speck of land upon the blue eternal sea. They must in true Latin fashion have fallen upon each others shoulders and embraced and wept. And all climbed up to see with their own eyes. Even a British crew might have been vociferous. One can quite hear down the centuries the loud echoes of the old world Latin crews, and then—the peace and awe that must have settled upon the blue waters upon the scrofulous, weary crew. It is recorded that Rodrigo received a new silk waistcoat We can picture his homecoming, a hero, "sitting in his parlor and talking to his dearie" and showing the bright new waistcoat.

Columbus received the titles Duke of Veregua de la Vega, Marquis of Jamaica and Grand Admiral of the Indies; the vice-royalty of the discovered island granted by Isabel and Ferdinand. These titles and an annual income of Luis Columbus in 1540. The grandeeship was not conceded to the heirs until 1712.

Christopher Columbus—as well as his friends, Amerigo Vespucciu died, believing that he had discovered merely a new way to the Indies, happy in the realization o a dream come true—unknowing the undreamed and great reality of a new world.

What search of the Golden Fleece, what Odyssey or Iliad is more romantic than the Genoese's? The romance of his humble birth, the wool weaver's son, self-educated as Lincoln, his struggle amidst the intrigue of the proud Spanish court his voyage—the departure, the last look to the vanishing shores—the progress to the edge of the world his discovery in the flush of the sunset and encounter with the new peoples, the Indians, and his triumphant return an epic poem of the Old World, which he proved round.

How he must have fancied that fate might repent of his discovery and for mere jest wipe him off the face of the sea ere the world knew anything of his crowning and stupendous luck How often this must have happened through the world's story to frail little shells of ships with their courageous crews.

After his return it was not always smooth sailing, for human nature is perverse and arrogant. Columbus complained of Juan de la Cosa, saying that because he had brought him to these parts for the first time and as a man of ability had taught him the art of navigation he went round saying that he knew more than himself. In all so delightfully human—whether in a round world or a square, or 400 years ago or today—that the gods must shake their sides with laughter.

Yet it is most gratifying in a world where the blind Homer begged his bread, that Columbus in his day received no small fame and the honors that were his due. The good curate Bernal writes: "And the said Christoforo Colon, of marvellously honorable memory, a native of the Province of Milan, while in Valladolid, in the year 1506, in the month of May, died at a good old age, discoverer of the Indies, aged 70 years, more or less. May the Lord be with him. Amen."

Now, when the globe trotters are once more stretching their limbs—and purses—to the utmost and going down to the deep in ships, there is not one of them in a storm whose flying thought does not picture that navigator, Christopher Columbus, and his frail caracte, "May the Lord be with him."

And the globe trotter comes to Genoa and cries, "Where is the house of Columbus? Show me"

MORE AMERICAN TOURISTS ENTER CANADA THIS YEAR

The touring department of the Ontario Motor League reports that there are more United States motor tourists doing Canada, and especially Ontario, than ever before. This is due in no small part to the propaganda carried on by the Ontario Motor League and Canadian Automobile Association, which has made known and is making known to a vast and ever increasing army of United States motorists that the unsurpassed vacation attractions with which this country is endowed are now readily accessible by motor over good roads, the scenic investiture of which, for the most part, make them worth coursing, quite aside from the lure of playground objectives.

LITTLE WORLD SERIES PLAYS TO SLIM CROWD

Biting Wind Cut the Gate Receipts—Baltimore Prolongs the Agony.

WON IN NINTH.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press)—The Orioles prolonged the Little World Series by winning the seventh game from Kansas City at Oriole Park this afternoon 10 to 9. Five runs behind, when they came in for their final bats, the Blues flashed a thrilling five-run rally tying the score and knocking Lefty Greves from the rubber. Tommy Thomas was rushed to the rescue and stopped the run making after allowing one hit.

Baltimore, however, came back in its half of the ninth and scored the necessary run to win. Wilkinson who had been sent into pitch after a pinch hitter had batted for Zinn, started badly by walking Maisel. Porter singled over short and Sheedy was hit, filling the bases. Bishop grounded to Hammond and Maisel was forced out at the plate. With two strikes and no balls, Styles dropped a Texas Leaguer back of second, scoring Porter with the winning run.

A cold, biting wind made it uncomfortable for both players and spectators. Yesterday's attendance was the smallest of the series, only 1,557 paying $2,520.60 to see the game.

The series now stands four for Kansas City and three for Baltimore.

CENTRAL DEFEATED QUEEN ALEXANDRA

G. Coleman Got the Hat Trick—Alexandra Boys Good Sports.

After the third game Central eliminated Queen Alexandra in Alex Kay Soccer Trophy by three goals to one. Alexandra boys have got a nice team and made Central travel all the way.

Winnings the toss, Queen Alexandra took advantage of the sun on their backs. From a punt forward by Lewis, in the penalty area, Walker gave away a free kick which was converted by G. Coleman after 5 minutes play. Johnston worked hard to get the equalizer but "Hutchy" was safe at full-back. Doughty and Dorrington come back again to Central goal but only got an unsuccessful corner. Alexandra boys hemmed Central into their own territory until Lewis cleared. Mitchell trapped the ball, lifted it over the backs' head, Coleman run into catch the ball on the drop, sending terrific drive against Tedford who saved but Coleman netted from rebound All the boys were playing clean and fast soccer. Half time—Central 2, Alexandra 0.

Six minutes gone of the second half, Kingdom netted the ball from forceful play by Johnston and Pinn. Alexandra boys changed their team to their advantage which ultimately showed weakness on defense, thereby giving Central forwards greater scope to open out the play, although Doughty, Dallin and "Buck" put up a good defence. Taylor compelled Walker to give away a corner kick which was netted by Coleman from a timely pass by Mitchell, just before the final arrived. Central 3, Queen Alexandra 1.

Goal scorers: G. Coleman 3 (hat trick) and Alexandra, Kingdom.

Queen Alexandra—Tedford, goal; Walker and Johnston, full-backs; Kingdom, Wood and Baker, half-backs; Dorrington, Dallin, Pinn, Doughty and Peryer, forwards.

Referee—G .Coleman.

"My Own"

May get chance to race "Zev" at Latonia November 3rd and settle claims for title of champion three-year-old.

'MY OWN' LIKELY TO MEET ZEV ON LATONIA TRACK

Admiral Grayson's Horse Already Entered in the Latonia Championship Event For November 3.

SETTLE DISPUTE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press)—Zev international three-year-old champion as a result of its decisive victory Saturday over Papyrus, the English Derby winner, yill settle his rivalry with My Own for U.S. honors in the Latonia championship at Latonia, Kentucky, November 3, unless present plans go astray.

Samuel C. Hildreth, trainer for Zev, yesterday announced that the Rancocas colt would be shipped to Latonia next week for the big stake and as Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, owner of My Own, already has entered his unbeaten star, it seemed assured that these two thoroughbreds would settle their disputed question of supremacy.

"Nothing will keep Zev out of the race except a break-down," declared Hildreth who added that he had declined to enter his charge in the $25,000 Washington handicap at a mile and a quarter, to be run as the closing feature at Laurel, Md., next Saturday. My own is an entry in this event but there was some speculation today as to whether Admiral Garyson might not withdraw his horse in anticipaton of fulfilling at Latonia his desire to have the great son of King James match strides with Zev.

Should My Own and Zev meet at Latonia it would be a real test for both thoroughbreds for the championship is at a mile and three quarters, two furlongs longer than the international race.

"MY OWN" HAS COLD.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press)—My Own, Admiral Grayson's 3-year-old thoroughbred, returned to his stable at Laurel, yesterday, with a cold and coughing badly. The colt caught the cold, trainer Burch said, in the hurried trip to New York and back, and being worked out in the rain at the New York track last Saturday.

"I hope we will have My Own in shape to meet all his engagements including the race at Latonia," said Admiral Grayson. "He has been keyed up since September for the international match race and I hope he wont go stale. His cold is bad but not necessarily serious and I hope to have him in condition again soon."

PAPYRUS SAILS TODAY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—(Canadian Press)—In fine fettle, despite his defeat by Zev in the international match race at Belmont Park, Saturday, Papyrus, England's premier 3-year-old walked up a specially rigged gang-plank and entered his homegoing box stall aboard the Aquitania with a whinny of satisfaction.

The Aquitania will sail today.

Donoghue Third.

Steve Donoghue, famous British jockey, who rode Papyrus in the international race Saturday with Zev accepted mounts in two of yesterday's races at Empire City track but could do not better than third either time. Donoghue got the place with Ladkin in the fourth race, won by H. T. Waters, and landed the small end of he purse with Dominique in the sixth, which was captured by Patrise.

Another Effort to Salvage Old Wreck.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Oct. 23.—With reference to the proposed efforts of Captain Grant Uyke of Kingston, Ont., to recover treasure from the Str. Golden Gate, wrecked off the Mexican coast in 1862 with $1,500,000 in gold on board, it is recalled here that seventeen years ago Charles W. Johnson, of Lower Delawara, a native of Bruddenell, P.E.I., made an attempt to salvage the treasure and recovered severl hundred dollars in gold coins before his plant was partially destroytd and the project abandoned. Mr. Johnson used powerful pumps to clear the sand which partially covered the wreck to a depth of eight feet.

GEORGE PEACOCK

Lindsay Post's Tribute to Late Manager of Leaside Team.

The Lindsay Post pays the following tribute to the late George Peacock, manager of the Leaside baseball team, who was well known to many of the local followers of the game:

Baseball fans in Lindsay and in the Central Ontario Baseball League, will greatly regret to hear of the death of Mr. G. Peacock, Manager of the Leaside Baseball Club, which occurred on Saturday last. He was one of the best known baseball authorities and one of the best fellows in the League. Lindsay fans remember George when he managed the Slyvester Mfg., team in the Lindsay Town League years ago and played the position of first baseman. He was a keen player, a joyous winner, but always a good loser. Later on when he was moved to Oshawa he immediately became indentified with the General Motor's team and became its manager in the Central League. He rounded the team into championship form and Lindsay fans will never forget the games, extra innings games between the Oshawa and iLndsay teams and the mightly pitching duels between Harold Dainty and Jack Oulette.

The late George Peacock, piloted his team through the championship of the League. He was also a valuable member of the C.O.B.L. Executive Committee where he fought fairly and always in the open. Many a heated argument was followed by a shake of the hand and George was never known by his baseball friends to hold spite or play a sulky part. Above all he fought strongly for the interest of the Central League, even opposing the Toronto Association and the Ontario Baseball Association when he thought the interest of the Central League were being jeopardized. Baseball fans in the League missed him during the past season, but Leaside team, of which he was manager, never played a game but Mr. Peacock heard the results over the telephone, even when he was in the hospital in a serious and weakened condition. He did much for the League, was courteous to the officials and a gentleman amongst his players. He will be much missed.

JOHNNY DUNDEE HIRES MANAGER

Farrell Says Business Brains Are Seldom Part of Boxer's Equipment.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (United Press).—Johnny Dundee, world's featherweight champion, has taken unto himself a manager. That, in itself is not strange, because a manager is a standard part of boxing equipment, but it is interesting in the case of Dundee, because for years he "went on his own."

Several years ago Dundee cut away from Scotty Monteith, the clever manager, who had brought out and made one of the greatest little fighters in the ring. Like many other boxers do, Dundee got to the point where he thought it was unnecessary expense to have a manager cutting in on 25 per cent of his earnings and, believing that he could handle his own affairs, Dundee dismissed his manager.

Now that his earning capacity has been doubled or trebled with the possession of a world's championship Dundee's actions in signing up Jimmy Johnston, a high-priced manager, to do his business for him, is an obvious admission that he found himself unfit to do both the fighting and the handling of his business.

It has long been debated whether managers are an influence for good or bad with a boxer. There are examples to support both sides of the argument, but there are vastly more boxers who have succeeded with managers than those who have gone it alone to the top.

Johnny Kilbane, former world's featherweight champion, was perhaps the most prominent example of a boxer who succeeded in handling his own affairs. No boxer in the history of the game got more out of the investment of such little time and labor as Kilbane did, but his was a very unusual case. Crafty business brains are very seldom any part of a boxer's equipment.

Kilbane cut away from Jimmy Dunn and he remarked when he retired from the ring, that he thought Dunn was the greatest developer and trainer of boxers in the business, but he had too much on his hands to give the proper attention to the business end of the game.

Jack Dempsey certainly would not have gone as far in the heavyweight division if he had not been guided by Jack Kearns, the greatest of all managers. Dempsey had the natural ability to reach the heavyweight championship without much guidance, but he certainly would not have commanded the fee for his services that Kearns was able to get for him.

Benny Leonard might have become the lightweight champion with some manager other than Billy Gibson, but it is very doubtful. Leonard is gracious enough to give Gibson the full credit for his rise to the top.

Jack Britton owed much to Dan Morgan for bringing to him the world's welterweight championship and a fortune that has made him carefree for the rest of his days.

Georges Carpentier never would have made his fortune or gained the fame that he earnd with a manager less shrewd and canny than Francois Descamps.

There are as many examples, or perhaps more, of boxers who suffered by poor management. Eugene Criqui's case was the most recent. Criqui won the world's featherweight championship and lost it in the short space of two months. No smart American manager would have allowed him to take on a dangerous challenger in his first fight as a champion.

True, Criqui was forced to post a forfeit of $10,000 that he would meet Dundee in his next fight before he was allowed to fight Kilbane, but he could have gone back to France and forfeited his money. He was blackjacked by unfair methods into the agreement and it would not have been a breach of faith to demand a fair chance as the champion.

He would have made money if he did have to pass up $10,000 and thereby get the opportunity for a number of matches, but he would never have lost the forfeit, as the New York Boxing Commission could not legally claim the money and Dundee did not have a case to take it into court.

Jess Willard's terrible blunder in discharging his managers and trainers after he won the heavyweight championship cost him the title and a fortune. He made unsound investments that Ray Archer would never have allowed him to fall into, and he dropped his title because he was dumber than the dumb second in his corner when Jack Dempsey left the ring in Toledo.

When smart boxers like the Gibbons brothers never felt able to do all their own business there must be some real place for a manager in boxing. There are any number of boxers who are mentally equipped to handle their own affairs, but it stands to reason that much of their time will be occupied by business when they should be doing the serious work of training.

Dundee, had he a manager, never would have been lured into his last fight in Philadelphia with Kid Wagner just before the scheduled Leonard-Dundee fight. He made a terrible showing and blew up a fight that would have drawn at least $300,000 and would have netted Dundee at least 20 per cent of it.

Luis Angel Firpo is trying to act as his own manager, and he has come very close to killing himself several times. Firpo can talk dollars and cents better than any manager could do it for him, but he has made political errors, natural for a stranger in a strange company, that would not have befallen him if he had taken the counsel of a wise manager.

One Legged Lad Stars On Crack Ohio Grid Squad

DAYTON, O., Oct. 23.—Vernon Schwab only has one leg—

But that doesn't keep him from being a mighty dangerous lad on the gridiron.

This year he's captain of the Stivers High School eleven here. It won the southern Ohio championship in 1922.

More than that, Vernon's practically the whole squad. The only veteran left, this gritty youngster became the nucleus for the new machine the Stivers coach began building this season.

Schwab, 18, and weighing 190, is a guard on the basketball team, too. He also plays baseball and carries off medals in swimming.

A hunting accident in 1921 cost him his right leg. Fellow students staged a pageant for his benefit. Proceeds were sufficient to buy him an artificial limb and defray his school expenses.

Then Vernon started to come back. And he's still coming!

MANY RECRUIT PITCHERS MAKE GOOD

American League Should Get Greatly Improved Twirling Next Year.

BY BILLY EVANS.

For the past five years, or ever since the abolition of freak deliveries, including the spitball, pitching has been on the decline in both major leagues.

In addition to the many pitching reforms that were inaugurated about five years ago, came the lively ball. The result was a batting spree in which the batsmen reveled and the pitching suffered.

Pitching and batting seem to run in cycles, first the pitcher is supreme and then the batter hogs the spotlight. Once more the stock of the pitcher seems to be in the ascendency.

The American League should boast much better pitching in 1924 than the season just closed. Practically every club in the Johnsonian organization has developed one or more worth while young pitchers. A year ago the flock of pitching recruits was a very ordinary one this year's offering appears to be far above the average.

Zahniser Looks Good.

Take the Washington club for instance. In Paul Zahniser Manager Donie Bush has developed a right-hander who should win a good many games for the Nationls next year. Zahniser came to the club in the middle of the season and after a slow start has hit a big league gait and done some excellent pitching. He has good speed, but a splendid curve ball is his best asset.

For several years Cleveland has been weak as to left-handers, Manager Speaker seems to have remedied this fault. In Joe Shaute and Jim Edwards he has developed two southpaws who should win consistently for the Indians next year. Both show great promise.

Because of the all-star pitching staff of the New York Yankees, recruit pitchers have had but little chances to show on that club. However in Roettger and Pipgras, Manager Huggins has two young right-handers who look to have everything that a big league pitcher should have.

Makes Impressive Debut.

In John Burns, secured from the Shreveport (La.) club of the Texas League, Connie Mack feels positive he has unearthed a most promising recruit. Burns is a right-hander who knows how to pitch. He hasn't the stuff of a Walter Johnson, but he mixes up his assortment in great style and should make good. He won two of his first three starts after joining the Mackmen, beating Detroit and Washington and losing to Cleveland.

While Herman Pillette of Detroit failed to live up to his great showing of 1922, Syl Johnson who was picked to star a year ago and failed, has hit his stride and should be a big help to Cobb next season. In addition the Tigers have landed a likely southpaw in Whitehill. In a game against the Yankees, which Detroit won, he allowed only one hit in six innings. In his next start against Cleveland he permitted Cleveland to register only two safe hits. Some pitching against two of the hardest hitting clubs in the American League.

It is conservative to say that the American League in the season just closed has developed a dozen pitchers capable of holding their own. That means considerably more trouble for the batters next year.

COLUMBIA HOME AFTER HITTING A ROCK IN HARBOR

Gloucester Challenger For Fishermen's Title Believed Not Seriously Injured.

"JINX" PURSUES HER.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 23 The schooner Columbia challenger for the international fishermen's trophy, struck a rock just outside Gloucester harbor to-day while on her way to Halifax to meet the Canadian defender Blue Nose in the race series scheduled to begin Saturday. Captain Ben Pine brought the vessel back to port for examination and possible repair. Her injuries are not believed to be serious.

The schooner struck a rock just outside of Great Round Rock which is marked with a spar buoy and lies off the breakwater at the entrance to the harbor. The after part of the vessel collided twice with the obstruction with a heavy jar. No leak followed but Captain Pine decided to "play safe" and return to port. The Columbia was tied up at her wharf to-night and will be hauled out on the marine railway in the morning.

"We lost no time by coming back," the skipper said. "We would have encountered head winds anyway. I believe a couple of hours on the rail way will be all the boat needs and we will sail for Halifax to-morrow afternoon."

The return of the Columbia which had been sped on her journey a short time before with the ringing of bells and blowing of whistles cast a gloom over the city and recalled the tradition that a "jinx" seems to follow all Gloucester contenders in international schooner races. Earlier in the season the Columbia was in collision with a French trawler near Sable Island. She is the latest in a series of racing schooners many of which have met with disaster.

Among the major untoward incidents cited by the superstitious fisher folk to prove that the international race is unlucky to Gloucester ships are the loss of the Esperanto and the wreck of the Puritan.

NUMBER COMPLETED PLAYS WOULD MEASURE RUGBY

Eliminate Stop Watch and Quarter Periods and Defeat Increasing Practice of Stalling—Suggestion Is Finding Favor.

The possible scrapping of the stop-watch by the substitution for the present game of football of four quarters of fifteen minutes each, of a game in which rather there is to be a given number of plays completed during the match, has received considerable attention in the United States.

In the present American game of Rugby "stalling" has become to be such an important factor in a football contest that it has proved detrimental to the game and to the interests of the spectators as well. It is to the elimination of this and kindred evils that Percy Haughton, the head coach of the University of Columbia, has seen fit to advocate a game governed by the above "play system" in place of the present game, the length of which is settled by the stop-watch. The new plan, he says, would do much to improve football, would do away with a lot of petty bickering and would not prejudice the result by the variations of the watch or by the mistakes of officials. The only time in which the watch would be employed would be in timing the periods allowed for injuries and for penalties. The plan which he proposes is simple, being merely that the game be of one hundred and sixty plays, that is forty plays to the quarter, in place of the present determined duration of sixty minutes of playing time.

Coach Shaughnessy, of McGill, while not directly advocating the employment of this suggested "play system" in the Canadian game, when seen last evening, was highly favorable to it, and thought that it was worthy of consideration by those in whose hands the regulation of the Canadian game rested. He pointed out that in the Harvard-Princeton game of 1912 there were 186 plays, the largest number of plays ever executed in an American game of football in the east. In the recent 'Varsity-McGill game there was exactly the same number of plays run off as in that game of Harvard and Princeton in 1912.

"Stalling" Getting Bad.

He went on to point out that it had been found in the United States that "stalling" was severely interfering with the number of plays that could now be introduced in a game, thus reducing the average until in the game between Ursinus and Columbia in September, the average of plays for the first quarter if maintained, would have allowed only a total of one hundred plays for the entire contest. Variations in the number of plays are remarkable; these are particularly well brought out in the United States, where a closer account of the game is kept by statistics. However, McGill's Rugby leader went on to say that much the same development is overcoming the Canadian game, that today "stalling" near the close of the quarter by the winning team will endeavor to delay the play, and hurrying by the aggregation which is behind in the count, who are anxious to get in as many plays as they can, lower the standard of play during that period of the match. Added to this is the disagreements between players, referees and officials, which is the inevitable consequence of such a practice. Again, there is the possibility that the timekeeper may make a mistake, that the watch may stop—as has happened before—that it may not be properly adjusted. The possible avoidance of these hindrances to the correct handling of the game are all in favor of the adoption of the suggested system. Of course climatic conditions and the state of the field are all factors which influence this aspect of the game.

Game in the West.

In the west the total number of plays is apt to be more in the average game than is the case in the east. In the game run, according to the "play system," instead of according to the present time system, both teams would be apt to quicken the play toward the close rather than to draw it out, on the supposition that both would be equally anxious to finish the contest, which could only be accomplished by performing the requisite number of plays. Indeed this would not be such a radical alteration as it might seem—it would be radical only in its elimination of the above referred to objectionable features, but it would in no wise disturb the balance of defense and offence, in any other respects, as Coach Haughton points out.

Overthrow That Helped Overthrow The Giants

To win the world championship from the Giants the Yankees produced an amazing flare-up in the eight inning of the final game, the net result of which was five runs and victory. This shows a bit of action in the inning. Bob Meusel's single has just sent the tying and winning runs over. Dugan is going into third on the hit. Cunningham, returning the ball from centre field, has thrown wildly .Dugan, making mental note of the overthrow, leaps up and continues on his way to the plate with the run that made victory doubly sure.

FAST SOFT BALL IN THE ARMOURIES

Large Crowd of Spectators Enjoyed the Keenly Contested Arguments.

Last evening in the Armouries three of the fastest soft ball games played this year were seen by a large crowd of spectators who were well satisfied with the evening's arguments. In the first game between the Knights of Columbus and the Rotary the latter won by the close score of 10 to 7, after five fast innings of ball.

The teams lined up as follows:

K. of C.—Primeau ss; Sheahy, 2b; Murphy c; Rose p; J. Rutherford ss; G. Rutherford 3b; Cronin rf; Wolff lf; McDonald 1b; Wolff 1b

Rotary—McPherson ss; Young ss; Abbot 1b; Primeau 2b; Dobbin lf; Graham c; DeGraw p; Turner rf; Kirnie 3b.

Score by innings:

Knights of Columbus ..2 0 3 2 0—7
Rotary ....4 3 1 0 2—10

The feature of the game was a double play made by Kirnie to Young.

In the second game between the L.O.L. and the Gunners the former won by the score of 5 to 3 after seven of the speediest innings played in the armouries this year. This game was a bunting contest and a pitcher's battle. The long drives were few and far between in this clash. In the first innings by bunting the L.O.L. scored 2 runs in the fourth they made 2 more, and in the fifth they scored 1 making a total of five (5) runs. The Gunners scored their only three in the third, being blanked by snappy fielding on the part of the L.O.L. 50 in the other six innings. The teams lined up as follows:

Gunners —Ranger c; Shaughnessy ss; Coursey 3b; Ross 1b; Piercy p; White ss; Dundas 2b; Gilders lf; Symonds rf; Galvin rf.

Score by innings:

L.O.L. 50—.....2 0 0 2 1 0 x—5

At nine o'clock the Rangers and the Kiwanis clashed, when the former won by the score of 7 to 5 after ten fast innings. The Rangers scored one in the first third and fourth, two in the fifth and tenth. The Kiwanis scored three in the first and two in the seventh, tieing the score. The Rangers broke away in the tenth and scored two runs and thus winning the game.

The teams lined up as follows:

Kiwanis ..... 3 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 0 0—5

The feature of the game was double plays made by, Morphet to Webber and Grant to Maudsley.

FIGHTING FOR NEW REPUBLIC

Leader of Movement in Philippines After More Freedom.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.— An apt pupil is Pedro Guevara.

Twenty-five years ago Pedro was fighting for Phillipine independence with rifle and bayonet.

To-day Pedro is back in the fight again, but he is shooting logic and arguments instead of bullets in his attempt to win freedom for his people. But his aim is still the same—a Philippine republic.

As the new Filipino commissioner to the United States, Guevara will be the directing head in the fight to be waged in the coming Congress for the withdrawal of Uncle Sam's guiding hand in the Philippines and the organization of a free and independent republic for the islands.

"Learned Lots."

"We have learned more and progressed more in 25 years under American rule than we did in 300 years under Spain," Guevara says, in explaining the Filipino attitude. "Uncle Sam promised us independence. We believe we are ready and able to exercise it.

"We entertain no alternative. Philippine independence is undoubtedly in accord with the spirit and purpose of the priniciple of self-determination and the rights of small nations, and we ask that those principles be observed without condition and limitation."

With Aguinaldo.

Back in 1897 when only 18, Guevara was in the Filipino army, fighting for freedom from Spain. He was fighting Spaniards when Admiral Dewey sailed into Manila Bay.

When the Filipinos decided to war on Uncle Sam, he became one of the leaders and was placed in command of the army of Samucab. He was one of the Filipino officials sent to Manila to thresh out the definite terms of peace, with General MacArthur.

Having agreed to peace, Guevara has since maintained the peace, and will continue to do so.

But having been promised freedom and having, he believes, fulfilled the conditions laid down for freedom, he's going right ahead with his fight till freedom is achieved.

BAVARIAN TROOPS ABANDON REICH

Hands of Secessionists Strengthened and Hope In Berlin Shattered.

MUNICH Oct. 23.— (Canadian Press).—The hand of Bavarian secessionists has been strongly strengthened by the action of the seventh division of Reischswehr troops which yesterday abandoned allegiance to the Reich and swore obedience to the Bavarian Government of which Dr. Van Kahr is dictator.

It had been hoped in Berlin that these troops would remain faithful to the central government, but they readily took oath binding them to obey their superiors and the Bavarian Government until an understanding between Bavaria and the Reich had been reached.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

Motion picture stars frequently fall into the rut, because they persistently follow the same line of story, and the same type of characterization. They never deviate because they feel that the public demands them in a certain type of picture.

Harold Lloyd has proven the fallacy of this belief. Lloyd has gone ahead all the time because he has never established himself in any certain type of picture. Because his audiences never know what to expect from him, and don't worry because they know he always gives the msomething that is worth while.

In "Why Worry?" his latest Pathecomedy entry in the race for popular plaudits and the feature attraction at the Capitol Theartre, tomorrow, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Lloyd again pursues his own theory that to mix them up is to serve the publice best. Because one likes roast beef is no reason why it should be served him for every meal. And for the same motive, there is no reason why a star should enact a certain type of picture continuously because he happened to achieve a great success in one of them.

"Why Worry?" is as unlike any picture Harold Lloyed has made before, as any two things could be. It is a South American story, strong in farce but with an ever pleasant vein of satire that should prove delightful to the American audience which does not like its entertainment too serious.

It is the biggest picture in Lloyd's actegory, from the point of production. Big sets, huge crowds, and much fighting add to its production values. Yet above all these stands out the character of Lloyd, as the boy who has naught to worry him but imaginary ills. Another outstanding figure is John Aasen. Eight feet, nine and a quarter inches of real man stand out on the screen. He is the screen's biggest man.

"Little Johnnie Jones" is a real thrilly race track drama feature at the Capitol Theatre for the first three days of this week. A good sized audience followed with interest and rapt attention the career of the Versatile Johnny, played in the usual snappy fashion by Johnny Hines, at the Capitol last night.

The racing episode in this picture is one of the most thrilling picturizations of a Derby feature seen in many moons. The plot is the somewhat hackneyed one of two rivals in love and skill competing for fame and a sweetheart at one and the time, but the flair of Johnny Hines for this type of picture puts the action across in great style.

Robert Anstead, crooked racer and gambler, 'plants' a crooked 'dope' sheet on the unsuspecting Johnny, and then contrives to have him attacked with acid in the last stretches of a breath-taking burst of speed on the famous track. Needless to say, however, the intrepid hero wins out in the end. One of the most interesting characters in the feature is the Wonder Dog, Brownie, capturing his usual share of attention.

There is a real good comedy with this picture, and the usual run of excellent Capitol short reels to round out an enterprising programme.

AT THE ROYAL.

SMITH STRIVES FOR REALISM IN SPECIAL.

Vitagraph Director Spares No Expense in Making "The Midnight Alarm."

So keen is the desire of David Smith, Vitagraph director, whose latest stirring work, "The Midnight Alarm," will be seen at the Royal Theatre on Thursday, that his picture be studies in realism, that it has been suggested he be rechristened "Realistic" Smith.

Mr. Smith in pursuing this policy has made his newest Vitagraph special production more spectacular than even "Ninety and Nine" or "Masters of Men," his recent film triumphs.

Mr. Smith spares no expense in making of pictures, because he realizes the public is now so discriminative that faked shots, double exposures or double prints are easily detected and dissatisfying to patrons of the industry.

In making "The Midnight Alarm" he had constructed a whole block of buildings for the mere purpose of burning them down to furnish a spectacular scene. He also demanded his actors to face great danger in the making of the fire scene and others that the photoplay might be real. Alice Calhoun, the heroine of the story, was actually locked in a steel vault in order that realism might be portrayed in the rescue scene.

"The Midnight Alarm" is viewed as the best picture of the noted director's career.

ELINOR GLYNN'S NOVEL AT THE ROYAL.

Elinor Glynn has written an unusual and most absorbing screen story in "Six Days." It held the audience last night at the Royal Theatre, where it will be shown for two more days, entirely in its spell. The characters are sympathetic and vividly portrayed; photography by John Mescall is everywhere satisfactory and in many instances touches the highest pictorial beauty. The direction of Charles Brabin is of the kind that producers dream of but seldom get for their pictures.

The beautiful and charming Corinne Griffith heads the cast as Laline Kingston, a young American girl engaged to Sir Charles Chetwyn, a wealthy Englishman; Frank Mayo is featured with Miss Griffith in the role of Dion Leslie, the lover; Claude King is Sir Charles, and Myrtle Stedman, the girl's mother. Other important roles are played by Maude George, Spottiswoode Aitken, Charles Clary and Evelyn Walsh Hall.

Engaged to Sir Charles Chetwyn, at the behest of her mother for financial and social reasons, the young American girl, Laline, loses her heart to Dion Leslie, son of a famous actress appearing in Paris. They are imprisoned, along with a priest who acted as their guide, in a German dugout which collapses when a secret mine is exploded by touching a German helmet. Facing death, the lovers are married by the priest. In their efforts to escape, after the death of the priest, they fell into a chalk mine, become separated and eventually both are rescued. Believing Dion dead, Laline is forced by her mother to marry Sir Charles. How the lovers are reunited forms the big exciting climax to the picture.

The comedy, "Cold Chills," is filled with laughs, and the balance of the programme is up to the mark.

AT THE GRAND.

A JOINT RECITAL.

Jules Falk, the distinguished violinist, who will play here Monday evening, October 29th, in a joint recital with Vanette van Sweringen, soprano, contends that both the attitude of the artist in public playing and the audience is purely physchological. One creates the atmosphere for the other. In an interview Falk in speaking of the physchology of his art, said: "The fingers or muscles of my body have nothing to do with my music. It is, if I may speak so, the mind that runs down into my muscles that makes me the musician. The quality of my playing is not determined by my surroundings, by the mod or temperament of my audience, but by what is within me. I play from the feeling, the emotions, the knowledge, the poetry, the color, the combination of elements within, that which may be called my mind, or that force in me, which is really me.

"I cannot allow external matters or conditions to worry me and so cultivate a serenity of outlook and supremacy of mental control. Such mental control is absolutely necessary. I have to put aside anything that might have gone wrong in my affairs and look deeper for the music I have to give.

"Again, it is a question of mental attitude," says Falk. "When I find myself in such a rebellious mood, I begin my day's work with the most elementary exercises, such as a child would use. I merely lift my fingers and watch them fall, or use exercises which are simplicity themselves. My mind invariably becomes interested and then I can work."

Falk also says that he has mastered the art of dismissing worry from his mind.

Portugal contains only two cities, Lisbon and Oporto, with populations in excess of 50,000.

ALBERTA COAL

Those that have ordered Alberta coal can rest assured that orders will be filled as far as possible within the next two weeks to the extent of the ten carloads, which is the Peterborough allotment. Two carloads of the Rosedale lump for furnace use are now in the city and will be delivered in the next few days. No further orders can be taken until a further shipment can be secured at the special freight rates.

The previous shipment of Lakeside egg coal for use in ranges sold at $13.00 per ton, was three quarter size and Mr. Cooney has been advised that the additional four carloads shipped is 1 1-2 in. to 4 in. screen and will be more suitable for burning in ranges. Owing to the better size, an additional fifty cents per ton is charged by the mine and now makes the price for one ton $13.50. Those that have ordered the egg coal kindly make a note of the change in price from $13.00 to $13.50 per ton.

SEPARATISTS LOOK FOR COMPLETE SUCCESS IN RHINELAND IN A WEEK

Officially Claim Control Of Fifteen Towns To-day, But Revolters' Position at Aix-La-Chapelle Described as Desperate.

A STATE OF SIEGE

PARIS, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Examiner.)—The Separatists officially claim control of the following towns in the Rhineland, despatches from Aix-La-Chapelle said to-day. Bochums, Mannheim, Orefeld, Ludwigshafen, Rudelsheim, Bonn, Duren, Dietz, Mayen, Frum, Saarburg, Wiesbaden, Grossgereau, Bademin and Mayence.

Leo Deckers, Separatist at Aix-La-Chapelle, is quoted by Le Matin as saying: "The struggle is extremely hard. It is impossible to make a revolution in a day.

Success in a Week.

"I believe our success will be final within a week. We have won places where we expected fierce resistance. Duisburg and Bonn, the latter a typical Prussian military citadel, are ours."

The Separatist position is described by observers at Aix-La-Chapelle as desperate.

Only about 100,000 Separatists are said to be in the city, while the populace is extremely hostile.

The British Consul there attempted to induce the besieged Separatists to surrender but was unsuccessful.

Coblenz messages say Separatists there seized a castle, but were unable to hold it. They abandoned it with the intention of attacking other buildings.

A state of siege is reported to have been proclaimed in Wiesbaden.

Recapture Stations.

Twenty-two were dead and about 200 wounded in the fighting at Hamburg yesterday, according to the latest check early to-day.

Police to-day had recaptured all important police stations seized by Communists in their uprising yesterday. Desultory firing continued through the night but brought no change in the situation.

Form a Directorate.

The executive committee of the Separatist party has elected Herr Mattes and Dr. Dorten to form a directorate government for the new Rhineland Republic, a despatch from Coblenz said to-day.

The directorate would be vested with full powers.

Herr Matthes would act for the North Rhineland areas and Dorten for the South.

Say Force Spent.

Duesseldorf despatches say the Rhineland Republican movement has spent its first force according to meagre reports received over crippled wire systems, but the situation is still confused. The Republicans took a few additional villages and towns yesterday and last night, but cleared out of Coblenz, their capital, and Mayence, and reaction is apparent in a number of towns they still hold.

Replace Lifeboats On British Liners By Capacious Rafts

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The Board of Trade has under consideration the question of the substitution of rafts for lifeboats on ocean going ships on the theory that the rafts would not occupy so much room as lifeboats, and consequently more could be carried.

Experiments for the protection of passengers on board ship were recently carried out by Dr. Leonard Hill a Director of the Department of Applied Physiology. It is calculated that, by means of wireless, disaster to a ship can be located within six hours.

Women and children are apt to suffer from exposure during that time. One suggestion is that thin mackintoshes should be carried in the lockers of the rafts so that passengers could put them on immediately.

QUICK DISPOSAL OF CIVIL CASES

Half An Hour of Assizes' Time Clears the Docket Of Five Suits Yesterday

Civil cases at the assizes yesterday were disposed of quickly, taking scarcely half an hour of the court's time.

In McDonald vs. National Cooperage Co., a claim for $2649.60, G. N. Gordon, K.C., informed the court that an order had been issued from the Master in Chambers, Toronto, adjourning the action until the next sittings of the court in Peterboro.

Robertson vs. Lumb, an action for the recovery of $4031.33, has been transferred for trial to Cobourg.

Copping vs. Miller et al., was adjourned to the Belleville assizes.

In Canadian Nashua Paper Co., vs Cooper's Bakery, two witnesses were examined, the defense not putting in an appearance. Judgment was reserved.

In the matter of the Isabel Payne estate, in which A. E. Dixon appeared for the defendant, an order was made that the Trust and Guarantee Co. carry out the sale, providing the official guardian representing the infant Gertrude Payne approves.

In all of these cases Gordon and O'Brien represented the plaintiffs, G. N. Gordon, K.C., speaking to all except the Canadian Nashua Paper Co. action, in which Mr. O'Brien acted.

U.S. WILLING TO HELP IN EUROPE

But Found Door Closed To Her on Offering To Participate in Settlements.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—United States Ambassador Harvey delivered a long farewell speech at the Pilgrim's dinner last night, in which he reiterated willingness of United States to help assess Germanys capacity to pay reparations, reviewed the Monroe doctrine and declared that the United States must and would keep aloof from Europe.

He reminded his audience which included Prime Minister Baldwin that the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, and French, Belgian and Japanese ambassadors, that United States had waived all reparations claims from Germany for joint account of the Allies and was therefore disinterested, but that when United States came to the door of Europe to assist in settlements she found the door closed.

"We art ready to promote any scheme for the economic rehabilitation of Europe," he declared. "We are ready to join in any conference which would promote recuperation and stability of the world, but we cannot smash through a door."

Count de Saint Aulaire, French Ambassador, fidgeted uncomfortably in his chair as Col. Harvey asserted that billions of money lent to Europe by the United States was being used to maintain greater armies than had ever befor existed.

SMUTS' SPEECH HAS CREATED A BIG SENSATION

Report Indicates South African Premier Is Not Satisfied with Direction The Parley is Taking.

PEACE THREATENED

LONDON, October 24. — Canadian Press Cable by George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent.) — The startling speech made by Premier Smuts of South Africa, at the South African dinner last night, on the European situation, has created the greater sensation because of the silence which has hitherto been preserved in public.

At one of the sittings of the Imperial conference Premier Smuts is understood to have expressed himself in no uncertain terms, but such summaries of his remarks as were officially published here contained no mention of his criticisms.

According to one report he is not altogether satisfied with the direction in which he thinks the conference is tending, and has taken opportunity to express his mind. In some quarters the speech of the South African Premier is regarded as heralding his departure from South Africa to embark on a wider field of British politics.

Canada's Stand.

How far the Canadian government if invited, would be prepared to participate in Premier Smuts' proposed international conference on reparations would depend, it is intimated on the nature of the conference. If the conference were purely one of conciliation Canada probably would accept an invitation to it, as she did to Genoa conference.

Back to 1914.

Following are the words used by Premier Smuts in his speech last night in alluding to the illegality of the French occupation of the Ruhr:

"We are back again in August, 1914. It is again 'a scrap of paper.' Once more a great instrument of European settlement is deliberately broken. We entered war to avenge such a breach, and it bodes ill for the peace of Europe that four years after war we must face the same situation again. But Nemesis is coming now as in 1914!"

SHOW "GIFT OF LIFE" AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

The Social Hygiene Council, with the co-operation of the Local Council of Women and Home and School Council, has arranged to hold some very interesting meetings in the Public Library on Thursday and Friday of this week, at which time the Government film, "The Gift of Life," will be shown to women exclusively.

Miss Moore, representing the Council, is being sent from Toronto to explain the picture, which is designed to stress the proper ideal of motherhood and to educate women in the facts of life from the highest standpoint. This film is being shown in various centres of population and in being viewed recently by the ladies of Toronto, was highly recommended by Mrs. Becker, of the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations. The substance of the film is similar to the talks given here by Dr. Barker and Mrs. Pankhurst on their visits to the city.

The meetings to be held on Thursday are at 3.30 and 8 p.m., to which all mothers and ladies interested are cordially invited. The meeting on Friday evening at eight o'clock is for young women, and a good attendance is desired as this is a very important subject.

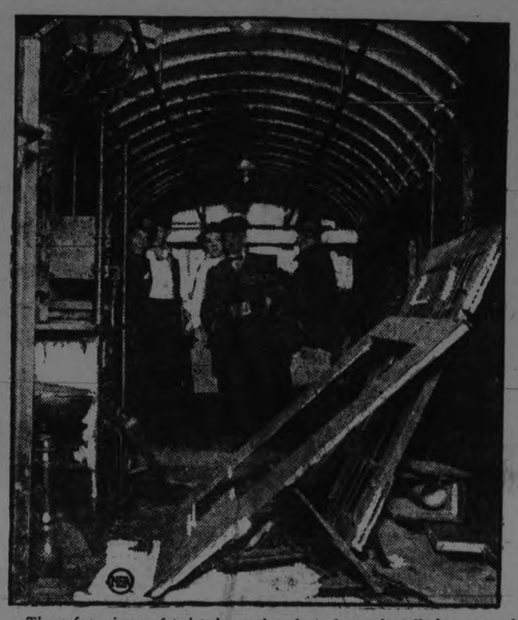
NEW GERMAN EPISTLE FOR THE COMMISSION

PARIS, Oct. 24. —(Canadian Press.)— New German note to Reparation Commission, asks Commission to begin an examination into Germany's capacity for payment and to allow representatives of Berlin Government personally to explain situation and measures taken by Germany for reforming her budget and stabilizing her currency.

It's All the Bandits Left



These few pieces of twisted wood and steel mutely tell the story of the recent sensational Southern Pacific holdup in a tunnel near Ashland, Ore. The debris is all that remains of the mail car the bandits dynamited. Three trainmen and a mail clerk were killed in the robbery. And this picture also gives an idea of the damage done to the baggage car adjoining the wrecked coach.

STRANGER SUSPECT TRAILS LLD. GEORGE, IS DETAINED

Plans of Party Suddenly Switched and Ex-Premier's Train is Guarded by Solid Phalanx Of American Police.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, October 24 (United Press). — A mysterious stranger who followed Lloyd-George's party through Chicago, Indianapolis, Marion, and Cleveland was ordered to be detained to-day by secret service men.

The actions of the man resulted in the sudden switching of plans for the party during the early hours of the morning.

Lloyd-George's train was guarded by a solid phalanx of police massed on all sides. Cordons were thrown around the railroad station here, and detectives packed the train on which the party departed for Pittsburgh at 1 a.m.

The suspect, who spoke with an English accent, introduced himself first to the party in Chicago, where he made several attempts to see Lloyd-George, according to A. J. Sylvester, personal secretary to the former Premier.

CANADIAN GENERAL TO PASS INTO THE HANDS OF AMERICAN CONCERN

Directors of Canadian Firm Met This Afternoon and Approved the Proposal.

TO BE RATIFIED

TORONTO, October 24 (Special to The Examiner). — The directors of the Canadian General Electric Company to-day unanimously and heartily approved the proposal to sell the control in their company to the General Electric Company in Schnectady, N.Y.

No details regarding the terms of the deal will be announced, however, until after it comes up before the board of directors of the American company on Friday next.

If it is approved by the directorate of the American concern, the Canadian General Electric Company will immediately call a meeting of their shareholders and place the proposal before them for ratification.

This official announcement was made by W. H. Nesbitt, following the directors' meeting held here at mid-day.

Mr. Nesbitt added that this gathering had been the best attended one ever held, and stated that the opinion was unanimous regarding the acceptance of the American offers.

The approval given by to-day's meeting was regarded in the street as ensuring the consummation of the amalgamation of the American and Canadian interests.

This, it is generally conceded, will react to the benefit of both companies.

PROMINENT MASONS IN TORONTO TODAY

Representatives Ancient And Accepted Scottish Rite Gather.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—All superlatives of title and rank in Canadian Free Masonry are represented in Toronto to-day in a gathering from all parts of the Dominion of the Supreme Council for Canada, of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. The Supreme Council is the governing body of the Scottish Rite in Canada, and its membership consists of from seventy to eighty Canadian Masons who have attained the 33rd degree, the highest rank in the craft.

Practically all provinces of Canada and most of the cities are represented directly by the Supreme Council members at the meeting to-day.

Sir John Gibson, of Hamilton, Ont., Sovereign Grand Commander of the Order, presided at the sessions.

The addresses of Sir John Gibson and other officers indicated that the Scottish Rite throughout Canada was in an exceptionally prosperous condition.

WINNIPEG'S VOTE TESTS PRECEDENT

Hon. E. J. McMurray Is Opposed By Three Candidates in To-Day's By-Election.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—A precedent which according to Hon. E. J. McMurray Solicitor General has remained unbroken for a period of sixty years will be tested here to-day when Mr. McMurray will be opposed by three candidates in the federal bye-election in North Winnipeg necessitated by his elevation to the cabinet. The other candidates are Alderman A. A. Heaps, Independent-Labor Party J.A. Martin, Labor candidate without affiliation, and Paul Cigejoski Independent.

The campaign which has been waged for about three weeks has not produced any political pryotechnics much being made by Mr. McMurray and Mr. Heaps, the principal nominees of the immigration question. The former advocates the open door and latter favors restrictions on immigration to help stabilize Canadian industries.

JOSEPH WEARING TELLS BAPTISTS OF MANY SECTS

Brings Home to Convention Idea of Conglomerate Religious Faiths Prevalent in West.

REMOVE McMASTER

MONTREAL, October 24. — The presentation and discussion of the reports of the Western Mission Board, Superannuation Board, and Home Mission Board occupied the entire time of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec meeting yesterday in Olivet Baptist Church.

Some idea of the conglomerate religious beliefs prevalent in Western Canada, was brought home to the convention in the presentation of the Western Mission report by Mr. Joseph Wearing of Peterborough.

In the Province of Saskatchewan alone, Mr. Wearing said, the following sects were to be found: Anglicans, Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, Baptists, Roman Catholics, Greek Catholics, Lutherans, Mennonites, Brethren, Salvation Army, Seventh Day Adventists, Apostolic Brethren, Catholic Apostolic, Christadelphians, Christian Science, Unitarian, Church of Christ, Church of God, Deists, Disciples of Christ, Dutch Reform, Evangelical Association, Gospel People, Holiness Movement, Interational Bible Students, Labour Church, Hutterites, Moravians, Mormons, New Thought, Pentecostal, Spiritualists, Swedenborgians, Theosophists, United Brethren, representatives of Hinduism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, and Shintoism, as well as avowed Free Thinkers and Atheists.

A Babel of Religions.

"A babel of religions, no less than a babel of tongues clearly demonstrates that the whole world in which the Gospel must be preached according to Christ's command, can be found as a microcosmos right within the Prairie Provinces," Mr. Wearing said.

The report covered all the Western Provinces and shows substantial gains for the Baptist churches in each of these Provinces. Forty years ago the Baptist constituency west of the Great Lakes was reported as: Manitoba, 1,600; the North-West Territories, 12, and British Columbia, 274.

The present constituency is reported as: Manitoba, 13,600; Saskatchewan, 23,700; Alberta, 27,800; and British Columbia, 20,200.

With a strong appeal for greater support and a wider interest in the work of Western missions, Mr. Wearing closed his report. "The cause of home missions and of foreign missions" he said, "of Baptist history and Baptist faith, and the voices which come borne to us from hundreds of churchless districts and in scores of languages, all bid us lay our plans for Christianising Western Canada upon a scale worthy of men who believe in the regenerating power of Jesus. Not to hear the call is to lose our life; to heed and to help is to save it."

The Senate and Board of Governors of McMaster University to-day reported to the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, in session here, that the removal of the institution from Toronto to Hamilton seemed the best solution of the problems of enlargement and endowment provided satisfactory arrangements could be worked out.

PAY SHEETS REFUTED B. MARKSON'S ALLEGED STORY OF LOW WAGES

Markson Took the Stand This Afternoon—Counsel for Defence Says the Wrong Party is in Court—Case Will Close Today

EFFECT OF ARTICLES

The case of Bernard Markson, charged with publishing false information, was resumed this morning before Mr. Justice Kelly at the Fall Assizes. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton conducted the case for the Crown and Mr. J. G. O'Donoghue, K.C., of Toronto, appeared for the defence.

Edgar Sorby, paymaster of the Quaker Oats Co., was recalled. Mr. Sorby produced the pay sheets of his company covering a period in the spring.

Cross - examined by Mr. O'Donoghue, the witness showed sheets on which workers were shown as receiving $20 a week. The lowest was $15.20, and there were several at $18.

"I am informed," said Mr. O'Donoghue, "that a man named Curtis applied to your shipping department in February and was offered 25c an hour. That would be for heavy labor, wouldn't it?"—No.

"What would you call it then, pink tea?"—No. If that man had applied to me he would have been offered 30 cents to start.

Mr. Hatton—How do you account for the item of $19.80?—The girl had not worked all the time.

Mr. Hatton—How about the Armstrong item of $21.33?—She may have been off work part time.

And the Scott item of 20c an hour? She is a learner.

What about these workers listed at 1 cents an hour?—They are girls just starting. With experience they will go on piecework and get $2.50 to $3.50 a day. It all depends upon the speed the girl works up to. If they do not come up to a certain speed we do not keep them.

Do girls get meals in your factory?—Yes. They are supplied with tea and anything they want without charge. There are rest rooms for the girls and care is taken of them in the case of injury.

Claude Rogers.

Claude Rogers, joint manager of the Peterboro Canoe Co., said the article in the "Worker" is untrue where it charges that there is a difference made between union and non-union men.

"It is none of our business whether the men are union or not."

What effect had this article?—It created a certain amount of stir at the time it was published. The effect is the stirring up of excitement and discussion regarding the relation between employer and employee.

Felix Brownscombe, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Canoe Co., asked by Mr. Hatton what he had to say as to the truth of the article in The Worker, said it leaves a wrong impression.

"The whole inference," he said, "is to give the impression that the wages paid are below what they should be for the class of work the men are engaged in.

Do carpenters only receive 30 cents an hour?

We have no carpenters in our es-

CHEESE BOARD HELD MEETING

Dissatisfaction Over Present System Inspection.

A meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board took place this morning, when 867 boxes of cheese were boarded, the highest price paid being 19 1-8 cents. The first bid was 18 cents, rising gradually to 19 1-8, bid by J. Cook, of Belleville. At this price Mr. Cook took the products of the following factories: Warminster 70, Young's Point 100, North Dummer 52, and Buckhorn 50. G. A. Gillespie paid 19 1-16 cents for the following: Warsaw 125, Oakdale 100, East Emily 50, Cedardale 50, Star 40, Dunsford 60, South Burleigh 10, Killarney 154. Other buyers present were T. H. Thompson, buying for Montreal, and the buyer from the Canadian Packing Company's plant.

It was decided to appoint the president, Thompson Braden, of Lakefield, and the secretary, Edward Hawthorne, of Warsaw, as delegates from the Peterborough Board to the meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairy Association to be held in Kingston on January 11 and 12, and the secretary was asked to get into communication with each of the factories on the Board, in an endeavor to get them to send a delegate from each factory to this meeting, where the matter of inspection of cheese will be one of the most important subjects on the agenda.

A good deal of dissatisfaction was expressed at the present system of cheese inspection. The factories sell their cheese on the Board, subject to Governmental inspection at Montreal, where the boarded price is paid only for No. One grade. Cheese graded as No. Two must be sold by the factory sending it at a half cent less on the pound, and No. Three grade cheese is thrown back on the makers' hands altogether. It was felt that individual inspection by each buyer at the home factory would be a fairer method, allowing the maker to dispose of more of his product in other ways.

The next meeting of the Board will be held on November 7th, when the balance of the season's make will be disposed of.

C. G. I. T Conference

About one hundred girls assembled recently at Wooler Methodist church for the opening Girls' Conference of the season. The decorations were very pretty. After a bountiful supper an interesting toast list was disposed of. Miss Jean Arthur was chair lady and the young girls made able and creditable responses to the various toasts. Helpful adjuncts of the next mornings programme were a talk by Miss Margaret Teal on the timely subject "How far is a Canadian girl responsible for her physical condition."

Miss Whiddon took up the subject "An intellectual Canadian girl in training" and Mrs. V. Teal, "The Privilege of Service for a Canadian Girl in Training as related to the social side of a girl's life." Miss Stella Nelson told the Bible story of Ruth and this was followed by a dialogue of "Ruth and the Gleaners" by the members of Wooler C.G.I.T.

At the afternoon session, the girls were divided into groups each with a distinctive color and all started off for a hike which with story telling occupied the afternoon.

There was an interesting programme on Saturday evening and on Sunday the concluding sessions were held. This is something new in Church and community life a conference for girls, lasting over two days but all of the girls vote it an unqualified success.

Still Fishing

Mr. W. C. Chisholm of Trenton, a veteran fisherman of 78 years, is credited with having landed a 'lunge in Trent waters that measured 34 inches; and also a fine bass, while fishing one day last week. This does not look as if Rice Lake waters have all the fine fish this season, although many have been caught there and nearly every sport, who has been at the Lake can string a good fish story. However, this 'lunge is credited with being about the only one of its kind taken in its vicinity this year.

ANNIVERSARY AT LAKEFIELD

Birthday of Presbyterian Congregation Fittingly Observed—Tuneful Music and Stirring Sermons Features.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 23.—Anniversary services were held in the Presbyterian church, Sunday, Rev. F. W. Anderson, M.A., of Port Hope being in charge both morning and evening.

In the morning there was a large attendance of members of the congregation, who gave close attention to and greatly enjoyed the stirring sermon. The praise service also was hearty and suitable to the occasion.

In the evening by the courtesy of Rev. Reddick of the Methodist church, and Rev. J. L. White of the Baptist church, both services were cancelled in order that their congregations might join their sister church in her service of thanksgiving. Consequently the Presbyterian edifice was crowded to the doors.

Rev. John Bedford, a one-time Methodist minister here, but now retired, occupied a seat on the platform. Mrs. Bedford who, with her husband, is visiting old friends in Lakefield, was also present.

There was a large choir on hand in which were noticed several of the vocalists of the Methodist church, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnston of Millbrook. The latter greatly enhancing the service by a beautiful rendering of the hymn "Just as I am Without One Plea." Both voices blending perfectly and being of similar timbre and expression, rendered their offering particularly pleasing and impressive.

Miss Olive Cullen sang in an acceptable manner, that exquisite selection, "Open the Gates of the Temple," and during the collecting of the offertory the choir contributed an anthem.

Miss Alice Hunter, the efficient organist and choir leader, presided at the organ throughout, and the several numbers were characterized by precision and wholeheartedness. The voices were well balanced and the rendering smooth, even and reverent, so that the preacher's splendid sermon fell upon ears already attuned to the impressiveness and solemnity of his theme.

Laid Unto His Fathers

The text was taken from the 13th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles and 36th verse: "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers." This text, so replete with possibilities, received the most thorough handling by Mr. Anderson, the service being so full of what the Scotch would call "strong meat" that, to do it anything approaching justice, should be given verbatim. But space not being available for this one can only touch on a few of the leading features.

The speaker in introducing his subject, referred to King David as having been regarded as a man after God's own heart, who served his generation by the will of God, and after being useful to his generation "fell on sleep."

There is no stereotyped way in which men may serve God. The promptings of the heart and the dictates of conscience should furnish the ideals by which God can be served, the speaker said. Men are often misunderstood and misrepresented by their generation, who, when they have "fell on sleep" have been acclaimed as heroes by people who come after. It is possible to serve well from ideals of the past; and the people of the present day may say this is old fashioned and out of date, it is useful in that it acts as a check upon those who wish to get ahead too quickly.

There are many ways of serving, the best perhaps being by making our life and example ideal to those who are looking to us for help and inspiration. Ideals come better by life than by law, although legislation is needed, but it is better to live right than to talk right or legislate right. The speaker here quoted Emerson as saying, "What you are speaks so loudly I cannot hear what you are saying."

The Lord's Day

We should have ideals about the integrity of the Lord's Day and our manner of spending it; and by helping to make the sense of God real, continued the reverend gentleman. David rendered distinctive service in this way to people of his generation. God was on His throne in heaven, while David was on his throne on earth, singing Psalms of Praise to the Majesty of Heaven. Reference was here made to the Presbyterian custom of beginning worship by the singing of a Psalm—in metrical version—the one chosen this evening being the 117th "Praise Jehovah, all ye nations." David, "the sweet singer of Israel" having sung them makes them sweeter to us.

The speaker called attention to the avowal of Dr. Gandier, Moderator of the General Assembly, at the recent Synod meeting in Toronto, that the world needs today that the Church give a new sense of the ideals promulgated by Calvin, notably the Sovereignty of God. The sanctions and commands of God don't seem to matter to people of today, so make the sense of God real to the people of your time both by precept and example, urged Mr. Anderson. The arch enemy of God is not going about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour today, but is speaking with a still small voice, but the more subtly and dangerously seeking whom he may devour. So we need people with purpose of heart like Daniel, who said he would not sin against his God, to wage war against intemperance, immorality, irreligion and to follow in the footsteps of the great Master—King David's Greater Son, Who said "I am among you as He that serveth."

Mr. Anderson's utterance is clear-cut, his manner earnest and forceful, and the large audience will surely ponder deeply for many days on his cogent words so persuasively spoken.

It should be mentioned that the musical instrument used in the praise service was the new organ which has been planned for for many months.

New Republican Flag Tattered in Julich.

JULICH, Prussia, October 23. — The Separatists movement in this Rhineland town, was shortlived. The police aided by the firemen, armed with guns, axes, hatchets and clubs, to-night expelled the separatists from the Rathaus and the post office, which they had occupied on Monday. About twenty of the separatists were arrested. The others fled to the country.

The separatists, who were armed, had resisted the loyal Julich authorities last night and throughout the day, but just after dark this evening the police and the firemen launched a combined attack, and in the hand to hand fighting which ensued, one separatist was killed and 11 others were wounded. The police and firemen also had several casualties.

The flag of the Rhineland Republic was lowered from the Rathaus, and torn to bits by the crowd.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Oct. 23.—The various local churches were well attended Sunday and helpful and enjoyable services were held without exception. Following the impetus for good of a helpful communion service the week previous, a representative congregation assembled at St. Andrew's Presbyterian where the pastor, Rev. W. A. Bremner, B.A. was in charge. In the morning service the pastor began a series of sermons on the important theme, "The spirit of Jesus in the early Church," based on the Book of Acts. It proved to be an earnest and helpful exposition of a great truth.

St. Peter's Church

At St. Peter's church, Rev. Canon Broughall of St. Catharines concluded a week's mission which has proved very helpful, he being helpfully assisted throughout by the rector, Rev. Canon F. J. Sawers. The meetings were well attended throughout the week. Canon Broughall preached at both services at St. Peter's yesterday.

Rev. R. F. Stillman preached earnest, virile sermons in the Methodist church yesterday and was heard with deep interest.

Rev. J. N. Norton also occupied his own pulpit at the Baptist church, where his pulpit work is being so well received and Rev. J. W. Pedley, Toronto, was heard with interest and pleased attention at the Congregational church here and also at Coldsprings.

Missionaries in Burma

Only a few years ago Rev. G. S Jory, pastor of the Cobourg Baptist church, whose home town is Bowmanville by the way, and Mrs. Jory went from here to Judson College, Rangoon, Burma, where they are doing excellent work. Their two sons, John and Jamie, are in school there especially for missionaries' children. This school is situated at a Hill station, seven hundred and sixty-five feet above the sea level, where tropical fruits and vegetables are raised in abundance and which possesses a moderate climate. This school was opened in March, 1922, by a devoted lady teacher, Miss Mabel F. Ivins, who was a successful teacher for some years at Atlantic, New Jersey, who is now devoting herself to this other work. At first there were only eight boarding children, but now there are fifteen, six girls and nine boys, and so a new two-story bamboo building was completed in June of this year to accommodate them. Here the missionaries' children are doing good work. The Burma Government has leased a large tract of land, and it is hoped in time to erect a better school plant. It is gratifying to know that when our young married people sacrifice so much in going to foreign fields to take up missionary work, that suitable schools are being opened in almost every land to care for their children. Mr. Jory was for some years the beloved pastor of the Cobourg Baptist church.

MINING OPERATIONS INCREASE IN BRAZIL

RIO DE JANEIRO.—(By Mail to United Press).—Mining operations are steadily increasing in development every year in Brazil, chiefly in the state of Minas Geraes, which is one of the richest regions of the world in gold, iron ore, manganese and diamonds.

In 1920 Brazilian exports of mineral products amounted to 277,044,130 kilograms. Diamonds to the value of about $1,000,000 were exported during the course of the year.

The gold and silver output does not figure in the mineral export statistics for the past few years, as the entire production of the mines has been taken under contract by the Federal Government.

MARKSON STANDS TRIAL ON FALSE NEWS CHARGE

Grand Jury Found True Bill and Hearing Opened Before Mr. Justice Kelly and Petit Jury — Pay Books Missing.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

After an absence of an hour and a half the Grand Jury impanelled at the sittings of the High Court yesterday returned a true bill indicting Bernard Markson on a charge of spreading false news The indictment was returned by the foreman, Thompson Braden at five minutes past four.

Markson took his place in the dock and the charge was read, as follows: You stand indicted by the name of Bernard Markson by the jurors of our lord the King that during the months of February and March 1923, you did wilfully and knowingly publsh false news and tales, to wit the contents of an article headed "Happy Hunting Ground for Capitalists' in the Work er a newspaper published in the city of Toronto under date of Feb. 15, 1923 and other false news and tales, whereby injury is likely to be caused the public interest namely the industrial activities of the said city, and to the prejudice of he interests of employers and employees and persons seeking employment and others in the city of Peterboro.

J. G. O'Donoghue, K.C., defending Markson objected to the inclusion of the reference in the indictment to employers and employees, but His Lordship expressed the opin ion that the inclusion of these words narrowed the scope of the inquiry to the advantage of the accused. "I think it is not objectionable,' he said and the indictment as allowed to stand as read with counsel's objection noted.

Markson, leaning with his folded arms on the ledge of the prisoner's dock pleaded "not guilty."

Challenged Four Jurors

Of eighteen called out of forty summoned to attend as jurymen, four were challenged by the defense The jury impanelled consisted of Arnott Boate farmer, Ennismore; James Collins farmer, Douro; Walter Young, farmer, Smith township; Garbutt D. Mann, farmer, Smith township; James Logan teamster, Lake street; Joseph Costello, farmer Ennismore; Thomas J. Burke, De Laval employee, Smith street; Albert Collins, farmer, Otonabee; Clarence Watts farmer Dummer; Donald Cameron, farmer, Otonabee Raymond Richmond, farmer, Harvey township;and John E. Boland farmer Asphodel.

Those dismissed on peremptory challenge were George Haley, accountant; M. A. Fitzgerald, bookkeeper and W. Garrow foreman, both De Laval employees; and Robert Bolton farmer, Douro.

Markson watched the proceedings closely, and was twice in conversation with his counsel, evidently concerning the panel since challenges followed.

Chief Newhall Called

Following his address to the jury in which he outlined the points which it is the object of the crown to prove Mr. Hatton called Chief Constable Newhall, who told of his relations with the accused.

Reviewing the incidents leading up to his obtaining the warrant for Markson's arrest which took place on March 19, the Chief continued with evidence of the prisoner's admissions regarding the article complained of. "I brought him into my office and warned him in the usual way. I warned him I was going to ask him some questions and he need not answer them, but whatever he said would be used in evidence against him. He looked at the paper" —a copy of the Worker produced in court—"and at first he denied writing the letter. Later he admitted it wth the exception of some of the headings and some small words The letter was there also."

Mr. Justice Kelly —"You say he objected to the headings?"

Yes. He said they were not the same as he had put in his letter.

To Mr. Hatton the Chief explained that the statement taken down by his clerk Constable Puffer, was not read to Markson at the time since it was then in shorthand notes, but it was read later.

Admission of the statement in evidence was refused by His Lordship pending identification by the man who wrote it.

Chief Newhall, in response to Mr. Hatton's invitation to tell of the conversation in his office, said he asked Markson where he came from. The prisoner said he came from Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, on the Megantic in 1919 or 1920. He claimed to be of English descent. When the Chief broached the subject of the letter in the Worker, Markson admitted writing it, but said the editor took liberties with it.

Replying to a question from Mr. Justice Kelly as to what the prisoner took objection to, the witness pointed out a clause in which the Quaker Oats Co. is referred to as having the biggest factory in Canada, employing about 2,000 slaves. Markson objected to the word "slaves" and substituted "employees." The article states "the Canadian Woollen Mills transferred its entire plant from Toronto to this city. Their piece working employees can at the most procure $7 or $8 a week. This includes their male slaves, many of whom are married."

Markson objected to the words "at the most" and "slaves," which he said he did not write. He also disclaimed penning the words "heluve a city," which appeared in the article.

Original Produced.

Mr. Hatton — "Did you ever see the original of this?"—indicating the printed article in the Worker.

Chief Newhall—"Yes. It was brought in later, and Markson admitted it was the original of the statement in the paper."

Mr. Hatton—"One of the statements he objected to was the words 'a heluve a city,' which he said he did not write?" "Yes."

"Will you read what is written at the end of that letter."

Chief Newhall—"The letter says, 'Peterboro is undoubtedly a capitalists' paradise and a workers' hell."

Mr. Hatton—"Did the prisoner give any reasons for writing these articles?"

Chief Newhall — "Yes, he said he was a class conscious man and he did not think he had a fair show. I told him he had better move if his position did not suit him."

The letter, Chief Newhall said, was attached to a clipping from the Worker, the clipping being a reprint of the letter. The accused admitted he had about 25 copies sent by mail to him from Toronto, and that he had circulated them in the Labor Hall. There was also a bundle of 25 papers of that week's issue of the Worker that had not been distributed. Markson was arrested the day these arrived and he was unable to circulate them.

Asked for further particulars regarding the conference with Markson, Chief Newhall said while the examination was proceeding Leon Frazer, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, came into the office. Mr. Frazer asked the prisoner why he abused the Chamber of Commerce? Markson said he had been informed that the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, and the Manufacturers' Association were all the same. Frazer said that it was no such thing. The Chamber of Commerce was there to help. Markson apologized to Frazer, and said that he had been misinformed, and the statement in the Worker referring to the Chamber of Commerce was false.

Cross-examined by Mr. O'Donoghue, Chief Newhall said he had compared the handwriting of the letter said to have been sent by Markson to the Worker with Markson's known handwriting.

"There was considerable difference, wasn't there?"

"Yes."

Statement Read.

Gordon Puffer, police constable, called, examined.

"What is your position?" "Clerk."

"Do you remember the interview between Markson and the Chief?"

"Yes."

"Did you take the answers and questions in shorthand?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear the warning given?"

"Yes; he was duly warned."

Constable Puffer identified the typewritten translation of his shorthand notes and read the statement to the jury. In it Markson is reported as stating that Malcolm Bruce is editor of the Worker. He also said he had written to the editor of the Worker saying his letter had been distorted.

In the statement Markson also informed the Chief that his information regarding the enmity of the Chamber of Commerce toward labor came from T. Tooms, at that time M.L.A. They met, Markson is reported as having said, in a house on Water street where they were introduced by James Gill. They talked about trying to re-organize the Labour Council and Tooms said it was impossible.

Cross-examination by Mr. O'Donoghue after the statement had been read: "What experience have you had as stenographer?"

"About a year."

"How many words a minute do you write?"

"One hundred."

"You know a man writing 100 words can't report a conversation verbatim?"

"You can report questions and answers. Markson hesitated in his answers and the Chief knew I wasn't very fast so he took that into consideration in his questions."

William J. Carey, detective, said he arrested Markson on March 19, 1923, and afterwards searched his room, finding paper which he identified, including the letter previously entered as evidence.

Pay Sheets Missing.

Edgar Sorby, paymaster of the Quaker Oats Company, branded as untrue the statements made in The Worker article regarding the Quaker Oats employees being slaves and also said the rates of wages given in the article are incorrect.

The maximum rate that can be earned by heavy manual labourers is 30 cents an hour, the article says. Sorby set the rate at 47 cents. Pieceworkers can make whatever they want, he said.

Mr. O'Donoghue, cross-examining: "Did you bring your pay-sheets?"

No.

Mr. Hatton: "My learned friend asked me to produce the pay sheets, but the subpoenas had already been served. I wrote the manufacturing concerns asking them to please produce the pay sheets, but several of them strenuously objected to doing so. The employees themselves cannot take any books. The heads of the firms are quite willing to give the evidence here in the box, but they think they should not be compelled to produce the books. I have no doubt they would give it honestly."

Mr. O'Donoghue: "Perhaps."

F. D. Kerr, K.C.: "I have been spoken to by some of the manufacturing firms concerned. I have no desire to throw any difficulty in the way of either Mr. O'Donoghue or Mr. Hatton, and my only wish is to prevent, if possible, the executive business of firms from becoming known."

Mr. O'Donoghue. "The pay sheets were produced in the Police Court and would have stayed there as exhibits, only I let them out that the firms might use them . It was a matter of convenience to them."

Mr. Jusice Kelly asked Mr. O'Donoghue to proceed as far as he could without the books.

Mr. O'Donoghue, addressing the witness Sorby: "Do you recollect when we looked through the pay sheets in the Police Court?

Yes.

"Do you remember that one girl got $19.80 for 99 hours' work?"

There are learners—

"I am not asking you for particulars or reasons."

I don't remember.

Mr. O'Donoghue, addressing the bench: "I would like to have the pay sheets, My Lord."

Mr. Justice Kelly asked the counsel to make arrangements to have the pay sheets in Court at 9.30 this morning, and Court adjourned.

CURE FOR CANCER SEEMS ASSURED

Hope Looms Now That Great Scourage May Be Eliminated.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Out of the 13th annual congress of the American College of Surgeons, in session here this week, a great human hope loomed yesterday. Cancer, the most dreaded of diseases, and one which takes off every year more victims than the great white plague, may now be cured.

Doctors attending the congress, who are leaders of their profession in Europe and America, seem almost to be afraid to say the thing aloud, but at least one of their number, spoke out. That speaker was Dr. Walter H. Conley, general medical superintendent of the public welfare department of New York City. It was he who on Monday predicted the deterioration of the race caused by the "prohibition of alcohol."

"We now have cancer definitely in hand," said Dr. Conley, "and a cure is now possible."

PLAINTIFF REFUSED TO CARRY THE WATER

Interesting Point Raised in Court Action.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—A jury will say whether Ernest R. Tuffs, baker, of Sutton, is entitled to damages against his fellow townsman, Walker Holborn, Justice of the Peace. Mr. Justice Smith at Osgoode Hall yesterday, dismissed the application by Frank Arnoldi, K.C., acting for Mr. Holborn, for an order striking out the jury notice. Mr. Tuffs sues for $5,000 damages for injury to his reputation.

The action is based on events that occurred on June 14th last, when the plaintiff's building was destroyed by fire. Mr. Holborn appeared on the scene and ordered Tuffs to help carry water to put out the fire. Tuffs refused as he was busy salvaging the contents. It is alleged that the Justice of the Peace then gave the plaintiff into the hands of a constable, who marched him to the police station at the other end of the village, a considerable crowd being edified by the spectacle.

The magistrate invokes the "Public Authorities Protection Act," and declares that he had no relation with Mr. Tuffs, save in his capacity as Justice of the Peace.

Frank Regan appeared for the plaintiff.

How a Chef Roasted Duckling

(This is the recipe of a famous chef who traveled around the world gathering recipes)

Cut off the head and legs, singe, draw, neatly wipe and truss a fine, tender duckling of about five pounds, keeping the livers. Place in a small roasting pan with half gill water, half ounce Crisco, well divided over the bird; sprinkle one teaspoonful salt and half teaspoonful white pepper over it. Set it in a moderate oven to roast for fifty minutes; turn it several times while roasting to get a good brown color all around, not failing to baste it occasionally with its own gravy. Remove it from the oven, untruss, dress on a hot dish. Skim the fat from the surface of the gravy. Strain the gravy over the duck, decorate the dish with watercress, and send to the table with apple sauce separately. (This recipe reprinted by courtesy of the International Cook Book.)

R. SHAW'S HOUSE BURNED DOWN

Best Part of Furniture in Otonabee Was Saved.

OTONABEE, Oct. 24.—The large residence belonging to Robert Shaw, of Otonabee, was burned to the ground yesterday at noon. Although the house was entirely destroyed, the furniture, with the exception of the contents of one bedroom, was brought out in safety. No cause was assigned for the fire, beyond a probable spark from the chimney igniting the roof of the structure. Mr. Shaw had a considerable amount of insurance on the building, not enough, however, it is reported, to completely cover the loss.

BRIEF HISTORY OF LOCAL Y.W.C.A.

First Organized in 1891 on the Suggestion of Two Y.M.C.A. Members.

A most interesting history of the Young Women's Christian Association is contained in a scrap book of newspaper clippings dating back to 1900 and the different articles give a complete idea of the work of each year.

It is interesting to look back even further to the very beginning of the association in Peterborough. The Y.M.C.A. has always been looked as big brother to the Y.W.C.A., and their help and co-operation have always been an inspiration to the sister association. In 1891 the Y.W.C.A. was first organized on the suggestion of two young men of the Y.M.C.A., who thought the young women should have the advantages they were enjoying. Mr. Colville, who was Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at that time, called a meeting of ladies, and the outcome was that the year following a branch of the Y.W.C.A. was organized in Peterborough.

Two rooms were secured which served for a short time, but the work grew apace and better accommodation was found necessary. A boarding home was opened on Brock street, and through the instrumentality of the Late Hon. Senator Cox more commodious rooms were opened on George street for the public work. The demand for still better accommodation became so urgent that in January, 1904, Senator Cox offered to subscribe a quarter of any amount giben by the citizens of Peterborough.

On September 7, 1904, the corner stone of the present building was laid by the late Mrs. Cox, in whose memory the gymnasium was afterwards equipped. The building being completed, it was dedicated on April 23, 1905, and afterwards opened for work April 25.

In April, 1910, the mortgage which had been placed on the building was finally paid off, and at a special meeting of thanks-giving and renewed consecration the mortgage was burned.

In 1917 the splendid swimming pool, which is one of the best in Ontario, was added to the building.

But the association is not the building, but something that builds, and so year after year the work has gone on building worth-while ideals into the lives of the girls of Peterborough. Every year of the association's history has shown growth, and it is the desire of every citizen that the association should live up to the dreams of those who built its foundations so earnestly and so well.

The Y.W.C.A. still needs the financial help of every interested person. A special financial campaign under the direction of the Board of

SMUTS INVITES UNITED STATES TO CONFERENCE

South African Premier Urges Meeting of Delegates of Nations Interested in Reparations.

EUROPE'S NEED.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Premier Smuts, of South Africa, handled the European situation without gloves and called for a conference of the powers to consider the whole position in a speech last night at a dinner attended by the South African delegation to the Imperial conference. He attacked France for her policy and warned Great Britain and the United States against any "excessive generosity" in the remission of inter-allied war debts, which might aid in further militarization of the continent.

General Smuts asserted that he had not only the right but the plain personal duty to speak frankly.

"Of the great number of public men whose names stand under the peace treaty," he said, "there are only two or three who still survive in power today. For better or for worse I am one of them, and the responsibility for what was done at Paris weighs heavily on my conscience, in spite of the fact that I signed it only under protest and under a sense of foreboding of future calamities which has come only too true."

Situation Desperate

A gallant attempt to save Europe, without patching or temporizing, was necessary and this could only be done through a conference of the powers mainly interested in the reparation question. The situation was too desperate to be dealt with by any subordinate authorities or even the reparation commission or the council of the League of Nations.

"It is a business for the principals, not agents," he declared. "It is vitally important that the United States should be there as an active member and bear her full weight, which under the circumstances may be more decisive than that of any other power. In her distress Europe is more than ever turning her eyes and stretching out her hands to her great daughter nation in the west. The appeal is not so much for material assistance as for moral support. In this dark hour it is the lack of moral justice which is Europe's undoing."

Believe in America

"The peoples of Europe have faith in America. I share that faith and that feeling, and I have complete confidence in America's readiness to act as the right time. President Coolidge has already in his recent statement taken the initiative. It is being followed up and the new world may once more come into redress the balance of the Old as it did six or seven years ago."

The principal issue for settlement by such a conference as he suggested would be the reduction of the total German reparation from the 132,000,000,000 gold marks fixed in 1921, to a reasonable figure, with a reasonable moratorium. On the armament question he said:

"People here are already beginning to be seriously alarmed about the French armaments on land and in the air. The French government also has lent large sums to the smaller European states around Germany, mainly with a view to feeding their ravenous military appetites. There is danger lest a policy of excessive generosity on our part or on the part of America may simply have the effect of enabling France still more effectively to subsidize and foster militarism on the continent."

Policy of Force

While he was at total disagreement with the French policy Gen. Smuts said he felt a profound sympathy with the people of France who sincerely thought they were going to get reparations out of their Ruhr adventure and had no deliberate intention of breaking up Germany. The breach of the proposed American-British guarantee for her security had let France down badly, he said, adding:

"No wonder they were led to adopt a policy of force as an alternative. There is no real security to be obtained by the sword, and in the end the burden dominating Europe by force must prove insupportable."

Discusses Preference

Referring to the Imperial conference, the South African premier said the preferences which the British government had given the Dominions products would prove valuable, but that they did not amount to what was called a policy of Imperial preference. Although some of the conservative newspapers and politicians are calling on Premier Baldwin to declare for a sweeping policy of preference, General Smuts broke straight into the domain of party politics. He said:

"It would be most undesirable to raise the issue of Imperial preference at such a time as the present—to throw this great apple of political discord among the people of this country at a time when, not discord, but unity, is above all required; when the nation is passing through what I believe to be a very grave crisis and requires the concentration of every ounce of its strength on the gigantic task which confronts it in this country and in Europe."

SPLENDID CONCERT LAKEFIELD VILLAGE

Anniversary Occasion of the Presbyterian Church Continued With Feast of Music.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 24.—The Presbyterians of the village have been in the ascendant these two past days. Sunday anniversary services were held in the church morning and evening, and it is safe to say never did they have more satisfactory ones. Besides, the new organ was used for the first time and proved likewise satisfactory. Monday night during a high-class musicale, it was officially inaugurated, and under the skilful fingers of Mr. Chenhall, it may be said to have been heard to advantage.

The fine, roomy, old church was comfortably filled and the best of order prevailed during the long programme. It may be that, to the contributors, the audience did not seem warmly responsive, but deep appreciation existed nevertheless. Lakefield knows how to appraise good music, and the subdued applause was more of a compliment than otherwise, because there is a class and quality of entertainment to which vociferous applause is an affront, and this was of that character. Besides, no one likes to hear noisy demonstrations of feeling in a church.

It is many years since this village began to be noted for its acceptable entertainments, which are of more or less frequent occurrence, and, perhaps, there were more than a few in the audience Monday night who were reminded of many past occasions when local talent of a finished order presented splendid programmes, both musical and literary, to full houses.

It is not without sadness that one recalls such times, for many of those voices are now silent, while some are only silent tones but heard elsewhere, and as one listened on Monday to the beautiful voices producing so much of sweetness and harmony, a touch of sacredness pervaded the occasion by incidents recalled.

OMENS FORECAST BLOODSHED.

GENEVA, Oct. 24.—Associated Press))—The "blood of the Burgundians" has appeared again on the water of Lake Morat, near Neuchatel, portending more trouble for old Europe, if ancient legend is to be believed.

The reddening of the water of this lake is caused by the flowering of an aquatic plant, which, however, blooms very rarely. The phenomenon was seen in 1476, when 36,000 Burgundians under Charles the Bold were defeated near the lake by the Swiss. The last tim the waters were rd was in 1914, just before the outbreak of the world war, a circumstance said to justify the old saying, "When blood is seen in Lake Morat there will be bloodshed in Europe."

MANY CONTESTANTS IN LOCAL PLOWING EVENT

Sod Was Turned With Considerable Skill On R. T. Lillico's Farm in North Monaghan—Open to Country.

TRACTORS AT WORK

The annual ploughing match and tractor demonstration of the Peterboro County Branch of the Ploughmen's Association was held yesterday on the farm of R. T. Lillico, North Monaghan, on the Provincial Highway, about four miles from Peterboro.

The match was a great success and a large crowd was present. The weather was very good except for a cool north-easterly wind which blew the dust in the faces of the competitors, as well as the spectators. The soil was fairly satisfactory, although it would have been more so had it been a little more moist.

In the refreshment booth handled by the ladies of the Springville Presbyterian Church meals were served at a very low price, and a rushing business all day resulted. A small booth where chocolate bars and chewing gum could be obtained was also on the grounds.

Duffus Motor Sales had the latest models of Ford cars, trucks, tractors and a threshing machine on the grounds for anybody who wished to look them over.

PETERBORO MALE VOICE CHOIR.

The weekly rehearsal was held last night in the Greene Music Store with an increased attendance over that of last week, when 48 men were present. The men are making splendid progress with the new selections, and the season gives promise of a baner year, during its fourth year of the choir's regime.

The business session of the choir was held during the evening, the chief topic being on telegrams confirming the previous week's communications in regard to Madame Clara Butt and Concert Co.

The executive met at the close of the rehearsal and had a late session making complete arrangements for the biggest musical event Peterboro has ever known in its history, by the engagement of the world-famed artiste Madame Clara Butt and Concert Company, to be held in the Grand Opera House on Tuesday, December 4th.

HEARTY GREETING PETERBORO BOYS

S. A. Band and Songsters Commended For Contributions at Musical Festival.

The Salvation Army "War Cry" for this week devotes considerable space to the Congress Musical Festival held by the Army in Massey Hall, Toronto, October 13th, when eight bands and four songster brigades took part in a festival of music. Of the Peterborough Salvation Army Band, which took part in the festival, the writer says:

"Hearty indeed was the greeting accorded to musical worthies from Peterborough. Several years have elapsed since they last appeared at a Congress Festival, and in the interval they have not only lost many players and secured others, but their instruments were destroyed in the fire which also robbed them of their Hall. Still, "all things work together for good to those who love God," so they are now manipulating a complete new set of Salvation Army instruments.

"But a few words concerning Bandmaster F. Robinson. Without hesitation we state that he is an efficient all-round Bandmaster. Spiritually, musically, and with his understanding of the "boys", he is competent to lead the fine combination which holds no small place in Canadian musical Salvation life. It was at Sheffield Citadel Corps, England, that he began his musical career, as a member of the Junior Band. Later, he was transferred to the Senior Band, and in 1906 he came to Canada and resumed service of the same good calibre and he had given in the Old Land. While overseas he was cornet soloist of a busy 6th Battalion Band. He comes of real Salvation Army stock, and his parents are valued and respected members of Peterborough Corps.

"Memories of Peace." Nine bars of original music introduces a cornet cadenza" and is then followed by the air, "Wonderful Peace", (cornet solo). The chorus, "Jesus came with peace to me," (quartet), "Oh, what peace my Saviour gives", (euphonium solo), and "It is well with my soul," with the trombones brings the selection to a close.

"This Band presented what was perhaps the most widely pleasing selection of the evening. All the melodies played were well known and finely treated. Their tone is particularly good, and there is a soulfulness about the playing which adds considerably to its effectiveness. To a notable degree the Bandmaster has a definite command of his Band, and his baton is as a magic wand. Happy in the possession of an excellent section of trombone players, the Band reaps great benefit from them in the matter of tone color. The soprano players treated us to some tasteful playing, as did also other soloists. Reduced in volume to a highly fine degree, the Band proved that it can hold its tuning throughout the gamut of its range. The writer looks forward to hearing the Band in pieces more formidable and exacting than this particular selection."

The review also mentions a vocal solo, entitled "My Saviour," contributed by Songster Mrs. Braund, of Peterborough. "This was an item much appreciated by the audience. The words were clearly enunicated; there was refreshing absence of affectation, and its was the delivery of a tender message in tender style."

Who is "The Wonderful Heroine?"

The amazing life story of "The Wonderful Heroine" in the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, is creating intense interest in every part of Canada. "The Wonderful Heroine" is a young and lovely woman of tragic history whose pictures in colors is being given free to subscribers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star. A subscription of two dollars is little enough to pay for a whole year's subscription to this greatest of all farm and family journals, and with a magnificent picture thrown in, the value is superlative.

NORTH-WEST GALE WAS DESTRUCTIVE

British Steamer in Distress — Five-Master On Rocks, Coast Damage.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press).—A north-westerly gale which swept the Atlantic coast from Maine to Florida yesterday, lashed the sea into a fury and brought an S.O.S. call from a British steamer sinking off Delaware Capes, drove a five-masted brigantine on the rocks, carried a lightship to sea and sent great waves pounding up the shore to the damage of many coast resorts.

Accompanied in most cases by driving rain, the 70-mile gale seached its greatest power late yesterday and property all along the coast suffered. Many small pleasure boats were torn from their moorings and hurled on the rocks. Eighty officers and men in the Westmoreland have not been heard from since distress signals were received yesterday by the Danish steamship Phoenix. At that time the Westmoreland was 14 miles east of Five Fathoms Lightship, which is 22 miles from Delaware breakwater.

Pretty Patti Patterns Papa's Pet Precedent

PATTI HARROLD

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Rumors of divorce rumblings by demure Patti Harrold's petition for a judicial slice as the cord which binds her to Jack McElroy, her actor-husband, have stirred fresh remembrances of the matrimonial jinx which seemingly has haunted the Harrold family for years.

Ever since Fate—or was it Fortune?—gave Patti's papa a push from his delivery wagon back in Munncie, Ind., a long time ago, the Harrolds have been flitting about from one marriage bower to another without apparently finding one which just suited.

When Papa Harrold dropped his reins, to leap to meteoric fames as a singer, he left two divorced wives behind n the ripple of his success.

Today, he has settled down with a third better half of the "intellectual stimulus" variety, to a life of cows and chickens on a Connecticut farm.

But gay Patti Harrold, however, has had only one adventure. And she now comes forward by affidavit alleging the first time didn't take.

And although admitting "Jack is a peach," she'd just as leave have her romantic colors changed from drab gray to something more cheerful. If you don't mind, Mr. Judge.

ANNUAL RE-UNION AYLMER, QUEBEC

Fifth Dinner of Members 21st Battalion, C. E. F. November 3rd.

The 21st Battalion Club of the Ottawa Valley is extending a cordial invitation to all ex-members of the 21st Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Force, which served with distinction in the great world war, to be present at that organization's fifth annual dinner. The function this year will be held at Aylmer, Quebec, on Saturday, November 3, and the attendance will, it is hoped, be on such a scale as to make this re-union excel, if possible, even the successful gatherings of the preceding four years.

All ex-members of the 21st Battalion resident in Peterboro are invited to attend a meeting in the G.W.V.A. this evening at 8 o'clock to arrange for acceptance by as many as possible of their Ottawa brethren's invitation to re-unite with them on November 3.

Communication with the 21st Battalion club's secretary, J. Stewart Whyte, Suite 1, 53 Queen street, Ottawa, will bring further particulars regarding this annual re-union.

Cannot Put Poison Out to Endanger Lives of Cats and Dogs.

With reference to an article which appeared in last evening's Examiner, stating that the poisoning of cats and dogs other than animals belonging to the person who was doing the poisoning was an offense punishable under the Criminal Code, a subscriber enquired of The Examiner as to the right of a neighbor or any other person in putting poison on porches or steps of one's own residence, for the express purpose of destroying rats or other vermin. It was declared also, in this connection, that poison needs not necessarily be purchased from a druggist as it was quite easy to procure rat poison at any grocery, or cyanide of potassium from any factory building. Inspector James Reid, when interrogated once again, informed The Examiner that it is a punishable offense to put out poison of any sort for any expressed purpose on one's premises, in such a fashion that a neighbors' animals might be liable to come in contact with it.

THE WOMAN POWER OF AMERICA

is well illustrated by the thousands of women who are entering every profession, almost every line of business and politics as well. They are bound to make good, and there is no question but what health is their greatest asset. Many women, however, develop weak, nervous conditions and cannot stand the strain of a professional or business life. Such women should remember when beset with headaches, backache, nervousness, irritability or any ailment peculiar to their sex that the greatest of all remedies for such conditions is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For nearly fifty years this old-fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring the women of America to health and strength. It holds the remarkable records of helping 98 out of every 100 women who try it.

Travelled 1,000 Miles On 35c

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 24.—(United Press).—Nathan Pierce, 19-year-old El Paso youth, with a half dollar in his jeans, grew tired of his job in his brother's garage and set out for parts other than Southwestern Texas. Kansas City was his ultimate destination.

The youthful traveler rode passenger trains—blind baggage—as far as Amarillo, Texas. The sheriff housed him for one night and Nathan started out afoot the next day.

He worked for farmers for his board and room while his brother, A. L. Pierce, garage owner, had posses hunting the desert wastes west of El Paso for some trace of Nathan.

Finally Nathan's employer, a farmer, learned that the big brother in El Paso was hunting for Nathan. So the farmer notified authorities and Nathan was returned to his old job. He arrived in El Paso with 15 cents of his original half dollar capital and had traveled 1,000 miles during the four weeks he was gone.

Way To Reduce Accidents, Urge Psychologists

When the roads become clogged with traffic and there is no more joy in driving an automobile, motorists may prepare for the weeding out process. That, it has already been suggested, should be done by the use of psychology tests.

Freshmen entering college, applicants for various jobs and others are already familiar with this form of qualification test. Psychologists are studying its feasibility in other fields, among them motoring.

Thought of applying psychology tests to motorists has arisen from the realization that automobile accidents have been mounting without precedent. Automobiles are second among the causes of accidental deaths in this country, falls taking the lead. The rate is more than 10 to every 1000 population.

The psychologists argue that slow thinking and uncertain or wavering actions on the part of auto drivers cause a great majority of these accidents. By proper tests, they add, the applicants' sense of caution and his alertness could be ascertained, and many a dangerous motorist could be rejected for license.

Better Than Laws

"Applied psychology," says Dr. William A. McKeever of Chicago, "would do more in a minute to prevent accidents than legislation and criminal prosecution will do in an hour. Require every driver to pass a mental test, not in intelligence, but in correct visualization: not of how to avoid accidents, but of how to drive correctly at every critical point."

New York state requires a road test of applicants for drivers' licenses but, according to Magistrate William G. McAdoo, it is ineffective.

"I can be an epileptic with a glass eye and a wooden leg, a bad character," says McAdoo, "and I can still fill out an application and tell a lot of lies and, following a perfunctory road test and superficial character examination get a license. Then I can sit behind a 40 or 50 horsepower motor and drive where I will."

Present Evils

"The mental examination is most important, yet there is none," says Dr. John W. Perilli, trustee of Bellevue Hospital. "Often the family physician will simply sign the application with his assurance that the individual is in good health. But the applicant may be of nervous temperament; his brain and his hands may not co-ordinate. Such a person is a power for evil, for in a crisis he cannot be depended upon to act in a way to prevent a mishap."

Dr. Perilli suggests a board of examiners who will put the applican through his paces, showing whether in a pinch he can act wisely.

"Then have him appear before a medical board. If he does not coordinate, if his eyesight is bad or he is color blind, or if he has suffered from any disease that may make him lose control of himself in an emergency, deny him his license."

SAUVE CONDEMNS THE GOVERNMENT

Leader of Quebec Opposition Says Patronage and Prejudice Were Tactics.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24—(Canadian Press). — In a lengthy statement issued by Arthur Sauve, Quebec Opposition leader here yesterday, commenting on the results of the by-elections Monday, he claims that "the Quebec Opposition was defeated by the use of immoral and scandalous patronage and the fire of prejudice, adding that the Bankruptcy Act, conscription, Meighen, Borden, martyred Mercier, wretched fiscal protection, reciprocity were the themes of the most intelligent speeches of the Ministers. He excepts Hon. Mr. Perron from his condemnation, saying that in public he was "more proper in his conduct than his colleagues." Mr. Sauve charges that Liquor Commission whiskey flowed freely and prejudice was aroused in the country against Montreal "which I consider not only to be a horrible lie, but also a very great danger."

His conclusions are: "We have been beaten, but not crushed. In Yamaska, at St. Guillaume, where the Prime Minister spoke the other day with Mr. David, we reduced the majority from 117, which it had been last February, to 11."

FIRST SIGHT LOVE MARKS START ROYAL ROMANCE

BRUSSELS, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press)—The engagement of Prince Humbert of Piedmont, heir to the throne of Italy, to Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, which is to be offically announced November 4 is the culmination of a love match of long standing.

In 1916, Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, desirous of placing the little princess—she was then 12 years old—outside the range of airplane raids and big guns continuously shelling La Panne, where the Belgian royal family had their modest war home, took her daughter Florence, when under private teachers she studied English and Italian.

Queen Elizabeth, accompanied by the Princess, spent the 1917 vacation at Venice. There, under the constant menace of Austria airplane raids and German-Austro offensives, the Prince, a youth in a sailor's costume, and the Princess, wearing a plain white dress, met for the first time.

It was love at first sight.

When Prince Humbert visited Belgum last year there were many who noted that although the tour was supposed to be officially conducted, the heir to the throne of Italy preferred the company of the Princess, now a beautiful young woman, to receptions and listening to addresses by Burgmasters.

The engagement has been very popularly received here.

LOOKS LIKE FRAUD FOR IMMIGRANTS

Suspected Affidavits Held By Italian Newcomers Are Not Genuine.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Immigration, announced last night that a comprehensive report had been secured by the Department on the question of Italian immigrants reported to be arriving in large numbers at New York with the purpose of coming through to Canada. Most of the arrivals are reported as from Southern Italy, and they carry affidavits purporting to have been signed by farmers in Canada offering them employment.

As a result of careful investigation by the Department in Ottawa, it has been found that hundreds of these affidavits have all the earmarks of having been fraudulently prepared. Many of these would-be immigrants are victims of unscrupulous people who secured affidavits.

The Department last spring discovered a dry goods peddler who was securing signatures of farmers to such affidavits. Individual farmers in such cases have been found to have signed anywhere from ten to fifty affidavits and they have been paid from ten dollars up for doing so.

PRELATE PLEADS FOR SOVIET RUSSIA

Highest Statesmanship for U. S. to Aid Her in Every Legitimate Way, Bishop Blake Declares—Paints Past and Present—Admits Communism Has Failed but Asserts Government is Now Headed in Right Direction.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Bishop Edgar Blake of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has supervision of the work of the Church in Southern Europe, has arrived from his headquarters in Paris to attend the semiannual meeting of the Board of Bishops, which convenes in Brooklyn in November.

Last May Bishop Blake went to Moscow to attend the Council of the Orthodox Russian Church, and while there he made statements which attracted attention in this country and aroused editorial comment. When seen by the reporters at the Prince George Hotel, in East Twenty-seventh Street, and questioned about his attitude toward the Soviet Government in Russia, Bishop Blake gave out the following statement, which he said contained his opinions on the subject:

"My sentiments on the Soviet situation expressed at the recent Moscow Council have not changed. In so far as the Soviet Government aims to uplift the masses of the Russian people, who for centuries have been exploited and oppressed; to educate and enlighten them; to do away with their poverty and distress; to secure for them the full and rightful fruits of their own toil, and to bring them the blessings and benefits that nature intended for all men, and not for a privileged few, I am in sympathy with the Soviets. I believe these objectives are in harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ, and the Christian Church must dedicate itself unreservedly to their realization and fulfillment.

"I do not approve of the form of the Soviet Government or the means and methods employed to establish and maintain it. Theoretically, the Government is a dictatorship of the proletariat; actually, it is a dictatorship of the Communist Party, controlled by a small group of very clever, very capable and, I believe, sincere men. Instead of a Government of the workers, for the workers, by the workers, Russia is governed by an oligarchy as supreme and dictatorial as was ever the old Czarist regime.

Russia's Tribulations

"Russia has been through a great World War in the last nine years in which it suffered a larger loss of life than any other nation engaged in the struggle. It has been through two revolutions, four civil wars and one foreign war. It has passed through the worst famine in history. Yet in the midst of this indescribable confusion and chaos, with the hands of every nation against it, the Soviets have undertaken to radically and completely revolutionize the whole political, economic and social life of Russia. In spite of seemingly impossible obstacles, the Soviet Government has lasted for nearly six years, and is stronger today than ever.

"It is unquestionably one of the strongest Governments in Europe at the present time. It is a force that must be reckoned with. There can be no permanent settlement of Europe's and the world's affairs without Russia. We may not like the Soviets. We may abominate their principles and their practices; but we cannot ignore them. The sooner America and Europe recognize this perfectly obvious fact the better it will be for Russia and for the world.

"I hold no brief for Sovietism. I am interested in the Russian people. They are the sufferers. They are the ones who must be helped. Anything America can do to bring Russia out of its chaos to its feet again, America must do regardless of whether she likes the present form of government in Russia and the principles for which it stands. There is a great humanitarian challenge in the Russian situation that is of vastly greater consequence than political punctilios or the selfish demands of commercial interests.

On the Road to Education

"Under the old Czarist regime the people were kept in ignorance. Eighty-three per cent. of the people above 9 years of age could neither read nor write their own names. When absolutism failed, the ignorance of the people was a glory of the Czar. The Soviets have undertaken to abolish illiteracy and to make Russia a literate nation. Six million adults have been taught to read and write in the last two years. Russia is in the midst of an intellectual awakening.

"If the masses ever become truly enlightened Russia will be one of the strongest and most powerful nations in the world. No other will wield a larger influence for good or ill upon the life of the world than the new Russia that is in the making. It is a matter of the highest strategy and statesmanship that America should seek by every proper contract to influence the intellectual development of the Russian people. I cannot concejve of a policy more lacking in political sagacity and world statesmanship than to stand aloof from Russia and allow the present movement to harden into a force that may become a permanent menace to the peace of the world.

"The Soviets attempted to establish an economic and social millenium. They have not succeeded. Communism has broken down. Russia is now headed toward a policy of economic safety. Private property is being restored. Industriy is being reorganized on a modified form of State capitalism. Finances are being put on a sound basis. Russia is not yet out of the woods, and will not be for a long time to come; but it is headed toward the clearing; whether it will arrive and when, nobody knows nor can prophesy.

"It is possible that in its reaction from extreme communism Russia may swing too far to the right again. Personally, I hope Russia's resources will never be given over to capitalistic exploitation for the benefit of a privileged few. If the present experiment in Russia can develop some form of social control by which every individual may be given a proprietary interest in his country's resources and assured a share of his nation's wealth proportionate to his contribution to the creation of that wealth, Russia will solve one of the most pressing and perplexing social questions of today and of all time.

Churches Are Not Closed

"The Soviet Government at the present time appears to be tolerant toward religion and toward those churches and priests that confine their activity to the duties of their God, and confine themselves to the spiritual and social ministry of the people. The churches of Russia are not closed. Fifty thousand priests are doing their work as usual. I preached twice in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Petrograd to crowded congregations. Our people have carried on their activities throughout the revolution with absolutely no interference from the Government. It is the universal testimony that more people are now attending religious services than before the revolution.

"The greatest danger to the Russian Church at the present time does not arise from persecution, but from a lack of an adequately trained priesthood. The revolution swept away the training schools of the Church and likewise its financial resources. It has not graduated a candidate for the priesthood in the last five years. If the Church finds itself without a trained priesthood it will lose its spiritual leadership with the people. Russia will drift into atheism and irreligion. Something must be done to help the Russian Church to regain its intellectual leadership. Something must be done to help it to secure an adequately trained priesthood to meet the new problems presented by the revolution.

"It was for this purpose that Dr. Hartman and myself pledged $50,000 to the Russian Orthodox Church to aid in the recreating its training course for its priesthood. I believe this the largest service Methodism or American Christian ity can render Russia at the present time. If we have enough of the spirit of denominational sacrifice to forget ourselves and enough of bigness to build for the Kingdom of God and not for denominationalism, I believe we can help to save the Russian Church, and in so doing help to save Russia."

Bishop Blake is accompanied on his visit to his native land by his two daughters—Charlotte, who is a junior at Wellesley College, and Rachel, who is a student at a college in Baltimore—and both will return to their respective schools. The Bishop expects to return to Paris toward the end of November.

SAVE FUEL COSTS

EXPERT SAYS $2,000,000 WORTH OF FUEL IS WASTED EVERY DAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Battling Kid Winter, who has been in seclusion for some months, is getting ready to step forth and knock the public for a long series of big fuel bills.

Prepare, then, to circumvent the kid by getting more heat out of less coal, or gas or whatever else you use to keep warm.

Samuel S. Wyer, associate in mineral technology of the Smithsonian Institution, has just issued a pamphlet giving the exact procedure for the most economical and efficient use of coal coke, gas and oil in the home. If correct methods were understood and applied throughout the country, he contends, the same heating service could be obtained with one-half the fuel and there would result a saving of easily $2,000,000 worth of fuel a day.

Simultaneous with the issuance of Mr. Wyer's pamphlet, Rudolph Kudlich, a fuel engineer of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, today gives some timely suggestions on the gentle art of firing the furnace. Here, in substance, is his advice to coal users:

Cooking Coal.

"By burning coal, instead of cooking it, you can save 25 per cent. of your fuel bills.

"Too many persons make the mistake of covering the entire fire bed each time they add coal. When this happens, most of the gases are cooked out and escape up the chimney without being burned.

"The best method is to apply a heap of fuel on one side of the furnace and then, when this has burned down, throw the next heap on the opposite side. This alternating method always exposes a bed of live coals to ignite the gases.

"A big fire burning slowly is cheaper in the long run than a little fire burning fast. Fast burning means incomplete combustion and hence more waste in the ashes.

"Regulate your fire by the damper and the ash-pit door instead of by the fuel door. Every pound of excess air taken in above the fire cools the furnace just that much. Keep your furnace clean—it's mussy work, but it pays. Keep the heating pipes well covered."

"Fuel Powder."

That proper methods will save a surprising amount of coal was demonstrated to fuel engineers not long ago during their investigation of a "fuel powder" that had appeared on the market. This, when sprinkled in the furnace under very careful and detailed directions, was supposed to bring about a tremendous savings.

It did. But the stuff analyzed more than 90 per cent. common salt and just enough permanganate or potash to give the flames a pretty red hue. The printed directions for its application, though, were about the best set of furnace instructions ever devised. They were so good that they performed just as efficiently without the powder as with it. In them lay the secret of savings.

Subsequent articles will deal with Mr. Wyer's rules for burning gas, coke, coal and other fuel.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"Blue" Police in Aix Called Off Attack.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Oct. 23.—Loyal blue police reinforced by the firemen, assembled just before dark to-night for a combined attack to oust the separatists from the government headquarters building. After numerous hurried conferences with the Belgian and British authorities, however, the German officials called off the attack for the night.

At 8 o'clock to-night Leo Deckers, one of the separatist leaders, and 40 of his followers, still held the headquarters building and the colors of the Rhineland government fluttered from the flagpole.

The police officials stated to-night that the police would attack the building to-morrow morning unless the separatists evacuated it during the night. This they seemed to think likely.

MOSCOW GIRLS MOURN GOOD OLD JAZZ DAYS

MOSCOW, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—A score or so of charming Moscow girls, taught to one-step and fox-trot by the men of the American Relief Administration during their stay in Russia, are waiting with longing hearts and itching toes for someone to come back and dance real U. S. A. with them again.

The A. R. A. personnel houses frequently gave dances, and the Russian girl employes learned to like jazz better than their own waltzes, one-steps and fox-trots. There are one or two cafes in Moscow where a sort of syncopation is played nightly, but the dancing by the public does not begin until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. These places, too, are expensive and beyond the purse of the former A. R. A. girls, many of whom are now without jobs.

Aided by phonographs and American dance records, some of these sad young women have been trying to teach Russian men to dance in the American manner but the girls say they put too much heel clicking and leaping about into the measures, and try to turn a fox-trot into a ballet.

The girls are frankly miserable about it, and whenever a stray American who can dance turns up in Moscow, he can be surrounded by willing dancing partners as long as he is able to keep going.

Every time a girl gets a letter in English from some former A.R.A. man, she takes it around to all her acquaintances and they sigh, turn on the phonograph, and think of old times.

NORWAY OFFICIALS GRAVELY ALARMED

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—A series of conferences of a semi-official nature are shortly to take place under the aegis of the Norwegian Home Office to consider the best means of stopping the constant exodus to Norwegian subjects to America.

During the last twelve months the number of emigrants from the country has reached an alarming figure, so much so that the military authorities in some districts cannot obtain the necessary quotas of men for the yearly conscriptive training.

One suggestion being put forward is that the sparsely populated northern provinces of Norway should be colonized, the colonists to be encouraged by state aid to cultivate the land, form communities and otherwise utilize the vast areas that are as yet entirely wild.

CELEBRANTS GET CLOCK AND CHAIR

Mr. and Mrs. William Gallagher Observed 35th Anniversary of Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallagher, 219 Reid street, who celebrated their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary on Monday were presented with the following address from their family and friends, accompanied by the gifts of a clock and a chair:

"We, your friends and children, are gathered together this evening for the purpose of helping you to celebrate the thirty-fifth anniversary of your wedding day. It is not every man and wife that is privileged to tread together thirty-five years of wedded life in such peace and contentment as we are sure have been yours. Since you arrived in Peterborough, six years ago, you have gathered about you in quiet fashion a group of friends and well-wishers who hold in the highest esteem the qualities of mind and heart which you have always manifested, and which have made your home a centre of merry fellowship that has endeared it to all who have received beneath its roof the abundant hospitality which keeps the latch string always out and the hearth fire always lighted for those who gather in cheerful comradeship beneath your roof.

"As a slight token of our feeling toward you, on this, the thirty-fifth anniversary of your marriage, we ask you to accept this clock, as a symbol of the cheerful hours spent in your home, and this chair, as emblematic of the solid comfort found therein."

Signed—May, Margaret, Charlie, Helen and Mr. and Mrs. J. Collins.

Accompanying the gift of a silver casserole from the employees of the Examiner, where Miss Helen Gallagher is employed, was the following address:

"On this occasion of the thirty-fifth anniversary of your wedding day, we are pleased to be among those present to congratulate you and extend the wish that God will spare you both for many more years of happiness and health. We ask you to accept this little gift as a slight token of our kindly feelings on this, your anniversary day."

A large number of relatives and friends from the city and outside points gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher on Monday evening to celebrate the thirty-fifth wedding anniversary of their hosts. sentation from the Examiner em - Ferguson, and the presentation made by Miss Edna Holmes. The evening until a late hour, was spent in jolly fashion in the enjoyment of games, music and dancing, and the service of dainty refreshments.

NIGHT LIFE FLOURISHES DESPITE BERLIN POLICE

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—Since reformers started out recently to put an end to the all night cafe life of Berlin, ingenious bootleggers have conceived all sorts of schemes to outwit the police. Despite the regulations, all-night cafes have been exceedingly popular here, and bring in handsome profits for their managers.

Clandestine cabarets and drinking places have been springing up like mushrooms, chiefly for the benefit of profiteers and their friends who usually do not feel like going to their homes when ousted by the police at midnight from the downtown licensed cafes. The bootlegging joints are easily found. To the late diners in the regulation cafes, the addresses of the secret resorts usually come unsolicited in whispers from the waiters. Many of these waiters have an interest in the illicit places, or else receive fees regularly for their "good will."

Six weeks ago Karl Schlesigner, a banker, left his apartment in a fashionable part of Berlin and started on a long planned vacation with his family in an automobile. When he returned a policeman answered the door bell instead of the butler. Schlesinger's supply of champagne, Rhine wines, liquors and cigars were gone, and his butler and servants were in jail accused of having operated a full fledged all-night resort.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Sweet cider conjures up thoughts of roaring fires and roasted nuts and country fairs and good times generally but the cook will find a welcome change in seasonings in this homely beverage.

Our grandmothers considered boiled cider indispensable in their mincemeat, ham was baked in cider, apples were boiled in cider and now we use cider in a delicious salad.

Of course there's nothing like pure cider vinegar for pickles, the purer the better, and good salad dressing depends on the richness and sharpness of the vinegar.

Boiled cider is put on the market by several business houses, but if you can make your own cider why not boil some? Cider for boiling must be very sweet, just fresh from the press.

To make boiled cider fill a preserving kettle with sweet cider. As it boils away add more cider. Keep replenishing until the whole kettle of cider begins to thicken and become sirup-y.

Continue boiling without adding more cider and reduce one-half. Pour into sterilized cans and seal. Boiled cider should be almost as thick as molasses. One cup of boiled cider will season three mince pies. Even if you make your mincemeat in the modern fashion using candied fruits and nuts rather than beef heart and suet and raisins and apples you will like the taste of the boiled cider in this year of 1923.

Ham Baked in Cider

A whole ham or a three-inch slice of ham can be used for baking. A small family will find the slice preferable to a larger amount.

One slice ham cut three inches thick, ½ cup sweet cider, ½ teaspoon mustard, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon pepper, whole cloves, stick cinnamon.

Pour boiling water over ham and let stand 5 minutes. Drain and wipe dry. Mix mustard thoroughly with brown sugar and rub well into ham. Stick cloves into the fat. Sprinkle over pepper and lay a few pieces of stick cinnamon over top. Put meat into roaster and add cider. Bake two hours in moderate oven. For the last half hour of baking watch closely as the cider and brown sugar will burn easily when greatly reduced.

If a whole or half a ham is used increase ingredients in proportion of the given ingredients for three pounds of meat.

Cider Salad

One tablespoon granulated gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, 1½ cups sweet cider, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 6 whole cloves, ½ cup nut meats, ½ cup minced celery, ¼ cup white grapes, lettuce, salad dressing.

Soften gelatin in boiling water. Add sugar, salt and cloves to cider and bring to the boiling point. Strain over gelatin. Stir until dissolved and add lemon juice. When beginning to set add nuts, celery and grapes, skinned and seeded. Turn into mold and let stand until firm and chilled. Serve on a bed of lettuce with cream salad dressing.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Clifford C. Robinson

SCHOOL EXERCISES

Every once in a while some conscientious objector or writer on health topics rises to denounce what he terms stiff, formal drills or one-two-three exercises in the public schools. Body movements are also included, such as foot movements, arm flexing and body bending, in classes or in groups.

However, these school exercises are of great value in body building, graceful movements and carriage, as well as training in quickness and accuracy. They also play no small part in aiding circulation and muscular development when carried out with pep and enthusiasm.

Niels Bukh, the famous European physical instructor, and 30 of his athletes are in the United States on an international tour. Their specialty is gymnastic drills and movements of precision and graceful strength for body building and right living. There is no doubt whatever that the school exercises mentioned have this same tendency. They start many children on the right road to careful body building and do much to eliminate awkwardness, timidity and false movements which would handicap children to no small extent in their later life.

The outdoor games of tennis, volley-ball, baseball, football and golf, as well as swimming and horseback riding, are fine—for those who can take the time and are fortunate enough to be able to engage in such sports and games. But how about the thousands who are deprived of the pleasure to engage in health-giving games in the open air? Especially is this true of children of the great urban centers and often in towns and villages as well.

The point is this, it is hard for teachers to make this exercise work and play. It is good work, however, and has its results. My own experience in the examination of thousands of public school children, for disease and physical conditions as well as their home environment, has thoroughly convinced me of the real usefulness of these school exercises. They start right posture and good body training. However formal or one-two-three in their dictum they may be, they have real health value and should be continued.

THE REFFREE

(By ALBERT APPLE)

Twelve

When steel mills get on an eight hour day basis oil well drilling will be the last of the great basic industries still clinging to the 12 hour day. Drillers and tool dressers in most of our leading oil fields work 12 hour "towers" or shifts.

It's hard work too—enough so to make the average city man feel like a loafer. The city man however has something more tiring than hard work or long hours—high nervous tension which is just another name for need less rush.

Oil well crews thrive on 12 hours a day. And they seem to like it. More pay for one thing. Then too wells usually are drilled next door to no where with few diversions available for spare time and when one well is finished the drillers and tool dressers can have a vacation before tackling another job.

The fact that somebody still is working 12 hours a day will impress many employers as being the eighth wonder of the world.

Gasoline

Wall Street gossips about the rumor that Hugo Stinnes Germany's industrial genius will invade America with his loose change.

The possibilities in gasoline should appeal to him. In some parts of Oklahoma and Texas gasoline is selling as low as nine cents a gallon at the wells and refineries. To transport it to American consumers costs from nine cents a gallon downward. Mostly downward.

Oil

The oil business is in the same predicament as wheat—badly "shot" by overproduction. Chief cause is the California field expected to produce 275 million barrels of oil this year.

The overproduction however is only temporary. Imports from Mexico are falling off rapidly. Our country is consuming crude oil at the rate of 680 million barrels a year. This is 100 million more than in 1922 and 26 million barrels more than in 1918. Oil stored in pipe lines and tank farms is enough to run the country only five months.

K. K. K.

The Ku Klux Klan now claims a membership of five millions. Three years ago it had only 5000. The average family is estimated to have four or five members. So there's a pillowslip with eye holes in every fifth home which is amazing to outsiders.

The Klan by working as a unit might upset several political applecarts in the next presidential election.

Giant

A 13 year old boy 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 240 pounds lives in Cold Springs N. Y. He's Raymond J. Impell. Such cases usually are due to excessive action of the thymus and pituitary glands.

This interesting possibility: The Japanese who dislike their short stature as a race may turn themselves into a race of giants at some future date by tinkering with their endocrine glands.

Raymond by the way is "at the head of his class" and has captured several scholarship prizes.

Fliers

Germany having consolidated its commercial aviation companies into two big combines is arranging international air service in every direction. She has finished delivering air material reparations as required by the peace treaty. This leaves her free to concentrate on her own air lines. To dodge allied intervention some of the German plane manufacturers are building their factories in other countries. This is industrial news. Later it may be military.

I.O.D.E. CHAPTERS COMBINE FORCES

Plan For Big Armistice Tea in The Armouries Friday, Nov. 9th.

The four chapters of the I.O.D.E. in the city are combining forces in a big Armistice Day tea to be held in the Armouries on Friday, November 9. The proceeds are to be devoted to the War Memorial Fund, which is the pet movement of the I.O.D.E. branches throughout Canada at the present time.

The War Memorial Fund is probably not a familiar project to the general public, but through its functioning, many worthy Canadian scholars have been set on the way of a better education. In the original framing of the plan, seven clauses were incoporated, but, after some years of trial, it was found that the actual work narrowed down to three of the original clauses, which provide (1) Bursaries for sons and daughters of deceased and totally disabled soldiers and sailors, (2) Post-graduate scholarships in British universities, and (3) Distribution of War Memorial pictures to schools.

Under the first clause, up-to-date, twenty-six scholars have been enabled to attend different Canadian universities. Under the second clause, nine graduates of Canadian universities have had a year of study in British universities. And under the third clause, one thousand collections, each consisting of eighteen pictures—reproductions of the paintings executed under the auspices of the War Records Office—have been sent to the nine Canadian provinces for distribution.

At the 1922 annual meeting, it was found possible to award two more full bursaries. Each of the eleven bursaries has an annual value of $300, making the total four-year value to the successful student $1,200. Each year, there is a large number of applicants for these material helps to the education of children of deceased or totally disabled soldiers and sailors.

In the section devoted to post-graduate scholarships, four of Canada's bright youth received the opportunity during 1923 to attend Oxford University, in England, and several of the 1921 and 1922 scholars have remained a second year at their own expense.

Of the one thousand collections of War Memorial pictures, eighteen examples in each collection, which have been distributed throughout various Canadian provinces, Ontario has 315, auebec 250, Manitoba 75, Saskatchewan 95, Alberta 80, New Brunswick 45, Nova Scotia 65, British Columbia 60, Prince Edward Island 10, and the Yukon 3.

A request was received from the Canadian Trade Commissioner, Melbourne, Australia, asking for a set of the pictures to hang in the office in order to remind visitors that other parts of the Empire as well as Australia contributed to the final victory of the Allies. The National Executive decided that the request should be granted, the cost to be met from the Life Membership Fund.

WINDOW GARDENS

Yes, garden lovers, you needn't feel downhearted, nor discouraged, when winter comes. For you can keep your favorite plants growing even during the cold weather. Just take them inside and plant them by the window. The trick is in knowing how, so your flowers will not die from frost, even within the house. To assure you perfect results, the Examiner has asked Mrs. Louise Stamm Marshall to give you, in a series of short articles, the benefit of her on experiences in winter window gardening. Mrs. Marshall has been successful for several winters past in planting her favorite flowers within the home during winter. So you may accept her advice with equal assurance of success in your own undertaking this fall. Here is her first article:

LATE ANNUALS.

The real garden lover is never without one. When winter approaches she makes her first indoor garden of the season by using the late blooming annuals from outdoors.

Pots of French marigolds, taken from the outdoor garden before frost old-fashioned balsams, sweet alyssum, giant candytuft will cheer up the living rooms for several weeks. They should be watered before they get too dry, and showered often.

Pots of seedlings of annuals are very satisfactory for the winter garden. Start the seeds early enough in the season to insure well-grown plants at the time of bringing them into the house.

ITS WHISKEY UNUSED.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 24.—(United Press).—Wisconsin has plenty of whiskey for medicinal uses, if the records of Clark M. Perry, Federal prohibition officer for Wisconsin, are any criterion.

Last year only two-thirds of the supply allowed doctors of the State was prescribed. The other third remained on drug store shelves unclaimed.

For the twelve months Wisconsin refused 31,056 gallons of whiskey they might have legally consumed. Of course, it takes a prescription from one of the 1,780 doctors legally entitled to direct patients to use whiskey.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

LITTLE MRS. BROWN HEN

"Look here, ladies," he said, politely, "You're all wrong."

"Come here!" beckoned Mister Dodger to the Twins. "What do you make of this?"

Nancy and Nick crouched down beside the fairyman where they could see and hear, but where they could not be seen themselves.

But they need not have been afraid, for the chickens were having an argument, and when people are trying to show that everybody else is wrong and nobody is right but themselves, they don't bother much about outsiders.

Mrs. Buff Orpington was speaking. "Why all you've got to do is to ask Farmer Brown," she cackled. "He had me at the County Fair in a cage with wire over the front, with a card on it that told all about me. I'm the finest hen on the farm. My ancestors date back as far as the first hay stack in the country and my blood is as blue as rinse water on washing day."

"Oh, goodness!" cackled Missez Plymouth Roc. "Blue blood! My goodness! Didn't my ancestors come over in the Mayflower and land at Plymouth Rock! Don't talk to me about blue blood!"

"Speaking of blood," put in Missez Bantam, "my great-grandfather was the most famous game-cock in America. He won the biggest cock-fight ever held on this side of the ocean."

"Humph!" sniffed Missez Black Minorca. "That's something to be ashamed of, not proud of. I shouldn't boast of it if I were you, Missez Bantam. But they do say that small people are always talking of their own importance. You'd make pretty poor picking when it came to a meal."

Missez Rhode Island Red spoke up majestically at this:

"Yes, I should say so! When it comes to showing one's board and keep, I flatter myself that I have some meat on my bones. Besides my eggs are larger and finer than any in Squealy-Moo Land. I have heard Farmer Brown say so, and besides I have eyes in my own head."

"Well of all things!" put in Missez White Leghorn. "As though I didn't have the record for laying! White Leghorns are the best laying hens in the world."

At that minute Mister Dodger stepped into the circle and pointed to little Missez Brown Hen, who had no name at all, and hadn't said a word.

"Look here, ladies," he said politely. "You're all wrong. Here is the Champion Egg Layer of Squealy-Moo Land! She's too modest to boast, but she hasn't missed a day since last Christmas and she has no ancestors to speak of, either. She eats less and works harder than any one I know."

And what do you think, my dears? Those hens all crowded around and apologized. They were kind-hearted in spite of their foolishness.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Miles Sheridan, to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce is taking a yacht trip, supposedly with

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl, known as the Million Dollar Doll. In reality, however, he is not with the Doll but

Teresa Desmond (Terry), Juliet's unbelievably innocent half-sister, whom the Doll sent to masquerade as herself. Ever since a kindness Miles did her in childhood, Terry had made him her Dream Prince, and they are now madly in love with each other, although he believes her to be the notorious Juliet Divine.

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian, formerly the lover of Miles' wife, has deserted her for

Rose Callahan, a somewhat ordinary young heiress, now traveling in Europe with her father.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, frantic at Paul's desertion finds herself in danger of losing her husband also and goes to Algiers where Miles' yacht is lying.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, meeting Miles and the "Doll" recognizes Terry Desmond whom he knew and loved in New York. He it is who warns Betty that her husband's companion is not a show-girl, but a convent maid.

Miles, enjoying a brief sojourn at Bousaada with Terry, and his faithful old servant Mrs. Harkness as chaperone, receives a wire that his wife is in Algiers, demanding to see him. On his way there he is overtaken by Nazlo who informs him that the "Doll" is really Terry Desmond.

Miles and Nazlo race back to Bousaada, each to plead his suit.

CHAPTER LXXIV.

Strange News

When Nazlo, sallow with blown sand, strolled out of his car at the hotel in Bousaada, he enquired discreetly for Monsieur Sheridan.

Monsieur had departed en automobile, he was informed, some hours ago, and Mademoiselle accompanied by Madame had gone down to the river a short time since. Monsieur expected to be absent for the night, but ces dames would return after sunset and moonrise, for dinner.

"I'll go and find them. You can send a boy part way to show me the shortest road," Nazlo said. "I want two rooms in the hotel, for myself and chauffeur for a night or two: maybe more. The best you have; but I won't stop to look at them, thanks."

"The shortest road" was important to him! Unless the big motor suffered a providential panne Sheridan might arrive within the next quarter hour.

Nazlo thought he could count upon fifteen minutes start of the heavier car despite its high power, for his chauffeur had earned a big bribe by tearing along the vile road as a large automobile couldn't do without the risk of a smash. And many backwardlooks had shown Nazlo only empty desert.

Sheridan must come to the hotel when he arrived, as he—Nazlo—had come, there to learn that the girl wasn't in the house. He would even have an extra delay, because he would first seek her in her room, discover her absence, and waste more time in enquiries.

Altogether, it looked as if Nazlo might get twenty minutes with Terry before he was disturbed. A good deal could be done in twenty minutes!

The joy of the desert had gone for the girl. She was in the darkest mood of her life, the black gloom of youth which can never, it seems, be lightened.

Her sister Julia was a woman whom any man was free to insult! She herself, though her one sin had been against the conventions, wasn't the right wife for Miles Sheridan.

He ought not to love her. She ought not to let him love her. It would be better for him if he never saw her again. She couldn't desert him, when his back was turned, but she wished that she might die—a quick death without too much pain, lest she should not be brave,—die before Miles came back.

Then at the thought of losing him, of being gone out of his world while she was so young, tears filled her eyes. But she would not let them fall.

Mrs. Harkness mustn't see that she was crying, and ask questions! The kind old woman was sure to knock at the door sooner, and it would be worse to keep her out than to let her in.

Harky imagined, however, that the girl might be resting in the heat of the day, and accordingly left her in peace. It was late in the afternoon when she tapped, and then Terry was glad to go out. They walked under big sunshades to the river, and sat in the purple shadow of a little sandy hillock, watching the Arab children play—some almost naked, others dressed like grown women in bizarre draperies, bright-tinted as poppies. Terry had brought a letter-pad, to write to Julia and ask permission to tell Sheridan who she was. Even though she mustn't marry him, she longed to let him know that she was the child he had named "Cinderella." Harky had brought a book about Ireland, but neither could concentrate. It was easier to gaze at the children.

As the sun went down the sky became a vast canopy of roses that gave colour to the sand, and even the air seemed pink. The brown babies laughed and crowed to each other with the same laughter, the same accents that white babies have all over the world, no matter what their nation, and the girl and the old woman did not know that footsteps hurrying towards them from behind, meant anything special for them, till Nazlo's voice spoke.

"Miss Desmond!"

Terry turned sharply, recognizing the voice. It seemed the limit of everything she could go through, and even beyond, that Nazlo should be at Bousaada—today.

Mrs. Harkness turned too, and remembered the face of the kind gentleman with the nice motor car at Monaco Port. She thought he had told her then that he knew Mr. Sheridan, and that he has some acquaintance with Miss Divine. But it was queer he should call her "Miss Desmond" now.

Maybe he'd made a mistake, yet it seemed impossible to mistake this beautiful girl for someone else.

"Forgive me if I've frightened you, but I was coming to Bousaada to see Mr. Sheridan on a matter of importance—to him: and I met him on the way. We had a conversation—a sort of heart to heart talk, because I'd been sent to him by his wife. You know she's in Algiers?—on board the yacht!

RICH SPOILS

(By LYLE C. WILSON)

LONDON, Oct. 24 (United Press).—More than thirty millions of dollars' worth of gold bullion and silver coins have been salved from the White Star liner Laurentic as she lies in 90 feet of seawater, 15 miles off Lough Swilly, where she was sunk by a German torpedo during the war.

The success which has attended the British admiralty's operations in recovering the treasure of the Laurentic has raised the hopes of those who look forward to the time when the billions of dollars in gold, silver and jewels which lie on the ocean floor as the result of wars and wrecks can be raised and again be put into treasure vaults of men.

There still remain in the rusting hulk of the Laurentic one million dollars' worth of gold and silver.

Retrieving the thirty millions already raised has taken five years. Another year will probably see the end of the search with the Bank of England again in possession of the money which was sent out in 1917, consigned to American bankers.

The admiralty's salvage vessel "Racer" is doing the job. Her crew and divers would normally receive a one-sixteenth share of the recovered money, but the present operation is on such a tremendous scale that the government lowered the figure to one thirty-second share. Even so, the men are doing well.

Every morning the "Racer" steams out to a position above the wreck. One or more of the three divers go over the side and soon the hoisting of the treasure bucket begins.

A "divining rod," privately invented, but adopted by the admiralty, is the secret of the "Racer's" success.

With the rod the underwater diver pokes about the heap of slime and sand which covers the Laurentic, as it does every other hulk long sunk.

When the rod touches or approaches base metal, an indicator on the "Racer" deck, similar to the hand of a speedometer, sways sharply away from zero. When precious metal, such as gold or silver is touched, the hand sways from zero in the opposite direction.

So delicate is the mechanism that the dial hand is more acutely affected by 24 than 18 carat gold. Silver influences the hand in the same direction, but less actively than gold.

By means of constant telephonic communication the diver is informed when his spear thrusts have reached treasure and he begins operations to uncover the hoard.

Most of the sunken wealth is in gold ingots. These are easily recovered. One million dollars is in silver shillings of the size and value of an American "quarter." To rescue these the diver scrapes into his bucket vast quantities of sand and mud. This is sifted on the deck above and the coins removed, washed and returned to their former resting place, the Bank of England.

A swift naval destroyer lies in a nearby harbor. Every night the day's catch of gold and silver is transferred from the "Racer" to the armed vessel. She remains in position until approximately one million dollars has been put on board. Then away to London, and the coins and ingots are secretly loaded on trucks and carried to the bank.

It is hoped to duplicate the Laurentic success in operations to salve the treasure of other sunken vessels.

PASHITCH LOOMS AS JUGOSLAVIA'S DEFI TO ITALY'S THREATS

Italy Won Her Argument With Greece, But Is a Long Way From Being Out of the Woods Yet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. — Italy won her argument with Greece, but her argument with Jugoslavia isn't settled yet.

If it comes to a show-down can Premier Mussolini ride rough-shod over Premier Pashitch of the Jugoslavs, as he did over Premier Gonatas of the Greeks?

Well, Austria tried it in 1914 and the world knows what happened to Austria.

As for Pashitch, he was premier then of a Serbia with 2,000,000 population. He's premier today of a Jugoslavia (Greater Serbia) with a population of 12,000,000.

Doesn't Bluff

Pashitch's personality's in sharp contrast to Mussolini's. Pashitch never bluffs, but he stands pat.

The World War isn't the only conflict he's seen his country through. He was at the helm during the struggle with Turkey in 1912 and the Balkan strife of 1913.

And he knows how to hang on. The Serbian army was driven clear out of Serbia during the world fight and Pashitch went along. He was above 70 when, in the terrible winter of 1915, he journeyed across the Albanian mountains afoot and, set up the skeleton of a government in a foreign land. But he was on hand for the peace treaty and got Serbia out of the war with six times the population she had when she went in.

Mussolini, for a public man, is very young. Pashitch is very old. He won't tell just how old, but the best guess is 80 or thereabouts.

He's An Engineer

Nicola Pashitch was born at the Serbian town of Zayetchar. He grew up during the reign of King Milan, took part in an unsuccessful rising against him and was sentenced to death, but escaped to Bulgaria. Finally Milan was deposed and Alexander came to the throne. Pasithich returned and entered politics. He's been in politics ever since—premier a dozen times and holder of lesser portfolios more times than he can count. King Alexander was assassinated, King Peter followed and died and another Alexander came. Pashitch remained his country's leading man all this time.

By profession he's an engineer. He's Serbia's greatest mine owner—a very rich man. In fact, many Serbians say he's too rich; also that he's less a statesman than a politician. If so he's a mighty practical, successful one. His nerve is true and tried. He knows his countrymen inside out.

The difference between Italy and Jugoslavia is territorial, centering around the Adriatic port of Fiume, which Italy wants because its population is largely Italian and Jugoslavia insists on as her only "window" on the sea.

BLAMES STRANGE FORCE FOR PACIFIC WRECKS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—Neither tidal waves nor currents of seismic origin, but some other strange force was responsible for the recent wreck of seven United States destroyers and the crash a few days later of the super-dreadnaught Texas and the freighter Steel Seafarer in the waters off Point Arguello, north o Santa Barbara, Calif., according to Captain Alfred Davis, a mariner of the old school who sailed his clipper ship around the Horn a decade ago.

The west entrance to Santa Barbara channel, between Point Concepcion and San Miguel islands, always has been in ill repute among seafaring men, said Captain Davis. Its nickname, "the graveyard of ships," was earned about the time of Cabrillo, who there lost his life and was buried on one of the channel islands, according to stories which have become legends. It is said at no other point on the Pacific have so many ships met disaster, and always the cause remained a mystery.

Captain Davis said he recalls many wrecks along the coast near Point Arguello dating back to the time of the mystery disaster of the Golden Horn. Always, said the old sea captain, those who escaped alive from the wrecks, when any escaped, have had the same story to tell, of suddenly becoming enveloped in a fog and then, without warning, crashing on rocks. Invariably, he said, the navigators had thought themselves in mid-channel, their instruments showing them to be on a safe course, when in reality they were miles from their course.

"Something unexplained by scientists," declared Captain Davis, "beckons the ships to shore, and every man who has sailed this coast for any length of time knows that something will get him if he doesn't watch out."

DEVOTES LIFE HELPING MEN FREED FROM JAIL

CLEVELAND, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press)—The movement which resulted in the incorporation several months ago of the Sam S. Williams Voucher Club, a national organization of friendly interest toward men leaving prison, has extended to include other large cities and its organizers expect a nation-wide representation within a short time. It is a non-profit order.

Sam S. ("Daddy") Williams of Cleveland, is president of the society, which has for its chief purposes the prevention of crime, constructive prison reform, aid in rehabilitation of prisoners paroled or released from prisons, and encouragement of more liberal use of probation systems.

The program also includes providing ex-prisoners with surroundings that will prevent them from taking up old associates and protecting them until they are self-supporting, and a fund for taking care of the families of prisoners.

"Daddy" Williams has spent 47 years getting men out of prison, and helping them keep out, directing this work here for the last 14 years. In that time he has helped an average of 150 men a year to obtain work and get a new start. His records show only one backslider.

BOTH HORSES WILL APPEAR

Zev and My Own Announced For Championship Stake at Latonia.

CINCINNATI, Oct .23.—Zev, the conquerer of the English derby winner, Papyrus, and My Own, Rear Admiral Grayson's crack 3 year old, will positively appear in the great championship stage to be run at Latonia on November 3, a telegram received by Latonia racing officials from Col. Wynn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club, to-day stated.

Horsemen at Latonia believe the cough developed by My Own will respond to treatment and the challenger of Zev will be in running condition before the date of the Latonia classic.

PAPYRUS PARTY LEAVE FOR HOME

Donoghue and Jarvis Make No Excuses For Defeat.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. —Steve Donoghue, leading British jockey, and Papyrus, English derby winner, sailed for home to-day on the Acquitania.

Basil Jarvis, trainer of the English champion, also homeward bound, echoed Donoghue's sentiments.

"No alibis," he agreed.

Papyrus was in the same carefully prepared box stall, a luxurious affair, in which he was brought to this country less than a month ago.

Donoghue will reach England but 24 hours before he is due to ride in the Cambridge Stakes, at Newmarket, Oct. 31. He will have the leg up on My Lord, of J. B. Joel's stable.

BURMAN HOLDS BANTAM CROWN

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The New York State Athletic Commission today refused to lift the suspension of Joe Lynch, world's bantamweight champion despite testimony of the title holder's physician and trainer that a shoulder injury caused cancellation of his title bout with Joe Burman, of Chicago, last Friday night. Lynch was suspended when he failed to fight Burman and will remain under official ban, it was announced, until he fulfills his contract with the Chicagoan.

Besides his suspension, Lynch also stands deprived of his title in this state. The bantam crown was transferred by the commission to Burman when Lynch failed to accept a challenge within the prescribed period, but which passed last Friday into possession of Abe Goldstein, who outpointed Burman in a bout substituted for the Lynch-Burman go.

WALTER JOHNSTON NOT THROUGH YET

Says Jake Fournier Gave Him Most Trouble in Seventeen Years.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—For 17 years Walter Johnson, famous pitcher of the Washington Nationals, has starred in the American League. Walter figures he has three or four more good years ahead of him, if he is able to heal a leg injury suffered in the middle of the season that has seriously interfered with his pitching stride.

During his career in the American League Johnson has seen the entire personnel of the American League change with the exception of Ty Cobb. The Detroit manager is the only player remaining in the league of the many players who made up the various teams when Johnson made his debut in 1907.

Johnson, over a stretch of 17 years has faced all the great hitters of the American League. Recently some one asked him what batter he feared most. His reply was characteristic of the modest Johnson.

"I have a fear of every good batter and there have been and still are a lot of them in the American League. I have found that it is a good policy to never get careless, but have a certain amount of respect for every hitter. Failure to work properly on some player generally regarded as a weak batter often upsets a well pitched game.

"I could name a score of batters who have made lots of trouble for me, but I don't believe I ever pitched to a player who took more liberties with my stuff than Jacques Fournier now with Chicago, his specialty was hitting for extra bases when I pitched. No matter how I worked on him he seemed to have no trouble solving my offerings. Fournier was the original tough baby for me. I'm glad he's in the National League.'

Bender Bad At Banquet

He and Catcher Styles Indefinitely Suspended By Jack Dunn.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.

— The indefinite suspension of Pitcher "Chief" Bender and Catcher Lana Styles, of the Baltimore Internationals, was announced to-day by Jack Dunn, managing owner of the Orioles. Dunn said he took this step because he was displeased with the conduct of the two players at a banquet given the Kansas City and Baltimore clubs here last night. They will not be permitted to enter the local grounds again, according to Dunn.

TY COBB BREAKS WAGNER'S RECORD

Has Batted Over .300 For Eighteen Consecutive Years.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—Ty Cobb fiery pilot of the Detroit Tigers, has added new glory to his all time batting record, a mark almost lost sight of in the closing battles of the season and the smoke of world's series conflict. For with the end of the 1923 campaign Cobb ended his eighteenth consecutive season above the .300 swatting class and came into possession of the all-time record which he had shared for a season with Hans Wagner famous old short stop of the Pittsburg Pirates.

Wagner set the mark at seventeen years and when he retired it was the opinion of many that that was one mark that would stand to the credit of Wagner for all time. This belief was based on frequent reports that Cobb was about to retire and the fact that in 1920 his batting average dropped to .334.

Lowest Year

That mark, the lowest Ty had hit since 1908 gave him a string of fifteen consecutive marks of better than .300. The next year the Georgian fooled the baseball dopesters by banging the ball for a mark of .389 and then tied Wagner's string of seventeen consecutive .300 marks with a record in 1922 of .401, the third time in his career he had reached the ultra-select class of hitters.

Cobb forged ahead of the record held jointly by himself and Wagner by hitting for .338 in the 1923 season thus running his string of consecutive .300 marks up to eighteen.

Another record which the Detroit manager pried loose from the former Pirate short stop was that of making the largest number of hits. Wagner in his major league career accumulated 3.430 safe drives, while Cobb's 188. made in the 1923 season, gave him a total of 3,454.

MAY POSTPONE SAILING RACE

Columbia Repaired But Will Not Reach Halifax Until Friday.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct .23.—The accident which prevented the sailing for Halifax yesterday of the schooner Columbia, U. S. challenger for the international fishermen's trophy now held by the Nova Scotia schooner Bluenose, may cause postponement of the first race of this year's international series scheduled to take place off Halifax on Saturday.

The Columbia returned to port yesterday shortly after she had started for Halifax. The vessel shattered an eight foot section of her shoe aft, by striking a rock at the entrance to Gloucester harbor. Captain Ben Pine, her skipper, had her hauled out on the marine railway to-day and a new section of shoe was set in place. Repairs were completed to-night and Pine will sail for Canada again tomorrow morning.

The heavy easterly gale prevailing to-day would have held the vessel back and Captain Pine said to-night that no time had been lost through the accident. If the weather moderates, he said, the Columbia will probably reach Halifax Friday afternoon. This will give her little time to prepare for a race Saturday.

The American race committee, it was said, to-night, will not ask for a postponement as the Columbia will be under the jurisdiction of the international committee made up of three members from the country in which the race is being held, and two from the challenging country. It is expected that if the Columbia reaches Canada too late to get her rig ready for Saturday, this body will order postponement for a day or two.

COOLIDGE SENDS HIS BEST WISHES

United States President Pleased With Public Enthusiasm For the Race.

BOSTON, Oct .23.—A telegram from President Coolidge, received to-day by Wilfrid W. Lufkin, Collector of the Port of Boston, expressed his interest in the international fishermens' races starting off Halifax next Saturday. Mr. Lufkin will leave Gloucester to-morrow on the U. S. S. Bushnell, to serve as one of the American observers in the race series.

"I will be glad," the president's telegram says, "to have you communicate my greetings and best wishes to the participants of the international fishermen's race at Halifax this month. I have always taken a great interest in these races and have been much gratified at the public enthusiasm regarding them both in this country and Canaad. May the present contest develop the best that there is in the boats and crews and increase the public estimation of real sportsmanship."

Renault Looms as Champ's Menace

Canadian who got a Start in Dempsey's Camp is now hot on his Trail

BY JOE WILLIAMS

Thundering down the heavyweight trail comes Sergeant Jack Renault of the Canadian mounted, big-fisted, square-jawed, oak-hearted.

Sergeant Jack is on a man hunt. Tradition assures us that the Canadian Mounted always comes back with their man. Renault is after Dempsey, champion of the heavies. To get to Dempsey he is prepared to storm the forbidding outposts as represented by Wills, Firpo and Gibbons.

Renault, and unimpressive fourth rater two years ago, has come fast and far in recent months.

Joe Downey, who lasted the limit with Firpo, was knocked out in three rounds with Renault.

George Godfrey, enormous Ethiopian, and rated next to Harry Wills in punching ability and promise, was stopped cold.

Not a dazzling array of victims, you say? True. Downey, Fulton, Herman and Godfrey hardly size up as world beaters. But it probably takes a fair battle to beat them just the same, and two years ago, you'll remember, Renault wasn't even a fair battler.

Billy Miske knocked Renault out in 13 rounds less than two years ago, and Gene Tunney, light heavyweight, kicked him about with incredible ferocity. Others have whipped him. Others may whip him in the future, but their task will not be easy or simple.

Many fighters have started at a slip-shod gait only to come on later with the sure, confident stride of a champion. Jim Flynn, ham and egger de luxe, knocked Dempsey out in a round. That was in 1917. Two years later Dempsey was the champion.

Benny Leonard was knocked out twice, first by Joe Shugrue, next by Frankie Fleming, both second raters. Now Leonard is ranked with Gans and Lavigne as the greatest lightweight in history.

All of which proves that you never can tell and even then you can't tell much.

Renault, with a local reputation earned in Montreal rings, came to the states two years ago and joined Dempsey's camp at Atlantic City as a sparring partner. This was his first introduction to big time battling. Dempsey, training for the Carpentier push-over, belabored his assistants with great fury. Renault says he suffered some and learned much in that camp.

Now is fate, giddy old dame, to take Renault, battered sparring partner, and exalt him to the Dempsey throne?

Search us.

We happen to recall, however, that Jeffries was a sparring partner in Jim Corbett's camp, and that Jeff later won the title from Jim.

Magnate? Yes! No!

Christian and the late president were once financially interested in a baseball club at Marion, O.

RACES IN THREE UNIONS

Tigers' victory over Ottawa in Hamilton on Saturday put them very much in the race for the interprovincial honours. The fact that Montreal held Argos to a tie puts Tigers in a position where victories over Montreal, at Montreal, next Saturday, and over Argonauts in Hamilton two weeks later, will give them the championship without having to play any extra games.

Tigers now have five points to Argonauts' six, but they must win next Saturday's game in order to remain in the race, providing that Ottawa loses to Argos.

The fact that Ottawa was beaten in Montreal, and Argos held to a tie, shows that the winged wheelers are going to be a hard team to beat on their own grounds.

The Montreal team still has a chance, although very slim, and can be depended upon to give Tigers a stiff battle. Each team in the "Big Four" has two more games to play.

In the Senior O.R.F.U. and Intercollegiate union, the race is not quite as exciting, although no team in either union has the championship cinched as yet. Hamilton Rowing Club has an edge in the Ontario race. It defeated Varsity twice and Parkdale once, but still has another game to play with Parkdale. The game will be played at Toronto on 12th November, and, should the paddlers win and take two games from Varsity in the meantime, they will be tied with the oarsmen, Varsity being out of the running.

In the Intercollegiate, Queen's, with two victories, is well in front, its remaining two games being carded for the home lot.

Grain Marketings Show Big Increase.

WINNIPEG, October 24. — The grain marketings and loadings on the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railways continue to increase in volume and surpass records of last season. On Monday the two roads marketed a total of 5,261,798 bushels, while the cars loaded numbered 2874, representing 4,037,190.

October 22, 1922, was a Sunday, and comparative figures are not available.

Since the commencement of the crop year the Canadian National Railways handled 45,424 cars, containing 58,524,000 bushels, compared with 42,379 cars, or 53,634,000 bushels for the corresponding period last season.

DUGAN IS BEST THIRD BASEMAN

Opinion of Farrell in Review of the World's Series--Stands To Small For Crowds.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(United Press).—Among many interesting observations brought out as far by the recent World's Series were several that will have an important bearing on the future of baseball.

It was shown beyond doubt by the interest in the series and by the mechanical part of the play that:

Three consecutive victories by the New York teams has not hurt baseball;

That no plant has yet been built large enough to accommodate a World's Series crowd in New York;

That Joe Dugan is the greatest third baseman in baseball;

That Erin Ward is sure to develop into the greatest second baseman;

That Everett Scott is not through;

That Mind, as personified by John McGraw, cannot beat Matter, as represented by the New York Yankees;

That the World's Series will hardly be touched again by the black hand that upset the 1919 fight.

* * *

Attendance records which were made by the wholesale proved that New York has not tired of seeing three championship fights in a row. The argument advanced before the World's Series that while New York might be just as interested the provinces would not be aroused by the series, was also shown to be false. There was just as much interest in the series outside of New York as there has ever been.

* * *

Fifteen thousand fans were turned away from the Columbus Day game in the Yankee Stadium and police officials estimated that 50,000 fans, who had money ready to get into the Sunday game of the series, had to be turned away.

When Colonels Ruppert and Huston built the Yankee Stadium, with accommodations for 65,000 spectators, they were thought crazy, and it was said that they would never fill the park. The Yanks packed the stadium four times during the regular season, and they could have packed it to double its capacity twice during the series.

Colonel Jake Ruppert, who now owns the team, said after the series that he would have plans drawn to increase the capacity of the park to 85,000, and he felt sure that he was not making a mistake.

Some wise followers of the game fear, however, that when Babe Ruth has to bow to time and set his bat aside for good that there will be no need of having such big parks.

* * *

Joe Dugan's exhibition of third base playing was the greatest ever seen in a World's Series. Heinie Groh is the only player in baseball who approached him, and he so far outshone the work of the Giant third baseman that there was no doubt in the minds of any fan that Dugan is the class of them all.

Dugan is still a young player. He has many years ahead of him and there is no reason why he should not get even better, if it is possible for a player to be more perfect than he is now.

Erin Ward, the Yankee second baseman, also rose to the rank of a real star. Writers who followed the Yankee team all season, warned in advance that Ward would show some real playing in the series, and he did.

The series provided some grounds for comparing Ward and Frisch, and the Yankee star looked the better. If Frisch went into the series as the greatest second baseman in the game, he did not come out as such.

* * *

Yankee fans found nothing that pleased them more in the series than the fine performance of the veteran, "Deacon" Scott. Always popular with the fans in New York and liked by all the ball players, the iron "Deacon" surprised everyone by the way he showed up Dave Bancroft, considered one of the best of the shortstops.

Scotty, no doubt, had heard the stories that the Yankees had paid $100,000 for Joe Boley, the Baltimore shortstop, and he set out to show his bosses that they didn't need anyone to succeed him.

There is no doubt that the "Deacon" is not as actibe on his feet as he used to be, but he still has a great pair of hands and, strange as it seemed, the "Deacon" showed in the series that he can hit. No one ever suspected it of him before.

* * *

In all advance calculations, the mind of John McGraw is considered to be superior to that of Miller Huggins, but little "Hug" showed in the series that he can use his head as something other than parking place for his cap.

Huggins was bitterly criticized early in the series because he did not put on a runner on base several times for Wally Pipp, the lame first baseman, and because he did not make his athletes use some judgment on the bases, but Huggins has been panned for everything he has ever done in New York.

Another thing that was brought out in the series was that Babe Ruth was the biggest item in the Yankee list of assets. Ruth didn't bust up many games, but he caused the Giants so much worry that he didn't have to do any terrible slugging.

Separatists Fled in Mayence; Five Killed.

PARIS, Oct. 23. — A despatch to the Havas Agency from Mayence, says that five persons were killed and several wounded, all of whom were inoffensive spectators, during another attempt to-day to establish the Rhineland Republic in Mayence. The attempt failed before the determined resistance of workingmen organized by the unions.

The separatists assembled early this morning in a small square in the rear of the government building. At ten o'clock they attempted to rush the city hall, amid mingled applause and the jeers of thousands of onlookers. The separatists were repulsed and pursued by the workmen from Schillerstrasse. During the flight, shots were exchanged.

The despatch adds that the police have been confined to barracks and that the city is in a high state of excitement.

FEAST OF MUSIC AT THE GRAND

Noted Violinist and Eminent Soprano on Monday, October 29.

Jules Falk, the noted violinist, who will be heard here in joint recital with Vanette van Sweringen, the eminent soprano, on Monday evening, October 29, at the Grand Opera House, relates the following interesting anecdote in the Mu Phi Epsilon Quarterly:

Human sympathy makes us all kin and a real story of kindness is worth more than all one is compelled to wade through in a career of travel to the four corners of the universe. Frankly speaking, New York is widely criticized; it separates the gold from the dross and even makes dross of the gold. Innate good—and a conscience—however, rarely falters in its impression, so here's my little story:

As I stood waiting for a car in front of the Pennsylvania Station, there suddenly appeared, as if from nowhere, one of those deep sea-going hacks, and a "cabby" with hat cocked on one side who asked, "Where are y' goin'?" I paid no attention. "No harm done if I ask where y' goin'?" "I'm going up to 55th street." "Well," he said, "jump in and I'll take ye and it won't cost ye a cent." "No," said I, "I'm waiting for a car." "Now, listen," he said, "I know a poor man when I see one, fer y'd not be out this time o' night with that case if ye were not makin' y're livin'. I'll take care of the poor man and the rich man will look after me; it'll not cost ye a cent. Besides," he said, "I'm a-goin' up to the Rachet Club and I'd as well go loaded as empty." I jumped into the open cab. Up Broadway we wandered—the trip punctuated by the occasional miss by a few inches of a traffic policeman. But "didn't ye see us comin'" brought a smile and his child-like simple "give her more gas, get up" to the nag fixed matters and we wandered on. At 55th street I got out and offered the fare, which was promptly refused—and genuinely refused, for he wanted to help a por man, the rich would help him. I insisted, even pleaded, and at last he reluctantly took the money. As I was making my way into the hotel, he turned a sharp angle in mid-Seventh avenue and called, "Young man, I didn't want yer money and I'd rather give it back." I renewed my right that he should have it. "Well," said he, "ef ye feel that way I'll keep it and may God bless ye!"

PAY SHEETS REFUTED

tablishment, only boat builders. There is no distinction made between union and non-union men.

Trades Council President.

William Rudkins, president of the Trades and Labour Council, said he saw Markson in the Montgomery Hotel, and received a copy of The Worker from him there. Markson told him the wrote the letter.

John H. Vernor, superintendent of the Westclox Co., said his company established in Peterborough in 1919, and he joined the organisation here in 1920. The phrase in The Worker article to which he took exception on behalf of his company was "none of the above employ their hands full time."

"That is very untrue," he said, "as applied to our company. We do employ our hands full time. We have not worked short time since we came to Peterborough. As a matter of fact, we have worked overtime, and that is quite the opposite."

How many hands did you employ at the time of the Police Court trial of this case?

At the time of the preliminary hearing we had 106 employees. We have now 150 to 160.

Cross-examination by Mr. O'Donoghue. "I take it you want to be fair."

Vernor: "Yes."

Then you will see that the reference to the Westclox Company is in paragraph 5, whereas the words you object to appear in a different paragraph and with a different meaning.

Not at all. It is common English composition. When you write a letter and refer to the above you mean the address or the date. I don't know whether that is law; but it is common sense.

Canadian Packing Company.

Robert S. Hall, sales manager of the Canadian Packing Company, was called and examined.

"The reference to the Canadian Packing Company in The Worker article, with the excepiton of one statement, is untrue," he declared.

What is the exception?

"Our company has an international reputation in trade." I admit that is true.

Referring to the other sections individually, the witness said the statement that 15 cents an hour is paid to children and 35 cents to butchers is untrue. We employ no children, and no one at 15 cents an hour," he said. "No recognised butchers are paid 35 cents; their rate ranges from 40 cents to 60 cents."

Another item to which the witness objected was the statement that the company "presents its faithful employees with a ton of coal."

"Every ton that went out to employees during the shortage," the witness said, "was charged at actual cost to the employee."

Cases Cited.

Mr. O'Donoghue, cross-examining: What age have you in mind in speaking of children?

Under 16 years of age. We have no one in the plant under 17. At the time of the Police Court trial we had no one of 16 years. We have none now.

Have you had any since February?

We have not.

Have you your pay sheets here?

No.

Were you asked to bring them?

No.

Mr. Hatton: I asked the firm in a letter.

Mr. Hall: We were unable to learn that any pay sheets had been submitted at the preliminary investigation. The letter simply asked for the pa ysheets that had been produced at that trial, so we decided we were not called on to bring any.

Mr. O'Donoghue — Do you know Jask Downer, who is employed in your plant? Yes.

How long has he been there? I could not say.

Pressed by the counsel, the witness admitted the man in question had been employed by the company a long time.

What rate is he getting? I don't know.

I am told it is 35 cents an hour.

Do you know Tom Rogers? Yes. He too has been employed a long time in the company?

Are you prepared to contradict the statement that he was getting 35 cents an hour? No.

It all depends on the department he was in and whether he had graduated as a high class workman.

How many years does it take to make an experienced butcher? Three years.

Both of these men have been with the firm over five years.

It would take three years for a man who was able to adapt himself to the work.

Robert Layfield.

Robert Layfield, chief accountant of the C.G.E., said he knew the functions of the Chamber of Commerce and it was not its object to crush the employees.

Leon Frazer, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce took exception to the statement that the population of Peterboro remained stationary; as a matter of fact, he said, there was an increase of 1455 since 1914.

The labor organizations have not been crushed by the Chamber of Comerce, he said. They have been invited to the meetings of the Chamber and members of the Trades Unions would be given every attention.

The Chamber of Commerce does not meet regularly, as charged, to conduct the affairs of the city. As citizens they make recommendations to the City Council, but they cannot —and do not—influence the management of the city.

The effect, Mr. Frazer said, of the publication of the article, has been a discussion in the city of Peterboro of things which have been untrue, which in these times would be detrimental to the city itself. It has also been discussed outside the city.

Mr. O'Donoghue—Do you call it active when there is an increase in population of only 1455 in nine years?

Yes, considering the circumstances attending the war.

This closed the case for the Crown

"Wrong Prisoner."

"The wrong party is before the Court," declared Mr. O'Donoghue in moving for a discharge of the prisoner without the case going to the jury. The publication is the work of the Worker and he is the proper person to have before the Court.

Again, the Crown bases its case upon a letter in the issue of the Worker, dated Februar 15th. The riginal of the letter has not been produced. The narest approach is the publication of what appears to be a draft, and differs materially from what appeared in the Worker. If the Crown case deends upon what appeared in the Worker then we should be discharged; for that is not our letter. It is the letter as exaggerated, and enlarged by the publisher of the Worker.

Markson Examined.

Markson—I have been in Peterborough 10 months, occupied as a presser. I am not married.

Mr. O'Donoghue— You wrote a letter to the Worker?

Yes.

How near is this draft to what was printed?

It is something like it.

Where did you get your information?

Most of the information I got listening to employees speaking during their dinner hour. Others I got through direct question and answer. I got the stories from the employees of the different factories.

When you got that issue of February 15 what did you do?

I saw that it was exaggerated and I wrote to the Editor telling him so.

What did you do with the copies of the Worker?

I took a few and made alterations in them and gave them out to members of the working class.

You corrected some of them?

Yes.

What nature were the corrections?

I changed what I thought were the chief exaggerations.

Replying to Mr. Justice Kelly, Markson said he thought he changed most of the copies, but could not be certain.

Took a Chance.

At the time you sent those figures in did you know any of them to be incorrect?

No. I took it for granted they were correct coming from employees.

Mr. Justice Kelly— Have yoju a copy of the letter.

I had a copy in my trunk, but my trunk has been gone through and raked over.

Mr. O'Donoghue—Did you keep a copy of the final draft?

Yes.

You say it was among your papers and it can not be found now?

Yes.

Did you tell the police it would be found there?

Yes.

There is no trace of the final draft?

No.

The Chief said you first denied and then admitted writing the letter. Which one was he talking about?

The prisoner digressed to say, "I never saw anyone else in the room. I was not warned in any way. The Chief said, "I have been over to Toronto. I searched that place. I got your original letter. I saw Bruce. Did you write a letter to them?"

I thought he meant it and I said yes."

Mr. Hatton—Do you mean to say there was no one in the office but you and the Chief?

I saw no one. Later when the Chief got up I saw another man sitting behind a desk.

Mr. Justice Kelly—Was he in a position where you could have seen him before?

Markson—Evidently not—or else I would have seen him.

Mr. Hatton—Is it true that you can only say you did not see anyone but Mr. Frazer there.

I saw Mr. Puffer there.

How long had you been there before Mr. Frazer came in?

I guess a few minutes.

You would not state that Puffer was not there when you came in?

No. Very likely Puffer was there all the time.

Is this a copy of your letter?

It is a draft, something like it.

And perhaps the final letter which you wrote to the Worker was just like this printed copy?

No. There were only slight alterations from that draft.

Markson Reproved.

Markson was several times reproved for attempting to argue with counsel.

You say you secured information from employees during their dinner hour?

Yes, and at other times.

You were satisfied with what they told you?

Yes. I took it for granted they were right.

When first the Chief asked you if you had written that letter you knew he meant a letter written to the Worker from which that information was obtained. Did you not?

Markson—He asked me whether I wrote this letter and later he asked me whether I wrote "a" letter. The Chief led me to believe he knew all about this matter.

On request of Mr. Justice Kelly, the question was repeated several times, Markson avoiding a direct answer each time.

"The question is whether you knew what letter he referred to," the Justice said.

"To make it short, I will admit I knew he referred to that letter," Markson said.

Mr. Hatton—Yet you denied writing the letter —Oh, no!

Markson—The Chief asked me if I wrote this article. I said no. This letter was produced in the Chief's office during the conservation.

Mr. Hatton—You come from England? Were you born in England? —Yes.

Called Himself British.

Mr. Hatton—What countryman are you?—I always called myself a British subject.

Of British parents?

Markson, addressing the court—Your Lordship, I don't think I should go into my ancestry.

The Court—What nationality were your parents?—I couldn't tell you.

Mr. Hatton—Were they Russian?

Mr. O'Donoghue—Objection. If he was born in England he is a British subject, no matter if his parents were negro.

Mr. Hatton—You are fairly well up on Russian history, are you not?

Mr. O'Donoghue — Objection. What has Russian history to do with it?

Objection not sustained.

Mr. Hatton—You have written articles dealing with Russian history? —Yes. They were published in the local press.

Markson read a letter which he wrote on the fifth anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

What was your idea in publishing articles such as this?—To give information regarding Russian history.

You were or were not responsible for a letter to the "Worker" of March 15, 1923?—Yes.

Mr. Hatton—You gave that information too for what is was worth?—Yes.

It is given to you by someone else? —Yes. It is a report of a meeting.

Markson seemed reluctant to leave the witness box and asked permission to make explanations of some statements made by the prosecution—indicated by a sweep of his hand.

He had taken voluminous notes during the course of the trial, and now produced his note book.

Being given permission in the face of his counsel's manifest disapproval, Markson commenced:

"The reason why I did not answer questions relating to my ancestry was because I thought it would prejudice——"

Mr. Justice Kelly—"Stop!" as Markson indicated the jury by a nod.

"Did you say you were a class-conscious man?"

"Yes."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I recognized I was a member of the working class. I had nothing but my labor power that I had to sell to a boss."

Taking the case out of his counsel's hands Markson reviewed some of the evidence, declaring the article in the Worker to be slightly exaggerated.

This concluded the defense.

Detective Carey was recalled in reply and testified he took all the papers out of Markson's room when he conducted the search.

Markson recalled to answer this evidence was speedily disposed of.

"After I was released," he said, "I went to my rooms and was told by my landlady——"

"That won't do," interrupted Mr. Justice Kelly.

Marskon tried again, "I was told by Mrs.——"

"Stop! that won't do!" said Mr. Justice Kelly with a pre-emptory stamp of his foot.

Markson retired.

Chief Newhall recalled, testified Markson was in the office throughout the interview.

Address to Jury.

In his closing address to the jury Mr. O'Donoghue said that there would not be agitators if conditions did not warrant it. I don't want you to be misled by statements that Markson is an agitator.

Did Markson know, or honestly believe that what he reported was true. That is the question for you to decide.

If people are contented or if a city is contented there is room for improvement.

There are those who are afraid to disturb the surface of the lake lest they disturb the shore line. They are stagnant.

There are the same people in political and industrial life, but there have always been agitators. The agitators of to-day are the saints of to-morrow.

The man who is living in advance of his time is dubbed an agitator. But the day comes when the agitator's aim is achieved, and who would think of going back?

The same thing has happened in religion. There are the Luthers and the Knoxes. When the Farmers' organization was broached it was ridiculed as a class-conscious organization.

So far as it may be impressed on you this man is here because he is an agitator—that has nothing to do with the case.

The public interest— what is it. Who are affected by this statement? It is this those two or three companies named in the article who have been affected. How are the employees affected—they are affected because they are getting the short end of the axe handle.

Where is the public interest? Is the whole of Ontario or Canada interested in what these firms pay? Suppose Toronto, which is well known as hog town, should have a discussion as to wages, would that be of interest in the city of Peterborough .This is not of the importance that makes it a matter of public interest.

Referring to the Worker he said the paper represents one section of the workers' organizations.

There is a movement which has for its object the abolition of a system of wages and capitalists. It is not confined to men like Markson. There is a vast world movement having the same object and in the movement are the great Christian churches which have expressed their views quite as strongly as has the Worker. Mr. Donoghue read from "Social Welfare"—a paper including in its organization a dozen churches and Christian organizations.

They see that from the old world system have come poverty and destitution and they seek a way to do away it. They wish to take away the idea of profit which impels a man to grab and substitute instead an ideal of service. Mr. O'Donoghue quoted the Hydro system of Ontario as an example of service on this plan.

This matter that has been discussed is not open principally to the so-called reds but is a world-wide question.

If wages are such as evidence here has shown, the manufacturers should flock here—unwise capital should be eager to get in here. The Unwise Capitalist I say might make for Peterboro, for cheap labor is dear in the end.

How would the former make out if labor had low wages.

The language is not against the law—they have nothing to do with the question.

Were the figures —the facts—correct. If they were not, did he believe them to be true.

I can't see why the Russian article was introduced except to prejudice your mind against the prisoner.

It all depends in matters of this kind against whom the propaganda is levelled.

Any man who expresses his views is a propagandist of his views. Simply because one reporter makes a mistake are you going to stop all reports of public meetings.

This reported (Markson) says he did his best with figures he picked up at his boarding house and elsewhere.

It is a fortunate thing there have not been many prosecutions of this kind. There have been only two convictions obtained on this charge and you gentlemen will have the honor of determining the third. I can't believe the employees of these factories who are receiving these magnificent wags from $7 up brought this case before the court. The thing is, it is here.

Everything points out that the accused man believed what he reported. He is entitled to the benefit of the doubt.

This is not like the Ontario Temperance Act, the man is presumed innocent until he is proved guilty.

Mr. Hatton Sums Up.

Mr. Hatton outlined the charge and showed what it was necessary to consider. "Practically all of the witnesses called by the Crown told you that the news as given in the Worker was false," he said. "I submit that part of the charge has been clearly proved.

Several witnesses testified that copies of the paper were handed to them by Markson, and were distributed in the Labor Hall.

The accused himself admitted the article was practically the same as he sent in

Regarding public interest, I ask you whether or not immigrants thinking of coming here to settle, those who work with us—those who keep up the city, would not be affected by this article.

It must have made certain employees at any rate dissatisfied and unable to do their best work.

There is no evidence that the wages paid here are lower than elsewhere. No very long ago in Toronto there was a run on the Dominion Bank, started by the spreading of news entirely false. At a meeting of the business men the Hon. G .Howard Ferguson referred to this section of the Criminal Code in expressing his determination to stop the practice of spreading false news.

You must bring in a verdict on the evidence. You have nothing to do with the punishment. The maximum is one year in jail, but with that you have nothing to do.

PROTECT THE KIDNEYS

The heart and the kidneys are the most important organs of the body.

This time of the year particularly the kidneys are easily deranged from chills and exposure. Escesses in eating and drinking will often cause disease in the kidneys.

Never neglect a backache which is on of the first symptoms and may lead to other complications.

The best remedy for any kidney ailments is Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills. They will keep the kidneys in a sound and healthy condition and free the blood from all poisons.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, and if they fail to do what we claim for them your money will be refunded.

KANSAS CITY RACE MAY DECIDE NEW SPEED KING

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—The national automobile racing championship for 1923 probably was determined here Thursday, October 18, when leading drivers of the racing world piloted their roaring motors about the wooden saucer in a 250-mile speed classic. Fourteen entries were received for the event, which is a feature of the Priests of Pallas festival week.

Eddie Hearne, now leading in points for the 1923 racing laurels, was there to defend his lead. His most dangerous contender was Jimmy Murphy, who cabled from abroad that he sailed September 29 for the United States and would be in Kansas City for the race. Murphy's race points probably will be reinstated because of the demand from all parts of the country for such action, according to information to local speedway officials from A. H. Means, secretary of the contest board, American Automobile Association. Should Hearne win the Kansas City race, the 1923 racing crown will be his, while he still will be in the running even should he lose.

Twenty-five thousand dollars in prizes was divided. First place will draw $9,000, second, $4,500; third, $2,500; fourth, $1,750; fifth, $1,250; sixth $1,000; seventh, $800; eighth, $700, and ninth and tenth, $500 each. The remaining $2,500 will be divided into five guarantees of $500 each for drivers who enter but fail to finish.

Cars entered in the 250-mile event will be of the 122 cubic inches piston displacement type.

Other drivers were: Harry Hartz, Tommy Milton, Earl Cooper, Bennett Hill, Dave Lewis, Jerry Wonderlich, Harlan Fengler, Frank Elliott and Leon Duray. Several cars with unnamed drivers have been entered.

"WHY WORRY" WITH LLOYD? YOU CAN'T, IT'S TOO FUNNY!

"How does the boy do it?" you hear in awesome and admiring tones from those who have watched the progress of Harold Lloyd during the last three years, each picture setting a higher standard than the last, until it seems that surely he has reached the zenith of comedy production. But then comes his next Pathecomedy, and it is not only funnier, but is different in type, "Why Worry," which opens a four-day engagement at the Capitol Theatre today.

Now we have "Why Worry" to not only laugh at, but to shake our heads at and marvel over. It is Lloyd's first serious attempt at straight farce. Here are real characters and entirely probable situations exaggerated to a state of absurdity that yet remains within the realms of possibility.

"Why Worry" is the story of an American youth, accustomed to luxury, who has a flare of adventure in his make-up. He goes to South America and promptly becomes enmeshed in a fierce, fiery and flaming revolution. It is a story of intrigue and romance such as Richard Harding Davis would revel in, yet containing surprises and twists such as O. Henry would give it, and is a decided departure from previous Lloyd stories.

From the moment Lloyd is introduced being taken aboard ship on a stretcher to the final fade-out, where he is tying up traffic, "Why Worry" is one mirthful, hilarious situation after another, each situation inextricably bound up with the plot, thereby producing a staccato laugh effect throughout the entire development of a story that intrigues the interest, while adding the glow of romance.

Conspicuous among Lloyd's aides in "Why Worry" are Jobyna Ralston and John Aasen. Jobyna is young, pretty and spirited. Aasen is an 8 foot 9 inch giant and is such a hit we prophecy giants on the screen will be in demand hereafter. He takes you back to the days when you believed in Jack, the Giant Killer.

"Why Worry" is a riot of fun, and the only thing for you to worry about is getting into the Capitol Theatre during its run.

'SIX DAYS" DRAWS CAPACITY CROWDS TO ROYAL

The Elinor Glyn story "Six Days" again proved its drawing power last night when the Royal was filled, with the ladies largely in the majority. While the story is a little daring it is all well done and judging from the author's previous books, it is just what one would expect from such a writer. That comedy "Cold Chills" is one of the funniest seen in some time. This program will be shown tonight and will be replaced tomorrow by "The Midnight Alarm."

14 Tremendous Thrills in Vitagraph's "Midnight Alarm"

Fourteen outstanding thrills are reported in "The Midnight Alarm," the Vitagraph special production, which will be shown at the Royal Theatre on Thursday. These thrills were tabulated by David Smith, the director, in calculating the superior audience value of his greatest picture.

These thrills are so interwoven with bits of romance and pathos and intrigue as to maintain the interest of the spectator at a high point throughout. A spectacular fire scene, a train crash, a near-wreck of a train at a drawbridge, and rescue of the heroine from a vault in a burning building are some of the high spots in this pulsating play.

Alice Calhoun, Cullen Landis, Percy Marmont and Joseph Kilgour play the principal roles in this photoplay.

GERMANS STAND AS BAND PLAYS FRENCH ANTHEM

ZURICH, Switzerland, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—There was a tense moment during the recent congress in this city of the International Cycling Union—when German and Austrian delegates met the French representatives—but it came out all right, for the Germans arose and stood at attention while a band played the "Marseillaise," the national anthem of France.

It was the first cycling congress since the war, and envoys of all three countries sat down around the same table to discuss the sport from an international standpoint. It devolved upon Mr. J. Breton, chief delegate for France, to make the closing address. It is the custom, at these gatherings, for the band to strike up the national anthem of the speaker's country as soon as he concludes.

While Mr. Breton was speaking the predominant thought was, that will the Germans do when the band plays "Allons enfants de la patrie?" What they did was to stand up, as did everyone else, and remain stiffly at attention until the music stopped. Everybody was greatly relieved.

"Sports are destined to bring the nations of Europe together on friendly terms quicker than the exchange of sugar-coated acid notes," Mr. Breton said later in the day, pointing to Walter Rutt, the veteran cyclist from Germany, chatting in an amiable manner with Gabriel Poulain, the forty-year-old champion of France.

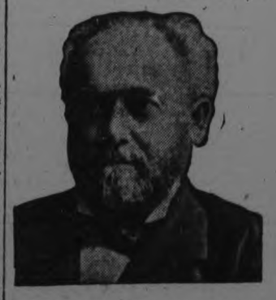
Patient Being Carried Into Hospital Dead When He Fell.

TORONTO, Oct. 24. — Israel Brightman, 805 Dundas street, was brought to Western Hospital on Saturday evening in a dying condition. He was in a private ambulance and while being carried to the institute he fell from the stretcher. When picked up he was dead, and the hospital authorities assert that they in no way are responsible for the death. They also believe he was dead when he fell from the stretcher.



CHARACTER TELLS THE STORY!

People throughout this county are giving more thought to hygiene and to the purity of remedies on the market, but no one doubts the purity of Doctor Pierce's vegetable medicines, for they have been so favourably known for over fifty years that everyone knows they are just what they are claimed to be. These medicines are the result of long research by a well-known physician, R. V. Pierce, M.D., who compounded them from health-giving herbs and roots long used in sickness by the Indians. Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

SHORT COVERINGS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — (United Press).—Sterling was slightly higher in the early dealings in the foreign exchange market, but stocks on the Stock Exchange continued to ignore foreign developments and prices were wholly under the influence of conditions within the market.

The sharp recovery in Tuesday's late dealings, after prices had been distinctly heavy most of the day, induced considerable short covering, and this movement kept up at the opening to-day.

Tobaccos maintained their lead of the market, but fair gains were scored by other industrialists.

Famous Players was an exception, breaking 1¼ to 65¼ on the testimony before the Federal Trade Commission that President Zukor held no common stock and that the holdings of other officers were negligible.

Rallying tendencies were still in evidence in the main body of stocks toward the end of the first hour, while further advances were scored by individual stocks.

Congoleum Company moved in to new high ground for the year at 141¼, up more than six points from Tuesday's low. In connection with this strength it is understood that a 300 per cent. stock dividend is now under discussion. General Electric and Davison Chemical reached new high ground on the movement and the steels scored fractional gains.

A DAILY SERVICE FOR BROWNTON TO START NEXT WEEK

Two Mail Deliveries a Day By Letter Carrier Same As City.

Postmaste John Corkery has been notified by the Postal Department at Ottawa that a daily letter carrier service to Brownton will be inaugurated on 1st November, and will consist of two deliveries a day.

This is similar to the service provided for the city.

The area covered by this service will be bounded on the south by Romaine Street, on the west by High Street, and on the north by Frank Street.

It is now up to the residents of this district to have their mail addressed to street and number, and have their houses properly numbered.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., was instrumental in having this daily letter carrier service extended to the new area.

MEN OF WEALTH SELL THEIR IRISH ESTATES

DUBLIN, Oct. 24.—(Associated Press)—There is today an exodus from Ire and of members of the wealthier classes. Lord Oranmore and Browne is selling his property in Mayo, and other territorial magnates are taking the same course. Their estates in land come under the operation of the Land Purchase Acts, which transfer them to the tenants at a fixed price, and they have nothing left but their mansion houses and demesnes.

The destruction of the past year has wiped out many of the mansions. The fact that a higher income tax is payable in the Free State than in Great Britain and Northern Ireland also accounts for the desire to leave.

Yet the exodus is by no means general, and there are many men of wealth who prefer to stay in Ireland. When the Earl of Mayo, who is a Free State senator, was burned out of his family place in County Kildare, he took up his residence in the house of a gamekeeper on the estate, and resisted all attempts to drive him out. It is the desire of the Free State Government to encourage such men to stay in Ireland.

EBONY BRUSHES.

Ebony brushes might be harmed if washed directly with ammonia or soda water. But if rubbed thoroughly with vaseline, which is later removed by dusting, the wood would remain unspoiled.

Chief Scalper in Action

This photo of W. B. McBee, speaker of the Oklahoma House of Representatives, shows how he looked on the day of calling the legislators together to consider ways and means of dangling Governor Walton's official scalp from their totem poles on charge of usurpation of power during the reecnt martial law rule of the State, invoked by the chief executive in his war on the Ku Klux Klan.

WEDDING BELLS

THOMPSON—HOOPER.

A pretty wedding took place at two o'clock this afternoon at All Saints' Anglican Church, when Geraldine Alfreda, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Hooper, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Hedley Ken Thompson, of Toronto, son of Rev. and Mrs. H. V. Thompson, Erindale. The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's father, Rev. Mr. Thompson, assisted by Rev. R. B. Grobb. Mrs. W. A. Logan played the wedding march.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful gown of white brocaded canton crepe, with long back panel lined with pale pink georgette, and necklace of pearls. She wore the conventional white veil and orange blossoms and carried a large bouquet of ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Margaret Stevenson, of Toronto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, of this city, wore blue voile and large black hat and carried a bouquet of columbia roses. The little flower girl, Alice Deyell, of Toronto, niece of the bride, wore a pretty frock of flame-colored silk, trimmed with silver, a silver hair-band and carried a basket of flowers.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson leaving later on the afternoon train for Toronto, where they will reside. The bride travelled in a suit of navy tricotine, grey hat and grey shoes and stockings and grey squirrel choker.

COSTELLO—CUNNINGHAM.

A very pretty wedding took place at one o'clock in George street Methodist church yesterday when Mazie V, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cunningham, 560 Weller street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Wm. Earle Costello, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Costello, of Guelph.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Young. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with autumn flowers and ferns, the bridal couple standing beneath a large arch of maple leaves and red sumach.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. J. H. Renwick, was attired in a suit of navy tricotine, with French hand-made blouse of orchid georgette, heavily beaded. Her hat was of black velvet with orchid ostrich plume, her shoes of black patent and suede, her gloves grey, and her corsage bouquet was composed of ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. She wore also a sable fur neckpiece.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Cyril F. Rathbone, of Toronto, wearing navy tricotine suit and grey hat, and corsage bouquet of columbia roses, and the bridegroom was supported by Cyril F. Rathbone, of Toronto.

During the signing of the register, Miss Hilda Oldham sang very sweetly "O Promise Me."

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, where the rooms and table were prettily arranged with streamers, lighted candles and roses, Mr. and Mrs. Costello left on the afternoon train for Toronto, where they will reside.

The bride, who had a large circle of friends in the city, was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and costly gifts.

HICKEY—PICARD.

The marriage took place at seven o'clock this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, of Beatrice Adeline, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Picard, 299 Margaret avenue, and William Hickey, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hickey, 535 Reid street. Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D. D., Bishop of Peterboro, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. P. Costello.

The bride wore a suit of mole-colored Bolivia cloth, with shoes to match, and hat of brown velvet, trimmed with Chantilly lace. Her corsage bouquet was composed of orchids and Ophelia roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss O. Leahy, wore a taupe colored marzetta coat, and black picture hat, with corsage bouquet of Columbia roses. Mr. Butler Hickey was best man.

The wedding march was played by Miss L. Hurley, and Gounod's and Millard's "Ave Marias" were sung during the ceremony, by Miss Ernestine McManus and Mr. E. Picard.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hickey leaving later by motor for an extended trip, which will include visits to relatives and friends in Welland and Rochester, N.Y. On their return they will reside at 535 Reid street.

The young couple were recipients of numbers of beautiful gifts.

SPECIAL AGENT IN LIQUOR PLOT

Is Indicted For Being the Principal in Whiskey Deals Involving Several Million Dollars.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Gaston B. Means, who as special agent for the Department of Justice unearthed the society bootlegging conspiracy resulting in the imprisonment of the four La Montague brothers, has been indicted as an alleged principal in a gigantic bootlegging conspiracy. This was disclosed with the unsealing of four indictments returned by the Federal Grand Jury last Thursday, which were placed under seal by Federal Judge John C. Knox.

The seals were removed on motion of Special Government Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd, who presented the evidence in the case against Means. Elmer W. Jarnecke, known as secretary of Means, also is named in three indictments.

When Means appeared in court to plead not guilty he was accompanied by Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who defended Means at the time of his trial on an indictment charging him with the murder of Mrs. Maude A. Robinson King at Concord, N.C., in 1917. Means was acquitted of that charge. In court he was held in $15,000 bail. Jarnecke will appear for pleading.

The indictments charge Means with using the mails to defraud Sam Schmidt, 1,343 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, out of $75,000 in a bogus liquor deal; with conspiring to violate the national prohibition law through the fraudulent withdrawal and illegal transportation of liquor and with conspiring to defeat the liquor tax law.

Many Violations Charged.

Through plots to supply the bootleg trade with the finest quality liquors from bonded warehouses, Means, Jarnecke and their associates are alleged to have profited to the extent of more than $100,000. The liquor involved in the transactions alone, involving the fraudulent transfer of 500,000 cases of whisky, and another, involving 12,000 cases, and 12,500 barrels of whiskey, indicate the magnitude of the transactions charged.

DEVOTES LIFE RAISING FLOWERS FOR THE SICK

MUSKEGON, Mich., Oct. 24.—(Associated Press).—Believing that the greatest service any person can give to his fellow man is that of spreading cheer and happiness, A. H. Allen, the largest producer of gladioli in Western Michigan, has consecrated his life to the raising of flowers for free distribution to hospitals, charitable institutions and public buildings in order that he may extend his message of human kindness to all who look upon his offerings.

About 15 years ago Mr. Allen became imbued with the idea of serving humanity. Always a lover of flowers, he decided to use them as his medium for showing his love for others.

The Allen farm has 11 acres devoted to the culture of gladioli. During the flowering season the tract is a riot of every color and color combination conceivable. In all there are 97 varieties of this popular flower, each with its distinctive coloring and its own characteristics.

Mr. Allen, during the flowering season, comes down town each day with a supply of blossoms, makes his rounds, and leaves bouquets at the hospitals and in other places where he believes they will be appreciated.

"The sight of flowers is the greatest tonic for persons who are ill or discouraged that the world ever has produced," Mr. Allen said. "I have proof that flowers do speak a language of gladness. Every morning when I come into Muskegon with an armful of flowers strangers speak to me on the street. After I have delivered the blossoms and am empty handed no one pays any attention to me. It was the flowers that the strangers spoke to before."

On the Allen farm this year are 120,000 gladioli bulbs in blossom. The grower is at work on several new varieties, several years being required to develop a new species.
